THE BURNING AND DEATH OF BARNES, GARRET, AND JEROME.

THE MARTYRDOM OF PEARSON, TESTWOOD, AND FILMER.

THE BURNING OF ANNE ASKEW, JOHN LACELS, JOHN ADAMS, AND NICHOLAS BELENIAK.

Anne of Cleve, which otherwise it is to be thought, during the life of Cromwell could not so well be brought to pass.

Henry VIII.

But these things being now done and past, let us pass them over, and return again from whence we digressed, that is, to the lord Cromwell, being now attainted and committed to the Tower; who, so long as he went with full sail of fortune, how moderately, and how temperately he did ever bear himself in his estate, before hath been declared. So now the said lord Cromwell, always one man, by the contrary wind of adversity being overblown, received the same with no less constancy and patience of a christian heart: neither yet was he so unprovided of counsel and forecast, but that he did foresee this tempest long before it fell, and also prepared for the same; for two years before, smelling the conspiracy of his adversaries, and fearing what might happen, he called unto him his servants, and there, showing unto them in what a slippery state he stood; and also perceiving some stormy weather already to gather, required them to look diligently to their order and doings, lest, through their default, any occasion might rise against him. And furthermore, before the time of his apprehension, such order he took for his servants, that many of them, especially the younger brethren, who had little else to take unto, had honestly left for them in their friends' hands to relieve them; whatsoever should him befall.

A. D. 1540.

Anne of Cleves divorced from the king.

Christian patience of Cromwell in adversity.

Preparing for his trouble beforehand.

Good to his servants.

Briefly, such a loving and kind master he was to his servants, that he provided aforehand almost for them all; insomuch, that he gave to twelve children, who were his musicians, twenty pounds a piece, and so committed them to their friends, of whom some yet remain alive, who both enjoyed the same, and also gave record of this to be true.

Furthermore, being a prisoner in the Tower, how quietly he bare it, how valiantly he behaved himself, how gravely and discreetly he answered and entertained the commissioners sent unto him, it is worthy noting. Whatsoever articles and interrogatories they propounded, they could put nothing unto him, either concerning matters ecclesiastical or temporal, wherein he was not more ripened, and more furnished in every condition, than they themselves.

Amongst the rest of those commissioners who came unto him, one there was, whom the lord Cromwell desired to carry for him a letter to the king; which when he refused, saying that he would carry no letter to the king from a traitor, then the lord Cromwell desired him at least to do from him a message to the king. To that the other was contented, and granted, so that it were not against his allegiance. Then the lord Cromwell, taking witness of the other lords, what he had promised, "You shall commend me," said he, "to the king, and tell him, by that he hath so well tried, and throughly proved you as I have done, he shall find you as false a man as ever came about him."

Besides this, he wrote also a letter from the Tower to the king, whereof when none durst take the carriage upon him, sir Ralph Sadler (whom he also had preferred to the king before, being ever trusty and faithful unto him) went unto the king to understand his pleasure, whether he would permit him to bring the letter or not; which when the king had granted, the said Master Sadler, as he was required, presented the letter unto the king, which he commanded thrice to be read unto him, insomuch that the king seemed to be moved therewith.

Sir Ralph Sadler Cromwell's trusty friend.

Henry VIII.

A. D. 1540.

*At<sup>1</sup> the last, three years after all this was done, Cromwell being circumvented with the malicious craft and policy of divers, that, by occasion of mention made touching the king's divorce with the lady Anne of Cleve, he had said these words: "That he wished his dagger in him that had dissolved or broken that marriage." Whereupon it was objected against him by Thomas duke of Norfolk and other, that it was spoken against the king, who, at that time being in love with Catherine Howard, was the chief cause and author of that divorce. Whereupon divers of the nobles conspiring against him, some for hatred, and some for religion's sake, he was cast into the Tower of London; where, as it happened (as it were by a certain fatal destiny), that whereas he, a little before, had made a law, that whosoever was cast into the Tower should be put to death without examination, he himself suffered by the same law. It is said (which also I do easily credit), that he made this violent law, not so much for any cruelty or tyranny, as only for a certain secret purpose, to have entangled the bishop of Winchester, who albeit he was, without doubt, the most violent adversary of Christ and his religion, notwithstanding, God, peradventure, would not have his religion set forth by any wicked cruelty, or otherwise than were meet and convenient.*

Cromwell brought to the scaffold.

See Appendix

Notwithstanding, by reason of the act of parliament before passed, the worthy and noble lord Cromwell, oppressed by his enemies, and condemned in the Tower, and not coming to his answer, on the 28th day of July, A. D. 1540, was brought to the scaffold on Tower-hill, where he said these words following.

Lord Cromwell's words on the Scaffold.

I am come hither to die, and not to purge myself, as some think, peradventure, that I will: for if I should so do, I were a very wretch and a miser. I am, by the law, condemned to die, and thank my Lord God that hath appointed me this death for mine offence. For since the time that I have had years of discretion, I have lived a sinner, and offended my Lord God; for the which I ask him heartily forgiveness. And it is not unknown to many of you, that I have been a great travailler in this world, and being but of a base degree, was called to high estate; and since the time I came thereunto I have offended my prince, for the which I ask him heartily forgiveness, and beseech you all to pray to God with me, that He will forgive me. * O 2 Father forgive me! O Son forgive me! O Holy Ghost forgive me! O three persons in one God forgive me!* And now I pray you that be here, to bear me record, I die in the catholic faith, not doubting in any article of my faith, no nor doubting in any sacrament of the church. Many have slandered me, and reported that I have been a bearer of such as have maintained evil opinions; which is untrue: but I confess, that like as God, by his Holy Spirit, doth instruct us in the truth, so the devil is ready to seduce us; and I have been seduced. But bear me witness, that I die in the catholic faith of the holy church. And I heartily desire you to pray for the king's grace, that he may long live with you in health and prosperity; and that after him, his son, prince Edward, that goodly imp, may long reign over you. And once again I desire you to pray for me, that so long as life remaineth in this flesh, I waver nothing in my faith.

A true christian confession of the lord Cromwell at his death.

And so making his prayer, * which<sup>1</sup> was long, but not so long as both godly and learned,* kneeling on his knees he spake these words, the effect whereof here followeth.

Henry VIII.

A. D.

A Prayer that the Lord Cromwell said at the Hour of his Death.

O Lord Jesu! which art the only health of all men living, and the everlasting life of them which die in thee, I, wretched sinner, do submit myself wholly unto thy most blessed will; and being sure that the thing cannot perish which is committed unto thy mercy, willingly now I leave this frail and wicked flesh, in sure hope that thou wilt, in better wise, restore it to me again at the last day, in the resurrection of the just. I beseech thee, most merciful Lord Jesu Christ! that thou wilt, by thy grace, make strong my soul against all temptations, and defend me with the buckler of thy mercy against all the assaults of the devil. I see and acknowledge that there is in myself no hope of salvation, but all my confidence, hope, and trust, is in thy most merciful goodness. I have no merits nor good works which I may allege before thee. Of sins and evil works, alas! I see a great heap; but yet, through thy mercy, I trust to be in the number of them to whom thou wilt not impute their sins; but wilt take and accept me for righteous and just, and to be the inheritor of everlasting life. Thou, merciful Lord! wast born for my sake; thou didst suffer both hunger and thirst for my sake; thou didst teach, pray, and fast for my sake; all thy holy actions and works thou wroughtest for my sake; thou sufferedst most grievous pains and torments for my sake: finally, thou gavest thy most precious body and thy blood to be shed on the cross for my sake. Now, most merciful Saviour! let all these things profit me, that thou freely hast done for me, which hast given thyself also for me. Let thy blood cleanse and wash away the spots and foulness of my sins. Let thy righteousness hide and cover my unrighteousness. Let the merits of thy passion and blood-shedding be satisfaction for my sins. Give me, Lord! thy grace, that the faith of my salvation in thy blood waver not in me, but may ever be firm and constant: that the hope of thy mercy and life everlasting never decay in me: that love wax not cold in me. Finally, that the weakness of my flesh be not overcome with the fear of death. Grant me, merciful Saviour! that when death hath shut up the eyes of my body, yet the eyes of my soul may still behold and look upon thee; and when death hath taken away the use of my tongue, yet my heart may cry and say unto thee, 'Lord! into thy hands I commend my soul; Lord Jesu! receive my spirit.' Amen.

And thus his prayer made, after he had godly and lovingly exhorted them that were about him on the scaffold, he quietly committed his soul into the hands of God; and so patiently suffered the stroke of the axe, by a ragged and butcherly miser, who very ungodly performed the office.

*Death of the lord
well.*

*This<sup>1</sup> valiant soldier and captain of Christ, the foresaid lord Cromwell, as he was most studious of himself in a flagrant zeal to set forward the truth of the gospel, seeking all means and ways to beat down false religion and to advance the true; so he always retained unto him and had about him such as could be found helpers and furtherers of the same; in the number of whom were sundry and divers fresh and quick wits, pertaining to his family; by whose industry and ingenious labours divers excellent both ballads and books were contrived and set abroad, concerning the suppression of the pope and all popish idolatry. Amongst the which, omitting a great sort that we might here bring in, yet this small treatise here following, called

Henry VIII. 'The Fantasies of Idolatric,' we thought not to pass over, containing in it, as in a brief sum, the great multitude of idolatrous pilgrimages ;
 A. D. for the posterity hereafter to understand, what then was used in 1510. England.*

* A Booke intituled the fantasie of Idolatric.

All christen people
 Beyng under the steple
 Of Jesu Christes faith!
 Marke and drawe nere,
 And ye shall here
 What the holy Scripture sayth.

First, I wyll begyn
 Your hartes to wyn
 With nother fable nor lye ;
 But with God's testament,
 As is moste expedient,
 Concerning idolatric :

Wherin we myght se
 Great authoritie,
 Sauyng it were to long
 For to rehearse,
 Nowe, verse by verse,
 In this same lytle song.

But I shall shewe,
 In wordes fewe,
 The summe of the whole effecte,
 To them of good mynde,
 That be wylling to fynde
 The trade of idolatrous sect.

Fyrst, we will gather,
 Of our heavenly Father,
 Among his commandmentes, ten ;
 Written as no fables,
 But in Moyse's tables,
 To be kept of all christen men.

Where that he sayth,
 To the chyldren of fayth,
 ' I am your God and Kyng ;
 Other gods haue ye none,
 But me alone,
 To love abone all thing.'

' Idols and images
 Haue none in vsage
 (Of what mettel so euer they be),
 Graued or carued ;
 My wyll be obserued,
 Or els can ye not loue me.'

' Then I, a jelous God,
 Wyll scourge with my rod ;
 I may not forbear my hand :
 And specially
 For idolatry.
 My power who can withstand !'

The prophetes all,
 In generall,
 Of idols, as we may se,
 Put us from doubtte,
 And set them out,
 In their colours, as they ought to be.

 VIII.*

 1540.*

Saynt Paule also,
 With many saintes mo,
 Against idols, with al their myght,
 Perceiuing suche swarmes,
 Did blase their armes,
 And brought them out to lyght.

This should suffice
 All those that be wyse;
 But we, of a stoubourne mynde,
 Be so harde harted,
 Wyll not be conuerted,
 But rather stylle be blynde.

Ronnyng hyther and thyther,
 We cannot tell whether
 In offryng candels and pence
 To stones and stockes,
 And to olde rotten blockes,
 That came, we know not from whens

To Walsyngham<sup>1</sup> a gaddyng,
 To Cantorbury a maddyng,
 As men distraught of mynde;
 With fewe clothes on our backes,
 But an image of waxe,
 For the lame and for the blynde.

To Hampton, to Ipswyche,
 To Harforth, to Shordyche,
 With many mo places of pryce;
 As, to our lady of Worchester
 And the swete Rode of Chester,
 With the blessed lady of Penryce.

To Leymster, to Kyngstone,
 To Yorke, to Donyngton,
 To Redying, to the chyld of grace;
 To Wynsore, to Waltam,
 To Ely, to Caultam,
 Bare foted and bare legged apace.

To Saynt Earth a right,
 Where, in the dark nyght,
 Many a iuglyng cast hath be done;
 To Saynt Augers rotten bones
 That ran away for the nones;
 To the crosse that groweth at Chaldon.

(1) 'The image of our Lady at Walsingham was so famous in former times that even foreigners came on pilgrimage to visit it. Erasmus has given us a description of the chapel or shrine in which it was contained, and which appears to have been a distinct building from the priory church. Henry III. went thither in his twenty-sixth year. Edward I. in his ninth, and twenty-fifth years. Edward II. in his ninth year. Edward III. in his thirty-fifth year. John de Mountford earl of Bretaine came over to visit it in the thirty-fifth of Edward III. David Bruce king of Scotland in the thirty-eighth year of Edward III. Henry VI. went there in 1455. Henry VII. ordered an image of silver, gilt, to be set up before it, in his will; and Henry VIII. and his first queen made more than one visit to it. Sir Henry Spelman says, that when he was a youth, the tradition was that Henry VIII. had walked barefoot from the town of Barsham to the chapel of our Lady, and presented her with a necklace of great value. This famous image, however, upon the change of belief, was taken from Walsingham to Chelsea, near London, and there burnt, the thirtieth year of Henry VIII.' See Dugdale, vol. vi. p. 71. To the holy bloud of Hayles,<sup>1</sup>
With your fyngers and nayles,
    All that ye may stretche and wyne;
Yet it woulde not be seen,
Except you were shryven,

There, were we flocked Lowted<sup>2</sup> and mocked;

As men did please,
For every disease,
    To haue a god peculiarly,

Blessed Saynt Sauour,
For his noughty behauiour,

(1) 'The holy blood of Hayles.' 'Hayles Abbey in Gloucestershire, called also 'Tray' (see Annales Waverl. in anno 1246), was founded by Richard, earl of Cornwall, second son to King John. The building was commenced in 1246, and was completed in 1251. Edmund, earl of Cornwall, son and heir of Richard the founder, having, in his travels in Germany with his father, obtained a portion of a relie, considered to be the blood of our Saviour, gave a third part of it, after his father's death, to this monastery in 1272, occasioning a very increased resort to it. Another portion of this blood he gave to the house of the Bonhommes at Ashridge.' See Dugdale, vol. v. p. 686.—Ed.

The swete rode of Rambisbery,
 Twenty myle from Maunbysbery,
 Was oftines put in feare ;
 And nowe, at the laste,
 He hath a brydling caste,
 And is become, I wote not wheare.

Henry VIII.

A. D.
 1540.

Yet, hath it been saide,
 His vertue so wayde,
 That xvi oxen and mo,
 Were not able to cary
 This rode from Rambisbery, Though he toke seuen horses also :

Whiche is a great lye,
 For, the truth to trye
 His vertue is not worth a beane ;
 For one man toke hym downe,—
 From his church and towne
 Thre men conueyed him cleane.

Thus ran we about
 To seke idols out,
 Wandryng farre and nere ;
 Thynkyng the power
 Of our blessed Sauour
 In other places more then there.

But now some may ronne,
 And, when they haue done,
 Their idols they shall not fynde ;
 They haue had such checkes,
 That hath broke their neckes :
 Holde fast that be left behynde !

For the rode of grace
 Hath lost his place,
 And is rubbed on the gall,
 For false deuotion
 Hath lost his promotion,
 And is broken in peeces small.

He was made to jogle,
 His eyes would gogle,
 He wold bend his browes and frowne ;
 With his head he wold nod
 Lyke a proper young god,

The saying was :
 That this rode of grace
 And our lady of Walsyngham,
 Should haue bene married,
 Sauyng they taried
 To spie a tyme howe and whan.

See Appenz.

For sometime in the nyght,
 If the peeple say ryght,
 As ii lovers eche other loue to procure
 They did mete very oft ;
 Whereby it was thought,
 That our lady and he had bene surr.

Now the rode is dead,
And can not her wed,
Death gaue him so sore a stroke,
That it cost him his lyfe,
And lost hym his wyfe,
The rychest of all Northfolke.

But if he hadde lyued,
She had prouided,
With suche goodes as she wan, (Thoug he neuer had worked
But like an idoll lurked),
To finde hym lyke an honest man.

And the rode had a gyfte
To make great shyfte,
With his bowget under his cote ;
To haue gotten their lyuing,
Euen with false iugling,
Thoug she had neuer erved grote.

Also Delver Gathaene,
As (saicth the Welcheman)
Brought outlawes out of hell,
Is come with spere and shelde,
In harneys to burne in Smythfiedle ;
For in Wales he may not dwell.

Then Forest the fryer,
That obstynate lyer,
That wyllingly is dead ;
In his contunacy,
The gospell dyd deny,
And the kyng to be supreme head.

At Saynt Marget Patens,
The roode is gone thens,
And stoele away by nyght ;
With his tabernacle and crosse,
With all that there was,
And is gone away quygt.

Yet haue we thought,
That these idols haue wrought
Myracles, in many a place,
Upon age and youth ;
When, of very truth,
They were done by the deuils grace.

For the cursed deuyll,
The mayster of euyll,
To get us under his wynges,
Hath suche a condicion,
By God's permission,
To worke ryght wonderful thinges.

For when they bored holes
In the Roodes back of Poles,
Which, as some men saye, dyd speake,
Then lay he still as a stocke,
Receyued there many a knocke,
And did not ones crie ' creake.'

Yet offer what ye wolde,
 Were it Otes, Syluer, or Golde
     Pyn, Poynt, Broche, or Ryuge,
 The churche were as then,
 Such charitable men,
     That they would refuse nothyng.

Henry VIII.

A. D.
1540.

But now may we see,
 What Goddes they be,
     Euen puppets, mammats and elves :
 Throw them downe thryse,
 They can not aryse,
     Not ones, to helpe them selues.

Thus were we poore soules
 Begyled with idolles,
     With fayned myracles and lyes,
 By the deuyll and his docters,
 The Pope and his Procters :
     That, with such, hane blerid our eyes.

For they were the souldiers
 Of those idols and wonders,
     In euery Abbey and Towne,
 Like a syght of false Deacons :
 Wherefore all men rekyns,
     For suche juglyng, ' they shall downe.

For it was great reuth,
 To se age and yeuth
     To be blynde after this facion ;
 But, thanke we our Lorde,
 That them hath abhorde,
     And had upon us compassion !

Besydes these stockes and stones,
 Haue we not had, of late, traytors bones,<sup>1</sup>
     Thus their trompery to maintain ?
 Whiche is a token, verely,
 They go about most earnestly
     To bryng in superstition again !

With dyvers other trickes,
 Whiche sore in mens' consciences stickes :
     But to Christ let us all pray !
 To plucke it up, by the hard rote
 (Seeing there is none other bote),<sup>2</sup>
     And utterly to banyshe it away.

And now, to make an ende :
 Lorde! we beseche Thee to sende
     Us, peace and tranquillitie ;
 And, that of thy mere mercy and grace,
 Within short tyme and space,
     To illumine us with thi sincere veritie !<sup>3</sup> *

AND OF EDMUND BONNER, PREFERRED TO THE BISHOPRIC OF LONDON BY MEANS OF THE LORD CROMWELL.

Here,<sup>1</sup> by the way, for the more direction to the story, thou hast, loving reader, to note and understand, that in those days there were two sundry Bibles in English printed and set forth, bearing divers titles, and printed in divers places: the first was called 'Thomas Matthewe's Bible,' printed at Hamburgh about A. D. 1537; the corrector of which print was then John Rogers, of whom ye shall hear more, Christ willing, hereafter. The printers were Richard Grafton, and Whitechurch. In the translation of this Bible the greatest doer was indeed William Tyndale, who, with the help of Miles Coverdale, had translated all the books thereof, except only the Apocrypha, and certain notes in the margin, which were added after. But, because the said William Tyndale, in the mean time, was apprehended, before this Bible was fully perfected, it was thought good to them that had the doing thereof to change the name of William Tyndale, because that name then was odious, and to father it by a strange name of Thomas Matthewe; John Rogers, at the same time, being corrector to the print, who had then translated the residue of the Apocrypha, and added also certain notes thereto in the margin: and thereof came it to be called 'Thomas Matthewe's Bible.' Which Bible of Thomas Matthewe after it was imprinted and presented to the lord Cromwell, and to the lord Cranmer, archbishop of Canterbury, who liked very well of it, the said Cromwell presented it to the king, and obtained that the same might freely pass to be read of his subjects with his grace's licence: so that there was printed upon the same book one line in red letters, with these words, "Set forth with the king's most gracious license."

Thomas Matthewe's Bible, by whom and how.

The Bible presented to the king by Cromwell. The Bible put forth with the king's privilege.

The setting forth of this book did not a little offend the clergy, namely the bishops, both for the prologues, and, especially, because in the same book was one special table collected of the common places in the Bible, and the Scriptures for the approbation of the same; and chiefly about the supper of the Lord, and marriage of priests, and the mass, which there was said not to be found in the Scripture.

Furthermore, after the restraint of this foresaid Bible of Thomas Matthewe, another Bible began to be printed at Paris, A. D. 1538; which was called the 'Bible of the large Volume.' The printers whereof were the aforesaid Richard Grafton, and Whitechurch, who bare the charges. A great helper thereto was the lord Cromwell. The chiefest overseer was Miles Coverdale, who, taking the translation of Tyndale, conferred the same with the Hebrew, and amended many things.

In this Bible, although the former notes of Thomas Matthewe were omitted, yet sundry marks and hands were annexed in the sides, which meant that in those places should be made certain notes, where-with also the clergy was offended, though the notes were not made. Concerning the printing whereof, here followeth the story.

About the time and year when Edmund Bonner, archdeacon of Leicester, and ambassador resident in France, began first to be nominate and preferred, by the means of the lord Cromwell, to the bishopric of Hereford, which was A.D. 1538, it happened that the said Thomas lord Cromwell, and earl of Essex, procured of the king of England his gracious letters to the French king, to permit and license a subject of his to imprint the Bible in English within the university of Paris; because paper was there more meet and apt to be had for the doing thereof, than in the realm of England, and also that there were more store of good workmen for the ready dispatch of the same. And in like manner, at the same time, the said king wrote unto his ambassador, who then was Edmund Bonner, bishop of Hereford, lying in Paris, that he should aid and assist the doers thereof<sup>1</sup> in all their reasonable suits: the which bishop, outwardly, showed great friendship to the merchants that were the imprinters of the same; and, moreover, did divers and sundry times call and command the said persons to be in manner daily at his table, both dinner and supper; and so much rejoiced in the workmanship of the said Bible, that he himself would visit the imprinter's house, where the same Bibles were printed, and also would take part of such dinners as the Englishmen there had, and that to his cost, which, as it seemed, he little weighed. And further, the said Bonner was so fervent, that he caused the said Englishmen to put in print a New Testament in English and Latin, and himself took a great many of them, and paid for them, and gave them to his friends.

Bonner a great furtherer in printing the Bible.

Now after that the aforesaid letters were delivered, the French king gave very good words, and was well content to permit the doing thereof; and so the printer went forward, and printed forth the book, even to the last part; and then was the quarrel picked to the printer, and he was sent for to the inquisitors of the faith, and there charged with certain articles of heresy. Then were sent for the Englishmen that were at the cost and charge thereof, and also such as had the correction of the same, who was Miles Coverdale: but having some warning what would follow, the said Englishmen posted away as fast as they could, to save themselves, leaving behind them all their Bibles, which were to the number of two thousand five hundred (called the Bible of the great Volume), and never recovered any of them, saving that the lieutenant-criminal, having them delivered unto him to burn in a place of Paris (like Smithfield), called Maulbert Place, was somewhat moved with covetousness, and sold four great dry-fats of them to a haberdasher, to lap caps in, and those were bought again; but the rest were burned, to the great and importunate loss of those that bare the charge of them. But notwithstanding the said loss, after they had recovered some part of the aforesaid books, and were comforted and encouraged by the lord Cromwell, the said Englishmen went again to Paris, and there got the presses, letters, and servants of the aforesaid printer, and brought them to London; and there they became printers themselves (which before they never intended), and printed out the said Bible in London, and, after that, printed sundry impressions of them: but yet not without great trouble and loss, for the hatred of the bishops, namely Stephen Gardiner and his fellows, who mightily did stomach and malign the printing thereof.

The printing of the Bible stayed at Paris through the English bishops.

How Grafton and Whitchurch became printers.

And it chanced, the meantime, while the said Bible was in printing, that king Henry VIII. preferred the said Bonner from the bishopric of Hereford to be bishop of London; at which time the said Bonner, according to the statute law of England, took his oath to the king, acknowledging his supremacy, and called one of the aforesaid Englishmen that printed the Bible, whom he then loved, although afterwards, upon the change of the world, he did hate him as much, whose name was Richard Grafton; to whom the said Bonner said, when he took his oath, "Master Grafton, so it is, that the king's most excellent majesty hath, by his gracious gift, presented me to the bishopric of London; for the which I am sorry, for, if it would have pleased his grace, I could have been well content to have kept mine old bishopric of Hereford." Then said Grafton, "I am right glad to hear of it, and so I am sure will be a great number of the city of London; for though they yet know you not, yet they have heard so much goodness of you from hence, as no doubt they will heartily rejoice of your placing." Then said Bonner, "I pray God I may do that may content them. And to tell you, Master Grafton, before God (for that was commonly his oath), the greatest fault that I ever found in Stokesley was, for vexing and troubling of poor men, as Loblely the bookbinder, and other, for having the Scripture in English; and, God willing, he did not so much hinder it, but I will as much further it; and I will have of your Bibles set up in the church of Paul's, at the least in sundry places six of them; and I will pay you honestly for them, and give you hearty thanks." Which words he then spake in the hearing of divers credible persons, as Edmund Stile, grocer, and other. "But now, Master Grafton, at this time I have specially called you to be a witness with me, that upon this translation of bishops' secs, I must, according to the statute, take an oath unto the king's majesty, knowledging his supremacy, which, before God, I take with my heart, and so think him to be; and beseech Almighty God to save him, and long to prosper his grace." "Hold the book, sirrah! and read you the oath," said he to one of his chaplains; and he laid his hand on the book, and so took his oath: and after this he showed great friendship to the said Grafton, and to his partner Edward Whitechurch; but specially to Miles Coverdale, who was the corrector of the great Bible.

After this the bishops, bringing their purpose to pass, brought the lord Cromwell out of favour, and shortly to his death; and, not long after, great complaint was made to the king of the translation of the Bible, and of the preface of the same; and then was the sale of the Bible commanded to be stayed, the bishops promising to amend and correct it, but never performing the same. Then Grafton was called, and first charged with the printing of Mattheue's Bible, but he, being very fearful of trouble, made excuses for himself in all things. Then was he examined of the great Bible, and what notes he was purposed to make: to the which he answered, that he knew none. For his purpose was, to have retained learned men to have made the notes; but when he perceived the king's majesty and his clergy not willing to have any, he proceeded no further. But for all these excuses, Grafton was sent to the Fleet, and there remained six weeks, and before he came out was bound in three hundred pounds, that he should neither sell, nor imprint or cause to be imprinted, any mo Bibles, until the king and the clergy should agree upon a translation. And thus was the Bible from that time stayed, during the reign of king Henry VIII.

But yet one thing more is to be noted, that after the imprinters had lost their Bibles, as is aforesaid, they continued suitors to Bonner, to be a mean for to obtain of the French king their books again: but so long they continued suitors (and Bonner ever fed them with fair words, promising them much, but did nothing for them) till at the last Bonner was discharged of his ambassade, and returned home, where he was right joyfully welcomed home by the lord Cromwell, who loved him very dearly, and had a marvellous good opinion of him.

And so long as Cromwell remained in authority, so long was Bonner at his beck, and friend to his friends, and enemy to his enemies; as namely at that time to Gardiner, bishop of Winchester, who never favoured Cromwell, and therefore Bonner could not favour him, but that he and Winchester were the greatest enemies that might be. But, so soon as Cromwell fell, immediately Bonner and Winchester pretended to be the greatest men that lived; and no good word could Bonner speak of Cromwell, but the lowdest, vilest, and bitterest that he could speak, calling him the rankest heretic that ever lived. And then, such as the said Bonner knew to be in good favour with Cromwell, he could never abide their sight: insomuch as the next day after that Cromwell was apprehended, the above-named Grafton, who before had been very familiar with Bonner, met with the said Bonner suddenly, and said unto him, that he was sorry to hear of the news that then was abroad. "What are they?" said he. "Of the apprehension of the Lord Cromwell," said Grafton. "Are ye sorry for that?" said he. "It had been good that he had been dispatched long ago." With that Grafton looked upon him, and knew not what to say, but came no more to Bonner. Howbeit afterward, the said Grafton, being charged for the imprinting of a balet made in the favour of Cromwell, was called before the council, where Bonner was present; and there Bonner charged him with the words that he spake to him of Cromwell, and told out a great long tale. But the lord Audley, who then was lord Chancellor, right discreetly and honourably cut off the matter, and entered into other talk.

The History of Robert Barnes, Thomas Garret, and William Jerome, Divines.

Like as in foreign battles the chief point of victory consisteth in the safety of the general or captain, even so, when the valiant standard-bearer and stay of the church of England, Thomas Cromwell I mean, was made away, pity it is to behold what miserable slaughter of good men and good women ensued thereupon, whereof we have now (Christ willing) to entreat. For Winchester, having now gotten his full purpose, and free swing to exercise his cruelty, wonder it was to see that 'aper Calydonius,' or, as the Scripture speaketh,<sup>1</sup> that 'ferus singularis,' what troubles he raised in the Lord's vineyard. And lest by delays he might lose the occasion presently offered, he straightways made his first assaults upon Robert Barnes, Thomas Garret, and William Jerome, whom, in the very same month, within two days after Cromwell's death, he caused to be put to execution; whose histories severally to comprehend, first of all we will somewhat speak of Barnes, doctor of divinity, whose particular story here followeth.

This Barnes, after he came from the university of Louvain, went to Cambridge, where he was made prior and master of the house of the Augustines. At that time the knowledge of good letters was scarcely entered into the university, all things being full of rudeness and barbarity, saving in very few, who were privy and secret: whereupon Barnes, having some feeling of better learning and authors, began in his house to read Terence, Plautus, and Cicero; so that what with his industry, pains, and labour, and with the help of Thomas Parnell, his scholar, whom he brought from Louvain with him, reading "copia verborum et rerum," he caused the house shortly to flourish with good letters, and made a great part of the house learned (who before were drowned in barbarous rudeness), as Master Cambridge, Master Field, Master Coleman, Master Burley, Master Coverdale, with divers others of the university, that sojourned there for learning's sake. After these foundations laid, then did he read openly in the house Paul's Epistles, and put by Duns and Dorbel; and yet he was a questionnaire himself: and only because he would have Christ there taught, and his holy word, he turned their unsavoury problems and fruitless disputations to other better matter of the holy Scripture; and thereby, in short space, he made divers good divines. The same order of disputation which he kept in his house, he observed likewise in the university abroad, when he should dispute with any man in the common schools. And the first man that answered Dr. Barnes in the Scriptures, was Master Stafford, for his form to be bachelor of divinity, which disputation was marvellous in the sight of the great blind doctors, and joyful to the godly spirited.

Thus Barnes, what with his reading, disputation, and preaching, became famous and mighty in the Scriptures, preaching ever against bishops and hypocrites; and yet did not see his inward and outward idolatry, which he both taught and maintained, till that good Master Bilney with others (as is aforesaid, in the life of Master Bilney) converted him wholly unto Christ.

The first sermon that ever he preached of this truth, was the Sunday before Christmas-day, at St. Edward's church, belonging to Trinity Hall in Cambridge, by the Peas-market, whose theme was the epistle of the same Sunday, 'Gaudete in Domino,' &c.; and so postilled the whole epistle, following the Scripture and Luther's Postil: and for that sermon he was immediately accused of heresy by two fellows of the King's Hall. Then the godly learned in Christ both of Pembroke-hall, St. John's, Peter-house, Queen's college, the King's college, Gunwell-hall, and Benet college, showed themselves, and flocked together in open sight, both in the schools, and at open sermons at St. Mary's, and at the Augustines, and at other disputations; and then they conferred continually together.

The house that they resorted most commonly unto, was the White Horse, which, for despite of them, to bring God's word into contempt, was called Germany. This house especially was chosen because many of them of St. John's, the King's college, and the Queen's college, came in on the back side. At this time much trouble began to ensue. The adversaries of Dr. Barnes accused him, in the Regent-house, before the vice-chancellor, where his articles were presented with him and received, he promising to make answer at the next convocation; and so it was done. Then Dr. Nottoris, a rank enemy to Christ, moved Dr. Barnes to recant; but he refused so to do: which appeareth in his book that he made to king Henry VIII. in English, confuting the judgment of cardinal Wolsey, and the residue of the bishops papistical, and so, for the time Barnes stood steadfast. And this tragedy continued in Cambridge, one preaching against another, in trying out of God's truth, until within six days of Shrovetide. Then, suddenly, was sent down to Cambridge a serjeant-at-arms, called Master Gibson, dwelling in St. Thomas Apostle's in London, who suddenly arrested Dr. Barnes openly in the convocation-house, to make all others afraid; and privily they had determined to make search for Luther's books, and all the Germans' works suddenly.

But good Dr. Farman, of the Queen's college, sent word incontinently thereof to the chambers of those that were suspected, who were in number thirty persons. But, God be praised! they were conveyed away by that time that the serjeant-at-arms, the vice-chancellor, and the proctors, were at every man's chamber, going directly to the place where the books lay (whereby it was perceived that there were some privy spies amongst that small company); and that night they studied together, and gave him his answer, which answer he carried with him to London the next morning, which was the Tuesday before Shrove-Sunday, and came on the Wednesday to London, and lay at Master Parnell's house by the stocks.

In the morning he was carried by the serjeant-at-arms to cardinal Wolsey, to Westminster, waiting there all day, and could not speak with him till night. Then, by reason of Dr. Gardiner, secretary to the cardinal (of whose familiar acquaintance he had been before), and Master Foxe, master of the Wards, he spake the same night with the cardinal in his chamber of estate, kneeling on his knees. Then said the cardinal to them, "Is this Dr. Barnes your man that is accused of heresy?" "Yea, and please your grace; and we trust you shall find him reformable, for he is both well learned and wise." "What! master doctor," said the cardinal; "had you not a sufficient scope in the Scriptures to teach the people, but that my golden shoes, my pole-axes, my pillars, my golden cushions, my crosses did so sore offend you, that you must make us 'ridiculum caput' amongst the people? We were jollily that day laughed to scorn. Verily it was a sermon more fit to be preached on a stage, than in a pulpit; for at the last you said, I wear a pair of red gloves (I should say bloody gloves, quoth you), that I should not be cold in the midst of my ceremonies." And Barnes answered, "I spake nothing but the truth out of the Scriptures, according to my conscience, and according to the old doctors."

And then did Barnes deliver him six sheets of paper written, to confirm and corroborate his sayings. The cardinal received them smiling on him, and saying, "We perceive then that you intend to stand to your articles, and to show your learning." "Yea," said Barnes, "that I do intend, by God's grace, with your lordship's favour."

The cardinal answered, "Such as you are, do bear us and the catholic church little favour. I will ask you a question: "Whether do you think it more necessary that I should have all this royalty, because I represent the king's majesty's person in all the high courts of this realm, to the terror and keeping down of all rebellious treasons, traitors, all the wicked and corrupt members of this commonwealth ; or to be as simple as you would have us ? to sell all these aforesaid things, and to give it to the poor, who shortly will east it against the walls ? and to pull away this majesty of a princely dignity, which is a terror to all the wicked, and to follow your counsel in this behalf ?” He answered, “ I think it necessary to be sold and given to the poor. For this is not comely for your calling, nor is the king’s majesty maintained by your pomp and pole-axes ; but by God who saith, “ Per me reges regnant,” “ Kings and their majesties reign and stand by me.”

Henry VIII.

The pretended reasons whereby Wolsey maintained his pomp.

Then answered he, “ Lo, Master Doctors ! here is the learned wise man, that you told me of.” Then they kneeled down and said, “ We desire your grace to be good unto him, for he will be reformable.”

Then said he, “ Stand you up ! for your sakes, and the university, we will be good unto him. How say you, Master Doctor ; do you not know that I am Legatus de latere, and that I am able to dispense in all matters concerning religion within this realm, as much as the pope may ?” He said, “ I know it to be so.”

“ Will you then be ruled by us, and we will do all things for your honesty, and for the honesty of the university.” He answered, “ I thank your grace for your good will ; I will stieck to the holy Scripture, and to God’s book, according to the simple talent that God hath lent me.” “ Well,” said he, “ thou shalt have thy learning tried to the uttermost, and thou shalt have the law.”

See
Appendix.

Then Dr. Barnes required him that he might have justice with equity ; and forthwith he should have gone to the Tower, but that Gardiner and Foxe became his sureties that night : and so he came home to Master Parnell’s house again, and that night fell to writing again and slept not ; Master Coverdale, Master Goodwin, and Master Field, being his writers. And in the morning he came to York-place, to Gardiner and Foxe, and by and by he was committed to the serjeant-at-arms, to bring him into the chapter-house at Westminster, before the bishops, and the abbot of Westminster, called Islip.

Gardiner a suitor for Barnes.

The same time when Dr. Barnes should appear before the cardinal, there were five Still-yard men to be examined for Luther’s books and Lollardy ; but, after they spied Barnes, they set the others aside, and asked the serjeant-at-arms what was his errand. He said, he had brought one Dr. Barnes to be examined of heresy : and presented both his articles and his accusers. Then immediately, after a little talk, they swore him, and laid his articles to him ; who, like as he answered the cardinal before, so said he unto them. And then he offered the book of his probations unto them ; who asked him whether he had another for himself, and he said “ Yea,” showing it unto them : who then took it from him, and said they would have no leisure to dispute with him at that present, for other affairs of the king’s majesty, which they had to do ; and therefore bade him stand aside. Then they called the Still-yard men again, one by one, and when they were examined, they called forth the Master of the Fleet, and they were committed all to the Fleet. Then they called Dr. Barnes again, and asked him whether he would subscribe to his articles or no ; and he subscribed willingly : and then they committed him, and young Master Parnell to the Fleet also, with the others. There they Barnes with Parnell committed. They are brought again before the cardinal.

On the Saturday he came again before them into the Chapter-house, and there, with the Still-yard men, remained till five o'clock at night; and after long disputations, threatenings, and scornings, about five o'clock at night they called him, to know whether he would abjure or burn. He was then in a great agony, and thought rather to burn, than to abjure. But then was he sent again to have the counsel of Gardiner and Foxe, and they persuaded him rather to abjure than to burn, because (they said) he should do more in time to come; and with divers other persuasions, that were mighty in the sight of reason and foolish flesh. Upon that, kneeling upon his knees, he consented to abjure, and the abjuration put in his hand, he abjured as it was there written, and then he subscribed with his own hand; and yet they would scarcely receive him into the bosom of the church, as they termed it. Then they put him to an oath, and charged him to execute, do, and fulfil, all that they commanded him: and he promised so to do.

Barnes and the Still-yard men bear faggots.

Then they commanded the warden of the Fleet to carry him and his fellows to the place from whence he came, and to be kept in close prison, and in the morning to provide five faggots, for Dr. Barnes and the four Still-yard men. The fifth Still-yard man was commanded to have a taper of five pounds weight to be provided for him, to offer to the rood of Northen,<sup>1</sup> in Paul's; and all these things to be ready by eight o'clock in the morning; and that he, with all that he could make, with bills and glaves, and the knight-marshal, with all his tipstaves that he could make, should bring them to Paul's, and conduct them home again. In the morning they were all ready, by their hour appointed, in Paul's church, the church being so full that no man could get in. The cardinal had a scaffold made on the top of the stairs for himself, with six-and-thirty abbots, mitred priors, and bishops, and he, in his whole pomp, mitred (which Barnes spake against), sat there enthronised, his chaplains and spiritual doctors in gowns of damask and satin, and he himself in purple; even like a bloody Antichrist. And there was a new pulpit erected on the top of the stairs also, for the bishop of Rochester to preach against Luther and Dr. Barnes; and great baskets full of books standing before them, within the rails, which were commanded, after the great fire was made before the rood of Northen, there to be burned; and these heretics, after the sermon, to go thrice about the fire, and to cast in their faggots. Now, while the sermon was a doing, Dr. Barnes and the Still-yard men were commanded to kneel down, and ask forgiveness of God, of the catholic church and of the cardinal's grace: and, after that, he was commanded, at the end of the sermon to declare, that he was more charitably handled than he deserved, or was worthy; his heresies were so horrible and so detestable. And once again he kneeled down on his knees, desiring of the people forgiveness and to pray for him. And so the cardinal departed under a canopy, with all his mitred men with him, till he came to the second gate of Paul's; and then he took his mule, and the mitred men came back again. Then these poor men, being commanded to come down from the stage (whereon the sweepers use to stand when they sweep the church), the bishops sat them down again, and commanded the knight-marshal and the warden of the Fleet, with their company, to carry them about the fire. And so were they brought to the bishops, and there, for absolution, kneeled down; where Rochester stood up and declared unto the people, how many days of pardon and forgiveness of sins they had, for being at that sermon; and there did he assoil Dr. Barnes with the others, and showed the people that they were received into the church again.

This done, the warden of the Fleet, and the knight-marshal, were commanded to have them to the Fleet again, and charged that they should have the liberty of the Fleet, as other prisoners had, and that their friends might resort unto them; and there to remain till the lord cardinal's pleasure was known.

After Barnes there, in the Fleet, had continued the space of half a year, at length being delivered, he was committed to be a free prisoner at the Austin Friars in London. When those caterpillars and bloody beasts had there undermined him, they complained again to their lord cardinal; whereupon he was removed to the Austin Friars of Northampton, there to be burned. Yet he himself, understanding nothing thereof, but supposing still that he should there remain, and continue in free prison, at last one Master Horne, who had brought him up, and was his special friend, having intelligence of the writ which should shortly be sent down to burn him, gave him counsel to feign himself to be desperate; and that he should write a letter to the cardinal, and leave it on his table where he lay, and a paper by, to declare whither he was gone to drown himself; and to leave his clothes in the same place; and another letter to be left there, to the mayor of the town, to search for him in the water, because he had a letter written in parchment about his neck, closed in wax, for the cardinal, which should teach all men to beware by him.

Upon this, they were seven days in searching for him, but he was conveyed to London in a poor man's apparel; and so tarried not there, but took shipping, and went by long seas to Antwerp, and so to Luther; and there fell to study till he had made an answer to all the bishops of the realm, and had made a book entitled, 'Acta Romanorum Pontificum,' and another book with a supplication to king Henry. Immediately it was told the cardinal, that he was drowned, and he said, "Perit memoria ejus cum sonitu;" but this did light upon himself shortly after, who wretchedly died at Leicester.

In the mean season Dr. Barnes was made strong in Christ, and got favour both with the learned in Christ, and with foreign princes in Germany, and was great with Luther, Melancthon, Pomeran, Justus Jonas, Hegendorphinus, and Æpinus, and with the duke of Saxony, and with the king of Denmark; which king of Denmark, in the time of More and Stokesley, sent him, with the Lubecks, as an ambassador to king Henry VIII. He lay with the Lubecks' chancellor, at the Still-yard.

Sir Thomas More, then chancellor, would fain have entrapped him, but the king would not let him, for Cromwell was his great friend. And ere he went, the Lubecks and he disputed with the bishops of this realm in defence of the truth; and so he departed again, without restraint, with the Lubecks. After his going again to Wittenberg. to the duke of Saxony, and to Luther, he remained there, to set forward his works in print that he had begun; from whence he returned again in the beginning of the reign of queen Anne, as others did, and continued a faithful preacher in this city, being all her time well entertained and promoted. After that, he was sent ambassador by king Henry VIII. to the duke of Cleves, for the marriage of the lady Anne of Cleves between the king and her, and well accepted in the ambassade, and in all his doings, until the time that Stephen Gardiner came out of France: but, after he came, neither religion prospered, nor the queen's majesty, nor Cromwell, nor the preachers; who, after the marriage of the lady Anne of Cleves, never ceased until he had grafted the marriage on another stock, by the occasion whereof he began his bloody broil.

For not long after, Dr. Barnes, with his brethren, were apprehended and carried before the king's majesty to Hampton Court, and there he was examined; where the king's majesty, seeking the means of his safety, to bring Winchester and him agreed, at Winchester's request granted him leave to go home with the bishop, to confer with him: and so he did. But, as it happened, they not agreeing, Gardiner and his co-partners sought, by all subtle means, how to entangle and to entrap them in further danger, which not long after was brought to pass; for, by certain complaints made to the king of them, they were enjoined to preach three sermons the next Easter following, at the Spittal; at which sermons, besides other reporters who were thither sent, Stephen Gardiner also was there present, sitting with the mayor, either to hear record of their recantation, or else, as the pharisees came to Christ, to trip them in their talk, if they had spoken any thing awry. When these three had thus preached their sermons, among whom Barnes preaching the first sermon, and seeing Stephen Gardiner there present, humbly desired him, in the face of all the audience, if he forgave him, to hold up his hand; and the said Gardiner thereupon held up his finger. Yet notwithstanding, shortly after, by means of the said reporters, they were sent for to Hampton Court; who from thence were carried to the Tower, by sir John Gostwike. From thence they never came out till they came to their death, as, Christ willing, shall more hereafter appear.

* Then<sup>1</sup> the protestants went again beyond the seas; the priests divorced from their wives; certain bishops were deposed of their bishoprics; and other good men denied Christ and bare faggots at Paul's cross. Then immediately, without judgment, they were put to death, as it is manifest; but the death was in such form, that a papist and a protestant were laid upon one hurdle, to be drawn to Smithfield. This was Winchester's device, to colour his own tyranny, and to make the people doubtful what faith they should trust to.

At his death, Dr. Barnes gave great commendations to the king's majesty, that he should fear God, and maintain religion, and keep marriage undefiled most honourably; and then declared his faith and his articles. Then they prayed together, and Barnes said to Master

Priest, being Shrive, "Know ye wherefore I die, seeing I was never examined nor called to no judgment?" He answered, He knew nothing, but thus we are commanded. Then he took Maister Shrive by the hand, and said, "Bear me witness, and my brethren, that we die christianly and charitably; and I pray you and all the people to pray for us: and if the dead may pray for the quick, we will pray for you." And so he and the rest forgave their enemies, and kissed one the other, and stode hand in hand at the stake, praying continually until the fire came: and so rested in Christ Jesus.*

And thus, hitherto, concerning the history of Barnes. Now let us, likewise, consider the story and doings of Thomas Garret.

The Story of Thomas Garret or Garrard, and of his Trouble in Oxford, TESTIFIED AND RECORDED BY ANTHONY DALABER, WHO WAS THERE PRESENT THE SAME TIME.

In the year of our Lord God 1526,<sup>1</sup> or thereabout, maister Ball of Martyn Colledge, and master Cole of Magdalen Colledge being proctoures, in the moneth of February, maister Garet, curate of Honey-lane in London, came unto Oxford, and brought with him sundry books in Latin, treating of the Scripture, with the first part of 'Unio dissidentium,' and Tyndale's first translation of the New Testament in English, the which books he sold to divers scholers in Oxford, whose<sup>2</sup> names, for his accomptable memory, belike, he wrote in a small book of accomptes.

Garret brought books to Oxford.

After he had been there a while, and had dispatched those books, news came from London that he was searched for in all London, to be apprehended and taken as an heretic, and to have bene euprisonned for selling of those heretical books (as they termed them, because they spake against the usurped authority and mooste filthy doctrine of that very Anticrist the bishop of Rome, and his no less filthy and wicked synagoge). For it was known unto cardinal Wolsey, and to the bishop of London, and to other of that ungodly generation, that Master Garret had a great number of those heretical books, as the world then counted them; and that he was gone to Oxford, to make sale of them there, to such as he knew to be the lovers of the gospel. Wherefore they determined forthwith to make a privy search through all Oxford, to take and imprison him, if they might, and to burn all and every his foresaid books, and him too, if they could: so burning hot was the charity of those most holy fathers. But yet at that time, one of the foresaid proctors, Master Cole, of Maudelen college, who after was cross-bearer unto the archbishop of Yorke, was well acquainted with Master Garret; and, therefore, he gave secret warning on the Tuesday before Shrofetuesday unto a friend or two of Master Garret's of this privy search; and willed, therefore, that he should forthwith, as secretly as he possibly could, depart out of Oxford: for if he were taken in the same search, no remedy but that he should be forthwith sent up unto the cardinal, and so should be committed unto the Tower.

A privy search in Oxford for him.

The Christmas before that time, Anthony Dalaber, then scholar of Albornehall,<sup>3</sup> who had books of Master Garret's, had been in his country in Dorsetshire, at Stalbridge, where he had a brother person of that parish: who was very desirous to have a curate out of Oxford, and willed me, the said Anthony, in any wise to get him one there, if I could. Then, this just occasion offered, it was thought good among the brethren (for so did we not only call one another, but were indeed one to another), that Master Garret, chaunging his name, should be sent forth with my letters into Dorsetshire, unto my brother, to serve him there for a time, until he might secretly from thence convey himself some whether over the sea. According hereunto I wrote my letters in all haste possible unto my brother, for Maister Garret to be his curate, but not declaring what he was indeed; for my brother was a Mayster of Arte and rank papist, and after was the most mortal enemy that ever I had, for the gospel's sake.

*Henry VIII.*A. D.
1540.Garret taken in
search.

So the Wednesday, in the morning before Shroftye, Master Garret departed out of Oxford towarde Dorsetshire with my letters for his new service. How far he went, and by what occasion he so soon returned, I know not. But, the Friday next, in the night time, he came again unto Raddleye's house, where he lay before, and so, after midnight, in the privy search which was then made for him, he was apprehended and taken there in his bed by the two proctors; and on the Saturday, in the morning, delivered unto one Dr. Cottisford, master of Lincoln college, then being Commissary of the university, who kept him as prisoner in his own chamber. There was great joy and rejoicing among all the papists for his apprehension, and specially with Dr. London, Warden of the New college, and Dr. Higdon, Dean of Frideswide's, two arch-papists, who immediately sent their letters in post-haste unto the Lord Cardinal,<sup>1</sup> to inform him of the apprehension of this notable heretic; for the which their doing, they were well assured to have great thanks. But of all this sudden hurly-burly was I utterly ignorant, so that I knew neither of Master Garret's so sodayne return, neither that he was so taken; for after I had sent him out of Oxford with my letters, as before is said, the same week having taken a chamber in Gloucester college, for that purpose to study the civil law, because the scholars in Alborne Hall were all arceturs,<sup>2</sup> I removed all such poor stuff as I had, from thence, unto Gloucester college; and there was I much busied in setting up in order of my bed, of my books, and of such things as I else had, so that I had no leisure to go forth any where those two days, Friday and Saturday. And having set up all my things handsomely in order the same day before noon, I determined to spend that whole afternoon, until Evensong time, at Frisewide college, at my book in mine own study; and so shut my chamber door unto me, and my study door also, and took in my hand to read Francis Lambert upon the Gospel of St. Luke, which book only I had then within there; all my other books written on the Scripture, of which I had a great number, as of Erasmus, of Luther, Eccolampadius, &c., I had yet left in my chamber at Alborne Hall, where I had made a very secret place to keep them safe in, because it was so dangerous to have any such books. And so, as I was diligently reading in the said book of Lambert upon Luke, suddenly one knocked at my chamber-door very hard, which made me astounded, but yet I sat still, and would not speak; then he knocked again more harder, and yet I held my peace; and straightway he knocked again yet more fiercely: and then I thought this, peradventure it is somebody that hath need of me; and therefore I thought me bound to do, as I would be done unto: and so, laying my book aside, I came to the door, and opened it. And there was Maister Garret as a mased man (whom I thought then to have been with my brother), and one with him.

As soon as I saw him, he said he was undone, for he was taken, not remembering that he spake this before the young man. Then I asked him what that yonge man was; he answered that it was one who brought him unto my chamber: then I thanked the younge man, and bad him fare well, and asked mayster Garret whether the yonge man was his friend or no, and what acquaintance he had with him. He said, he knew him not; but he had been to seek a monk of his acquaintance in that college, who was not within his chamber; then he besought this his servant to bring him unto my chamber; and so forth declared how he was returned and taken that night in the privy search, as ye have heard; and that now at Even-song time, the Commissary and all his company went to Evensong, and locked him alone in his chamber. When all were gone and he heard nobody stirring in the college, he put back the bar of the lock with his finger, and so came straight unto Gloucester college, to that monk, if he had been within, who had also bought books of him.

Then said I unto him, 'Alas Maister Garret! by this your uncircumspect coming unto me, and speaking so before this young man, ye have disclosed yourself, and utterly undone me.' I asked him, why he went not unto my brother, with my letters accordingly. He said, after that he was gone a day's journey and a half, he was so fearful, that his heart would no other but that he must needs return again unto Oxford; and so came again on Friday at night, and then was taken as ye heard before. But now, with deep sighs and plenty of tears, he prayed me to help to convey him away; and so he cast off his hood and his gown, wherein he came unto me, and desired me to give him a coat with sleeves, if I had any; and told me that he would go into Wales, and thence convey himself into Germany, if he might. Then I put on him a sleeved coat of mine, of fine clothe in graine, which my mother had given me. He would have another manner of cap of me, but I had none but priestlike, such as his own was.

Then kneeled we both down together on our knees, lifting up our hearts and hands to God, our heavenly Father, desiring him, with plenty of tears, so to conduct and prosper him in his journey, that he might well escape the danger of all his enemies, to the glory of his holy name, if his good pleasure and will so were. And then we embraced, and kissed the one the other, the tears so abundantly flowing out from both our eyes, that we all be-wet both our faces, and scarcely for sorrow could we speak one to the other; and so he departed from me, appalled in my coat, being committed unto the tuition of our almighty and all-merciful Father.

When he was gone down the stairs from my chamber, I straightways did shut my chamber-door, and went into my study, shutting the door unto me, and took the New Testament of Erasmus translation in my hands, kneeled down on my knees, and with many a deep sigh and salt tear, I did with much deliberation read over the tenth chapter of St. Matthew his Gospel; and when I had so done, with fervent prayer I did commit unto God that our dearly beloved brother Garret, earnestly beseeching him, in and for Jesus Christ's sake, his only-begotten Son our Lord, that he would vouchsafe not only safely to conduct and keep our said dear brother from the hands of all his enemies; but also, that he would vouchsafe endue his tender and lately-born little flock in Oxford with heavenly strength by his Holy Spirit, that they might be well able thereby valiantly to withstand, to his glory, all their fierce enemies; and also might quietly, to their own salvation, with all godly patience bear Christ's heavy cross, which I now saw was presently to be laid on their young and weak backs, unable to bear so huge a one, without the great help of his Holy Spirit.

This done, I laid aside my books safe, folded up Maister Garret's gown and hood, and laid them into my press among mine apparel; and so, having put on my short gown, shut up my study and chamber doors, and went towards Friswide's to speak with that worthy martyr of God, one Master Clark, and others, and to declare unto them what had happened that afternoon. But of purpose I went by St. Mary church, to go first unto Corpus Christi college, to speak with Diet and Udal, my faithful brethren and fellows in the Lord there. But by chance I met by the way with a brother of ours, one Master Edon, fellow of Magdalen college, who, as soon as he saw me, came with a pitifull countenance unto me, saying, that we were all undone, for Maister Garret was returned again to Oxford, taken the last night in the privy search, and was in prison with the Commissary. I said, it was not so. He said, it was so. I said nay, and he said yea. I told him, it could not be so, for I was sure he was gone. He answered me and said, 'I know he was gone with your letters, but he came again yester even, and was taken in his bed at Radlei's this night in the privy search; for,' quod he, 'I heard our Proctor, Master Cole, say and declare the same this day in our college to divers of the house.' But I told him again, that I was well assured he was now gone, for I spake with him later than either the Proctor or Commissary did: and then I declared the whole matter unto him, how and when he came unto me, and how he went his way, willing him to declare the same unto other our brethren, whom he should meet withal, and to give God hearty thanks for this his wonderful deliverance, and to pray him, also, that he would grant him safely to pass away from all his enemies: and told him that I was going unto Master Clark of Friswide's, to declare unto him this matter; for I knew and thought verily, that he and divers others there were then in great sorrow for this matter, and prayed maister Edon that he would go home by Alborne Hall to desire my bedfellow Sir Fitzjames (for I lay with him in Alborne Hall) to meet me at Sir Diet's chamber in Corpus Christi college about v. of the clock after Evensong, and then I went straight to Friswide's, and Even-song was begun, and the Dean and the other Canons were there in their grey amices; they were almost at 'Magnificat' before I came thither. I stode at the quier door and heard Master Taverner play, and others of the chapel there sing, with and among whom I myself was wont to sing also; but now my singing and music was turned into sighing and musing.

As I thus and there stode, in cometh Dr. Cottisford, the Commissary, as fast as ever he could go, bare-headed, as pale as ashes (I knew his grief well enough); and to the Dean he goeth into the quier, where he was sitting in his stall, and talked with him very sorrowfully: what, I know not; but whereof, I might and did well and truly guess. I went aside from the quier door, to see and hear more. The Commissary and Dean came out of the quier wonderfully troubled, as it seemed. About the middle of the church met them Dr. London, puffing, blustering, and blowing, like a hungry and greedy lion seeking his prey. They talked together a while, but the Commissary was much blamed of them for keeping of his prisoner so negligently, inso much that he wept for sorrow. And it was known abroad that Master Garret was escaped away, and gone out of the Commissary's chamber at Evensong time; but whether, no man could tell.

These doctors departed, and sent abroad their servants and spies every where. Maister Clark, about the middle of 'Compline,'<sup>1</sup> came forth of the quier: I followed him to his chamber, and when he had put off his grey amice and surplice, he asked me how I did and what news. I answered him, not so well as I would, because the news were not good, but very doubtful and perilous, and so declared what was happened that afternoon of Maister Garret's escape: he was glad, for he knew of his fore-taking. Then he sent for one Master Sumner and Master Bets, fellows and Canons there. In the meanwhile he gave me a very godly exhortation, praying God to give me, and all the rest of our brethren, 'Prudentiam serpentinam et simplicitatem columbinam;' for we should shortly have much need thereof, as he verily thought. When Master Sumner and Master Bets were come unto him, he caused me to declare again the whole matter unto them two; whereof they were very glad, that Maister Garret was so delivered, trusting that he should escape all his enemies. They would have had me to tarry and have supped there with them: but I would not tarry, for I said I had promised to go unto Corpus Christi college to comfort our other brethren there, who were no less sorrowful than they, and prayed them to tell unto our other bretherne there what was happened (for there were divers else in that college). When I came to Corpus Christi college I found together, in sir Diet's chamber, tarrying and looking for me, Fitzjames, Diet, and Udal. They knew all the matter before by Maister Edon, whom I had sent unto Fitzjames; but yet I declared the matter unto them again. And so I tarried there, and supped with them in that chamber, where they had provided meat and drink for us, before my coming: at which supper we were not very merry, considering our state and peril at hand. When we had end our supper and committed our whole cause, with fervent sighs and hearty prayers, unto God our heavenly Father, Fitzjames would needs have me to lie that night with him, in my old lodging at Alborne Hall; and so did I. But small rest, and little sleep, took we both there that night.

In the Sunday, in the morning, I was up and ready by five of the clock; and as soon as I could get out at Alborne Hall door, I went straight towards Gloucester college to my chamber. It had rained that morning a good shower, and with my going I had all to-be-sprinkled my hose and my shoes with the rainy mire. And when I was come in unto Gloucester college, which was about six of the clock, I found the gates fast shut; whereat I did much marvel, for they were wont to be opened daily long before that time. Then did I walk up and down by the wall there, a whole hour before the gates were opened. In the mean while, my musing head being full of forecasting cares, and my sorrowful heart flowing with doleful sighs, I fully determined in my conscience before God, that if I should chance to be taken and be examined, I would accuse no man, nor declare any thing further than I did already perceive was manifestly known before. And so, when the gate was opened, thinking to shift myself, and to put on a longer gown, I went in towards my chamber, and, ascending up the stairs, would have opened my door, but I could not in a long season do it; whereby I perceived that my lock had been meddled withal, and therewith was somewhat altered: yet, at last, with much ado, I opened the lock and went in. When I came in, I saw my bed all to-tossed and tumbled, my clothes in my press thrown down, and my study-door open; whereof I was much amazed, and thought verily there was made there some search that night for Maister Garret, and that it was known of his being with me, by the monk's man that brought him to my chamber.

Now was there lying in the next chamber unto me a young priest, monk of Shirborne abbey in the county of Dorset, come thither to be student, where I was brought up from my childhood; for whose sake partly I came indeed unto that college, to instruct him in the Latin tongue, and in other things wherein I had better knowledge than he. This monk, as soon as he heard me in the chamber, called unto me, and asked me where I lay that night; I told him that I lay with my old bedfellow Fitzjames at Alborne Hall; he came to me straightway, and told how our master Garret was sought in my chamber, and asked me whether he was with me yesterday at afternoon or no; and I told him, Yea. And finally he told me that he was commanded to bring me, as soon as I came in, unto the prior of students, named Anthony Dunston, a monk of Westminster, who now is bishop of Landafe. And so while he made him ready by me, he told me what a do there was made by the Commissary and the two proctors in my chamber that night, with bills and swords thrustured through my bedstraw, and how every corner of my chamber was searched for master Garret, and albeit his gown and hood lying in my press was by them all to-tossed and tumbled with my clothes, yet they did not perceive them there, for by like they took it to have been mine own clothes. This so troubled me, that I forgot to make clean my hose and shoes, and to shift me into another gown; and therefore as soon as he was ready, so all to-be-dirted as I was with the rainy weather, and in my short gown, I went with him to the said Prior's chamber, where I found the said Prior standing, and looking for my coming. He asked me where I had been that night. I told him I lay at Alborne hall, with my old bedfellow Fitzjames; but he would not believe me. He asked me, if Master Garret were with me yesterday. I told him, Yea. Then he would know where he was, and wherefore he came unto me. I told him, I knew not where he was, except he were at Woodstock. For so (said I) he had showed me that he would go thither, because one of the keepers there, his friend, had promised him a piece of venison to make merry withal the Shroftyde; and that he would have borrowed a hat and a pair of high shoes of me, but I had none indeed to lend him. This tale I thought meetest, though it were nothing so.<sup>1</sup> Then had he spied on my fore-finger a big ring of silver, very well double-gilted, with two letters A. D. engraved in it for my name: I suppose he thought it to be gold. He required to see it. I took it unto him. When he had it in his hand, he said it was his ring, for therein was his name: An A, for Anthony, and a D, for Dunston. When I heard him so say, I wished in my heart to be as well delivered from and out of his company, as I was assured to be delivered from my ring for ever.

Then he called for pen, ink, and paper, and commanded me to write when and how Garret came unto me, and where he was become. I had not written scarcely three words, but the chief beadle, with two or three of the Commissary's men, were come unto Master Prior, requiring him straightways to bring us away unto Lincoln college, to the Commissary, and to Dr. London: whether when I was brought into the chapel, there I found Maister Dr. Cottisford, Commissary; Maister Dr. Higdon, then Dean of the Cardinal's college; and Dr. London, Warden of the New college, standing together at the altar in the chapel. When they saw me brought unto them, after salutations given and taken between them, they called for chairs and sat down, and called for me to come to them. And first they asked what my name was. I told them that my name was Anthony Dalaber. Then they also asked me how long I had been student in the university, and I told them almost three years: and they asked me what I studied. I told them that I had read sophistry and logic in Alborne hall, and now was removed unto Gloucester college, to study the civil law, the which the foresaid Prior of students affirmed to be true. Then they asked me whether I knew Maister Garret, and how long I had known him. I told them I knew him well, and had known him almost a twelvemonth. They asked me, when he was with me. I told them, Yesterday at afternoon.

Now by this time, whiles they had me in this talk, one came in unto them which was sent for, with pen, ink, and paper; I trow it was the clerk of the university. As soon as he was come, there was a board and tressles, with a form for him to sit on, set between the doctors and me, and a great mass book laid before me; and I was commanded to lay my right hand on it, and to swear that I should truly answer unto such articles and interrogatories as I should be by them examined upon. I made danger of it awhile at the first, but afterward, being persuaded by them, partly by fair words, and partly by great threats, I promised to do as they would have me; but in my heart nothing so meant to do. So I laid my hand on the book, and one of them gave me my oath, and, that done, commanded me to kiss the book. Then made they great courtesy between them, who should examine and minister interrogatories unto me. At the last, the rankest papistical pharisee of them all, Dr. London, took upon him to do it.

Then he asked me again, by my oath, where Maister Garret was, and whether I had conveyed him. I told him, I had not conveyed him, nor yet wist not where he was, nor whether he was gone, except he were gone to Woodstock as I had before said, that he showed me he would. Then he asked me again, when he came to me, how he came to me, what and how long he talked with me, and whether he went from me. I told him he came to me about evensong-time; and that one brought him unto my chamber-door, whom I know not; and that he told me he would go to Woodstock for some venison to make merry withal this Shroftide; and that he would have borrowed a hat and a pair of high shoes of me, but I had none such to lend him: and then he straight went his way from me, but whether I know not. All these my sayings the scribe wrote in a paper book.

Then they earnestly required me to tell them whether I had conveyed him, for surely, they said, I brought him going some whether this morning; for that they might well perceive by my foul shoes and dirty hosen, that I had travelled with him the most part of this night. I answered plainly, that I lay at Alborne Haul, with sir Fitzjames, and that I had good witness thereof there. They asked me where I was at evensong. I told them, at Friswide's, and that I saw first Maister Commissary, and then Maister Doctor London, come thither at that time unto Master Dean of Frisewide's; and that I saw them talking together in the church there. Dr. London and the Dean threatened me, that if I would not tell the truth, where I had done him, or whether he was gone, I should surely be sent unto the Tower of London, and there be racked, and put into Little-ease.<sup>1</sup> But Master Commissary prayed me with gentle words, to tell him where he was, that he might have him again, and he would be my very great friend, and deliver me out of trouble straightway. I told him I could not tell where he was, nor whether he was become. Thus did they occupy and toss me almost two hours in the chapel, sometimes with threatenings and foul words; and then with fair words and fair promises flattering me. Then was he that brought Maister Garret unto my chamber brought before me, and caused to declare what Maister Garret said unto me at his coming to my chamber: but I said plainly, I heard him say no such thing; for I thought my 'nay' to be as good as his 'yea,' seeing it was to rid and deliver my godly brother out of trouble and peril of his life.

At the last, when they could get nothing of me whereby to hurt or accuse any man, or to know any thing of that which they sought, they all three together brought me up a long stairs into a great chamber over Master Commissary's D. Cotford's chamber, wherein stod a great pair of very high stocks. Then Master Commissary asked me for my purse and girdle, took away my money and my knife, and then they put both my legs into them, and so locked me fast in those stocks; in which I sat, my feet being almost as high as my head; and so departed they, locking fast the chamber door (I think unto their abominable mass), leaving me alone.

When all they were gone, then came unto my good remembrance the worthy forewarning and godly declaration of that most constant martyr of God, Maister John Clark, my father in Christ, who, well nigh two years before that, when I did earnestly desire him to grant me to be his scholer, and that I might go with him continually when and wheresoever he should teach or preach (the which he did daily), who, I say, said unto me much after this sort, 'Dalaber! ye desire ye wot not what, and that ye are, I fear me, unable to take upon you: for though now my preaching be sweet and pleasant unto you, because there is yet no persecution laid on you for it, but the time will come, and that peradventure shortly, if ye continue to live godly therein, that God will lay on you the cross of persecution, to try you withal, whether you can, as pure and purified gold, abide the fire, or, as stubble and dross, be consumed therewith. For the Holy Ghost plainly affirmeth by St. Paul, 'Quod omnes qui piè volunt vivere in Christo Jesu, persecutionem patientur.'<sup>2</sup> Yea, ye shall be called and judged an heretic;

Then will ye wish ye had never known this doctrine; then will ye curse Clark, and wish that ye had never known him, because he hath brought you to all these troubles. Therefore, rather than that ye should do this, leave off from meddling with this doctrine, and desire not to be, and continue, in my company.'

At which his words I was so grieved, that I fell down on my knees at his feet, and with abundance of tears and sithes, even from the bottom of my heart I earnestly besought him, that for the tender mercy of God, showed unto us in our Lord Jesus Christ, he would not refuse me, but receive me into his company, as I had desired; saying that I trusted verily, that he which had begun this in me, would not forsake me, but give me grace to continue therein unto the end. When he heard me say so, he came to me, and took me up in his arms, kissed me, the tears trickling down from his eyes, and said unto me: 'The Lord Almighty grant you so do, and from henceforth for ever take me for your father, and I will take you for my son in Christ.' Now were there at that time in Oxford divers graduates and scholers of sundry colleges and halls, whom God had called to the knowledge of his holy word, which all resorted unto Maister Clark's disputations and lectures in divinity at all times as they mought; and when they might not come conveniently, I was by Maister Clark appointed to resort unto every one of them weekly, and to know what doubts they had in any place of the Scriptures; that by me, from him, they might have the true understanding of the same; which exercise did me most good and profit, to the understanding of the holy Scriptures, which I most desired.

This foresaid forewarning and godly declaration (I say) of this most godly martyr of God, Maister Clark, coming then to my remembrance, caused me with deep sighes to cry unto God from my heart, to assist me with his Holy Spirit, that I mought be able patiently and quietly to bear and suffer whatsoever it should please him of his fatherly love to lay on me, to his glory and the comfort of my dearly beloved brother, whom I thought now to be in great fear and anguish, lest I would be an accuser of them all: for unto me they all were well known, and all their doings in that matter. But, God be blessed! I was full bent never to accuse any of them, whatsoever should happen of me. Before dinner Maister Cottisford came up to me, and requested me earnestly to tell him where Maister Garret was, and, if I would so do, he promised me straightways to deliver me out of prison. But I told him I could not tell where he was: no more indeed I could not. Then he departed to dinner, asking me if I would eat any meat: and I told him, 'Yea, right gladly.' He said he would send me some. When he was gone, his servants asked me divers questions, which I do not now remember, and some of them spake me fair, and some threatened me, calling me heretic; and so departed, locking the door fast upon me.

Thus far Anthony Dalaber hath prosecuted this story, who, before the finishing, departed this year, anno 1562, in the diocese of Salisbury; the residue thereof, as we could gather it of ancient and credible persons, so have we added hereunto the same.

After this, Garret being apprehended and taken by Master Cole, the proctor, or his men, going westward, at a place called Hinxsey,<sup>1</sup> a little beyond Oxford, and so being brought back again, was committed to ward: that done, he was convented before the commissary, Dr. London, and Dr. Higdon, dean of Friswide's (now called Christ's college), into St. Mary's church, where they, sitting in judgment, convicted him according to their law as an heretic (as they said), and afterward compelled him to carry a faggot in open procession from St. Mary's church to Friswide's, and Dalaber likewise with him; Garret having his red hood on his shoulders, like a maister of art. After that, they were sent to Osney, there to be kept in prison till farther order was taken.

Item, for having the said books in his custody; for reading them secretly in privy places and suspect company, declaring and teaching heresies and errors contained in them.

Item, for that in his own person, he followed, advanced, and set forth, the said sect and opinions, and also moved, stirred, and counselled other to follow and advance the same; not only within the city and diocese of London and Lincoln, but also in the universities of Oxford and Cambridge, with divers other places.

Item, for affirming and believing 'Quod opera nostra quantumvis bona in specie nihii conducunt ad justificationem nec ad meritum, sed sola fides.'

Item, for affirming and believing, that pardons do not profit, neither them that be dead, nor yet them alive.

There were suspected, beside, a great number to be infected with heresy, as they called it, for having such books of God's truth as Garret sold unto them; as Master Clark, who died in his chamber, and could not be suffered to receive the communion, being in prison, and saying these words, "crede, et manducasti;" Master Sumner, Master Bets, Taverner the musician, Radley, with other of Friswide college; of Corpus Christi college, as Udal and Diet; with other of Magdalen college; one Eden, with other of Gloucester college; and two black monks, one of St. Austine's of Canterbury, named Langport, the other of St. Edmund's Bury, monk, named John Salisbury; two white monks of Bernard college; two canons of St. Mary's college, one of them named Robert Ferrar, afterward bishop of St. Davies, and burned in queen Mary's time. These two canons, because they had no place in the university with the other, they went on the contrary side of the procession bare-headed, and a beadle before them, to be known from the other. Divers other there were, whose names I cannot remember, who were forced and constrained to forsake their colleges, and sought their friends. Against the procession time there was a great fire made upon the top of Carfax,<sup>4</sup> whereinto all such as were in the said procession either convict or suspected of heresy were commanded, in token of repentance and renouncing of their errors, every man to cast a book into the fire, as they passed by.

tyranny, until this present time that he was again apprehended, and burned with Dr. Barnes; with whom also William Jerome, some time vicar of Stepney, was likewise drawn into Smithfield, and there together with them, constantly endured martyrdom in the fire. Now let us also add to these the story of Jerome.

Henry VIII.

A. D. 1540.

The Life and Story of William Jerome, Vicar of Stepney, and Martyr of Christ. See Appendix.

The third companion who suffered with Barnes and Garret, was William Jerome, vicar of Stepney. This Jerome, being a diligent preacher of God's word, for the comfort and edification of the people, had preached divers and sundry sermons; wherein, to the intent to plant in the consciences of men the sincere truth of christian religion, he laboured as much as time then served, to extirp and weed out the roots of men's traditions, doctrines, dreams, and fantasies. In so doing it could not otherwise be but he must needs provoke much hatred against him amongst the adversaries of Christ's gospel.

It so happened, that the said Jerome, preaching at Paul's on the fourth Sunday in Lent last past, made there a sermon, wherein he recited and mentioned of Hagar and Sarah, declaring what these two signified: in process whereof he showed further how that Sarah and her child Isaae, and all they that were Isaac's, and born of the free woman Sarah, were freely justified: contrary, they that were born of Hagar, the bondwoman, were bound and under the law, and cannot be freely justified. In these words what was here spoken, but that which St. Paul himself uttereth and expoundeth in his Epistle to the Galatians,<sup>1</sup> or what could here be gathered of any reasonable or indifferent hearer, but consonant to sound doctrine, and the vein of the gospel? Now see what rancour and malice, armed with crafty and subtle sophistry, can do. This sermon finished, it was not long but he was charged and convented before the king at Westminster, and there accused for erroneous doctrine.

Percase thou wilt muse, gentle reader! what erroneous doctrine here could be picked out. Note therefore, for thy learning; and he that listeth to study how to play the sycophant, let him here take example. The knot found in this rush was this: for that he preached erroneously at Paul's cross, teaching the people that all that were born of Sarah were freely justified, speaking there absolutely, without any condition either of baptism, or of penance, &c. Who here doubteth, but if St. Paul himself had been at Paul's cross, and had preached the same words to the Englishmen, which he wrote to the Galatians in this behalf, 'ipso facto,' he had been apprehended for a heretic, for preaching against the sacrament of baptism and repentance?

Quarrel

against
sermons.

Furthermore it was objected against him touching matter against magistrates, and laws by them made. Whereunto he answered again and affirmed (as he had before preached), that no magistrate of himself could make any law or laws, private or otherwise, to bind the inferior people, unless it were by the power, authority, and commandment of his or their princes to him or them given, but only the prince.

Works no part of our salvation. Good works available by imputation.

And moreover, to confirm the same he added, saying, that if the prince make laws consenting to God's laws, we are bound to obey them. And if he make laws repugnant to the laws of God, and be an evil and wicked prince, yet are we bound humbly to suffer him, and not violently to resist or grudge against him.

Also concerning his sermons, one Dr. Wilson entered into disputation with him, and defended, that good works justified before God, and were necessary and available to salvation. To whom Jerome answered again, that all works, whatsoever they were, were nothing worth, nor any part of salvation of themselves, but only referred to the mercy and love of God, which mercy and love of God direct the workers thereof; and yet it is at his mercy and goodness to accept them: which, to be true, Dr. Wilson neither could, nor did, deny.

WITH THE CAUSES OF THEIR MARTYRDOM.

And thus much concerning the several stories of these three good men. Now let us see the order of their martyrdom, joining them all together; what was the cause of their condemnation; and what were their protestations and words at their suffering.

Ye heard before, how Barnes, Jerome, and Garret, were caused to preach at Easter at the Spittal; the occasion whereof, as I find it reported by Stephen Gardiner writing against George Joye, I thought good here to discourse more at large.<sup>1</sup>

Stephen Gardiner, hearing that the said Barnes, Jerome, and Garret should preach the Lent following, A. D. 1540. at Paul's cross, to stop the course of their doctrine, sent his chaplain to the bishop of London, the Saturday before the first Sunday in Lent, to have a place for him to preach at Paul's; which to him was granted, and time appointed that he should preach the Sunday following, which should be on the morrow; which Sunday was appointed before for Barnes to occupy that room. Gardiner therefore, determining to declare the gospel of that Sunday containing the devil's three temptations, began amongst other things to note the abuse of Scripture amongst some, as the devil abused it to Christ; and so, alluding to the temptation of the devil, wherein he alleged the Scripture against Christ, to cast himself downward, and that he should take no hurt, he inferred thereupon, saying:

'Now-a-days,' quoth he, 'the devil tempteth the world, and biddeth them to cast themselves backward. There is no 'forward' in the new teaching, but all backward. Now the devil teacheth, come back from fasting, come back from praying, come back from confession, come back from weeping for thy sins; and all is backward, insomuch that men must now learn to say their Pater-Noster backward. For where we said, Forgive us our debts, as we forgive our debtors; now it is, As thou forgavest our debts, so I will forgive my debtors; and so God must forgive first; and all, I say, is turned backward, &c.'

Pardon procured by the devil, quoth Gardiner, against friars and pardons

Amongst other things, moreover, Gardiner 'noted the devil's craft and shift in deceiving man; who, envying his felicity, and therefore coveting to have man idle, and void of good works, and to be led in that idleness with a wan-hope to live merrily at his pleasure here, and yet to have heaven at the last, hath, for that purpose, procured out pardons from Rome, wherein heaven was sold for a little money; and to retail that merchandise, the devil used friars for his ministers. Now they be gone, with all their trumpery; but the devil is not yet gone, &c. And now that the devil perceiveth that it can no longer be borne to buy and sell heaven by the friars, he hath excogitated to offer heaven, without works for it, so freely, that men shall not need for heaven to work at all, whatsoever opportunity they have to work: marry! if they will have any higher place in heaven, God will leave no work unrewarded; but as to be in heaven needs no works at all, but only belief, only, only,<sup>1</sup> and nothing else,' &c.

Henry VIII.

1540.

This sermon of Stephen Gardiner finished, Dr. Barnes, who was put off from that Sunday, had his day appointed, which was the third Sunday next following, to make his sermon; who, taking the same text of the gospel which Gardiner had done before, was, on the contrary side, no less vehement in setting forward the true doctrine of christian religion, than Winchester had been before in plucking men backward from truth to lies, from sincerity to hypocrisy, from religion to superstition, from Christ to Antichrist. In the process of which sermon he proceeding, and calling out Stephen Gardiner by name to answer him, alluding in a pleasant allegory to a cock-fight; terming the said Gardiner to be a fighting cock, and himself to be another: but the garden cock (he said) lacketh good spurs: objecting moreover to the said Gardiner, and opposing him in his grammar rules; thus saying, that if he had answered him in the schools, so as he had there preached at the Cross, he would have given him six stripes: declaring furthermore what evil herbs this Gardiner had set in the garden of God's Scripture, &c.

The sermon of Barnes replying to Gardiner.

Finally, with this sermon Gardiner was so tickled in the spleen, that he immediately went to the king to complain, showing how he, being a bishop and prelate of the realm, was handled and reviled at Paul's cross.

Hereupon the king, giving too much ear to Gardiner's grief, was earnestly incensed against Barnes, and with many high words rebuked his doings in his privy closet; having with him the earl of Southampton, who was the lord Wriothesley, and the master of the horse, who was Anthony Brown; also Dr. Cox, and Dr. Robinson. Unto whom when Barnes had submitted himself, "Nay," said the king, "yield thee not to me; I am a mortal man;" and therewith rising up and turning to the sacrament, and putting off his bonnet, said, "Yonder is the Master of us all, author of truth: yield in truth to him, and that truth will I defend; and otherwise yield thee not unto me." Much ado there was, and great matter laid against Barnes. In conclusion this order was taken, that Barnes should go apart with Winchester, to confer and commune together of their doctrine, certain witnesses being thereunto appointed, to be as indifferent hearers, of whom one was Dr. Cox, the other was Dr. Robinson, with two others also to them assigned, who should be reporters to the king of the disputation; at the first entry of which talk, Gardiner, forgiving him (as he saith) all that was past, offered him the choice, whether he would answer or oppose; which was the Friday after that Barnes had preached.

The king displeas'd against Barnes.

Cox and Robinson arbiters between Barnes and Gardiner.

The question between them propounded, by Gardiner's narration, was this: "Whether a man could do any thing good or acceptable before the grace of justification, or not?" This question arose upon a certain contention which had been between them before: for Barnes had affirmed, that albeit God requireth of us to forgive our neighbour, to obtain forgiveness of him; yet, he said, that God must forgive us first, before we forgive our neighbour; for else, to forgive our neighbour were sin, by the text which saith: "All that is not of faith, is of sin," &c. Thus the matter being propounded, Gardiner, to prove the contrary, came forth with his arguments two or three: to the which arguments (saith Gardiner) Barnes could not answer, but desired to be spared that night, and the next morning he would answer his arguments. In the morning, Gardiner with the hearers being again assembled, Dr. Barnes, according to the appointment, was present, who then went about to assail his arguments. To his solutions Gardiner again replied: and thus continued they in this altercation by the space of two hours. In the end of this cock-fight, Winchester thus concludeth this glorious tale,<sup>2</sup> and croweth up the triumph; declaring how Barnes besought him to have pity on him, to forgive him, and to take him to be his scholar: whom then the said Winchester (as he himself confesseth) receiving, not as his scholar, but as his companion, offered to him a portion out of his living, to the sum of forty pounds a year, which if it be true (as Stephen Gardiner himself reporteth), why then doth this glorious cockatrice crow so much against Barnes afterwards, and east him in the teeth, bearing all the world in hand that Barnes was his scholar? whereas he himself here refuseth Barnes to be his scholar, and receiveth him as his companion, fellow-like: but to the story.

This done, the king being advertised of the conclusion of this matter between Barnes and Winchester, was content that Barnes should repair to the bishop's house at London the Monday following: which he did, with a certain other companion joined unto him. Who he was, Winchester there doth not express, only he saith that it was neither Jerome nor Garret. In this next meeting between Barnes and the bishop, upon the aforesaid Monday, the said bishop studying to instruct Barnes, uttered to him certain articles or conclusions, to the number of ten, the effect whereof here followeth.

Winchester's Articles against Barnes.

I. The effect of Christ's passion hath a condition. The fulfilling of the condition diminisheth nothing the effect of Christ's passion.

II. They that will enjoy the effect of Christ's passion must fulfil the condition.

III. The fulfilling of the condition requireth first knowledge of the condition; which knowledge we have by faith.

IV. Faith cometh of God, and this faith is a good gift; it is good and profitable to me; it is profitable to me to do well, and to exercise this faith: ergo, by the gift of God, I may do well before I am justified.

V. Therefore I may do well by the gift of God before I am justified, towards the attainment of justification.

VI. There is ever as much charity towards God as faith: and as faith increaseth, so doth charity increase.

VII. To the attainment of justification are required faith and charity.

VIII. Every thing is to be called freely done, whereof the beginning is free and set at liberty, without any cause of provocation.

IX. Faith must be to me the assurance of the promises of God made in Christ (if I fulfil the condition), and love must accomplish the condition : whereupon followeth the attainment of the promise according to God's truth.

X. A man being in deadly sin, may have grace to do the works of penance, whereby he may attain to his justification.

These articles, forasmuch as they be sufficiently answered and replied unto by George Joye, in his joinder<sup>1</sup> and rejoinder<sup>2</sup> against Winchester, I shall not need to cumber this work with any new ado therewith, but only refer the reader to the books aforesaid, where he may see matter enough to answer to these popish articles.

Answer
and rejoinder of Joye.

I told you before, how the king was contented that Barnes should resort to the house of the bishop of Winchester, to be trained and directed by the bishop : which Barnes then hearing the talk of the people, and having also conference with certain learned men, within two days after his coming to the bishop's house waxed weary thereof, and so coming to the bishop signified unto him, that if he would take him as one that came to confer, he would come still, but else he would come no more; and so clean gave over the bishop.

Barnes will only

him.

This being known unto the king, through sinister complaints of popish sycophants, Barnes again was sent for, and convented before the king ; who, being grievously incensed against him, enjoined both him, Jerome, and Garret, at the solemn Easter sermons at St. Mary Spittal, openly in writing to revoke the doctrine which they before had taught ; at which sermon Stephen Gardiner also himself was present, to hear their recantation.

First Dr. Barnes, according to his promise made to the king, solemnly and formally began to make his recantation ; which done, he, with much circumstance and obtestation, called upon the bishop (as is above touched), and, asking of him forgiveness, required him, in token of a grant, to hold up his hand, to the intent that he there openly declaring his charity before the world, the bishop also would declare his charity in like manner. Which when the bishop at first refused to do as he was required, Barnes again called for it, desiring him to show his charity, and to hold up his hand ; which when he had done with much ado, wagging his finger a little, then Barnes, entering into his sermon, after his prayer made, beginneth the process of a matter, preaching contrary to that which before he had recanted ; insomuch that the mayor, when the sermon was finished, sitting with the bishop of Winchester, asked him whether he should from the pulpit send him to ward, to be forthcoming for that his bold preaching, contrary to his recantation. The like also did Jerome, and Garret after him.

The king had before appointed certain to make report of the sermons. Besides them, there was one, who, writing to a friend of his in the court, in the favour of these preachers, declared how gaily they had all handled the matter, both to satisfy the recantation, and also in the same sermons to utter out the truth, that it might spread without let of the world. Wherefore, partly by these reporters, and partly by the negligent looking to this letter, which came to the lord Cromwell's hands, saith Gardiner, Barnes with his other fellows were apprehended, and committed to the Tower. Stephen Gardiner, in his aforesaid book against George Joye, would needs clear himself, that he was no party to, nor cause of their casting into the Tower; and giveth this reason for him, for that he had then no access, nor had after, so long as Cromwell's time lasted, to the king's secret counsel: yet, notwithstanding, the said Gardiner cannot persuade us to the contrary, but that his privy complaining to the king, and his secret whisperings in his friend's ears, and his other workings by his factors about the king, was a great sparkle to set their faggots afire.

Thus then Barnes, Jerome, and Garret, being committed to the Tower after Easter, there remained till the thirtieth day of July, which was two days after the death of the lord Cromwell. Then ensued process against them by the king's council in the parliament, to which process Gardiner confesseth himself that he was privy, amongst the rest. Whereupon all those three good saints of God, the thirtieth day of July, not coming to any answer, nor yet knowing any cause of their condemnation, without any public hearing were brought together from the Tower to Smithfield, where they, preparing themselves to the fire, had there at the stake divers and sundry exhortations; among whom Dr. Barnes first began with this protestation following:

The Protestation of Doctor Barnes at the Stake.

I am come hither to be burned as a heretic, and you shall hear my belief, whereby you shall perceive what erroneous opinions I hold. God I take to record, I never (to my knowledge) taught any erroneous doctrine, but only those things which Scripture led me unto; and that in my sermons I never maintained any error, neither moved nor gave occasion of any insurrection, although I have been slandered to preach that our Lady was but a saffron-bag, which I utterly protest before God that I never meant, nor preached it; but all my study and diligence hath been utterly to confound and confute all men of that doctrine, as are the anabaptists, who deny that our Saviour Christ did take any flesh of the blessed Virgin Mary; which sects I detest and abhor. And in this place there have been burned some of them, whom I never favoured nor maintained; but with all diligence evermore did I study to set forth the glory of God, the obedience to our sovereign lord the king, and the true and sincere religion of Christ: and now hearken to my faith.

'I believe in the holy and blessed Trinity, three Persons and one God, that created and made all the world: and that this blessed Trinity sent down the second person, Jesu Christ, into the womb of the most blessed and purest Virgin Mary. And here, bear me record, that I do utterly condemn that abominable and detestable opinion of the Anabaptists, who say that Christ took no flesh of the Virgin. For I believe, that without man's will or power he was conceived by the Holy Ghost, and took flesh of her, and that he suffered hunger, thirst, cold, and other passions of our body, sin excepted, according to the saying of St. Peter, He was made in all things like to his brethren, except sin. And I believe that this his death and passion was the sufficient ransom for the sin of all the world. And I believe that through his death he overcame sin, death, and hell; and that there is none other satisfaction unto the Father, but this his death and passion only; and that no work of man did deserve any thing of God, but only his passion, as touching our justification: for I know the best work that ever I did is impure and imperfect.' [And with this he cast abroad his hands, and desired God to forgive him his trespasses.] 'For although perchance,' said he, 'you know nothing by me, yet do I confess, that my thoughts and cogitations be innumerable: wherefore I beseech thee, O Lord! not to enter into judgment with me, according to the saying of the prophet David, Non intres in judicium cum servo tuo, Domine, Enter not into judgment with thy servant, O Lord: and in another place, Si iniquitates observaveris, Domine, quis sustinebit? Lord, if thou straitly mark our iniquities, who is able to abide thy judgment?<sup>1</sup> Wherefore I trust in no good work that ever I did, but only in the death of Christ. I do not doubt but through him to inherit the kingdom of heaven. Take me not here that I speak against good works, for they are to be done; and verily they that do them not, shall never come into the kingdom of God. We must do them, because they are commanded us of God, to show and set forth our profession, not to deserve or merit; for that is only the death of Christ.

‘I believe that there is a holy church, and a company of all them that do profess Christ; and that all that have suffered for and confessed his name be saints; and that all they do praise and laud God in heaven, more than I or any man’s tongue can express: and that always I have spoken reverently, and praised them as much as Scripture willed me to do. And that our Lady, I say, was a virgin immaculate and undefiled, and that she is the most pure virgin that ever God created, and a vessel elect of God, of whom Christ should be born.’

Then said Master Sheriff, “You have said well of her before.” And, being afraid that Master Sheriff had been or should be aggrieved with any thing that he should say, he said, ‘Master Sheriff, if I speak any thing that you will me not, do no more but beckon me with your hand, and I will straightway hold my peace; for I will not be disobedient in any thing, but will obey.’

Then there was one that asked him his opinion of praying to saints. Then said he,

‘Now of saints you shall hear my opinion. I have said before somewhat that I think of them: how that I believe they are in heaven with God, and that they are worthy of all the honour that Scripture willeth them to have. But, I say, throughout all Scripture we are not commanded to pray to any saints. Therefore I cannot nor will not preach to you that saints ought to be prayed unto; for then should I preach unto you a doctrine of mine own head. Notwithstanding, whether they pray for us or no, that I refer to God. And if saints do pray for us, then I trust to pray for you within this half hour, Master Sheriff, and for every christian man living in the faith of Christ, and dying in the same as a saint. Wherefore, if the dead may pray for the quick, I will surely pray for you.’

“Well, have you any thing more to say?” Then spake he to Master Sheriff, and said, “Have ye any articles against me for the which I am condemned?” And the sheriff answered, “No.” Then said he, “Is there here any man else that knoweth wherefore I die, or that by my preaching hath taken any error? Let them now speak, and I will make them answer.” And no man answered. Then said he,

‘Well! I am condemned by the law to die, and as I understand by an act of parliament; but wherefore, I cannot tell, but belike for heresy, for we are like to burn. But they that have been the occasion of it, I pray God forgive them, as I would be forgiven myself. And Dr. Stephen, bishop of Winchester that now is, if he have sought or wrought this my death either by word or deed, I pray God forgive him, as heartily, as freely, as charitably, and without feigning, as ever Christ forgave them that put him to death. And if any of the council, or any others have sought or wrought it through malice or ignorance, I pray God forgive their ignorance, and illuminate their eyes that they may see, and ask mercy for it. I beseech you all, to pray for the king’s grace, as I have done ever since I was in prison, and do now, that God may give him prosperity, and that he may long reign among you; and after him that godly prince Edward may so reign, that he may finish those things that his Father hath begun. I have been reported a preacher of sedition and disobedience unto the king’s majesty; but here I say to you, that you are all bound by the commandment of God to obey your prince with all humility, and with all your heart, yea, not so much as in a look to show yourselves disobedient unto him; and that not only for fear of the sword, but also for conscience' sake before God. Yea, and I say further, if the king should command you any thing against God's law, if it be in your power to resist him, yet may you not do it.'

'Then spake he to the sheriff and said,

'Master Sheriff, I require you, on God's behalf, to have me commended unto the king's grace, and to show him that I require of his grace these five requests: first, that whereas his grace hath received into his hands all the goods and substance of the abbeyes:—Then the sheriff desired him to stop there. He answered, 'Master Sheriff! I warrant you I will speak no harm; for I know it is well done that all such superstition be clean taken away, and the king's grace hath well done in taking it away. But his grace is made a wfole king, and obeyed in his whole realm as a king (which neither his father nor grandfather, neither his ancestors that reigned before him, ever had), and that, through the preaching of us, and such other wretches as we are, who always have applied our whole studies, and given ourselves for the setting forth of the same; and this is now our reward. Well! it maketh no matter. Now he reigneth among you; I pray God long he may live and reign among you! Would to God it might please his grace to bestow the said goods, or some of them, to the comfort of his poor subjects, who surely have great need of them.'

'The second that I desire his grace is, that he will see that matrimony be had in more reverence than it is; and that men, for every light cause invented, cast not off their wives, and live in adultery and fornication; and that those that be not married should not abominably live in whoredom, following the filthy lusts of the flesh.

'The third, that the abominable swearers may be punished and straightly looked upon; for the vengeance of God will come on them for their mischievous oaths.'

Barnes's request to Master Edgar to leave swearing.

'Then desired he Master Pope to have him commended to Master Edgar, and to desire him, for the dear blood of Jesus Christ, that he would leave that abominable swearing which he used; for surely except he did forsake it, he would come to some mischievous end.

'The fourth request, that his grace would set forth Christ's true religion, and seeing he hath begun, go forward, and make an end; for many things have been done, but much more is to do. And that it would please his grace to look on God's word himself, for that it hath been obscured with many traditions invented of our own brains. Now,' said he, 'how many petitions have I spoken of?' And the people said, 'Four.' 'Well,' said he, 'even these four be sufficient, which I desire you, that the king's grace may be certified of them; and say, that I most humbly desire him to look earnestly upon them; and that his grace take heed that he be not deceived with false preachers and teachers, and evil counsel; for Christ saith, that such false prophets shall come in lambs' skins.'

Barnes cleareth himself of all heresy.

'Then desired he all men to forgive him, and if he had said any evil at any time unadvisedly, whereby he had offended any man, or given any occasion of evil, that they would forgive it him, and amend that evil they took of him; and to bear him witness that he detested and abhorred all evil opinions and doctrines against the word of God, and that he died in the faith of Jesu Christ, by whom he doubted not but to be saved. And with those words he desired them all to pray for him, and then he turned him about, and put off his clothes, making him ready to the fire, patiently there to take his death, yielding his soul unto the hands of Almighty God.

The protestation of Jerome and Garret.

'The like confession made also Jerome and Garret, professing in like manner their belief, reciting all the articles of the christian faith, briefly declaring their minds upon every article, as the time would suffer; whereby the people might understand that there was no cause nor error in their faith, wherefore justly they ought to be condemned : protesting moreover, that they denied nothing that was either in the Old or New Testament, set forth by their sovereign lord the king, whom they prayed the Lord long to continue amongst them, with his most dear son prince Edward : which done, Jerome added this exhortation in few words following :

Henry VIII.

The Exhortation of Jerome to the People.

‘ I say unto you, good brethren ! that God hath bought us all with no small price, neither with gold nor silver, nor other such things of small value, but with his most precious blood. Be not unthankful therefore to him again, but do as much as to christian men belougeth, to fulfil his commandments, that is, ‘ Love your brethren.’ Love hurteth no man, love fulfilleth all things. If God hath sent thee plenty, help thy neighbour that hath need. Give him good counsel. If he lack, consider if thou wert in necessity, thou wouldest gladly be refreshed. And again, bear your cross with Christ. Consider what reproof, slander, and reproach, he suffered of his enemies, and how patiently he suffered all things. Consider that all that Christ did was of his mere goodness, and not of our deserving. For if we could merit our own salvation, Christ would not have died for us. But for Adam’s breaking of God’s precepts we had been all lost, if Christ had not redeemed us again. And like as Adam broke the precepts, and was driven out of Paradise, so we, if we break God’s commandments, shall have damnation, if we do not repent and ask mercy. Now, therefore, let all Christians put no trust nor confidence in their works, but in the blood of Christ, to whom I commit my soul to guide, beseeching you all to pray to God for me, and for my brethren here present with me, that our souls, leaving these wretched carcases, may constantly depart in the true faith of Christ.’

In much like sort Garret also, protesting and exhorting the people, after his confession made, ended his protestation in manner as followeth :

The concluding Protestation of Thomas Garret.

‘ I also detest, abhor, and refuse, all heresies and errors, and if, either by negligence or ignorance, I have taught or maintained any, I am sorry for it, and ask God mercy. Or if I have been too vehement or rash in preaching, whereby any person hath taken any offence, error, or evil opinion, I desire of him, and all other persons whom I have any way offended, forgiveness. Notwithstanding, to my remembrance I never preached wittingly or willingly any thing against God’s holy word, or contrary to the true faith, to the maintenance of errors, heresies, or vicious living, but have always, for my little learning and wit, set forth the honour of God, and the right obedience to his laws, and also the king’s accordingly : and if I could have done better, I would. Wherefore, Lord ! if I have taken in hand to do that thing which I could not perfectly perform, I desire of thee pardon for my bold presumption. And I pray God send the king’s grace good and godly counsel, to his glory, to the king’s honour, and the increase of virtue in this his realm. And thus now I yield up my soul unto Almighty God, trusting and believing that he, of his infinite mercy, for his promise made in the blood of his Son, our most merciful Saviour Jesu Christ, will take it, and pardon me of all my sins, whereby I have most grievously, from my youth, offended his majesty : wherefore I ask him mercy, desiring you all to pray with me and for me, that I may patiently suffer this pain, and die steadfastly in true faith, perfect hope, and charity.’

themselves to the hands of the tormentors; and so took their death both christianly and constantly, with such patience as might well testify the goodness of their cause, and quiet of their conscience.

Wherein is to be noted how mightily the Lord worketh with his grace and fortitude in the hearts of his servants, especially in such as causeless suffer, with a guiltless conscience, for religion's sake, above others who suffer otherwise for their deserts. For whereas they who suffer as malefactors, are commonly wont to go heavy and pensive to their death; so the others, with heavenly alacrity and cheerfulness, do abide whatsoever it pleaseth the Lord to lay upon them: example wherof we have right well to note, not only in these three godly martyrs above mentioned, but also in the lord Cromwell, who suffered but two days before, the same no less may appear; who, although he was brought to his death, attainted and condemned by the parliament, yet what a guiltless conscience he bare to his death, his christian patience well declared; who, first calling for his breakfast, and cheerfully eating the same, and, after that, passing out of his prison down the hill within the Tower, and meeting there by the way the lord Hungerford, going likewise to his execution (who, for other matter, here not to be spoken of, was there also imprisoned), and perceiving him to be all heavy and doleful, with cheerful countenance and comfortable words, asking why he was so heavy, he willed him to pluck up his heart, and to be of good comfort; "for," said he, "there is no cause for you to fear; for if you repent, and be heartily sorry for that you have done, there is for you mercy enough with the Lord, who, for Christ's sake, will forgive you; and therefore be not dismayed. And though the breakfast which we are going to, be sharp, yet, trusting to the mercy of the Lord, we shall have a joyful dinner." And so went they together to the place of execution, and took their death patiently, July 28th, 1540.

A NOTE OF THREE PAPISTS, POWEL, FETHERSTONE, AND ABEL, EXECUTED THE SAME TIME WITH BARNES, JEROME, AND GARRET.

The same time and day, and in the same place, where and when these three above mentioned did suffer, three others also were executed, though not for the same cause, but rather the contrary, for denying the king's supremacy; whose names were Powel, Fetherstone, and Abel: which spectacle so happening upon one day, in two so contrary parts or factions, brought the people into a marvellous admiration and doubt of their religion, which part to follow and take; as might so well happen amongst ignorant and simple people, seeing two contrary parts so to suffer, the one for popery, the other against popery, both at one time. Inasmuch that a certain stranger being there present the same time, and seeing three on the one side, and three on the other side to suffer, said in these words, "Deus bone! quomodo hic vivunt gentes? hic suspenduntur papistæ, illic comburuntur antipapistæ." But to remove and take away all doubt hereafter from posterity, whereby they shall the less marvel how this so happened, here is to be understood how the cause thereof did rise and proceed; which happened by reason of a certain division and discord among the king's council, who were so divided among themselves in equal parts, that the one half seemed to hold with the one religion, the other half with the contrary; the names of whom, although it were not necessary to express, yet being compelled for the setting forth of the truth of the story, we have thought good here to annex, as the certainty thereof came to our hands.

This division and separation of the council amongst themselves caused both these parts above mentioned, the one for one religion, the other for another, to suffer together. For, as the one part of the council called for the execution of Barnes, Garret, and Jerome; so the other part, likewise, called for the execution of the law upon Powel, Fetherstone, and Abel; which six, being condemned and drawn to the place of execution, two upon a hurdle, one being a papist, the other a protestant, thus, after a strange manner, were brought into Smithfield, where all the said six together, for contrary doctrine, suffered death; three, by the fire, for the gospel; the other three, by hanging, drawing, and quartering, for popery.

Two together laid upon the hurdle; the one a papist, the other a protestant.

Alan Cope, in his worshipful Dialogues, making mention of these three aforesaid, Powel, Fetherstone, and Abel, amongst others who died in king Henry's days in the like popish quarrel, that is, for the like treason against their prince (being in all to the number of twenty-four), extolleth them not only in words, but with miracles also, up to the height of heaven, among the crowned martyrs and saints of God. To the which Cope, because in this haste of story I have no leisure at this present to give attendance, I shall wait attendance (the Lord willing) another time, to join in this issue with him more at leisure. In the meantime, it shall suffice at this present to recite the names only of those twenty-four rebels, whom he, of his popish devotion, so dignified with the pretended title of martyrs: the names of thirteen of which monkish rebels be these here following:<sup>1</sup> four, whom the said Cope unjustly crowned for martyrs. But of these more shall be said (the Lord willing) hereafter.

Thus, having discoursed the order of the six articles, with other matter likewise following in the next parliament, concerning the condemnation of the lord Cromwell, of Dr. Barnes, and his fellows, let us now (proceeding further in this history) consider what great disturbance and vexations ensued after the setting forth of the said articles, through the whole realm of England, especially among the godly sort: wherein first were to be mentioned the straight and severe commissions sent forth by the king's authority, to the bishops, chancellors, officials, justices, mayors, and bailiffs in every shire, and other commissioners by name in the same commissions expressed; and, amongst others, especially to Edmund Bonner bishop of London, to the mayor, sheriffs, and aldermen of the same, to inquire diligently after all heretical books, and to burn them. Also to inquire after all such persons whatsoever, culpable or suspected of such felonies, heresies, contempts, or transgressions, or speaking any words contrary to the aforesaid act, set forth, of the six articles. The tenor of the said commissions being sufficiently expressed in ancient records, and in the bishops' registers, and also partly touched before,<sup>1</sup> therefore, for tediousness I here omit: only showing forth the commission directed to Edmund Bonner bishop of London, to take the oath of the mayor of London, and of others, for the execution of the commission aforesaid; the tenor whereof here followeth:

The Commission for taking the Oath of the Mayor of London and Others, for the execution of the Act aforesaid.

Henry the Eighth, by the grace of God, king of England and of France, defender of the faith, lord of Ireland, and in earth supreme head of the church of England, unto the reverend father in Christ Edmund Bonner, bishop of London, and to his wellbeloved the bishop's chancellor, health. Know ye that we have given you, jointly and severally, power and authority to receive the oaths of William Roche, mayor of London; John Allen, knight; Ralph Warren, knight; Richard Gresham, knight; Roger Cholmley, knight, serjeant-at-law; John Gresham; Michael Dormer, archdeacon of London; the bishop's commissary, and the archdeacon's official; Robert Chidley, Guy Crayford, Edward Hall, Robert Broke, and John Morgan, and every of them, our commissioners for heresies, and other offences done within our city of London and diocese of the same, according to the tenor of a certain schedule hereunto annexed. And therefore we command you that you receive the oaths aforesaid; and when you have so received them, to certify us into our chancery, under your seals, returning this our writ.

Teste me ipso at Westminster the twenty-ninth of January, in the thirty-second year of our reign. [1541].

A NOTE HOW BONNER SAT IN THE GUILDHALL IN COMMISSION FOR THE SIX ARTICLES: ALSO OF THE CONDEMNING OF MEKINS.

Upon this commission given unto Edmund Bonner, he, coming to the Guildhall, with other commissioners, to sit upon the statute of the Six Articles, began eftsoons to put in execution his authority after a rigorous sort, as ye shall hear. And first, he charged certain juries to take their oath upon the statute aforesaid, who, being sworn, had a day appointed to give their verdict: at which day they indicted sundry persons, who, shortly after, were apprehended and brought to ward; who, after awhile remaining there, were, by the king and his council, discharged at the Star-chamber, without any further punishment.

Henry VIII.

Not long after this, sir William Roche being mayor, Bonner with other commissioners sat at the Guildhall aforesaid, before whom there were a certain number of citizens warned to appear; and after the commission read, the said parties were called to the book, and when five or six were sworn, one of the said persons, being called to the book, Bonner seemed to mislike, and said, "Stay awhile, my masters," quoth he; "I would ye should consider this matter well that we have in hand, which concerneth the glory of God, the honour of the king, and the wealth of the reahn; and if there be any here among you that doth not consider the same, it were better that he were hence than here." Then communed the commissioners with Bonner about that man, so that at length he was called to the book and sworn, not altogether with his good will.

When the two juries were sworn, Bonner taketh upon him to give the charge unto the juries, and began with a tale of Anacharsis, by which example he admonished the juries to spare no persons, of what degree soever they were. And at the end of his charge, he brought forth to the bar a boy, whose name was Mekins, declaring how grievously he had offended by speaking of certain words against the state, and of the death of Dr. Barnes; and produced into the said court two witnesses, who were there sworn in the face of the court. So a day was assigned upon which the juries aforesaid should give up their verdict; at which day both the commissioners, and the said juries, met at Guildhall aforesaid. Then the clerk of the peace called on the juries by their names, and when their appearance was taken, Bonner bade them put in their presentments. Then said the foreman of that jury, whose name was William Robins; "My lord," with a low courtesy, "we have found nothing:" at which words he fared as one in an agony, and said, "Nothing? have ye found nothing? what nothing? By the faith I owe to God," quoth he to the foreman, "I would trust you upon your obligation; but by your oath I will trust you nothing." Then said some of the commissioners; "My lord, give them a longer day." "No," quoth he, "in London they ever find nothing. I pray you what say you to Mekins?" "My lord," quoth the foreman, "we can say nothing to him, for we find the witnesses to disagree. One affirmeth that he should say the sacrament was nothing but a ceremony; and the other, nothing but a signification." "Why," quoth Bonner, "did he not say that Barnes died holy?" Then pausing awhile, he bade call the other jury. "Put in your verdict," quoth he. "My lord," said one, "we have found nothing." "Jesus!" quoth he, "is not this a strange case?"

the parsons and curates of every parish to give us instructions; and it was denied us." Then stood up the recorder,<sup>1</sup> and said, it was true indeed that he had spoken; and therewithal said, "This last year were charged two juries, which did many things naughtily and foolishly, and did as much as in them lay to make an uproar among the king's people; and therefore it was thought not meet that they should give information to you." "Nay, nay," quoth Bonner, "this was the cause: If the parson or curate should give information according to his knowledge, then what will they say? 'I must tell my confession to a knave-priest, and he shall go by-and-by and open it.'" "What!" said my lord mayor, "there is no man, I trow, that will say so?" "Yes, by my troth," quoth Bonner, "knave-priest, knave-priest." Then said my lord mayor, somewhat smiling, "There be some of them slippery fellows; and as men find them, so will they oftentimes report." Bonner, not well contented with those words, said to the jury, "My masters, what say you to Mekins?" They answered, "The witnesses do not agree, therefore we do not allow them." "Why," quoth Bonner, "this court hath allowed them." Then said one of the jury to the recorder, "Is it sufficient for our discharge, if this court do allow them?" "Yea," said the recorder, "it is sufficient;" and said, "Go you aside together awhile, and bring in your verdict." After the jury had talked together a little while, they returned to the bar again with their indictment, which at Bonner's hand was friendly received; so both they and the other jury were discharged, and bidden take their ease. Thus ended the court for that day. Shortly after they sat for life and death. Mekins being brought to the bar, and the indictment read, Bonner said to him, "Mekins, confess the truth, and submit thyself unto the king's law, that thy death may be an example to all others."

This Richard Mekins, being a child that passed not the age of fifteen years (as Hall reporteth),<sup>2</sup> as he had heard some other folks talk, so chanced he to speak against the sacrament of the altar; which coming to Bonner's ears, he never left him (as afore doth plainly appear) before he had brought him to the fire. During the time of his imprisonment, neither his poor father nor mother, for fear, durst aid him with any relief; whereby he there endured in great misery. At what time he was brought unto the stake, he was taught to speak much good of the bishop of London, and of the great charity he showed to him, and to defy and detest all heretics and heresies, but especially Dr. Barnes,<sup>3</sup> unto whom he imputed the learning of that heresy, which was the cause of his death. The poor lad would, for safeguard of his life, have gladly said that the twelve apostles had taught it him; such was his childish innocency and fear. But for this deed many spake and said, "It was great shame for the bishop, whose part and duty it had been rather to have laboured to save his life, than to procure that terrible execution; seeing that he was such an ignorant soul, that he knew not what the affirming of heresy was."

About the same time also a certain priest was burned at Salisbury, who, leaving his papistry, had married a wife, and became a player in interludes, with one Ramsey and Hewet, which three were all condemned and burned; against whom, and especially against Spencer, was laid matter concerning the sacrament of the altar. He suffered at Salisbury.

Although this inquisition above mentioned was meant properly and especially concerning the Six Articles, yet so it fell out, that in short space doubts began to arise, and to be moved by the quest: whether they might inquire as well of all other opinions, articles, and cases of Lollardy, or for speaking against holy bread, holy water, or for favouring the cause of Barnes, of friar Ward, sir Thomas Rose, &c.:<sup>1</sup> whereupon great perturbation followed in all parishes almost through London in the year aforesaid, which was 1541, as here ensueth in a brief summary table to be seen.

In St. Alban's Parish in London.

John Dixe was noted never to be confessed in Lent, nor to receive at Easter, and to be a sacramentary.

Richard Chepeman; for eating flesh in Lent, and for working on holy-days, and not coming to the church.

Mrs. Cicely Marshall; for not bearing her palm, and despising holy bread and holy water.

Michael Hawkes; for not coming to the church, and for receiving young men of the new learning.

Master John Browne; for bearing with Barnes.

Anne, Bedike's wife; for despising our Lady, and not praying to saints.

Andrew Kempe, William Pahlen, and Richard Manerd; for disturbing the service of the church with brabbling of the New Testament.

In the Parish of Trinity the Less.

William Wyders denied, two years before, the sacrament to be Christ's body, and said that it was but only a sign.

William Stokesly; for rebuking his wife at the church for taking holy water.

Roger Davy; for speaking against worshipping of saints.

Master Blage; for not coming to his parish church, not confessing, nor receiving.

St. John Baptist in Wallbrook.

William Clinch; for saying, when he seeth a priest preparing to the mass, 'Ye shall see a priest now go to masking.' Item, For calling the bishop of Winchester, 'False flattering knave.' Item, For burying his wife without dirge, and causing the Scot of St. Katherine's to preach the next day after the burial.

William Plaine; seeing a priest going to mass, said, 'Now you shall see one in masking.' Item, When he came to the church, with loud reading the English Bible he disturbed the divine service.

A. D. Herman Johnson, Jerome Akon, Giles Hosteman, Richard Bonfeld, Thomas 1541. Cowper, Humphrey Skinner, John Sneudnam, Richard Philips, John Celos :
these nine persons were presented, for that they were not confessed in Lent, nor had received at Easter.

St. Nicholas, in the Flesh Shambles.

were presented for not keeping the divine service in the holy days.

Brisley's wife, for busy reasoning on the new learning, and not keeping the church.

St. Andrew's in Holborn.

Mrs. Castle; for being a meddler, and a reader of the Scripture in the church.

Master Galias, of Bernard's Inn; for withstanding the curate censuring the altars on Corpus Christi even, and saying openly that he did naught.

Master Pates, of David's Inn, and Master Galias; for vexing the curate in the body of the church, in declaring the king's injunctions and reading the Bishop's Book, so that he had much ado to make an end.

St. Mildred in Bread-street.

William Beckes and his wife; suspected to be sacramentaries, and for not creeping to the cross on Good Friday.

Thomas Langham, William Thomas, Richard Beckes, William Beckes :
these four were presented for interrupting the divine service.

Ralph Symonds; for not keeping our Lady's mass, which he was bound to keep.

John Smith, apprentice; for saying that he had rather hear the crying of dogs, than priests singing matins or even-song.

St. Magnus' Parish.

Thomas Bele, John Sturgeon, John Wilshire, Thomas Symon, Ralph Clervis and his wife, James Banaster, Nicholas Barker, John Sterky, Christopher Smith, Thomas Net: these eleven persons of St. Magnus' parish were presented and accused for maintaining of certain preachers (as then it was called) of the new learning, as Wisdom, Rose, friar Ward, and sir William Smith, alias Wright.

Nicholas Philip; for maintaining heresies and Scripture books, and for using neither fasting nor prayer.

Richard Bigges; for despising holy bread, putting it in the throat of a bitch, and for not looking up to the elevation.

St. Mary Magdalen in Milk-street.

Mrs. Elizabeth Statham; for maintaining in her house Latimer, Barnes, Garret, Jerome, and divers others.

John Duffet; for marrying a woman who was thought to be a nun.

St. Owen's Parish, in Newgate Market.

William Hilliard and Duffet; for maintaining Barnes, Jerome, and Garret, with others.

Grafton and Whitchurch; suspected not to have been confessed.

St. Martin's at the Well with two Buckets.

John Greene, Mother Palmer, Christopher Coots, William Selly, Alexander Frere, William Bredi, John Bush, William Somerton, George Durant, Master David's apprentice: all these being of the parish of St. Martin's, at the Well with two Buckets, were presented for contumning the ceremonies of the church :

also some for walking in the sacring time with their caps on : some for turning their heads away : some for sitting at their doors when sermons were in the church, &c.

St. Michael's in Wood-street.

Robert Andrew ; for receiving heretics into his house, and keeping disputation of heresy there.

John Williamson, Thomas Buge, Thomas Gilbert, W. Hickson, Robert Daniel, Robert Smitton : these other six were suspected to be sacramentaries and rank heretics, and procurers of heretics to preach, and to be followers of their doctrine.

St. Botolph's at Billingsgate.

John Mayler ; to be a sacramentary, and a railer against the mass.

Richard Bilby, draper ; presented for saying these words, 'That Christ is not present in the blessed sacrament.'

St. Giles's Without Cripplegate.

Henry Patinson and Anthony Barber : these two were detected for maintaining their boys to sing a song against the sacrament of the altar : also Patinson came not to confession.

Robert Norman also refused to come to confession, saying, that none of his servants 'should be shriven of a knave-priest.'

John Humfrey ; for speaking against the sacraments and ceremonies of the church.<sup>1</sup>

William Smith and his wife, John Cooke and his wife : these two couple were presented for not coming to service in their parish church, and for saying it was lawful for priests to have wives.

William Gate or Cote, William Aston, John Humfrey, John Cooke : to these four it was laid, for saying, that the mass 'was made of pieces and patches.' Also for depraving of matins, mass, and even-song.

John Miles and his wife, John Millen, John Robinson, Richard Millar, John Green and his wife, Arnold Chest : all these were put up for railing against the sacraments and ceremonies.

St. Giles's Without Cripplegate.

John Crosdall, John Clerke, John Owel : these three labouring men, for not coming to divine service on holy-days, and for labouring on the same.

Thomas Grangier and John Dictier ; noted for common singers against the sacraments and ceremonies.

John Sutton and his wife, and John Segar : these three were noted to be despisers of auricular confession.

John Rawlins, John Shiler, William Chalinger, John Edmonds, John Richmond and his wife ; for despising holy bread and holy water, and letting divine service.

Margaret Smith ; for dressing flesh-meat in Lent.

Thomas Trentham ; for reasoning against the sacrament of the altar, and saying that the sacrament was a good thing, but it was not as men took it, very God.

St. Thomas the Apostle.

Robert Granger, William Petingale, William May and his wife, John Henrison and his wife, Robert Welch, John Benglosse, John Pitley, Henry Foster, Robert Causy, William Pinchbeck and his wife : all these thirteen were put up by the inquisition, for giving small reverence at the sacring of the mass.

St. Benet Finch.

Martyn Bishop's wife : she was presented by her curate, for being not shriven in Lent, nor receiving at Easter : also she did set light by the curate, when he told her thereof.

(1) Ex Regist. Lond

*Henry VIII.*A. D.
1541.

Robert Plat and his wife: these were great reasoners in Scripture, saying, that they had it of the Spirit; and that confession availeth nothing; and that he, not able to read, would use no beads.

St. Michael at Queenhithe.

Thomas Aduet, John Palmer, and Robert Cooke: the cause laid to these three persons, was for reasoning of the Scripture, and of the sacraments.

The register saith, that they denied all the sacraments: but this popish hyperbole will find little credit, where experience, acquainted with popish practices, sitteth to be the judge.

John Cockes: this man was noted for a great searcher out of new preachers, and maintainer of Barnes's opinions.

John Bouletes; for forbidding his wife to use beads.

Thomas Kelde; he refused to take penance and absolution, and did eat flesh upon a Friday before Lent.

St. Mary Woolchurch.

Nicholas Newell, a Frenchman; presented to be a man far gone in the new sect, and that he was a great jester at the saints, and at our Lady.

John Hawkins and his servant, Thomas Chamberlaine and his wife, John Curteys, Master Dissel, his wife, and his servant: these eight were great reasoners and despisers of ceremonies.<sup>1</sup>

St. Katherine Coleman.

The curate of St. Katherine Coleman: he was noted for calling of suspected persons to his sermons by a beadle, without ringing of any bell; and when he preached, he left his matters doubtful.

Item, for preaching without the commandment of his parson.

Item, for that he was a Scottish friar, driven out of his country for heresy.

Tulle Bustre, his wife and his son-in-law: these were noted for coming seldom to the church, and many times were seen to labour upon the holy-days.

St. Matthew's Parish.

William Ettis and his wife were noted for maintaining certain preachers; and for causing one Taverner, being a priest, to preach against the king's injunctions.

Merifield, and his son-in-law, Nicholas Russel; the good-man of the Saracen's Head in Friday-street; William Callaway, John Gardiner, with three apprentices: against this company presentation was made for gathering together in the evening, and for bringing ill preachers (that is to say, good preachers) amongst the people.

Thomas Plummer was presented, for saying that the blessed sacrament was to him that doth take it, so; and to him that doth not, it was not so.

Shoreditch.

Shermons, keeper of the Carpenters' Hall in Christ's parish, was presented for procuring an interlude to be openly played, wherein priests were railed on, and called knaves.

Saint Benet at Paul's Wharf.

Lewes Morall, a servant; also James Ogule and his wife; noted not to have been confessed certain years before.

Saint Margaret in Fish-street.

Thomas Babam; accused not to have been confessed nor houseled in his parish church.

Saint Antholine's.

The parson and curate of St. Antholine's; for not using the ceremonies in making holy water, nor keeping their processions on Saturdays.

(1) Ex Regist. Lond

Lewis Bromfield; for not taking his housel, and for absenting himself from the church on holy-days.

Henry VIII.

Saint Mary-hill.

John Sempe and John Goffe; for dispraising a certain anthem of our Lady, beginning 'Te matrem,' &c.; saying that there is heresy in the same.

Gilbert Godfrey; for absenting himself from the church on holy-days.

A. D.

Saint Mary Magdalen in Old Fish-street.

Thomas Cappes; for saying these words, 'That the sacrament of the altar was but a memory and a remembrance of the Lord's death.'

Saint Botolph's at Billingsgate.

John Mailer, grocer; for calling the sacrament of the altar 'the baken god,' and for saying that the mass was called beyond the sea, 'miss,' for that all is amiss in it.

Saint Martin's in Ironmonger Lane.

John Hardyman, parson of St. Martin's in Ironmonger-lane; presented for preaching openly that confession is confusion and deformation; and that the butcherly ceremonies of the church were to be abhorred. Also for saying, 'What a mischief is this, to esteem the sacraments to be of such virtue! for in so doing they take the glory of God from him:' and for saying, that faith in Christ is sufficient, without any other sacraments, to justify.<sup>1</sup>

*See
Addenda*

Saint Bridget's in Fleet-street.

Christopher Dray, plumber; for saying of the sacrament of the altar, that it was not offered up for remission of sins; and that the body of Christ was not there, but only by representation and signification of the thing.

Saint Andrew's in Holborn.

Robert Ward, shoemaker; presented by three witnesses, for holding against the sacrament of the altar: he died in prison in Bread-street.

Allhallows, Barking.

Nicholas Otes; for not coming to the housel at Easter, he was sent to Newgate.

Herman Peterson and James Gosson; for not coming to shrift and housel at the time of Easter. These were committed to prison in Bread-street.

Saint Olave's in the Old Jewry.

Richard White, haberdasher; for saying, that he did not think that Christ was in the sacrament of the altar within the sepulchre, but in heaven above.

Saint Botolph's Without Aldgate.

Giles Harrison, being in a place without Aldgate, merrily jesting in a certain company of neighbours, where some of them said, 'Let us go to mass:' 'I say tarry,' said he; and so taking a piece of bread in his hands, lifted it up over his head: and likewise taking a cup of wine, and bowing down his head, made therewith a cross over the cup, and so taking the said cup in both his hands, lifted it over his head, saying these words, 'Have ye not heard mass now?' For the which he was presented to Bonner, then bishop of London; against whom came these, namely, Thomas Castle, William Greene, Andrew Morice, and John Margetson, as witnesses against him.

Richard Bostock, priest; for saying that auricular confession hath killed more souls than all the bills, clubs, and halters have done since king Henry was king of England, &c. Also for saying, that the water in the Thames hath as much virtue, as the water that the priests do hallow.

Margaret Ambsworth; for having no reverence to the sacrament at sacring time. Item, for instructing of maids, and being a great doctress.

In Aldermanbury.

John Leicester, Christopher Townesend, Thomas Mabs, Christopher Holybread, W. Raynold, Thomas David Skinner, Thomas Starckey, Martyn Donam, and W. Derby: all these noted and presented for maintaining of Barnes, and such other preachers; and many of their wives, for not taking holy bread, nor going in procession on Sundays.

Lawrence Maxwel, bricklayer; for speaking and reasoning against auricular confession.

Saint Martin's the Great.

See Appendix.

John Coyngnes, or Livelonde; for holding against the sacrament of the altar, and not receiving at Easter.

Saint Clement's Without Temple Bar.

Gerard Frise; presented by two witnesses, for affirming that a sermon preached is better than the sacrament of the altar; and that he had rather go to hear a sermon, than to hear a mass.

Saint Katherine's.

Dominick Williams, a Frenchman; for not receiving the sacrament of the altar at Easter.

Thomas Lancaster, priest; he lay in the compter in the Poultry, for compiling and bringing over books prohibited.

Item, Gough, the stationer; troubled for resorting unto him.

Friar Ward; laid in the Compter in Bread-street; for marrying one Elizabeth to his wife, after his vow made of chastity.

Wilcock, a Scottish friar; prisoned in the Fleet, for preaching against confession, holy water, against praying to saints, and for souls departed; against purgatory, and holding that priests might have wives, &c.

John Taylor, doctor in divinity; presented for preaching at St. Bride's in Fleet-street, that it is as profitable to a man to hear mass and see the sacrament, as to kiss Judas's mouth, who kissed Christ our Saviour, &c.

W. Tolwine, parson of St. Antholine's; presented and examined before Edmund Bonner, for permitting Alexander Seton to preach in his church, having no license of his ordinary; and also for allowing the sermons of the said Alexander Seton, which he preached against Dr. Smith.

Tolwine making of holy water.

To the said Tolwine, moreover, it was objected, that he used, the space of two years, to make holy water, leaving out the general exorcism, beginning 'Exorcismo te,' &c.; using these words for the same, 'Benedicite, Domini: ab eo sit benedicta, à cujus latere fluxit sanguis et aqua:' adjoining thereto, 'commixtio salis et aquæ fiat, in nomine Patris, et Filii, et Spiritus Sancti.'

The like usage of making holy water was also used in Aldermary church, where Dr. Crome was, and in Honey-lane.

Against this objection thus Tolwine defended himself, saying, that he took occasion so to do by the king's injunctions, which say, that ceremonies should be used, all ignorance and superstition set apart.

His recantation.

In the end, this Tolwine was forced to stand at Paul's cross, to recant his doctrine and doings.

The same time also Robert Wisdom, parish priest of St. Margaret's in Lothbury, and Thomas Becon, were brought to Paul's cross, to recant and to revoke their doctrine, and to burn their books.

Little Allhallows.

Sir George Parker, priest and parson of St. Pancras, and curate of Little Allhallows, was noted, suspected, and convented before the ordinary, for certain books; especially for having 'Unio dissidentium,' &c.

Sir John Byrch, priest of St. Botolph's Lane, was complained of by one Master Wilson, for being a busy reasoner in certain opinions which agreed not with the pope's church.

Alexander Seton, a Scottish man, and a worthy preacher, was denounced, detected, and presented, by three priests, of whom one was fellow of Whittington College, called Richard Taylor; another was John Smith; the third was John Huntingdon, who afterwards was converted to the same doctrine himself.

This Seton was chaplain to the duke of Suffolk, and by him was made free denizen. In his sermon preached at St. Antholine's, his adversaries pick'd against him matter containing fifteen objections, or rather cavillations, which, for example, I thought here to exhibit to the reader, to the intent that men may see, not only what true doctrine Seton then preached, consonant to the Scriptures; but also what wrangling cavillers can do, in depraving what is right, or in wresting what is well meant, or in carping at what they understand not, or in seeking out faults where none are; as by these their sinister cavillations may appear.

Certain Places or Articles gathered out of Alexander Seton's Sermons by his Adversaries.

See
Appendix.

The sayings and words of Alexander Seton, spoken and preached by him in his sermon, made the 13th day of November, at afternoon, in the parish church of St. Antholine's in London: 'Paul saith, Of ourselves we can do nothing; I pray thee then where is thy will? Art thou any better than Paul, James, Peter, and all the apostles? Hast thou any more grace than they? Tell me now, if thy will be any thing or nothing: if it be any thing, tell me whether it be to do good or ill? If thou say to do ill, I will grant thou hast a great deal. If thou say to do good, I ask whether is more, somewhat or nothing? for Paul said, he could do nothing, and I am sure thou hast no more grace than Paul and his companions.'

'Scripture speaketh of three things in man; the first is will, the other two are consent and deed. The first, that is will, God worketh without us, and beside us. The other two he worketh in us, and with us.—And here he alleged St. Augustine, to prove that we can will nothing that is good. Moreover he said, 'Thou hast not one jot, no not one tittle, to do any good.'

No will in
himself to do good.

'There is nothing in heaven or earth, creature or other, that can be any mean towards our justification; nor yet can nor may any man satisfy God the Father for our sin, save only Christ, and the shedding of his blood.'

'He that preacheth that works do merit, or be any mean to our salvation, or any part of our justification, preacheth a doctrine of the devil.'

'If any thing else, save only Christ, be any mean towards our justification, then did not Christ only justify us.'

'I say, that neither thy good works, nor any thing that thou canst do, can be one jot or tittle towards thy justification. For if they be, then is not Christ a full justifier; and that I will prove by a familiar example. Be it in case I have two servants: the one is called John, and the other Robert; and I promise to send you such a day twenty pounds by John my servant, and at my day I send you by John my servant, nineteen pounds nineteen shillings and eleven pence three farthings, and there lacketh but one farthing, which Robert doth bring thee, and so thou hast thy twenty pounds, every penny and farthing: yet will I ask, if I be true of my promise, or no; and thou mayest say, 'Nay.' And why? 'Because I promised to send thee that whole twenty pounds by John, and did not, for there lacked a farthing, which Robert brought. Wherefore I say, if thy works do merit or bring one little jot or tittle towards thy justification, then is Christ false of his promise, who said that he would do all together.'

Henry VIII.
1541.

One scripture I will bring you, which they cannot writhe, to prove that Christ only was promised to be our only justifier, our only mean; and that is in the 22d of Genesis, where it is written, 'In thy seed shall all people be blessed;' meaning thereby only Christ: and he said not, 'in thy seeds,' nor, 'in the works of thy seeds.' Wherefore, all they that preach that works be any part or mean toward our justification, do make God false of his promise.'

'They that preach that works do merit, do make works the tree, which are but the fruits of justice, wrought by him that is already a just man, who cannot choose but bring forth good fruit.'

'I would ask a question, whether he that worketh be a good man, or bad; for he must be one of them. If he be a good man, he cannot choose but bring forth good fruits; if he be an ill man, he can bring forth no fruit, but ill fruit; for a good tree cannot bring forth ill fruit.'

Man's works made check-mate with Christ

'He that saith that works do merit any thing towards our salvation, doth make works check-mate with Christ, and plucketh from Christ what is his, and giveth it to works. Some will ask, Wherefore then should I do good works? I answer, Good works are to be done for no cause else, but only for the glory of God, and not that they do merit any thing at all. And he that saith that good works are to be done for any other cause than for the glory of God only, and will have them to merit, or be any mean towards our justification, I say, he lieth, and believe him not.'

'He that can show me in any scripture, that works do merit, or be any mean to our justification, for the first scripture I will (without any further judgment) lose both mine ears; for the second, my tongue; and for the third, my neck. For of this I dare say he cannot prove in all the whole Scripture one tittle. Wherefore believe them not.'

The papists bely the protestants, as though they denied good works.

'Men say that we deny good works, and fasting and prayer. They lie on us: we deny nothing but popish works, and popish fasting, and popish prayer; and he that preacheth that works do merit, or fasting doth merit, or prayer doth merit, doth preach a popish doctrine.'

Good works, how they be rewarded.

'If you ask me, when we will leave preaching only Christ: even when they do leave to preach that works do merit, and suffer Christ to be a whole satisfier, and only mean to our justification; and, till then, we will not cease, in God's cause, to set forth only Christ, to be a full, and perfect, and only satisfaction.'

'If you ask, if good works shall be rewarded, I say, yea, and with no less than eternal glory, but for no merit that they deserve, for they deserve nothing; but only because God hath promised, not for the merit of the work, but for his promise's sake; and he will not break his promise.'

Other Articles gathered out of Alexander Seton's Sermons.

Touching reconciliation, spoken of by Dr. Smith, preaching in the forenoon at Paul's Cross, Alexander Seton, preaching at afternoon at St. Antholine's, and reciting his sayings and Scriptures, reproved him for alleging this saying; 'Reconciliamini Deo;' and englishing the same thus, 'Reconcile yourselves to God:'<sup>1</sup> because it is there spoken passively, and not actively; so that there should be nothing in man pertaining to reconciliation, but all in God.

Also, reproving the said Dr. Smith, for that the said doctor said, that man, by his good works, might merit: which saying of Dr. Smith the said Alexander Seton reproved in the pulpit at St. Antholine's, the 13th day of November, in the year of our Lord 1541, as naughtily spoken.

Moreover the said Alexander Seton said, in the same place, that it was a shame that any such preacher should be suffered so openly to preach such erroneous doctrine as to say that works should merit; adding, 'Non sunt condignæ passionēs,'<sup>2</sup> &c.; 'Et post quam feceritis omnia,' &c.<sup>3</sup>

Finally Seton said, 'Peradventure ye will say the church hath determined this matter touching works. And I say,' quoth he, 'that it is ecclesia malignantium, so determining any thing against Scripture.'

To these pretended objections of his adversaries he made his answer again by writing, first denying many things there presented, taking upon his conscience, that he never spake divers of those words, and again many things that he never meant to such end or purpose; as in the said register may appear. But all this notwithstanding, for all that he could say for himself, the ordinary proceeded in his consistory judgment, ministering to him certain interrogatories (after the popish course) to the number of ten articles. The greatest matter laid against him was, for preaching free justification by faith in Christ Jesu; against false confidence in good works; and man's free will. Also it was laid unto him, for affirming that private masses, dirges, and other prayers, profited not the souls departed: so that in the end, he, with Tolwine aforesaid, was caused to recant at Paul's Cross, A. D. 1541.

Add to these aforesaid, Dr. Taylor, parson of St. Peter's in Cornhill; South, parish priest of Allhallows in Lombard-street; Some, a priest; Giles, the king's beer-brewer, at the Red Lion in St. Katherine's; Thomas Lancaster, priest: all which were imprisoned likewise, for the six articles.

To be short, such a number out of all parishes in London, and out of Calais and divers other quarters, were then apprehended, through the said inquisition, that all prisons in London were too little to hold them, insomuch that they were fain to lay them in the halls. At last, by the means of good lord Audeley, such pardon was obtained of the king, that the said lord Audeley, then lord chancellor, being content that one should be bound for another, they were all discharged, being bound only to appear in the Star Chamber, the next day after All-Souls, there to answer, if they were called; but neither was there any person called, neither did there any appear.

The prisons too little to hold them that were taken for the six articles. The lord chancellor Audeley.

The Story of John Porter, cruelly martyred for reading the Bible in Paul's.

In the number of these beforenamed cometh the remembrance of John Porter, who, in the same year (A. D. 1541), for reading the Bible in Paul's church, was cruelly handled, and that unto death, as you shall hear. It was declared in this history above, how Edmund Bonner, bishop of London, in the days of the lord Cromwell, being then ambassador at Paris, was a great doer in setting forward the printing of the Bible in the great volume; promising moreover, that he would, for his part, have six of those Bibles set up in the church of St. Paul in London; which, also, at his coming home, he no less performed, according to the king's proclamation set forth for the same, whereof read before.

The Bible commanded by the king to be set in churches.

The Bibles thus standing in Paul's by the commandment of the king, and the appointment of Bonner the bishop, many well-disposed people used much to resort to the hearing thereof, especially when they could get any that had an audible voice to read unto them, misdoubting therein no danger toward them; and no more there was, so long as the days of Cromwell lasted. After he was gone, it happened amongst divers and sundry godly-disposed persons, who frequented there the reading of the aforesaid Bible, that one John Porter used sometimes to be occupied in that godly exercise, to the edifying as well of himself, as of others. This Porter was a fresh young man, and of a big stature; who, by diligent reading of the Scripture, and by hearing of such sermons as then were preached by them that were the setters-forth of God's truth, became very expert. The Bible then being set up, by Bonner's commandment, upon divers pillars in Paul's church, fixed unto the same with chains for all men to read in them that would, great multitudes would resort thither to hear this Porter, because he could read well, and had an audible voice. Bonner and his chaplains, being grieved withal (and the world beginning then to frown upon the gospellers), sent for the aforesaid Porter, and rebuked him very sharply for his reading. But Porter answered him that he trusted he had done nothing contrary to the law, neither contrary to his advertisements, which he had fixed in print over every Bible.

Bonner then laid unto his charge that he had made expositions upon the text, and gathered great multitudes about him to make tumults. He answered, he trusted that should not be proved by him. But, in fine, Bonner sent him to Newgate, where he was miserably fettered in irons, both legs and arms, with a collar of iron about his neck fastened to the wall in the dungeon; being there so cruelly handled, that he was compelled to send for a kinsman of his, whose name is also Porter, a man yet alive, and can testify that it is true, and dwelleth yet without Newgate. He, seeing his kinsman in this miserable case, entreated Jewet, then keeper of Newgate, that he might be released out of those cruel irons; and so, through friendship and money, had him up among other prisoners, who lay there for felony and murder; where Porter, being amongst them, hearing and seeing their wickedness and blasphemy, exhorted them to amendment of life, and gave unto them such instructions as he had learned of the Scriptures; for which his so doing he was complained on, and so carried down, and laid in the lower dungeon of all, oppressed with bolts and irons, where, within six or eight days after, he was found dead.

It is signified to us, by credible information, that the same night before he was found dead, they that dwelt near to the same place of the prison where Porter lay, did hear him piteously to groan, and make a lamentable noise, where some suppose that he was put in certain strait irons which be there in the house, called, "the devil on the neck;" being after an horrible sort devised; straining and wrenching the neck of a man with his legs together, in such sort as the more he stirreth in it, the straighter it presseth him; so that within three or four hours it breaketh and crusheth a man's back and body in pieces: in which devilish torment, whether John Porter was slain or no, it is not certain. But howsoever it was, this is known, that he was found dead (as is aforesaid) in the dungeon, with such groaning and piteous noise heard the night before in the said dungeon, as is declared.

A Note of one Thomas Sommers, imprisoned for the Gospel.

The po-nance of Som-mers.

Amongst these Londoners thus troubled by the clergy, we will add also (though a little out of place) another note of a merchant, called Thomas Sommers, who died in the tower of London, for confessing of the gospel; which Thomas, being a very honest merchant and wealthy, was sent for by the lord cardinal, and committed to the tower, for that he had Luther's books (as they termed them); and after great suit made for him to the said cardinal, his judgment was, that he should ride from the Tower into Cheapside, carrying a new book in his hand, and with books hanging round about him, with three or four other merchants after the same order; which was done. And when Master Sommers should be set on a collier's nag, as the rest of his fellow-prisoners were, a friend of his, called Master Copland, brought him a very good gelding, fair dressed with bridle and saddle; and when the bishop's officers came to dress him with books, as they had trimmed the others, and would have made holes in his garment, to have thrust the strings of the books therein; "Nay," said Sommers, "I have always loved to go handsomely in my apparel:" and taking the books and opening them, he bound them together by the strings, and cast them about his neck (the leaves being all open) like a collar; and being on horseback, rode foremost through the streets, till they came about the Standard in Cheapside, where a great fire was made to burn their books in, and a pillory set up there for four persons, in token that they had deserved it.

Henry VIII.

Luther's books burned in Cheapside.

In the mean time, by the way as they should come, it was appointed that one should go before them with a basin, at the noise whereof Master Sommers's horse, being a lofty gelding and fierce, was in such a rage, that he who rung the basin, being afraid of himself, was fain to go alone a great space before that any horseman followed after. At length, when they came to the fire, every of them having a book in his hand, they were commanded to cast their books into the fire. But when Master Sommers saw that his New Testament should be burned, he threw it over the fire, which was seen by some of God's enemies, and brought to him again, commanding him to cast it into the fire, which he would not do, but cast it through the fire; which thing was done three times; but at last a stander-by took it up, and saved it from burning. But not long after, the said Master Sommers was again cast into the Tower by the cardinal, through the cruelty of the bishops and their adherents, who, soon after, died in the said prison for the testimony of his faith.

The Papists burn the New Testament.

Sommers dieth in the Tower.

What trouble and vexation happened amongst the godly brethren in London for the Six Articles, hitherto we have discoursed: albeit neither have I comprehended all who were molested through all the parishes of London, nor again did this rigorous inquisition so cease within the precincts of this city only, but also extended further to Salisbury, Norfolk, Lincoln, and through all other shires and quarters of the realm; so that where any popish prelate most bare stroke, there persecution most increased. The bishop of Lincoln, the same time, was John Longland, and Dr. Draycot, his chancellor; of whose rigorous doings ye have heard enough and too much before. His ready diligence in all popish quarrels, as it never lacked before, so now, in the execution of these Six Articles, it was not far behind: in whose diocese divers good men and women, especially about Buckingham and Ainersham,<sup>1</sup> and quarters thereabouts, were grievously disquieted, appearing yet in the register; as for instance:

Elenore Godfrey, of Great Marlow,

For laughing and speaking certain words against one Thomas Collard, who, like a pope-holy hypocrite, in the church of Marlow, used at mass-time to crouch behind the children; and when the priest crossed his head with the saucer (as she termed it) he would cross his head likewise. And for these words she was convented before the bishop, and miserably vexed.

William Hart, of Great Brickhill,

For saying these words: 'Thinkest thou that God Almighty will abide over a knave priest's head?'

Christopher Erles, of Risborough,

Because he did no reverence unto the sacrament, coming to the church; and for looking upon his book at the time of elevation; and that he would not come to see the elevation, &c. Item, as he was working upon a piece of fustian on a holy-day, and being asked why he kept not the holy-day, he answered that that was no work, and that it was better to do that, than to sit at the alehouse drinking drunk.

William Fastendich, of Woburn,

For speaking certain words against the sacrament of the altar, and because he believed not that it was the very body of Christ.

William Garland, of West Wycombe.

William Garland, talking of extreme unction, said that those things were godly signs, but there were but two sacraments, &c.

William Web, of the same Parish,

Because he set the image of a headless bear in the tabernacle of St. Roke.

Also Master Barber, who recanted.

About the same time John Longland, bishop of Lincoln, burned two upon one day, the one named Thomas Bernard, and the other James Morton; the one for teaching the Lord's Prayer in English, and the other for keeping the Epistle of St. James translated into English.

In Oxford also the same time, or much thereabout, recanted one Master Barber, master of arts of that university, a man excellently learned; who, being called up to Lambeth before the archbishop Thomas Cranmer, was in his examination so stout in the cause of the sacrament, and so learnedly defended himself therein, that (as it is credibly affirmed of them that yet be alive, and were present thereat) neither Cranmer himself, nor all they could well answer to his allegations brought out of Augustine; wherein he was so prompt and ripe of himself, that the archbishop, with the residue of his company, were brought in great admiration of him. Notwithstanding, by compulsion of the time, and danger of the Six Articles, at last he relented, and, returning again to Oxford, was there caused to recant. After which the good man long prospered not, but wore away.<sup>1</sup>

A merry and pleasant Harcation, touching a false fearful Imagination of Fire,

RAISED AMONG THE DOCTORS AND MASTERS OF OXFORD, IN ST. MARY'S CHURCH, AT THE RECATANTION OF MASTER
MALARY, MASTER OF ARTS OF CAMBRIDGE.

Appendix.*

* Hitherto,<sup>2</sup> gentle reader, we have remembered a great number of lamentable and bloody tragedies of such as have been slain through extreme cruelty: now I will here set before thee again a merry and comical spectacle, whereat thou mayest now laugh and refresh thyself, which, forasmuch as it did necessarily accord with our present enterprise, I have not thought it good to pass it over with silence. For God hath oftentimes, by divers manifest means, deluded the craft and subtlety of the bishops and their vain hypoerisy; as, for example, in Joan of Mentz, who, being a woman, and secretly dissimulating her kind, ruled the bishopric of Rome; but, by being delivered of a child before her time, even in the midst of open procession, she defiled that see, that the note or blot thereof will never be wiped out again. Besides that, how great reproach and derision, even of children, was in that pompous and ridiculous ambassade of Thomas Wolsey and Lawrence the cardinal, whereof we have before spoken. And now again the divine Wisdom deluded the cruel toils of the bishops; for* this recantation of Master Barber aforesaid, in the university of Oxford, bringeth me in remembrance of another recantation likewise, happening not long before in the said university, which I thought here not to overpass.

There was one Master Malary, master of arts of Cambridge, scholar of Christ's College, who, for the like opinions to those above rehearsed, holden contrary to the catholic determination of holy mother church of Rome, that is, for the right truth of Christ's gospel, was converted before the bishops, and, in the end, sent to Oxford, there openly to recant, and to bear his faggot, to the terror of the students of that university. The time and place were appointed, that he should be brought solemnly into St. Mary's church upon a Sunday; where a great number of the head doctors and divines, and others of the university were together assembled, besides a great multitude of citizens and town-dwellers, who came to behold the sight. Furthermore, because that solemnity should not pass without some effectual sermon for the holding up of the mother-church of Rome, Dr. Smith, reader then of the divinity lecture, was appointed to make the sermon at this recantation. Briefly, at the preaching of this sermon there was assembled a mighty audience of all sorts and degrees, as well of students as others. Few almost were absent who loved to hear or see any news; insomuch that there was no place almost in the whole church, which was not fully replenished with concourse and throng of people.

A. D. 1541.

The sacrament of the altar brought into the pulpit.

All things being thus prepared and set in readiness, cometh forth poor Malary with his faggot upon his shoulder. Not long after, also, proceedeth the doctor into the pulpit, to make his sermon, the purpose and argument whereof was wholly upon the sacrament; the which doctor, for the more confirmation and credit to his words, had provided the holy catholic cake, and the sacrament of the altar, there to hang by a string before him in the pulpit. Thus the doctor, with his god-almighty, entering his godly sermon, had scarce proceeded into the midst thereof, the people giving great silence with all reverence unto his doctrine, but suddenly was heard into the church the voice of one crying in the street, "Fire, fire!" The party who thus cried first in the street was called Heuster. *The<sup>1</sup> occasion of this exclamation came by a chimney that was on fire in the town, wherein the fire, having taken hold of the soot and dry matter, burned out at the top of the chimney, and so caused the neighbours to make an outcry.* This Heuster coming from Allhallows parish saw the chimney on fire, and so passing through the street by St. Mary's church, cried "fire, fire!" as the fashion is; meaning no hurt. *Such<sup>1</sup> is the order and manner amongst the Englishmen, much diverse and contrary to that which is used among the Germans. For whensoever any fire happeneth in Germany, by and by, the bells ringing in the steeples stir up the people to help, who immediately are all ready in armour; some go unto the walls, others beset the ways, and the residue are appointed to quench the fire. The labour is diversely divided amongst them, for while some fetch water in leather buckets, others cast on the water, some climb the houses, and some with hooks pull them down; some again attend and keep watch without, riding about the fields, so that, by this means, there lacketh neither help within, neither safeguard without. But the like is not used here in England: for when any such thing happeneth, there is no public sign or token given, but the outcry of the neighbours doth stir up all the others to help. There is no public or civil order in doing of things, neither any division of labour, but every man, running headlong together, catcheth whatsoever cometh next to hand to quench the fire.*

A maze among Smith's audience.

This sound of fire being heard in the church, first of them that stood outermost next to the church door, so increased and went from one to another, that at length it came unto the ears of the doctors, and at last to the preacher himself; who, as soon as they heard the matter, being amazed with sudden fear, and marvelling what the matter should mean, began to look up into the top of the church, and to behold the walls. The residue seeing them look up, looked up also. Then began they, in the midst of the audience, to cry out with a loud voice, "Fire, fire!" "Where?" saith one; "Where?" saith another. "In the church!" saith one. The mention of the church was scarcely pronounced, when, as in one moment, there was a common cry amongst them, "The church is on fire! the church is set on fire by heretics!" &c. And, albeit no man did see any fire at all, yet, forasmuch as all men cried out so, every man thought it true that they heard. Then was there such fear, concourse, and tumult of people, through the whole church, that it cannot be declared in words as it was indeed.

St. Mary's church in Oxford falsely supposed to be set on fire by heretics.

Deluders deluded.

And as in a great fire (where fire is indeed), we see many times how one little spark giveth matter of a mighty flame, setting whole stacks and piles a-burning; so here, upon a small occasion of one man's word, kindled first a general cry, then a strong opinion, running in every man's head within the church, thinking the church to be on fire, where no fire was at all. Thus it pleased Almighty God to delude these deluders; that is, that these great doctors and wise men of the 'schools, who think themselves so wise in God's matters as though they could not err, should see, by their own senses and judgments, how blinded and infatuated they were, in these so small matters and sensible trifles.

HenryVIII.

How great clerks, are deceived often-times in small trifles.

Thus this strong imagination of fire being fixed in their heads, as nothing could remove them to think contrary but that the church was on fire, so every thing that they saw or heard increased this suspicion in them, to make it seem most true, which was indeed most false. The first and chiefest occasion that augmented this suspicion, was the heretic there bearing his faggot, which gave them to imagine that all other heretics had conspired with him, to set the church on fire.

After this, through the rage of the people, and running to and fro, the dust was so raised, that it showed as it had been the smoke of fire; which thing, together with the outcry of the people, made all men so afraid, that, leaving the sermon, they began all together to run away. But such was the press of the multitude, running in heaps together, that the more they laboured, the less they could get out. For, while they ran all headlong unto the doors, every man striving to get out first, they thrust one another in such sort, and stuck so fast, that neither they that were without could get into the church again, neither they that were within could get out by any means. So then, one door being stopped, they ran to another little wicket on the north side, toward the college called Brasenose, thinking so to pass out. But there again was the like or greater throng. So the people, clustering and thronging together, it put many in danger, and brought many unto their end, by bruising of their bones or sides.<sup>1</sup> There was yet another door towards the west, which albeit it was shut and seldom opened, yet now ran they to it with such sway, that the great bar of iron (which is incredible to be spoken) being pulled out and broken by force of men's hands, the door, notwithstanding, could not be opened for the press or multitude of people.

At last, when they were there also past all hope to get out, then they were all exceedingly amazed, and ran up and down, crying out upon the heretics who had conspired their death. The more they ran about and cried out, the more smoke and dust rose in the church, even as though all things had now been on a flaming fire. I think there was never such a tumultuous hurly-burly rising so of nothing heard of before, nor so great a fear where was no cause to fear, nor peril at all: so that if Democritus,<sup>2</sup> the merry philosopher, sitting in the top of the church, and seeing all things in such safety as they were, had looked down upon the multitude, and beholden so great a number, some howling and weeping, running up and down, and playing the mad men, now hither now thither, as being tossed to and fro with waves or tempests; trembling and quaking, raging and faring, without any manifest cause; especially if he had seen those great rabbins, the doctors, laden with so many badges or cognisances of wisdom, so foolishly and ridiculously seeking holes and corners to hide themselves in; gasping, breathing, and sweating, and for very horror being almost beside themselves: I think he would have satisfied himself with this one laughter for all his life-time; or else rather would have laughed his heart out of his belly, whilst one said, that he plainly heard the noise of the fire, another affirmed, that he saw it with his eyes, and another sware that he felt the molten lead dropping down upon his head and shoulders. Such is the force of imagination, when it is once grafted in men's hearts through fear. In all the whole company, there was none that behaved himself more modestly than the heretic that was there to do penance; who, casting his faggot off from his shoulders upon a monk's head that stood by,<sup>1</sup> kept himself quiet, minding to take such part as the others did.

All the others, being careful for themselves, never made an end of running up and down and crying out. None cried out more earnestly than the doctor that preached (who was, as I said, Dr. Smith), who, in manner first of all, cried out in the pulpit, saying, "These are the trains and subtleties of the heretics against me: Lord have mercy upon me! Lord have mercy upon me!" But might not God, as it had been (to speak with Job<sup>2</sup>) out of a whirlwind, have answered again unto this preacher thus: "Thou dost now implore my mercy, but thou thyself showest no mercy unto thy fellows and brethren! How doth thy flesh tremble now at the mention of fire! But you think it a sport to burn other simple innocents, neither do ye any thing at all regard it. If burning and to suffer a torment of fire seem so grievous a matter unto you, then you should also have the like consideration in other men's perils and dangers, when you do burn your fellows and brethren! Or, if you think it but a light and trifling matter in them, go to now, do you also, with like courage, contempt, and, with like patience, suffer now, the same torments yourselves. And if so be I should now suffer you, with the whole church, to be burned to ashes, what other thing should I do unto you, than you do daily unto your fellows and brethren? Wherefore, since you so little esteem the death of others, be now content that other men should also little regard the death of you." With this, I say, or with some other like answer, if that either God, or human charity, on the common sense of nature would expostulate with them, yea if there had been a fire indeed (as they were more feared than hurt), who would have doubted, but that it had happened unto them according to their deserts? But now, worthy it is the noting, how the vain fear and folly of those catholics either were deluded, or how their cruelty was reprov'd, whereby they, being better taught by their own example, might hereafter learn what it is to put other poor men to the fire, which they themselves here so much abhorred.

But, to return again to the description of this pageant, wherein (as I said before) there was no danger at all, yet were they all in such fear, as if present death had been over their heads. *For<sup>3</sup> almost all the churches in England are covered with lead, like as in Germany they are for the most part tiled.* In all this great maze and garboil, there was nothing more feared than the melting of the lead, which many affirmed that they felt dropping upon their bodies. Now in this sudden terror and fear, which took from them all reason and counsel out of their minds, to behold what practices and sundry shifts every man made for himself, it would make not only Democritus and Heraclitus also to laugh, but rather a horse well near to break his halter. But none used themselves more ridiculously, than such as seemed greatest wise men, saving that in one or two, peradventure, somewhat more quietness of mind appeared; among whom was one Claymund, president of Corpus Christi College (whom, for reverence, and learning's sake, I do here name), and a few other aged persons with him, who, for their age and weakness, durst not thrust themselves into the throng amongst the rest, but kneeled down quietly before the high altar, committing themselves and their lives unto the sacrament. The others, who were younger and stronger, ran up and down through the press, marvelling at the incivility of men, and waxed angry with the unmannerly multitude that would give no room unto the doctors, bachelors, masters, and other graduates and regent-masters. But, as the terror and fear was common unto all men, so was there no difference made of persons or degrees, every man scrambling for himself. The violet cap, or purple gown, did there nothing avail the doctor; neither the master's hood, nor the monk's cowl, was there respected.

Yea, if the king or queen had been there at that present, and in that perplexity, they had been no better than a common man. After they had long striven and assayed all manner of ways, and saw no remedy, neither by force nor authority to prevail, they fell to entreaty and offering of rewards; one offereth twenty pound of good money, another his scarlet gown, so that any man would pull him out, though it were by the ears!

Some stood close unto the pillars, thinking themselves safe under the vaults of stone from the dropping of the lead: other some, being without money, and unprovided of all shift, knew not which way to turn them. One, being a president of a certain college (whose name I need not here to utter), pulling a board out from the pews, covered his head and shoulders therewith against the scalding lead, which they feared much more than the fall of the church. How great a laughter would this also have ministered unto Democritus amongst other things, to behold there a certain grand paunch, who, seeing the doors stopped and every way closed up, thought by another compendious means to get out through a glass window, if it might be by any shift! But here the iron grates letted him; notwithstanding his greedy mind would needs attempt, if he could haply bring his purpose to pass. When he had broken the glass, and was come to the space between the grates where he should creep out, first he thrust in his head with the one shoulder, and it went through well enough. Then he laboured to get the other shoulder after; but there was great labour about that, and long he stuck by the shoulders, but at the last he gat it through with much ado; for what doth not importune labour overcome? Thus far forth he was now gotten; but, by what part of his body he did stick fast, I am not certain, neither may

I feign, forsomuch as there be yet witnesses which did see these things, which would correct me, if I should so do. Notwithstanding, this is most certain, that he did stick fast between the grates, and could neither get out nor in.

Thus this good man, being indeed a monk, and having but short hose, by the which way he supposed soonest to escape, by the same he fell into further inconvenience, making of one danger two. For, if the fire or lead had fallen on the outside, those parts which did hang out of the window had been in danger; and, contrariwise, if the flame had raged within the church, all his other parts had lien open to the fire. And as this man did stick fast in the window, so did the rest stick as fast in the doors, that sooner they might have been burned, than they could once stir or move one foot: through the which press, at last, there was a way found, that some, going over their heads, gat out.

Here also happened another pageant in a certain monk (if I be not misadvised) of Gloucester College, whereat Calphurnius might well laugh with an open mouth.<sup>1</sup> So it happened, that there was a young lad in this tumult, who, seeing the doors fast stopped with the press or multitude, and that he had not way to get out, climbed up upon the door; and there, staying upon the top of the door, was forced to tarry still: for, to come down into the church again he durst not for fear of the fire, and to leap down toward the street he could not without danger of falling. When he had tarried there awhile, he advised himself what to do; neither did occasion want to serve his purpose: for, by chance, amongst them that got out over men's heads, he saw a monk, coming towards him, who had a great wide cowl hanging at his back. This the boy thought to be a good occasion for him to escape by. When the monk came near unto him, the boy, which was in the top of the door, came down, and prettily conveyed himself into the monk's cowl; thinking (as it came to pass indeed) that if the monk did escape, he should also get out with him. To be brief, at the last the monk gat out over men's heads, with the boy in his cowl, and, for a great while, felt no weight or burden.

At last, when he was somewhat more come to himself, and, did shake his shoulders, feeling his cowl heavier than it was accustomed to be, and also hearing the voice of one speaking behind in his cowl, he was more afraid than he was before when he was in the throng, thinking, in very deed, that the evil spirit which had set the church on fire had lien into his cowl. By and by he began to play the exorcist: "In the name of God," said he, "and all saints, I command thee to declare what thou art, that art behind at my back!" To whom the boy answered, "I am Bertram's boy," said he; for that was his name. "But I," said the monk, "adjure thee, in the name of the unseparable Trinity, that thou, wicked spirit! do tell me who thou art, from whence thou comest, and that thou get thee hence." "I am Bertram's boy," said he, "good master! let me go:" and with that his cowl began, with the weight, to crack upon his shoulders. The monk when he perceived the matter, took the boy out, and discharged his cowl. The boy took to his legs, and ran away as fast as he could.

(1) 'Pleno ridet Calphurnius ore.'—Horace.

Among others, one wiser than the rest ran with the church-door key, beating upon the stone walls, thinking therewith to break a hole through to escape out.

In the mean time those that were in the street, looking diligently about them, and perceiving all things to be without fear, marvelled at this sudden outrage, and made signs and tokens to them that were in the church to keep themselves quiet, crying to them that there was no danger.

But, forasmuch as no word could be heard by reason of the noise that was within the church, those signs made them much more afraid than they were before, interpreting the matter as though all had been on fire without the church; and for the dropping of the lead and falling of other things, they should rather tarry still within the church, and not to venture out. This trouble continued in this manner by the space of certain hours.

The next day, and also all the week following, there was an incredible number of bills set upon the church doors, to inquire for things that were lost, in such variety and number, as Democritus might here again have had just cause to laugh. "If any man have found a pair of shoes yesterday in St. Mary's Church, or knoweth any man that hath found them," &c. Another bill was set up for a gown that was lost. Another entreated to have his cap restored. One lost his purse and girdle, with certain money; another his sword, with his glove of mayle. One inquireth for a ring, and one for one thing, another for another. To be short, there were few in this garboil, but that either through negligence lost, or through oblivion left, something behind them.

Thus have you heard a tragical story of a terrible fire, which did no hurt; the description whereof, although it be not so perfectly expressed according to the worthiness of the matter, yet because it was not to be passed with silence, we have superficially set forth some shadow thereof, whereby the wise and discreet may sufficiently consider the rest, if any thing else be lacking in setting forth the full narration thereof. As touching the heretic, because he had not done his sufficient penance there by occasion of this hurly-burly, therefore the next day following he was reclaimed into the church of St. Frideswide, where he supplied the rest that lacked of his plenary penance.

THE KING DIVORCED FROM THE LADY ANNE OF CLEVES, AND MARRIED TO THE LADY KATHERINE HOWARD, HIS FIFTH WIFE.

The same year, and in the month following next after the apprehension of the lord Cromwell, which was August, 1540,<sup>1</sup> the king immediately was divorced from the lady Anne of Cleves; the cause of which separation being wholly committed to the clergy of the convocation, it was by them defined, concluded, and granted, that the king, being

(1) It has been found necessary to alter several of the dates connected with the story of Cromwell, and this among others. Foxe considered that Cromwell was apprehended in July 1541. Stow, in his 'Annales,' (fol. Lond. 1750), gives the 9th of July, 1540, as the date; but even this is too late, as the Bill of Attainder had finally passed the Lords on the 29th of June. The writers of the Biographia Britannica, (fol. Lond. 1750, vol. iii. p. 1535), draw attention to both these errors, and insist that the 10th of June, 1540, is the true date. Cromwell's name indeed is retained on the Roll of the House till the 18th of June, the day after the bill of attainder was first brought in: but the letter "p," denoting his presence, is not attached to his name after June 10th.—The bill for the divorce of Anne of Cleves was 'concluded' on the 16th of July, 1540. freed from that pretended matrimony (as they called it), might marry where he would, and so might she likewise; who, also, consenting to the same divorcement herself, by her own letters, was after that taken no more for queen, but only called Anne of Cleves. Which things thus discussed by the parliament and convocation-house, the king the same month was married to his fifth wife, who was the lady Katherine Howard, niece to the duke of Norfolk, and daughter to the lord Edmund Howard, the duke's brother. But this marriage likewise continued not long.

In the same month of August, and the same year, I find, moreover, in some records, besides the four and twenty Charterhouse monks above recited,<sup>1</sup> whom Cope doth sanctify for holy martyrs, for suffering in the pope's devotion, against the king's supremacy, other six who were also brought to Tyburn, and there executed in the like case of rebellion; of whom the first was the prior of Doncaster; the second a monk of the Charterhouse of London, called Giles Horn (some call him William Horn); the third one Thomas Ipsam, a monk of Westminster, who had his monk's garment plucked from his back, being the last monk in king Henry's days that did wear that monkish weed; the fourth one Philpot; the fifth one Carew; the sixth was a friar. See what a difficulty it is to pluck up blind superstition, once rooted in man's heart by a little custom.

A. D. 1541.

Now, as touching the late marriage between the king and the lady Howard, ye heard how this matrimony endured not long; for, in the year next following, 1541,<sup>2</sup> the said lady Katherine was accused to the king of incontinent living, not only before her marriage with Francis Dereham, but also of spouse-breach, after her marriage, with Thomas Culpepper. For this both the men aforesaid by act of parliament were attainted, and executed for high treason; and also the lady Katherine, late queen, with the lady Jane Rochford, widow, late wife to George Bullen lord Rochford, brother to queen Anne Bullen, were beheaded for their deserts within the Tower, Feb. 12th, A. D. 1542.<sup>3</sup>

king's mind is inclined to reforma-
religion.

Before<sup>4</sup> the death and punishment of this lady, his fifth wife, the king, calling to remembrance the words of the lord Cromwell, and missing now more and more his old counsellor, and partly also smelling somewhat the ways of Winchester, began a little to set his foot again in the cause of religion. And although he ever bare a special favour to Thomas Cranmer, archbishop of Canterbury (as you shall hear more hereafter, God willing, in the life of Cranmer), yet now, the more he missed the lord Cromwell, the more he inclined to the archbishop, and also to the right cause of religion. And therefore, in the year and in the month of October, next before the execution of this queen, the king, understanding some abuses yet to remain unreformed, namely, about pilgrimages and idolatry, and other things besides, to be corrected within his dominions, directed his letters unto the aforesaid archbishop of Canterbury, for the speedy redress

(1) See page 439; they were not, however, all Charterhouse monks.—Ed.

(2) Foxe says "A. D. 1542." The Journals of the Lords, using at that time the legal and ecclesiastical year, which ran on to the 25th of March, give these transactions under the year 1511. Foxe, however, says, 'in the next year following:' the fact is that the queen was accused to the king by Cranmer November 2d, and her paramours were executed December 10th. Katharine was not impeached till January 16th, and beheaded February 13th, 1542.—Ed.

The King's Letters to Archbishop Cranmer, for the abolishing of Idolatry.

Right reverend father in God, right trusty and well-beloved! we greet you well, letting you to wit, that whereas heretofore, upon the zeal and remembrance which we had to our bounden duty towards Almighty God, perceiving sundry superstitions and abuses to be used and embraced by our people, whereby they grievously offended him and his Word, we did not only cause the images and bones of such as they resorted and offered unto, with the ornaments of the same, and all such writings and monuments of feigned miracles, wherewith they were illuded, to be taken away in all places of our realm; but, also, by our injunctions commanded, that no offering or setting up of lights or candles should be suffered in any church, but only to the blessed sacrament of the altar: it is lately come to our knowledge, that this our good intent and purpose notwithstanding the shrines, coverings of shrines, and monuments of those things, do yet remain in sundry places of this realm, much to the slander of our doings, and to the great displeasure of Almighty God, the same being means to allure our subjects to their former hypocrisy and superstition; and also that our injunctions be not kept as appertaineth. For the due and speedy reformation whereof, we have thought meet, by these our letters expressly to will and command you, that incontinently upon the receipt hereof you shall not only cause due search to be made in your cathedral church for those things; and if any shrine, covering of shrine, table, monument of miracles, or other pilgrimages, do there continue, to cause it so to be taken away as there remain no memory of it; but also, that you shall take order with all the curates, and other having charge within your diocese, to do the semblable, and to see that our injunctions be duly kept as appertaineth, without failing; as we trust you, and as you will answer for the contrary.

Shrines, relics, and monuments of idolatry, abolished
by the king.

Given under our signet at our town of Hull, the fourth day of October, in the thirty-third year of our reign. [A. D. 1541.]

Furthermore, the next year after this queen's death, which was 1543,<sup>1</sup> in the month of February, followed another proclamation, given out by the king's authority, wherein the pope's law, forbidding white meats to be eaten in Lent, was repealed, and the eating of such meats set at liberty, for the behoof of the king's subjects: the copy of which proclamation I thought here good also to be remembered.

A Proclamation concerning Eating of White Meats, made the ninth day of February, the thirty-fourth year of the reign of the King's most Royal Majesty.

Forasmuch as by divers and sundry occasions, as well herrings, lings, salt-fish, salmon, stockfish, as other kinds of fish, have been this year scant, and also enhanced in prices above the old rate and common estimation of their value, so that if the king's loving subjects should be enforced only to buy and provide herrings and other salt store of fish, for the necessary and sufficient sustentation and maintenance of their households and families all this holy time of Lent, according as they have been wont in times past to do, and should not be, by some other convenient means, relieved therein, the same might, and should undoubtedly, redound to their importable charge and detriment; and, forasmuch as his highness considereth how this kind and manner of fasting, that is to say, to abstain from milk, butter, eggs, cheese, and other white meats, is but a mere positive law of the church, and used by a custom within this realm, and of none other force or necessity, but the same may be, upon good considerations and grounds, altered and dispensed with from time to time by the public authority of kings and princes, whensoever they shall perceive the same to tend to the hurt and damage of their people: the king's highness therefore, most graciously considering and tendering the wealth and commodity of his people, hath thought good, for the considerations above rehearsed, to release and dispense with the said law and custom of abstaining from white meats this holy time of Lent; and, of his especial grace and mere motion, giveth and granteth unto all and singular his subjects within this his realm of England, Wales, Calais, Guisnes, and Hamme, and in all other his grace's dominions, free liberty, faculty, and license, to eat all manner of white meats, as milk, eggs, butter, cheese, and such like, during the time of this Lent, without any scruple or grudge of conscience; any law, constitution, use, or custom to the contrary notwithstanding.

Wherein nevertheless his highness exhorteth, and in the name of God requireth, all such his faithful subjects, as may, will, or shall enjoy this his said grant or faculty, that they be in no wise scrupulous or doubtful thereof, nor abuse or turn the same into a fleshly or carnal liberty, but rather endeavour themselves, to their possible powers, with this liberty of eating of white meats, to observe also that fast which God most specially requireth of them; that is to say, to renounce the world and the devil, with all their pomps and works, and also to subdue and repress their carnal affections and the corrupt works of the flesh, according to their vow and profession made at the font-stone; for in these points especially, consisteth the very true and perfect abstinence or fasting of a christian man; thus to endure and continue from year to year, till the king's highness's pleasure shall, by his majesty's proclamation, be published to the contrary.

The Trouble and Persecution of four Windsor-men, Robert Testwood, Henry Filmer, Anthony Peerson, and John Marbeck,<sup>1</sup>

PERSECUTED FOR RIGHTEOUSNESS' SAKE, AND FOR THE GOSPEL.

Coming now to the story and time of the four Windsor-men, troubled and persecuted for the true testimony of God's word, whereof three were martyred and sacrificed in fire, the fourth (who was Marbeck) had his pardon; first, I have to show the original of their troubles in several parts: secondly, the manner and order of their death as they suffered together, which was A.D. 1543: thirdly, to answer partly in purgation of myself, against certain clatterers who have hitherto taken their pleasure in railing against my former edition of Acts and Monuments, for mistaking the name of Marbeck, whom, in one place, I reported to have been burned; albeit, in the end of the story, correcting myself again, I declared him not to have been burned. Wherefore, to stop the brawling mouths of such quarrellers, I thought here to set forth the full narration, both of the said Marbeck and of his fellows, in truth, as I trust none of them shall have just cause to quarrel therat.

THE ORIGINAL OF ROBERT TESTWOOD'S TROUBLE.

In the year of our Lord 1543, there was one Robert Testwood, dwelling in the city of London, who for his knowledge in music had so great a name, that the musicians in Windsor College thought him a worthy man to have a room among them. Whereupon they informed Dr. Sampson (being then their dean) of him. But, forasmuch as some of the canons had at that time heard of Testwood, how that he smelled of the new learning (as they called it), it would not be consented unto at first. Notwithstanding, with often suit of the aforesaid musicians, made to one Dr. Tate (who, being half a musician himself, bare a great stroke in such matters), a room being void, Testwood was sent for to be heard. And being there four or five days among the choir-men, he was so well liked both for his voice and cunning, that he was admitted, and after settled in Windsor with his household, and was had in good estimation with the dean and canons a great while. But when they had perceived him, by his often talk at their tables (for he could not well dissemble his religion), that he leaned to Luther's sect, they began to dislike him. And so, passing forth among them, it was his chance, one day, to be at dinner with one of the canons, named Dr. Rawson. At that dinner, among others, was one of king Edward's four chantry priests, named Master Ely, an old bachelor of divinity ; which Ely, in his talk at the board, began to rail against laymen, who took upon them to meddle with the Scriptures, and to be better learned (knowing no more but the English tongue) than they that had been students in the universities of Oxford and Cambridge all the days of their lives.

Master Ely persecutor.

Then Testwood, perceiving he meant that against him, could forbear his railing no longer, but said, "Master Ely, by your patience, I think it be no hurt for laymen, as I am, to read and to know the Scriptures." "Which of you," quoth Ely, "that be unlearned, knoweth them, or understandeth them ? St. Paul saith, 'If thine enemy hunger, feed him ; if he thirst, give him drink : and, in so doing, thou shalt heap coals of fire upon his head.' Now, sir," quoth Ely, "what meaneth St. Paul by these coals of fire ?" "Marry, sir," quoth Testwood, "he meaneth nothing else by them (as I have learned) but burning charity, that, with doing good to our enemies, we should thereby win them." "Ah, sirra," quoth he, "you are an old scholar indeed !"

After this they fell into further communication of the pope, whose supremacy was much spoken of at that time, but not known to be so far in question in the parliament-house as it was. And in their talk Ely demanded of Testwood, whether the pope ought to be head of the church or no? against which Testwood durst not say his full mind, but reasoned within his bounds a great while. But, when they were both well stricken in a heat, Testwood, forgetting himself, chanced to say, that every king, in his own realm and dominion, ought to be the head of the church under Christ: at which words Ely was so chafed, that he rose up from the table in a great fume, calling him heretic, and all that nought was; and so went brawling and chiding away, to the great disquieting of all the company that were there.

Then was Testwood very sorry to see the old man take it so grievously: whereupon, after dinner, he went and sought Master Ely, and found him walking in the body of the church, thinking to have talked with him charitably, and so to have been at one again; but ever as Testwood pressed towards him, the other shunned him, and would not come nigh him, but did spit at him; saying to others that walked by, "Beware of this fellow! for he is the greatest heretic and schismatic that ever came into Windsor."

The first news of the king's supremacy brought to Windsor.

Now began the matter to brew; for, after that Ely had made his complaint to the dean's deputy, and other of the canons, they were all against Testwood, purposing surely, at the dean's coming home (if all things had chanced even), to have put him to his trump. But see the fortune. It was not twelve days after, ere that the king's supremacy passed in the parliament-house. Whereupon the dean, Dr. Sampson, came home suddenly in the night, late, and forthwith sent his verger about to all the canons and ministers of the college, from the highest to the lowest, commanding them to be in the chapter-house by eight of the clock in the morning. Then Ely consulted with the canons overnight (as late as it was), and thought on the next day to have put Testwood to a great plunge: "But he that layeth a snare for another man," saith Solomon, "shall be taken in it himself." And so was Ely; for when the dean and every man were come and placed in the chapter-house, and that the dean had commended the ministers of the church for their diligence in tending the choir, exhorting them also to continue in the same, he began, contrary to every man's expectation, to inveigh against the bishop of Rome's supremacy and usurped authority, confounding the same, by manifest Scriptures and probable reasons, so earnestly, that it was a wonder to hear; and at length declared openly, that by the whole consent of the parliament-house, the pope's supremacy was utterly abolished out of this realm of England for ever; and so commanded every man there, upon his allegiance, to call him pope no more, but bishop of Rome, and whatsoever he were that would not so do, or did from that day forth maintain or favour his cause by any manner of means, he should not only lose the benefit of that house, but be reputed as an utter enemy to God and to the king. The canons, hearing this, were all stricken in a dump: yet notwithstanding, Ely's heart was so great, that he would fain have uttered his cankered stomach against Testwood; but the dean (breaking his tale) called him old fool, and took him up so sharply, that he was fain to hold his peace. Then the dean commanded all the pope's pardons which hanged about the

ANOTHER CAUSE OF ROBERT TESTWOOD'S TROUBLE.

As it chanced Testwood one day to walk in the church at afternoon, and to behold the pilgrims, especially of Devonshire and Cornwall, how they came in by plumps, with candles and images of wax in their hands, to offer to good king Henry of Windsor, as they called him, it pitied his heart to see such great idolatry committed, and how vainly the people had spent their goods in coming so far to kiss a spur, and to have an old hat set upon their heads; inasmuch that he could not refrain, but, seeing a certain company which had done their offering and were standing gazing about the church, he went unto them, and with all gentleness began to exhort them to leave such false worshipping of dumb creatures, and to learn to worship the true living God aright; putting them in remembrance what those things were which they worshipped, and how God, many times, had plagued his people, for running a whoring to such stocks and stones, and so would plague them and their posterity, if they would not leave it. After this sort he admonished them so long, till at last his words, as God would, took such place in some of them, that they said, they never would go a pilgrimage more.

Testwood delhorteth the people from idolatry.

Then he went further, and found another sort licking and kissing a white Lady made of alabaster, which image was mortised in a wall behind the high altar, and bordered about with a pretty border, which was made like branches with hanging apples and flowers. And when he saw them so superstitiously use the image, as to wipe their hands upon it, and then to stroke them over their eyes and faces, as though there had been great virtue in touching the picture, he up with his hand, in which he had a key, and smote down a piece of the border about the image, and with the glance of the stroke chanced to break off the image's nose. "Lo! good people," quoth he, "you see what it is; nothing but earth and dust, and cannot help itself; and how then will you have it to help you? For God's sake, brethren, be no more deceived." And so he gat him home to his house, for the rumour was so great, that many came to see the image, how it was defaced. And among all others, came one William Simons, a lawyer, who, seeing the image so bewrayed, and to lack her nose, took the matter grievously, and looking down upon the pavement, he spied the image's nose where it lay, which he took up and put in his purse, saying it should be a dear nose to Testwood one day.<sup>1</sup>

William Simons a persecutor.

Now were many offended with Testwood; the canons, for speaking against their profit; the wax-sellers, for hindering their market; and Simons, for the image's nose. And more than that, there were of the canons' men that threatened to kill him. Hereupon Testwood kept his house and durst not come forth, minding to send the whole matter in writing by his wife to Master Cromwell the king's secretary, who was his special friend. The canons, hearing that Testwood would send to Cromwell, sent the verger unto him, to will him to come to the church; who sent them word again, that he was in fear of his life, and therefore would not come. Then sent they two of the eldest petty canons to entreat him, and to assure him that no man should do him harm. He made them a plain answer, that he had no such trust in their promises, but would complain to his friends. Then wist they not what shift to make, for of all men they feared Cromwell; but sent, in post haste, for old Master Ward, a justice of peace, dwelling three or four miles off, who, being come, and hearing the matter, was very loath to meddle in it. But notwithstanding, through their entreaty, he went to Testwood, and had much ado to persuade him; but, at last, he did faithfully promise him by the oath he had made to God and the king, to defend him from all danger and harms, so that Testwood was content to go with him.

Testwood in danger of his life.

And when Master Ward, and Testwood, were come into the church, and were going toward the chapter-house, where the canons abode their coming, one of the canons' men drew his dagger at Testwood, and would have been upon him, but Master Ward with his man resisted, and got Testwood into the chapter-house, causing the serving-man to be called in, and sharply rebuked by their masters, who straitly commanded him, upon pain of losing their service, and further displeasure, not to touch him, nor to give him an evil word. Now Testwood, being alone in the chapter-house with the canons and Mr. Ward, was gently treated, and the matter so pacified, that Testwood might quietly come and go to the church, and do his duty as he had done before.

THIRD CAUSE OF ROBERT TESTWOOD'S TROUBLE.

Thomas Becket's rochet made a relic.

See Appendix.

St. George's dagger made a relic.

Upon a Relic Sunday (as they named it), when every minister, after their old custom, should have borne a relic in his hand about a procession, one was brought to Testwood; which relic (as they said) was a rochet of bishop Becket's. And as the sexton would have put the rochet in Testwood's hands, he pushed it from him, saying, If he did give it to him, he would make sport withal; and so the rochet was given to another. Then came the verger down from the high altar with St. George's dagger in his hand, demanding who lacked a relic. "Marry," quoth Testwood, "give it to Master Hake," who stood next him, "for he is a pretty man of his hands:" and so the dagger was given unto him. Now Testwood perceiving the dagger in Master Hake's hand, and being merrily disposed (as he was a merry-conceited man), stepped forth out of his place to Dr. Clifton, standing directly before him in the midst of the choir, with a glorious golden cope upon his back, having the pix in his hand, and said, "Sir! Master Hake hath St. George's dagger. Now, if he had his horse, and St. Martin's cloak, and Master John Shorn's boots, with king Harry's spurs, and his hat, he might ride when he would:" and so stepped into his place again. Whereat the other changed colour, and wist not what to say.

FOURTH CAUSE OF ROBERT TESTWOOD'S TROUBLE.

Master Franklin dean of Windsor.

In the days of Master Franklin, who succeeded Dr. Sampson in the deanery of Windsor, there was, on a time, set up at the choir door, a certain foolish printed paper in metre, all to the praise and commendation of our Lady, ascribing unto her our justification, our salvation, our redemption, the forgiveness of sins, &c., to the great derogation of Christ. This paper, one of the canons, called Master Magnus (as it was reported), caused to be set up in despite of Testwood and his sect. When Testwood saw this paper, he plucked it down secretly. The next day after was another set up in the same place. Then Testwood, coming into the church, and seeing another paper set up, and also the dean coming a little way off, made haste to be at the choir door, while the dean staid to take holy water, and reaching up his hand as he went, plucked away the paper with him. The dean, being come to his stall, called Testwood unto him, and said, that he marvelled greatly how he durst be so bold to take down the paper in his presenee. Testwood answered again, that he marvelled much more, that his mastership would suffer such a blasphemous paper to be set up; beseeching him not to be offended with what he had done, for he would stand unto it. So Master Dean being a timorous man, made no more ado with him. After this were no more papers set up, but poor Testwood was eaten and drunken amongst them at every meal; "and a heretic he was, and would roast a faggot for this gear one day."

Henry VIII.

A. D. 1543.

Blasphemy and idolatry to our Lady.

Testwood taketh down the blasphemous paper.

Now Master Magnus,<sup>1</sup> being sore offended with Testwood for plucking down his papers, to be revenged on him, devised with the dean and the rest of the canons, to send their letters to Dr. Chamber, one of their brethren, and the king's physician, who lay, for the most part, at the court, to see what he would do against Testwood; which letters, being made, were sent with speed. But, whatsoever the cause was, whether he durst not meddle for fear of Cromwell, or what else, I cannot tell, their suit came to none effect. Then wist they not what to do, but determined to let the matter sleep, till St. George's feast, which was not far off.

Conspiracy of the priests of Windsor against Testwood.

Now, in the mean time, there chanced a pretty story, between one Robert Philips, gentleman of the king's chapel, and Testwood; which story, though it was but a merry prank of a singing man, yet it grieved his adversary wonderfully. The matter was this: Robert Philips was so notable a singing man (wherein he gloried), that wheresoever he came, the best and longest song, with most counter-verses in it, should be set up at his coming. And so, his chance being now to be at Windsor, against his coming to the anthem, a long song was set up, called "Laudate vivi," in which song there was one counter-verse towards the end, that began on this wise, "O redemptrix et salvatrix:" which verse, of all others, Robert Philips would sing, because he knew that Testwood could not abide that ditty. Now Testwood, knowing his mind well enough, joined with him at the other part; and when he heard Robert Philips begin to fetch his flourish with "O redemptrix et salvatrix!" repeating the same, one in another's neck, Testwood was as quick, on the other side, to answer him again with "non redemptrix, nee salvatrix!" and so, striving there with "O" and "Non," who should have the mastery, they made an end of the verse; whereat was good laughing in sleeves of some, but Robert Philips with others of Testwood's enemies were sore offended.

A merry contention between Philips of the king's chapel and Testwood, about 'O redemptrix et non redemptrix.'

Norfolk

Within fourteen days after this, the lords of the garter (as their custom is yearly to do) came to Windsor to keep St. George's feast, at which feast the duke of Norfolk was president; unto whom the dean and canons made a grievous complaint on Testwood: who, being called before the duke, he shook him up, and all-to-reviled him, as though he would have sent him to hanging by and by. Yet, nevertheless, Testwood so behaved himself to the duke, that, in the end, he let him go without any further molesting of him, to the great discomfort of the dean and canons.

Here you have heard the causes which moved Testwood's enemies to seek his destruction, and could not attain their purpose, till that wicked Haman, Dr. London, came, as shall be showed in the process following.

About the year of our Lord, 1541, after all the orders of superstitious and begging friars were suppressed and put down, there chanced one sir Thomas Melster, who had been a friar before, and had changed his friar's coat (but not his friar's heart), to be vicar of Windsor. This priest, on a time, made a sermon to his parishioners, in which he declared so many fond and friarish tales, as, that our Lady should hold out her breasts to St. Bernard, and spout her milk into his eyes, with such like festival tales, that many honest men were offended therewith, and especially this Henry Filmer, then one of the churchwardens; who was so zealous to God's word, that he could not abide to hear the glory of Christ so defaced with superstitious fables. Whereupon he took an honest man or two with him, and went to the priest, with whom he talked so honestly, and so charitably, that in the end the priest gave him hearty thanks, and was content, at his gentle admonition, to reform himself without any more ado, and so departed friendly the one from the other.

Now there was one in the town, called William Simons, a lawyer (as is aforesaid), who, hearing that Filmer had been with the priest, and had reproved him for his sermon, took pepper in the nose, and got him to the vicar, and did so animate him in his doings, that he slipped quite away from the promise he had made to Filmer, and followed the mind of Simons; who, meeting with Filmer afterwards, all-to-reviled him, saying, he would bring him before the bishop, to teach him to be so malapert. Then Filmer, hearing the matter renewed, which he had thought had been suppressed, stood against Simons, and said, that the vicar had preached false and unsound doctrine; and so would he say to the bishop, whensoever he came before him. Then Simons slipped not the matter, but went to the mayor, and procured of him and his brethren a letter, signed with their own hands, in the priest's favour as much as could be devised: and so departed himself, with other his friends, to go to the bishop (whose name was Dr. Capon), and to take the priest with them; which was a painful journey for the silly poor man, by reason he had a sore leg.

forced to complain
also.

Now Filmer, hearing how Simons went about to put him to a foil, consulted with his friends what was best to do; who concluded to draw out certain notes of the vicar's sermon, and to prepare themselves to be at Salisbury as soon as Simons, or before him, if it might be possible. Thus, both the parties being in a readiness, it chanced them to set forth from Windsor all in one day: but, by reason the priest, being an impotent man, could not endure to ride very fast, Filmer and his company got to the town an hour and more before Simons, went to the bishop, and delivered up their bill unto him; which bill, when the bishop had seen and perused well, he gave them great thanks for their pains, saying, it did behove him to look upon it; for the priest had preached heresy, and should be punished.

Then Filmer declared unto the bishop the form of his talk he had with the priest, and the end thereof; and how the matter, being renewed again by Simons, forced him and his company to trouble his lordship therewith. "Well," said the bishop, "ye have done like honest men: come to me soon again, and ye shall know more." And so they departed from the bishop to their inn; and, while they were there reposing themselves, Simons, with his company, came to the town, and (not knowing the other to be come) got them up to the bishop in all post haste, taking the priest with them.

The bishop, hearing of more Windsor men, demanded what they were, and being informed how it was the vicar of the town, with others besides, he caused the vicar to be brought in; to whom he said, "Are you the vicar of Windsor?" "Yea forsooth, my lord," quoth he. "How chanceth it," quoth the bishop, "that you are complained on? for there have been with me certain honest men of your town, who have delivered up a bill of erroneous doctrine against you: if it be so, I must needs punish you." And opening the bill, he read it unto him. "How say you," quoth the bishop, "is this true, or no?" The vicar could not deny it, but humbly submitted himself to the bishop's correction. Then was his company called in, and when the bishop saw Simons, he knew him well, and said, "Wherefore come you, Master Simons?" "Pleaseth it your lordship," quoth he, "we are come to speak in our vicar's cause, who is a man of good conversation and honesty, and doth his duty so well in every point, that no man can find fault with him, except a lewd fellow we have in our town, called Filmer, who is so corrupt with heresy, that he is able to poison a whole country. And truly, my lord," quoth Simons, "there is no man that can preach or teach any thing that is good and godly, but he is ready to control it, and to say it is stark nought. Wherefore we shall beseech your lordship he may be punished, to the ensample of others, that our vicar may do his duty quietly, as he hath done before this busy fellow troubled him. And, that your lordship shall the better credit my sayings, I have brought with me these honest men of the town; and besides all that, a testimonial from the mayor and his brethren, to confirm the same:" and so he held out the writing in his hand.

Then said the bishop, "So God help me, Master Simons! ye are greatly to blame, and most worthy to be punished of all men, that will so impudently go about to maintain your priest in his error, who hath preached heresy, and hath confessed it: wherefore I may not, nor will not, see it unpunished. And as for that honest man Filmer, of whom ye have complained, I tell you plainly, he hath in this point showed himself a great deal more honest man than you. But in

There was a certain priest, named Anthony Peerson, who frequented much to Windsor about the year of our Lord 1540, and, using the talent that God had given him in preaching, was greatly esteemed among the people, who flocked so much to his sermons which he made both in the town and country, that the great priests of the castle, with other papists in the town, especially Simons, were sore offended, insomuch that Simons at last began to gather of his sermons, and to mark his auditors; whereof ensued the death of divers, and trouble of many honest men. For about a year and more after, a minister of Satan, called Dr. London, warden of New-college in Oxford, was admitted one of the prebendaries of Windsor, who, at his first coming to Windsor, began to utter his stomach and to show his affection. For, at his first residence-dinner which he made to the clerks (which company, for the most part, at that time favoured the gospel), all his whole talk to two gentlemen, strangers at his board (till the table was a taking up), was nothing else but of heretics, and what a desolation they would bring the realm unto, if they might be so suffered. "And by St. Mary, masters!" quoth he to the clerks at last, "I cannot tell, but there goeth a shrewd report abroad of this house." Some made answer, it was undeserved. "I pray God it be," quoth he: "I am but a stranger, and have but small experience amongst you; but I have heard it said before I came hither, that there be some in this house, that will neither have prayer nor fasting."

Then spake Testwood, "By my troth, sir!" quoth he, "I think that was spoken of malice: for prayer, as your mastership knoweth better than I, is one of the first lessons that Christ taught us." "Yea, marry, sir," quoth he, "but the heretics will have no invocation to saints, which all the old fathers do allow." "What the old fathers do allow," quoth Testwood, "I cannot tell; but Christ doth appoint us to go to his Father, and to ask our petitions of him in Christ's name." "Then you will have no mean between you and God," quoth Dr. London. "Yes, sir," quoth Testwood, "our mean is Christ, as St. Paul saith, 'There is one Mediator between God and man, even Jesus Christ.'" "Give us water," quoth Dr. London: which being set on the board, he said grace, and washed; and so falling into other communication with the strangers, the clerks took their leave and departed. When Dr. London had been at Windsor awhile, among his catholic brethren, and learned what Testwood was, and also of Simons (who showed him our Lady's nose, as he called it), what a sort of hereties were in the town, and about the same, and how they increased daily by reason of a naughty priest, called Anthony Peerson, he was so maliciously bent against them, that he gave himself wholly to the devil, to do mischief. And to bring his wicked purpose about, he conspired with the aforesaid Simons, a meet clerk to serve such a curate, and others of like sort, how they might compass the matter, first to have all the archheretics, as they termed them, in Windsor and thereabouts, indicted of heresy, and so to proceed further. They had a good ground to work upon, as they thought, which was the Six Articles, whereupon they began to build and practise thus. First, they drew out certain notes of Anthony Peerson's sermons, which he had preached against the sacrament of the altar, and their popish mass. That done, they put in sir William Hobby,<sup>1</sup> with the good lady his wife, sir Thomas Cardine, Master Edmund Harman, Master Thomas Weldon, with Snowball and his wife, as chief aiders, helpers, and maintainers of Anthony Peerson. Also they noted Dr. Haynes, dean of Exeter, and a prebendary of Windsor, to be a common receiver of all suspected persons. They wrote also the names of all such as commonly haunted Anthony Peerson's sermons, and of all such as had the Testament, and favoured the gospel, or did but smell thereof.

Then had they privy spies to walk up and down the church, to hearken and hear what men said, and to mark who did not reverence the sacrament, at the elevation-time, and to bring his name to Dr. London. And of these spies some were chantry priests; among the which there was one notable spy, whose name was called sir William Bows, such a fleering priest as would be in every corner of the church pattering to himself, with his portues in his hand, to hear and to note the gesture of men towards the sacrament. Thus, when they had gathered as much as they could, and made a perfect book thereof, Dr. London, with two of his catholic brethren, gave them up to the bishop of Winchester, Stephen Gardiner, with a great complaint against the heretics that were in Windsor, declaring unto him how the town was sore disquieted through their doctrine and evil example: wherefore they besought his lordship's help, in purging the town and castle of such wicked persons. The bishop, hearing their complaint, and seeing their book, praised their doings, and bade them make friends and go forward, and they should not lack his help. Then they applied the matter with tooth and nail, sparing for no money or pains-taking, as Marbeck saith that he himself heard one of them say, who was a great doer herein, and afterwards sorry for that he had done, that the suit thereof cost him that year, for his part only, a hundred marks, besides the death of three good geldings.<sup>2</sup>

Now bishop Gardiner, who had conceived a further fetch in his bram than Dr. London had, made Wriothesley and others of the council on his side, and spying a time convenient, went to the king, complaining what a sort of heretics his grace had in his realm, and how they were not only crept into every corner of his court, but even into his privy chamber; beseeching therefore his majesty that his laws might be prosecuted. The king, giving credit to the council's words, was content his laws should be executed on such as were offenders. Then had the bishop what he desired, and forthwith procured a commission for a privy search to be had in Windsor for books and letters that Anthony Peerson should send abroad; which commission the king granted to take place in the town of Windsor, but not in the castle.

At this time the canons of Exeter (specially Southarne, treasurer of the church, and Dr. Bruerwood, the chancellor) had accused Dr. Haynes, their dean, to the council, for preaching against holy bread and holy water, and that he should say in one of his sermons (having occasion to speak of matrimony) that marriage and hanging were destiny; upon which they gathered treason against him, because of the king's marriage. The bishop of Winchester (at the same time) had also informed the council of Master Hobby, how he was a hearer of Anthony Peerson, and a great maintainer of heretics: whereupon both he, and Dr. Haynes, were apprehended and sent to the Fleet. But it was not very long after, ere that by the mediation of friends they were both delivered.

Now, as touching the commission for searching for books, Master Ward and Master Fachel, of Reading, were appointed commissioners, who came to Windsor the Thursday before Palm-Sunday, A. D. 1543, and began their search about eleven of the clock at night: in which search were apprehended Robert Bennet, Henry Filmer, John Marbeck, and Robert Testwood, for certain books and writings found in their houses against the Six Articles, who were kept in ward till Monday after, and then fetched up to the council, all save Testwood, with whom the bailiffs of the town were charged, because he lay sore diseased of the gout. The other three, being examined before the council, were committed to prison, Filmer and Bennet to the bishop of London's jail, and Marbeck to the Marshalsea; whose examination is here set out, to declare the great goodness of the council, and the cruelty of the bishop.

THE FIRST EXAMINATION OF JOHN MARBECK BEFORE THE COUNCIL, ON THE MONDAY AFTER PALM-SUNDAY, A. D. 1543.

This Marbeck had begun a great work in English, called "The Concordance of the Bible;" which book, being not half finished, was among his other books taken in the search, and had up to the council. And when he came before them to be examined, the whole work lay before the bishop of Winchester, Stephen Gardiner, at the upper end of the board; who, beholding the poor man awhile, said, "Marbeck, dost thou know wherefore thou art sent for?" "No, my lord," quoth he. "No!" quoth the bishop, "that is a marvellous thing." "Forsooth, my lord," quoth he, "unless it be for a certain search made of late in Windsor, I cannot tell wherefore it should be." "Then thou knowest the matter well enough," quoth the bishop: and, taking up a quire of the Concordance in his hand, he said, "Understandest thou the Latin tongue?" "No, my lord," quoth he, "but simply." "No!" quoth the bishop; and with that spake Master Wriothlesley (then secretary to the king): "He saith, but simply." "I cannot tell," quoth the bishop, "but the book is translated word for word out of the Latin Concordance:" and so began to declare to the rest of the council the nature of a Concordance, and how it was first compiled in Latin, by the great diligence of the learned men for the ease of preachers; concluding with this reason, that if such a book should go forth in English, it would destroy the Latin tongue. And so, casting down the quire again, he reached another book, which was the Book of Isaiah the Prophet, and turning to the last chapter, gave the book to Marbeck, and asked him who had written the note in the margin. The other, looking upon it, said, "Forsooth, my lord, I wrote it." "Read it," quoth the bishop. Then he read it thus: "Heaven is my seat, and the earth is my footstool." "Nay," quoth the bishop, "read it as thou hast written it." "Then shall I read it wrong," quoth he, "for I had written it false." "How hadst thou written it," quoth the bishop. "I had written it," quoth he, "thus: 'Heaven is my seat, and the earth is not my footstool.'" "Yea, marry," quoth the bishop, "that was thy meaning." "No, my lord," quoth he, "it was but an oversight in writing; for, as your lordship seeth, this word 'not' is blotted out." At this time came other matters into the council, so that Marbeck was had out to the next chamber. And when he had stood there awhile, one of the council, named sir Anthony Wingfield, captain of the guard, came forth, and calling for Marbeck, committed him to one Belson of the guard, saying unto him on this wise: "Take this man and have him to the Marshalsea, and tell the keeper that it is the council's pleasure that he shall treat him gently; and if he have any money in his purse, as I think he hath not much, take you it from him, lest the prisoners do take it; and minister it unto him as he shall have need." And so the messenger departed with Marbeck to the Marshalsea, and did his commission most faithfully and truly, both to the keeper and to the prisoner, as he was commanded.

THE SECOND EXAMINATION OF MARBECK, BEFORE THE BISHOP'S GENTLEMAN IN THE MARSHALSEA.

On the next day, which was Tuesday, by eight of the clock in the morning, there came one of the bishop of Winchester's gentlemen<sup>1</sup> into the Marshalsea, whose man brought after him two great books under his arm, and finding Marbeck walking up and down in the chapel, demanded of the keeper why he was not in irons. "I had no such commandment," quoth he; "for the messenger which brought him yesternight from the council, said it was their pleasure, he should be gently used." "My lord," quoth the gentleman, "will not be content with you:" and so taking the books of his man, he called for a chamber, up to which he carried the prisoner, and casting the books from him upon a bed, sat him down and said, "Marbeck! my lord doth favour thee well for certain good qualities that thou hast, and hath sent me hither to admonish thee to beware and take heed lest thou cast away thyself wilfully. If thou wilt be plain, thou shalt do thyself much good; if not, thou shalt do thyself much harm. I assure thee, my lord lamenteth thy case, forasmuch as he hath always heard good report of thee; wherefore now see to thyself, and play the wise man. Thou art acquainted with a great sort of heretics, as Hobby and Haynes, with others more, and knowest much of their secrets: if thou wilt now open them at my lord's request, he will procure thy deliverance out of hand, and prefer thee to better living."

"Alas! sir," quoth he, "what secrets do I know? I am but a poor man, and was never worthy to be so conversant either with Master Hobby, or Master Haynes, to know any part of their minds."

"Well," quoth the gentleman, "make it not so strange, for my lord doth know well enough in what estimation they had both thee and Anthony Peerson, for your religion." "For Anthony Peerson," quoth he, "I can say nothing, for I never saw him with them in all my life: and as for myself, I cannot deny but that they have always, I thank them, taken me for an honest poor man, and showed me much kindness; but as for their secrets, they were too wise to commit them to any such as I am."

"Peradventure," quoth the gentleman, "thou fearest to utter any thing of them, because they were thy friends, lest they, hearing thereof, might hereafter withdraw their friendship from thee; which thou needest not to fear, I warrant thee, for they are sure enough, and never like to pleasure thee more, nor any man else."

With that the water stood in Marbeck's eyes. "Why weepst thou?" quoth the gentleman. "Oh, sir," quoth he, "I pray you pardon me: these men have done me good; wherefore I beseech the living God to comfort them as I would be comforted myself."

"Well," quoth the gentleman, "I perceive thou wilt play the fool;" and then he opened one of the books and asked him if he understood any Latin. "But a little, sir," quoth he. "How is it then," quoth the gentleman, "that thou hast translated thy book out of the Latin Concordance, and yet understandest not the tongue?" "I will tell you," quoth he; "in my youth I learned the principles of my grammar, whereby I have some understanding therein, though it be very small." Then the gentleman began to try him in the Latin Concordance and English Bible which he had brought: and when he had so done, and was satisfied, he called up his man to fetch away the books, and so departed, leaving Marbeck alone in the chamber, the door fast shut unto him.

About two hours after, the gentleman came again, with a sheet of paper folded in his hand, and set him down upon the bed-side (as before), and said, "By my troth, Marbeck! my lord seeth so much wilfulness in thee, that he saith it is pity to do thee good. When wast thou last with Haynes?" "Forsooth," quoth he, "about three weeks ago, I was at dinner with him." "And what talk," quoth the gentleman, "had he at his board?" "I cannot tell now," quoth he. "No!" quoth the gentleman; "thou art not so dull witted, to forget a thing in so short a space." "Yes, sir," quoth he, "such familiar talk as men do use at their boards, is most commonly by the next day forgotten; and so it was with me." "Didst thou never," quoth the gentleman, "talk with him, or with any of thy fellows, of the mass, or of the blessed sacrament?" "No, forsooth," quoth he. "Now forsooth," quoth the gentleman, "thou liest; for thou hast been seen to talk with Testwood, and others of thy fellows, an hour together in the church, when honest men have walked up and down beside you; and, ever as they have drawn near you, ye have stayed your talk till they have been past you, because they should not hear whereof you talked." "I deny not," quoth he, "but I have talked with Testwood and others of my fellows, I cannot tell how oft; which maketh not that we talked either of the mass or of the sacrament: for men may commune and talk of many matters, that they would not that every man should hear, and yet far from any such thing; therefore it is good to judge the best." "Well!" quoth the gentleman, "thou must be plainer with my lord than this, or else it will be wrong with thee, and that sooner than thou weenest." "How plain will his lordship have me to be, sir?" quoth he. "There is nothing that I can do and say with a safe conscience, but I am ready to do it at his lordship's pleasure." "What tellest thou me," quoth the gentleman, "of thy conscience? Thou mayest, with a safe conscience, utter those that be heretics, and, so doing, thou canst do God and the king no greater service." "If I knew, sir," quoth he, "who were a heretic indeed, it were a thing; but if I should accuse him to be a heretic that is none, what a worm would that be in my conscience so long as I lived! yea it were a great deal better for me to be out of this life, than to live in such torment." "In faith," quoth the gentleman, "thou knowest as well who be heretics of thy fellows at home, and who be none, as I do know this paper to be in my hand. But it maketh no matter, for they shall all be sent for and examined: and thinkest thou that they will not utter and tell of thee all that they can? Yes, I warrant thee. And what a foolish dolt art thou, that wilt not utter aforehand what they be, seeing it standeth upon thy deliverance to tell the truth?" "Whatsoever," quoth he, "they shall say of me, let them do it in the name of God: for I will say no more of them, nor of any man else, than I know." "Marry!" quoth the gentleman, "if thou wilt do so, my lord requireth no more. And forasmuch as now, peradventure, thy wits are troubled,<sup>1</sup> so that thou canst not call things even by and by to remembrance, I have brought thee ink and paper, that thou mayest excogitate with thyself, and write such things as shall come to thy mind." "O Lord!" quoth Marbeck, "what will my lord do? Will his lordship compel me to accuse men I wot not whereof?" "No," quoth the gentleman, "my lord compelleth thee not, but gently entreateth thee to say the truth: therefore make no more ado, but write; for my lord will have it so." And so he laid down the ink and paper, and went his way.

Now was Marbeck so full of heaviness and woe, that he wist not what to do, nor how to set the pen to the book to satisfy the bishop's mind, unless he did accuse men to the wounding of his own soul. And thus, being compassed about with nothing but sorrow and care, he cried out to God in his heart, falling down with weeping tears, and said,

Marbeck's Prayer to God.

Henry VIII.

A.D. 1543. O most merciful Father of heaven! thou that knowest the secret doings of all men, have merey upon thy poor prisoner who is destitute of all help and comfort. Assist me, O Lord, with thy special grace, that, to save this frail and vile body, which shall turn to corruption at its time, I may have no power to say or to write any thing that may be to the casting away of my christian brother; but rather, O Lord, let this vile flesh suffer at thy will and pleasure. Grant this, O most merciful Father, for thy dear Son Jesus Christ's sake.

Then he rose up and began to search his conscience what he might write, and at last framed out these words :

"Whereas your lordship will have me to write such things as I know of my fellows at home, pleaseth it your lordship to understand, that I cannot call to remembrance any manner of thing whereby I might justly accuse any one of them, unless it be that the reading of the New Testament, which is common to all men, be an offence : more than this I know not."

Now the gentleman, about his hour appointed, came again, and found Marbeck walking up and down the chamber. "How now," quoth he, "hast thou written nothing?" "Yes, sir," quoth he, "as much as I know." "Well said," quoth the gentleman; and took up the paper: which, when he had read, he cast it from him in a great fume, swearing by our Lord's body,<sup>1</sup> that he would not for twenty pounds carry it to his lord and master. "Therefore," quoth he, "go to it again, and advise thyself better, or else thou wilt set my lord against thee, and then art thou utterly undone." "By my troth, sir," quoth Marbeck, "if his lordship shall keep me here these seven years, I can say no more than I have said." "Then wilt thou repent it," quoth the gentleman: and so putting up his penner and ink-horn, he departed with the paper in his hand.

THE THIRD EXAMINATION OF MARBECK BEFORE THE BISHOP OF WINCHESTER HIMSELF, IN HIS OWN HOUSE.

The next day, which was Wednesday, by eight of the clock in the morning, the bishop sent for Marbeck to his house at St. Mary Overy's, and as he was entering into the bishop's hall, he saw the bishop himself coming out at a door in the upper end thereof, with a roll in his hand; and going toward the great window, he called the poor man unto him, and said, "Marbeck! wilt thou cast away thyself?" "No, my lord," quoth he, "I trust." "Yes," quoth the bishop, "thou goest about it, for thou wilt utter nothing. What a devil made thee to meddle with the Scriptures?<sup>2</sup> Thy vocation was another way, wherein thou hast a goodly gift, if thou didst esteem it." "Yes, my lord," quoth he, "I do esteem it; and have done my part therein, according to that little knowledge that God hath given me." "And why the devil," quoth the bishop, "didst thou not hold thee there?" And with that he flang away from the window out of the hall, the poor man following him from place to place, till he had brought him into a long gallery, and being there, the bishop began on this wise: "Ah, sirra," quoth he, "the nest of you is broken, I trow." And unfolding his roll (which was about an ell long), he said, "Behold, here be your captains, both Hobby and Haynes, with all the whole pack of thy sect about Windsor, and yet wilt thou utter none of them."

"Alas, my lord," quoth he, "how should I accuse them, of whom I know nothing?" "Well," quoth the bishop, "if thou wilt needs cast away thyself, who can let thee? What helpers hadst thou in setting forth thy book?" "Forsooth, my lord," quoth he, "none." "None!" quoth the bishop; "how can that be? It is not possible that thou shouldst do it without help." "Truly, my lord," quoth he, "I cannot tell in what part your lordship doth take it, but, howsoever it be, I will not deny but I did it without the help of any man, save God alone." "Nay," quoth the bishop, "I do not commend thy diligence, but why shouldst thou meddle with that thing which pertained not to thee?"

And in speaking of these words, one of his chaplains, called Master Meadow, came up, and stayed himself at a window, to whom the bishop said, "Here is a marvellous thing; this fellow hath taken upon him to set out the Concordance in English, which book, when it was set out in Latin, was not done without the help and diligence of a dozen learned men at least, and yet will he bear me in hand, that he hath done it alone. But say what thou wilt," quoth the bishop, "except God himself would come down from heaven and tell me so, I will not believe it." And so, going forth to a window where two great Bibles lay upon a cushion, the one in Latin, and the other in English, he called Marbeck unto him, and pointing his finger to a place in the Latin Bible, said, "Canst thou English this sentence?" "Nay, my lord," quoth he, "I trow I be not so cunning to give it a perfect English, but I can fetch out the English thereof in the English Bible." "Let's see," quoth the bishop. Then Marbeck, turning the English Bible, found out the place by and by, and read it to the bishop. So he tried him a three or four times, till one of his men came up, and told him the priest was ready to go to mass.

And as the bishop was going, said the gentleman who had examined Marbeck in the Marshalsea the day before, "Shall this fellow write nothing while your lordship is at mass, for he passeth not for it?" "It maketh no matter," quoth the bishop, "for he will tell nothing:" and so went down to hear mass, leaving Marbeck alone in the gallery. The bishop was no sooner down, but the gentleman came up again with ink and paper. "Come, sirra!" quoth he, "my lord will have you occupied till mass be done:" persuading him with fair words, that he should be soon dispatched out of trouble, if he would use truth and plainness. "Alas, sir!" quoth he, "what will my lord have me to do? for more than I wrote to his lordship yesterday, I cannot." "Well, well; go to," quoth the gentleman, "and make speed:" and so went his way. There was no remedy but Marbeck must now write something; wherefore he, calling to God again in his mind, wrote a few words, as nigh as he could frame them, to those he had written the day before. When the bishop was come from mass, and had looked on the writing, he pushed it from him, saying, "What shall this do? It hath neither head nor foot." "There is a marvellous sect of them," quoth the bishop to his men,

“for the devil cannot make one of them to bewray another.” Then was there nothing among the bishop’s gentlemen, as they were making him ready to go to the court, but “crucifige” upon the poor man. And when the bishop’s white rochet was on him, and all, “Well, Marbeck,” quoth he, “I am now going to the court, and was purposed, if I had found thee tractable, to have spoken to the king’s majesty for thee, and to have given thee thy meat, drink, and lodging here in mine house; but, seeing thou art so wilful and so stubborn, thou shalt go to the devil for me.”

Marbeck brought again from Winchester’s house to the Marshalsea.

A cruel porter of the Marshalsea, but yet good to Marbeck.

Then was he carried down by the bishop’s men, with many railing words. And, coming through the great chamber, there stood Dr. London, with two more of his fellows, waiting the bishop’s coming, and passing by them into the hall, he was there received by his keeper, and carried to prison again. It was not half an hour after, ere that the bishop sent one of his gentlemen to the under-keeper, called Stokes, commanding him to put irons upon Marbeck, and to keep him fast shut in a chamber alone; and when he should bring him down to dinner or supper, to see that he spake to no man, and no man to him. And furthermore, that he should suffer no manner of person (not his own wife) to come and see him, or minister any thing unto him. When the porter (who was the cruellest man that might be to all such as were laid in for any matter of religion, and yet, as God would, favourable to this poor man) had received this commandment from the bishop, he clapped irons upon him, and shut him up, giving warning to all the house, that no man should speak or talk to Marbeck, whensoever he was brought down: and so he continued the space of three weeks and more, till his wife was suffered to come unto him.

THE SUIT OF MARBECK’S WIFE TO THE BISHOP OF WINCHESTER, FOR HER HUSBAND.

Marbeck’s wife, at the time of her husband’s apprehension, had a young child of a quarter old sucking upon her breast: and when her husband was taken from her, and had away to the council, not knowing what should become of him, she left the child and all, and gat her up to London; and hearing her husband to be in the Marshalsea, goeth thither. But when she came there, she could in no wise be suffered to see him, which greatly augmented her sorrow. Then, by counsel of friends, she gat her to the bishop of Winchester (for other help was there none to be had at that time), making great suit to have his license to go and see her husband, and to help him with such things as he lacked. “Nay,” quoth the bishop, “thy husband is acquainted with all the heretics that be in the realm, both on this side the sea and beyond; and yet will he utter none of them.” “Alas, my lord!” quoth she, “my husband was never beyond the seas, nor any great traveller in the realm, to be so acquainted; therefore, my good lord, let me go see him.” But all her earnest suit from day to day would not help, but still he put her off, harping always upon this string, “Thy husband will utter nothing.” At last, she, finding him in the court at St. James, going towards his chamber, was so bold as to take him by the rochet, and say, “Oh, my lord, these eighteen days I have troubled your lordship. Now, for the love of God, and as ever ye came of a woman, put me off no longer, but let me go to my husband." And as she was standing with the bishop and his men, in a blind corner going to his chamber, one of the king's servants, called Henry Carrike, and her next neighbour, chanced to be by; and, hearing the talk between the bishop and her, desired his lordship to be good lord unto the poor woman, who had her own mother lying bedrid upon her hands, beside five or six children. "I promise you," quoth the bishop, "her husband is a great heretic, and hath read more Scripture than any man in the realm hath done." "I cannot tell, my lord," quoth Carrike, "what he is inwardly, but outwardly, he is as honest a quiet neighbour as ever I dwelt by." "He will tell nothing," quoth the bishop: "he knoweth a great sort of false harlots, and will not utter them." "Yes, my lord," quoth Carrike, "he will tell, I dare say, for he is an honest man." "Well," quoth the bishop (speaking to the wife), "thou seemest to be an honest woman, and if thou love thy husband well, go to him, and give him good counsel, to utter such naughty fellows as he knoweth, and I promise thee he shall have what I can do for him; for I do fancy him well for his art, wherein he hath pleased me as well as any man:" and so, stepping into his chamber, he said she should have his letter to the keeper. But his mind being changed, he sent out his ring by a gentleman, which gentleman delivered the ring to his man, charging him with the bishop's message. And so his man went with the woman to the water side, and took boat, who never rested railing on her husband all the way, till they came to the prison; which was no small cross unto the poor woman.

Marbeck’s wife denied a great while to go to her husband.

Winchester's argument: He hath read much Scripture: Ergo, he is a heretic.

Marbeck's wife permitted at last to go to her husband.

And when they were come to the Marshalsea, the messenger showed the bishop's ring to the porter, saying, "Master Stokes! my lord willeth you by this token, that ye suffer this woman to have recourse to her husband; but, he straitly chargeth you, that ye search her both coming and going, lest she bring or carry any letters to or fro, and that she bring nobody unto him, nor any word from any man." "God's blood!" quoth the porter (who was a foul swearer), "what will my lord have me to do? can I let her to bring word from any man? Either let her go to her husband, or let her not go; for I see nothing by him but an honest man." The poor woman, fearing to be repulsed, spake the porter fair, saying, "Good master, be content, for I have found my lord very good lord unto me. This young man is but the gentleman's servant who brought the ring from my lord, and I think doth his message a great deal more straiter than my lord commanded the gentleman, or than the gentleman his master commanded him: but, nevertheless, good master," quoth she, "I shall be contented to strip myself before you both coming and going, so far as any honest woman may do with honesty; for I intend no such thing, but only to comfort and help my husband." Then the messenger said no more, but went his way, leaving the woman there, who, from that time forth, was suffered to come and go at her pleasure.

Like master like man.

THE FOURTH EXAMINATION OF MARBECK, BEFORE THE COMMISSIONERS IN THE BISHOP OF LONDON'S HOUSE.

A. D.

Name of the commissioners for the six articles.

About three weeks before Whitsunday was Marbeck sent for to the bishop of London's house, where sat in commission Dr. Capon bishop of Salisbury, Dr. Skip bishop of Hereford, Dr. Goodrick bishop of Ely, Dr. Oking, Dr. May, and the bishop of London's scribe, having before them all Marbeck's books. Then said the bishop of Salisbury, "Marbeck! we are here in commission, sent from the king's majesty, to examine thee of certain things whereof thou must be sworn to answer us faithfully and truly." "I am content, my lord," quoth he, "to tell you the truth so far as I can:" and so took his oath. Then the bishop of Salisbury laid forth before him his three books of notes, demanding whose hand they were. He answered they were his own hand, and notes which he had gathered out of other men's works six years ago. "For what cause," quoth the bishop of Salisbury, "didst thou gather them?" "For none other cause, my lord, but to come by knowledge: for I, being unlearned, and desirous to understand some part of Scripture, thought, by reading of learned men's works, to come the sooner thereby. And where I found any place of Scripture opened and expounded by them, that I noted as ye see, with a letter of his name in the margin, that had set out the work." "So me think," quoth the bishop of Ely (who had one of the books of notes in his hand all the time of their sitting), "thou hast read of all sorts of books, both good and bad, as seemeth by the notes." "So I have, my lord," quoth he. "And to what purpose?" quoth the bishop of Salisbury. "By my truth," quoth he, "for no other purpose but to see every man's mind." Then the bishop of Salisbury drew out a quire of the Concordance, and laid it before the bishop of Hereford, who, looking upon it awhile, lifted up his eyes to Dr. Oking, standing next him, and said, "This man hath been better occupied than a great sort of our priests:" to the which Oking made no answer.

The occasion why Marbeck began the Concordance in English.

Then said the bishop of Salisbury, "Whose help hadst thou in setting forth this book?" "Truly, my lord," quoth he, "no help at all." "How couldst thou," quoth the bishop, "invent such a book, or know what a Concordance meant, without an instructor?" "I will tell your lordship," quoth he, "what instructor I had to begin it. When Thomas Matthewe's Bible came first out in print, I was much desirous to have one of them; and being a poor man, not able to buy one of them, I determined with myself to borrow one amongst my friends, and to write it forth. And when I had written out the five books of Moses in fair great paper, and was entered into the book of Joshua, my friend Master Turner<sup>1</sup> chanced to steal upon me unawares, and seeing me writing out the Bible, asked me what I meant thereby. And when I had told him the cause, 'Tush,' quoth he, 'thou goest about a vain and tedious labour. But this were a profitable work for thee, to set out a Concordance in English.' 'A Concordance,' said I, 'what is that?' Then he told me it was a book to find out any word in the whole Bible by the letter, and that there was such a one in Latin already. Then I told him, I had no learning for it requireth not so much learning as diligence. And seeing thou art so painful a man, and one that cannot be unoccupied, it were a goodly exercise for thee.' And this, my lord, is all the instruction that ever I had before or after, of any man." "What is that Turner?" quoth the bishop of Salisbury. "Marry," quoth Dr. May, "an honest learned man, and a bachelor of divinity, and some time a fellow in Magdalen college in Oxford." "How couldst thou," quoth the bishop of Salisbury, "with this instruction, bring it to this order and form, as it is?" "I borrowed a Latin Concordance," quoth he, "and began to practise my wit; and, at last, with great labour and diligence, brought it into this order, as your lordship doth see." "A good wit with diligence," quoth the bishop of Hereford, "may bring hard things to pass." "It is great pity," quoth the bishop of Ely, "he had not the Latin tongue." "So it is," quoth Dr. May. "Yet cannot I believe," quoth the bishop of Salisbury, "that he hath done any more in this work, than write it out after some other that is learned."

"My lords," quoth Marbeck, "I shall beseech you all to pardon me what I shall say, and to grant my request if it shall seem good unto you." "Say what thou wilt," quoth the bishops. "I do marvel greatly wherefore I should be so much examined for this book, and whether I have committed any offence in doing of it, or no. If I have, then were I loth any other to be molested or punished for my fault. Therefore, to clear all men in this matter, this is my request, that ye will try me in the rest of the book that is undone; ye see that I am yet but in the letter L; begin now at M, and take out what word ye will of that letter, and so in every letter following, and give me the words on a piece of paper, and set me in a place alone where it shall please you, with ink and paper, the English Bible, and the Latin Concordance: and if I bring you not these words written in the same order and form that the rest before is, then was it not I that did it, but some other."

"By my troth, Marbeck," quoth the bishop of Ely, "that is honestly spoken, and then shalt thou bring many out of suspicion." "That he shall," quoth they all. Then they bade Dr. Oking draw out such words as he thought best, in a piece of paper, and so rose up; and in the mean time fell into other familiar talk with Marbeck, (for the bishops of Ely and Hereford were both acquainted with him afore, and his friends, so far as they durst), who, perceiving the bishops so pleasantly disposed, besought them to tell him in what danger he stood. "Shall I tell thee, Marbeck?" quoth the bishop of Sarum. "Thou art in better case than any of thy fellows, of whom there be some would give forty pounds to be in no worse case than thou art:" whose sayings the other affirmed. Then came Dr. Oking with the words he had written, and while the bishops were perusing them over, Dr. Oking said to Marbeck, very friendly, on this wise: "Good Master Marbeck, make haste, for the sooner ye have done, the sooner ye shall be delivered." And as the bishops were going away, the bishop of Hereford took Marbeck a little aside, and informed him of a word which Dr. Oking had written false, and also to comfort him, said, "Fear not; there can no law condemn you for any thing that ye have done; for if ye had written a thousand heresies, so long as they be not your sayings nor your opinions, the law cannot hurt you." And so went they all with the bishop of Sarum to dinner, taking the poor man with them, who dined in the hall, at the steward's board; and besides that, had wine and meat sent down from the bishop's table.

When dinner was done, the bishop of Sarum came down into the hall, commanding ink and paper to be given to Marbeck, and the two books to one of his men to go with him; at whose going he demanded of the bishop, what time his lordship would appoint him to do it in? "Against to-morrow this time," quoth the bishop; which was about two of the clock, and so departed.

Marbeck, now being in his prison-chamber, fell to his business, and so applied the thing, that by the next day, when the bishop sent for him again, he had written so much, in the same order and form he had done the rest before, as contained three sheets of paper and more: which when he had delivered to the bishop of Sarum, Dr. Oking standing by, he marvelled and said, "Well, Marbeck, thou hast now put me out of all doubt. I assure thee," quoth he, putting up the paper into his bosom, "the king shall see this ere I be twenty-four hours older." But he dissembled every word, and thought nothing less than so; for afterwards, the matter being come to light, and known to his grace, what a book the poor man had begun, which the bishops would not suffer him to finish, the king said he was better occupied than they that took it from him. So Marbeck departed from the bishop of Sarum to prison again, and heard no more of his book.

A false dissembling bishop.

THE FIFTH EXAMINATION OF MARBECK, BEFORE DR. OKING, AND MASTER KNIGHT, SECRETARY TO THE BISHOP OF WINCHESTER, IN ST. MARY OVERY'S CHURCH.

Upon Whitsunday following at afternoon, was Marbeck sent for once again to St. Mary Overy's, where he found Dr. Oking, with another gentleman in a gown of damask, with a chain of gold about his neck (no more in all the church but they two), sitting together in one of the stalls, their backs towards the church door, looking upon an epistle of Master John Calvin's, which Marbeck had written out; and when they saw the prisoner come, they rose and had him up to a side altar, leaving his keeper in the body of the church alone. Now, as soon as Marbeck saw the face of the gentleman (whom before he knew not, by reason of his apparel), he saw it was the same person that first examined him in the Marshalsea, and did also cause him to write in the bishop's gallery, but never knew his name till now he heard Dr. Oking call him Master Knight. This Master Knight held forth the paper to Marbeck, and said, "Look upon this, and tell me whose hand it is."

When Marbeck had taken the paper and seen what it was, he confessed it to be all his hand, saving the first leaf and the notes in the margin. "Then I perceive," quoth Knight, "thou wilt not go from thine own hand." "No, sir," quoth he, "I will deny nothing that I have done." "Thou dost well in that," quoth Knight, "for if thou shouldst, we have testimonies enough besides, to try out thy hand by. But I pray thee tell me, whose hand is the first leaf?" "That I cannot tell you," quoth Marbeck. "Then how camest thou by it?" quoth Knight. "Forsooth I will tell you," quoth he. "There was a priest dwelling with us upon a five or six years ago, called Marshal, who sent it unto me with the first leaf written; desiring me to write it out with speed, because the copy could not be spared past an hour or twain: and so I wrote it out, and sent him both the copy and it again."

"And how came this hand in the margin," quoth he, "which is a contrary hand to both the others?" "That I will tell you," quoth Marbeck: "When I wrote it out at the first, I made so much haste of it, that I understood not the matter, wherefore I was desirous to see it again, and to read it with more deliberation; and being sent to me the second time, it was thus quoted in the margin as ye see. And shortly after this, it was his chance to go beyond the seas (where he lived not long), by reason whereof the epistle remaineth with me; but whether the first leaf, or the notes in the margin were his hand, or whose hand else, that I cannot tell." "Tush," quoth Dr. Oking to Master Knight, "he knoweth well enough that the notes be Haynes's own hand." "If you know so much," quoth Marbeck, "ye know more than I do; for I tell you truly, I know it not." "By my faith, Marbeck," quoth Knight, "if thou wilt not tell by fair means, those fingers of thine shall be made to tell." "By my troth, sir," quoth Marbeck, "if ye do tear the whole body in pieces, I trust in God, ye shall never make me accuse any man wrongfully." "If thou be so stubborn," quoth Dr. Oking, "thou wilt die for it." "Die, Master Oking!" quoth he, "wherefore should I die? You told me the last day, before the bishops, that as soon as I had made an end of the piece of Concordance they took from me, I should be delivered; and shall I now die? This is a sudden mutation. You seemed then to be my friend; but I know the cause: ye have read the ballet I made of Moses' chair, and that hath set you against me; but whensoever ye shall put me to death, I doubt not to die God's true man and the king's." "How so?" quoth Knight. "How canst thou die a true man unto the king, when thou hast offended his laws? Is not this epistle, and are not most of the notes thou hast written, directly against the six articles?" "No, sir," quoth Marbeck; "I have not offended the king's laws therein; for since the first time I began with the Concordance (which is almost six years ago), I have been occupied in nothing else: so that both this epistle, and all the notes I have gathered, were written a great while before the six articles came forth, and are clearly remitted by the king's general pardon." "Trust not to that," quoth Knight, "for it will not help thee." "No, I warrant him," quoth Dr. Oking. And so going down to the body of the church, they committed him to his keeper, who had him away to prison again.

suit and labour unto the bishops who were commissioners, desiring no more of them, but that it would please their goodness to examine her husband before them, and to hear him make his purgation. This was her only request to every of the bishops from day to day, wheresoever she could find them; insomuch that two of the bishops (Ely and Hereford) were very sorry (considering the importunate and reasonable suit of the woman) that it lay not in them to help her. Thus, travelling long up and down from one to another, to have her husband examined, it was her chance at last to find the bishops all three together in the bishop of Ely's palace; unto whom she said, "O good my lords! for the love of God, let now my poor husband be brought forth before you, while ye be here all together. For truly, my lords, there can nothing be justly laid against him, but that of malicious envy and spite Simons hath wrought him this trouble. And you, my lord of Salisbury," quoth the poor woman, "can testify (if it will please your lordship to say the truth), what malice Simons bare to my husband, when they were both before you at Salisbury, little more than a year ago, for the vicar of Windsor's matter. For, as your lordship knoweth, when my husband had certified you of the priest's sermon, which you said was plain heresy, then came Simons (after the priest himself had confessed it), and would have defended the priest's error before your lordship, and have had my husband punished. At that time it pleased your lordship to commend and praise my husband for his honesty, and to rebuke Simons for maintaining the priest in his error; and thereupon you commanded the priest to recant his heresy, at his coming home to Windsor. This, my lord, you know to be true. And now, my lords," quoth the woman, "it is most certain, that for this cause only did Simons evermore afterwards threaten my husband to be even with him. Therefore, my good lords, call my husband before you, and hear him speak; and if ye find any other matter against him than this that I have told you, let me suffer death." "Is this so, my lord?" quoth the bishops of Ely and Hereford. And the other could not deny it. Then they spake Latin to the bishop of Salisbury, and he to them, and so departed. For the matter was so wrought between Dr. London and Simons, that Filmer could never be suffered to come before the commissioners to be examined.

Filmer could not come to his answer.

The Martyrdom of Peerson, Testwood, and Filmer;

WITH THE MANNER OF THEIR CONDEMNATIONS, AND HOW THEY DIED.—ALSO THE SPARING OF MARBECK, AFTER HE WAS SENTENCED TO DEATH.

Stephen Gardiner great about the king.

His bow bent to shoot at the head deer.

When the time drew nigh that the king's majesty (who was newly married to that good and virtuous lady Katherine Parr) should make his progress abroad, the aforesaid Stephen Gardiner, bishop of Winchester, had so compassed his matters, that no man bare so great a swinge about the king as he did: wherewith the gospellers were so quailed, that the best of them all looked every hour to be clapped in the neck; for the saying went abroad, that the bishop had bent his bow to shoot at some of the head deer. But, in the mean time, three or four of the poor rascals were caught, that is to say, Anthony Peerson, Henry Filmer, and John Marbeck, and sent to Windsor by the sheriff's men the Saturday before St. James's day, and laid fast in the town jail; and Testwood, who had kept his bed, was brought out of his house upon crutches, and laid with them. But as for Bennet, who should have been the fifth man, his chance was to be sick of the pestilence, and having a great sore upon him, he was left behind in the bishop of London's jail, whereby he escaped the fire.

Henry VIII.

A. D. 1543.

Testwood brought out on crutches to prison

Now, these men being brought to Windsor, there was a sessions specially procured to be holden the Thursday after, which was St. Ann's day: against which sessions (by the counsel of Dr. London, and of Simons) were all the farmers, belonging to the college of Windsor, warned to appear; because they could not pick out papists enough in the town, to go upon the jury. The judges that day were these: Dr. Capon, bishop of Salisbury; sir William Essex, knight; sir Thomas Bridges, knight; sir Humfrey Foster, knight; Master Franklen, dean of Windsor; and Master Fachel of Reading.

A special sessions procured. [July 26.]

The judges.

When these had taken their places, and the prisoners were brought forth before them, then Robert Ockam, occupying for that day the room of the clerk of the peace, called Anthony Peerson, according to the manner of the court, and read his indictment, which was this:

Robert Ockam, clerk of the peace.

The Indictment against Anthony Peerson.

First, that he should preach two years before in a place called Wingfield, and there should say, that like as Christ was hanged between two thieves, even so, when the priest is at mass, and hath consecrated and lifted him up over his head, there he hangeth between two thieves, except he preach the word of God truly, as he hath taken upon him to do.

Also, that he said to the people in the pulpit, 'Ye shall not eat the body of Christ as it did hang upon the cross, gnawing it with your teeth, that the blood run about your lips; but you shall eat him this day as ye eat him to-morrow, the next day, and every day: for it refresheth not the body, but the soul.'

Also, after he had preached and commended the Scripture, calling it the word of God, he said as followeth: 'This is the word; this is the bread; this is the body of Christ.'

Also he said that Christ, sitting with his disciples, took bread, and blessed, and brake it, and gave it to his disciples, saying, Take and eat; this is my body. 'What is this to us, but to take the Scripture of God, and to break it to the people?'

To this Anthony answered and said, "I will be tried by God and his holy word, and by the true church of Christ, whether this be heresy or no, whereof ye have indicted me this day. So long as I preached the bishop of Rome, and his filthy traditions, I was never troubled; but since I have taken upon me to preach Christ and his gospel, ye have always sought my life. But it maketh no matter, for when you have taken your pleasure of my body, I trust it shall not lie in your powers to hurt my soul." "Thou callest us thieves," quoth the bishop. "I say," quoth Anthony, "ye are not only thieves, but murderers, except ye preach and teach the word of God purely and sincerely to the people; which ye do not, nor ever did; but have allured them to all idolatry, superstition, and hypocrisy, for your own lucre and glory's sake, through which ye are become rather bite-sheeps than true bishops, biting and devouring the poor sheep of Christ, like ravening wolves, never satisfied with blood; which God will require at your hands one day, doubt it not." Then spake Simons his accuser, standing within the bar, saying, "It is pity this fellow had not been burned long ago, as he deserved." "In faith," quoth Anthony, "if you had as you have deserved, you were more worthy to stand in this place than I. But I trust, in the last day, when we shall both appear before the tribunal seat of Christ, that then it will be known which of us two hath best deserved this place." "Shall I have so long a day?" quoth Simons, holding up his finger: "Nay then, I care not;" and so the matter was jested out.

ROBERT TESTWOOD.

Test-wood's indictment.

Then was Testwood called, and his indictment read, which was, that he should say, in the time that the priest was lifting up the sacrament, "What, wilt thou lift him so high? what yet higher? Take heed; let him not fall."

His answer.

To this Testwood answered, saying, it was but a thing maliciously forged of his enemies to bring him to his death. "Yes," quoth the bishop, "thou hast been seen that when the priest should lift up the sacrament over his head, then wouldst thou look down upon thy book or some other way, because thou wouldst not abide to look upon the blessed sacrament." "I beseech you, my lord," quoth Testwood, "whereon did he look, that marked me so well?" "Marry," quoth Bucklayer, the king's attorney, "he could not be better occupied, than to mark such heretics, that so despised the blessed sacrament."

HENRY FILMER.

Filmer's indictment.

Then was Filmer called, and his indictment read; that he should say that the sacrament of the altar is nothing else but a similitude and a ceremony; and also, if God be in the sacrament of the altar, I have eaten twenty Gods in my days.

Here you must understand, that these words were gathered of certain communication which should be between Filmer and his brother. The tale went thus:

This Henry Filmer, coming upon a Sunday from Clewer, his parish church, in the company of one or two of his neighbours, chanced, in the way, to meet his brother (who was a very poor labouring man), and asked him whither he went. "To the church," said he. "And what to do?" quoth Filmer. "To do," quoth he, "as other men do." "Nay," quoth Filmer, "you go to hear mass, and to see your God." "What if I do so?" quoth he. "If that be God," should Filmer say, "I have eaten twenty Gods in my days. Turn again, fool, and go home with me, and I will read thee a chapter out of the Bible, that shall be better than all that thou shalt see or hear there."

Dr. London setteth brother against brother.

This tale was no sooner brought to Dr. London (by William Simons, Filmer's utter enemy), but he sent for the poor man home to his house, where he cherished him with meat and money, telling him he should never lack, so long as he lived; that the silly poor man, thinking to have had a daily friend of Dr. London, was content to do and say whatsoever he and Simons would have him say or do against his own brother. And when Dr. London had thus won the poor man, he retained him as one of his household men until the court day was come, and then sent him up to witness this aforesaid tale against his brother. This tale Filmer denied utterly, saying, that Dr. London, for a little meat and drink's sake, had set him on, and made him say what his pleasure was: "Wherefore, my lord," quoth Filmer to the bishop, "I beseech your lordship weigh the matter indifferently, forasmuch as there is no man in all this town, that can or will testify with him, that ever he heard any such talk between him and me; and if he can bring forth any that will witness the same with him, I refuse not to die." But say what he could, it would not prevail.

Then Filmer, seeing no remedy but that his brother's accusation should take place, he said, "Ah, brother! what cause hast thou to show me this unkindness? I have always been a natural brother unto thee and thine, and helped you all, to my power, from time to time, as thou thyself knowest; and is this a brotherly part, thus to reward me now for my kindness? God forgive it thee, my brother, and give thee grace to repent." Then Filmer, looking over his shoulder, desired some good body to let him see the book of Statutes. His wife, being at the end of the hall, and hearing her husband call for the book of Statutes, ran down to the keeper, and brought up the book, and gat it conveyed to her husband.

The bishop, seeing the book in his hand, start him up from the bench in a great fume, demanding who had given the prisoner that book, commanded it to be taken from him, and to make search who had brought it, swearing by the faith of his body, he should go to prison. Some said it was his wife, some said the keeper. "Like enough, my lord," quoth Simons, "for he is one of the same sort; and as worthy to be here as the best, if he were rightly served." But howsoever it was, the truth would not be known, and so the bishop sat him down again.<sup>1</sup>

Then said Filmer, "O my lord! I am this day judged by a law, and why should I not see the law that I am judged by?"<sup>2</sup> The law is, I should have two lawful witnesses, and here is but one, who would not do as he doth, but that he is forced thereunto by the suggestion of mine enemies." "Nay," quoth Bucklayer, the king's attorney, "thine heresy is so heinous, and abhorreth thine own brother so much, that it forceth him to witness against thee, which is more than two other witnesses."

Thus, as you see, was Filmer brought unjustly to his death by the malice of Simons and Dr. London, who had enticed that wretched caitiff his brother, to be their minister to work his confusion. But God, who is a just revenger of all falschood and wrongs, would not suffer that wretch long to live upon earth, but the next year following, he, being taken up for a labourer to go to Boulogne, had not been there three days, ere that (in exonerating of nature) a gun took him and tore him all to pieces. And so were these words of Solomon fulfilled, "A false witness shall not remain unpunished."

JOHN MARBECK.

The indictment of Marbeck.

Then was Marbeck called, and his indictment read, which was, that he should say, that the holy mass, when the priest doth consecrate the body of our Lord, is polluted, deformed, sinful, and open robbery of the glory of God, from which a christian heart ought both to abhor and flee. And that the elevation of the sacrament is the similitude of setting up of images of the calves, in the temple builded by Jeroboam; and that it is more abomination, than the sacrifices done by the Jews in Jeroboam's temple to those calves. And that certain and sure it is, that Christ himself is made, in the mass, man's laughing-stock.

Marbeck's answer.

To this he answered and said, that these words whereof they had indicted him were not his, but the words of a learned man called John Calvin, drawn out of a certain epistle which the said Calvin had made, which epistle he had but only written out, and that, long before the six articles came forth; so that now he was discharged of that offence by the king's general pardon, desiring that he might enjoy the benefit thereof.

Partial dealing in calling the jury.

Then were the jury called, which were all farmers belonging to the college of Windsor, whereof few or none had ever seen those men before, upon whose life and death they went. Wherefore the prisoners (counting the farmers as partial) desired to have the townsmen, or such as did know them, and had seen their daily conversations, in the place of the farmers, or else to be equally joined with them; but that would not be, for the matter was otherwise foreseen and determined.

Bucklayer, the king's attorney, a persecutor.

Now, when the jury had taken their oath and all, Bucklayer, the king's attorney, began to speak; and first he alleged many reasons against Anthony Peerson, to prove him a heretic: which when Anthony would have disproved, the bishop said, "Let him alone, sir; he speaketh for the king." And so went Bucklayer forth with his matter, making every man's cause as heinous to the hearers as he could devise. And when he had done, and said what he would, then sir Humfrey Foster spake to the quest, in favour of Marbeck, on this wise: "Masters!" quoth he, "ye see there is no man here that accuseth or layeth any thing to the charge of this poor man Marbeck, saving he hath written certain things of other men's sayings, with his own hand, whereof he is discharged by the king's general pardon; therefore ye ought to have a conscience therein." Then started up Fachel at the lower end of the bench, and said, "What can we tell, whether they were written before the pardon or after?"

Sir Humfrey Foster speaketh for Marbeck.

Fachel a persecutor.

Marbeck cast by the jury.

"They may as well be written since as afore, for any thing that we know." These words of Fachel (as every man said) were the cause of Marbeck's casting that day.

The knights refuse to be at their condemnation.

Then went the jury up to the chamber over the place where the judges sat, and in the mean time went all the knights and gentlemen abroad, saving the bishop, sir William Essex, and Fachel, which three sat still upon the bench till all was done. And when the jury had been together above, in the chamber, about the space of a quarter of an hour, up goeth Simons (of his own brain) unto them, and tarried there a pretty while, and came down again. After that came one of the jury down to the bishop, and talked with him and the other twain a good while, whereby many conjectured that the jury could not agree of Marbeck. But whether it was so or no, it was not long after his going up again, ere that they came down to give their verdict; and being required, according to the form of the law, to say their minds, one called Hide, dwelling beside Abingdon, in a lordship belonging to the college of Windsor, speaking as the mouth of the rest, said, they were all guilty.

Then the judges, beholding the prisoners a good while (some with watery eyes), made courtesy who should give judgment. Fachel, requiring the bishop to do it, he said, he might not. The others also, being required, said they would not. Then said Fachel, "It must be done; one must do it; and if no man will, then will I." And so Fachel, being lowest of all the bench, gave judgment. Then Marbeck, being the last upon whom sentence was given, cried unto the bishop, saying, "Ah! my lord, you told me otherwise when I was before you and the other two bishops. You said then, that I was in better case than any of my fellows, and is your saying come to this? Ah! my lord, you have deceived me." Then the bishop, casting up his hand, said, "he could not do withal."

Now the prisoners, being condemned and had away, prepared themselves to die on the morrow; comforting one another in the death and passion of their master Christ, who had led the way before them, trusting that the same Lord, who had made them worthy to suffer so far for his sake, would not now withdraw his strength from them, but give them steadfast faith and power to overcome those fiery torments, and of his free mercy and goodness (without their deserts), for his promise's sake, receive their souls. Thus lay they all the night long (till very dead sleep took them), calling to God for his aid and strength, and praying for their persecutors, who, of blind zeal and ignorance, had done they wist not what, that God, of his merciful goodness, would forgive them, and turn their hearts to the love and knowledge of his blessed and holy word: yea, such heavenly talk was amongst them that night, that the hearers, watching the prison without, whereof the sheriff himself was one, with divers gentlemen more, were constrained to shed out plenty of tears, as they themselves confessed.

On the next morrow, which was Friday, as the prisoners were all preparing themselves to go to suffer, word was brought them that they should not die that day. The cause was this: the bishop of Sarum, and they among them, had sent a letter by one of the sheriff's gentlemen, called Master Frost, to the bishop of Winchester (the court being then at Okingham) in favour of Marbeck; at the sight of which letter, the bishop straightway went to the king, and obtained his pardon; which being granted, he caused a warrant to be made out of hand for the sheriff's discharge, delivering the same to the messenger, who, with speed, returned with great joy (for the love he bare to the party), bringing good news to the town, of Marbeck's pardon; whereat many rejoiced.

Of this pardon were divers conjectures made. Some said, it was by the suit of the good sheriff sir William Barrington, and sir Humfrey Foster, with other gentlemen more that favoured Marbeck, to the bishop of Sarum and the other commissioners, that the letter was sent.

Some said again, that it came of the bishop of Sarum and Fachel's first motion, being pricked in conscience for that they had so slenderly cast him away. Others again thought that it was a policy purposed afore, by the bishop of Winchester, of Sarum, and of Dr. London, because they should seem to be merciful. This conjecture rose upon this occasion: There was one Sadoek, dwelling in the town, who was great with Dr. London and Simons; and he should say, four days before the sessions began, that the prisoners should be all east and condemned, but Marbeck should have his pardon.

reserved
others.

Others there were, that thought the aforesaid bishops, with Dr. London, had done it for this purpose; that he now, having his life, would rather utter such men as they would have him to do, than to come in like danger again; which conjecture rose upon this: Simons, meeting with Marbeck's wife, said thus unto her: "Your husband may thank God and good friends: my lord of Winchester is good lord to him, who hath got his pardon. But shall I tell you?" quoth he: "his pardon will be to none effect, except he tell the truth of things to my lord, and other of the council, when he shall be demanded; for unto that purpose only is he reserved." "Alas sir," quoth she, "what can he tell?" "Well, woman," quoth Simons, "I tell thee plain; if he do not so, never look to have thy husband out of prison;" and so departed from her.

Appendix.

The like meaning did Master Arch make to Marbeck himself, on the Saturday in the morning that the men should be burned, when he came to confess them. "I have nothing," quoth he, "to say unto you, Marbeck, at this time; but hereafter you must be content to do as shall be enjoined you:" meaning, he should be forced to do some unlawful thing, or else to lie in perpetual prison. And this was most likely to have been attempted, if they had proceeded in their purpose; whose intent was to have gone through the whole realm, in like sort as they had begun at Windsor, as the bishop of Sarum confessed openly, and said, that "he trusted, ere Christmas-day following, to visit and cleanse a good part thereof." But most commonly God sendeth a shrewd cow short horns, or else many a thousand in England had smarted.

On Saturday in the morning that the prisoners should go to execution, came in to the prison two of the canons of the college, the one called Dr. Blithe, and the other Master Arch, which two were sent to be their confessors: Master Arch asked them, if they would be confessed; and they said, "Yea." Then he demanded if they would receive the sacrament: "Yea," said they, "with all our hearts." "I am glad," quoth Arch, "to hear you say so; but the law is," quoth he, "that it may not be ministered to any that are condemned of heresy. But it is enough for you that ye do desire it." And so he had them up to the hall to hear their confessions, because the prison was full of people. Dr. Blithe took Anthony Peerson to him to confess, and Master Arch the other two. But howsoever the matter went between the doctor and Anthony, he tarried not long with him, but came down again, saying, "he would no more of his doctrine." "Do you call him Dr. Blithe?" quoth Anthony. "He may be called Dr. Blind for his learning, as far as I see." And soon after the other two came down also. Then Anthony, seeing much people in the prison, began to say the Lord's Prayer, whereof he made a marvellous godly declaration, wherein he continued till the officers came to fetch them away, and so made an end. And taking their leave of Marbeck (their prison-fellow), they praised God for his deliverance, wishing to him the increase of godliness and virtue; and, last of all, besought him heartily to help them with his prayer unto God, to make them strong in their afflictions: and so, kissing him one after another, they departed.

Now, as the prisoners passed through the people in the streets, they desired all the faithful people to pray for them, and to stand fast in the truth of the gospel, and not to be moved at their afflictions, for it was the happiest thing that ever came to them. And ever as Dr. Blithe and Arch (who rode on each side the prisoners) would persuade them to turn to their mother, holy church, "Away," would Anthony cry, "away with your Romish doctrine, and all your trumpery, for we will no more of it!" When Filmer was come to his brother's door, he stayed and called for his brother; but he could not be seen, for Dr. London had kept him out of sight that same day, for the nonce.

And when he had called for him three or four times, and saw he came not, he said, "And will he not come? Then God forgive him and make him a good man." And so going forth they came to the place of execution, where Anthony Peerson, with a cheerful countenance, embraced the post in his arms, and kissing it, said, "Now welcome mine own sweet wife! for this day shall thou and I be married together in the love and peace of God."

And being all three bound to the post, a certain young man of Filmer's acquaintance brought him a pot of drink, asking if he would drink. "Yea," quoth Filmer, "I thank you. And now my brother," quoth he, "I shall desire you, in the name of the living Lord, to stand fast in the truth of the gospel of Jesus Christ, which you have received." And so, taking the pot at his hand, he asked his brother Anthony, if he would drink. "Yea, brother Filmer," quoth he, "I pledge you in the Lord."

And when he had drunk, he gave the pot to Anthony, and Anthony likewise gave it to Testwood. Of this drinking, their adversaries made a jesting-stock, reporting abroad that they were all drunk, and wist not what they said; when they were none otherwise drunk than as the apostles were, when the people said they were full of new wine, as their deeds declared: for, when Anthony and Testwood had both drunk, and given the pot from them, Filmer rejoicing in the Lord, said, "Be merry, my brethren, and lift up your hearts unto God; for after this sharp breakfast, I trust we shall have a good dinner in the kingdom of Christ our Lord and Redeemer." At the which words Testwood, lifting up his hands and eyes to heaven, desired the Lord above to receive his spirit; and Anthony Peerson, pulling the straw unto him, laid a good deal thereof upon the top of his head, saying, "This is God's hat; now am I dressed like a true soldier of Christ, by whose merits only I trust this day to enter into his joy." And so yielded they up their souls to the Father of heaven, in the faith of his dear Son, Jesus Christ, with such humility and steadfastness, that many who saw their patient suffering, confessed that they could have found in their hearts (at that present) to have died with them.

HOW ALL THE ADVERSARIES' CONSPIRACIES WERE KNOWN.

Bennet, a lawyer sick of the pestilence,

Ye have heard before of one Robert Bennet, how he was at the first apprehended with the other four persons aforesaid, and committed to the bishop of London's prison; and about the time he should have gone to Windsor, he fell sick of the pestilence, by means whereof he remained still in prison.

Bennet and Simons joint companions, but contrary in religion.

This Bennet and Simons (ye shall understand) were the greatest familiars and company keepers that were in all Windsor, and never lightly swerved the one from the other, saving in matters of religion, wherein they could never agree. For Bennet, the one lawyer, was an earnest gospeller, and Simons, the other lawyer, a cankered papist; but in all other worldly matters they cleaved together like burrs.

Robert Ockam rent up by the bishop of Salisbury and by others, to Gardner with letters.

This Bennet had spoken certain words against their little round god, for which he was as far in as the best, and had suffered death with the others if he had gone to Windsor when they went. And now that the matter was all done and finished, it was determined by the bishop of Salisbury, that Robert Ockam, on the Monday after the men were burned, should go to the bishop of Winchester, with the whole process done at the sessions the Thursday before.

Many good men and certain of the privy chamber indicted by the bishops.

Then Simons, at Bennet's wife's request, procured the bishop of Salisbury's favourable letter to the bishop of Winchester, for Bennet's deliverance, which letter Bennet's wife (forasmuch as her own man was not at home who should have gone with the letter) desired Robert Ockam to deliver to the bishop, and to bring her word again; who said he would. So forth went Ockam toward the bishop of Winchester, with his budget full of writings, to declare and open all things unto him, that were done at Windsor sessions. But all their wicked intents, as God would have it, were soon cut off, and their doings disclosed. For one of the queen's men, named Fulk, who had lain at Windsor all the time of the business, and had got knowledge what a number were privily indicted, and of Ockam's going to the bishop of Winchester, gat to the court before Ockam, and told sir Thomas Cardine and others of the privy chamber, how all the matter stood. Whereupon Ockam was laid for, and had by the back as soon as he came to the court, and so kept from the bishop.

On the next morrow, very early, Bennet's wife sent her man to the court after Ockam, to see how he sped with her husband's letter. And when he came there, he found sir Thomas Cardine, walking with Ockam up and down the green, before the court gate; whereat he marvelled, to see Ockam with him so early, mistrusting the matter:

whereupon he kept himself out of sight till they had broken off their communication.

And as soon as he saw Master Cardine gone (leaving Ockam behind), he went to Ockam and asked him if he had delivered his master's letter to the bishop. "No," said Ockam, "the king removeth this day to Guildford, and I must go thither, and will deliver it there." "Marry," quoth he, "and I will go with you, to see what answer you shall have, and to carry word to my mistress;" and so they rode to Guildford together; where Bennet's man (being better acquainted in the town than Ockam was) got a lodging for them both in a kinsman's house of his.

That done, he asked Ockam, if he would go and deliver his mistress's letter to the bishop. "Nay," said Ockam, "you shall go and deliver it yourself:" and took him the letter. And as they were going in the street together, and coming by the earl of Bedford's lodging (then lord privy seal) Ockam was pulled in by the sleeve, and no more seen of Bennet's man, till he saw him in the Marshalsea. Then went Bennet's man to the bishop's lodging and delivered his letter: and when the bishop had read the contents thereof, he called for the man that brought it. "Come, sirrah!" quoth he, "you can tell me more by-mouth than the letter specifieth;" and had him into a little garden. "Now," quoth the bishop, "what say you to me?" "Forsooth, my lord," quoth he, "I have nothing to say unto your lordship; for I did not bring the letter to the town." "No!" quoth the bishop, "where is he that brought it?" "Forsooth my lord," quoth he, "I left him busy at his lodging." "Then he will come," quoth the bishop, "bid him be with me betimes in the morning." "I will," quoth he, "do your lordship's commandment:" and so he departed home to his lodging. And when his kinsfolks saw him come in, "Alas, cousin," quoth they, "we are all undone!" "Why so?" quoth he, "what is the matter?" "Oh!" said they, "here hath been, since you went, Master Paget the king's secretary, with sir Thomas Cardine of the privy chamber, and searched all our house for the one that should come to the town with Ockam; therefore make shift for yourself as soon as you can." "Is that all the matter?" quoth he, "then content yourselves, for I will never flee one foot, hap what hap will." As they were thus reasoning together, in came the aforesaid searchers again; and when Master Cardine saw Bennet's man, he knew him very well, and said, "Was it thou that came to the town with Ockam?" "Yea, sir;" quoth he. "Now who the devil," quoth Master Cardine, "brought thee in company with that false knave?" Then he told them his business, and the cause of his coming; which being known, they were satisfied, and so departed. The next day had Bennet's man a discharge for his master (procured by certain of the privy chamber), and so went home.

Now was Ockam all this while at my Lord Privy Seal's, where he was kept secret, till certain of the privy council had perused all his writings; among which they found certain of the privy chamber indicted, with other the king's officers, with their wives; that is to say, sir Thomas Cardine, sir Philip Hobby, with both their ladies, Master Edmund Harman, Master Thomas Weldon, with Snowball and his wife. All these they had indicted by the force of the six articles, as aiders, helpers, and maintainers of Anthony Peerson. And besides them, they had indicted of heresy (some for one thing, and some for another) a great number more of the king's true and faithful subjects: whereof the king's majesty being certified, his grace, of his special goodness (without the suit of any man), gave to the aforesaid gentlemen of his privy chamber, and other his servants, with their wives, his gracious pardon. And as God would have the matter further known unto his majesty, as he rode one day a hunting in Guildford-park, and saw the sheriff with sir Humfrey Foster sitting on their horsebacks together, he called them unto him, and asked of them, how his laws were executed at Windsor. Then they, beseeching his grace of pardon, told him plainly, that in all their lives they never sat on matter under his grace's authority, that went so much against their consciences as the death of these men did; and up and told his grace so pitiful a tale of the casting away of these poor men, that the king, turning his horse's head to depart from them, said, "Alas, poor innocents!"

After this the king withdrew his favour from the bishop of Winchester, and being more and more informed of the conspiracy of Dr. London and Simons, he commanded certain of his council to search out the ground thereof. Whereupon Dr. London and Simons were apprehended and brought before the council, and examined upon their oath of allegiance; and for denying their mischievous and traitorous purpose, which was manifestly proved to their faces, they were both perjured, and in fine adjudged, as perjured persons, to wear papers in Windsor; and Ockam to stand upon the pillory, in the town of Newbury where he was born.

The judgment of all these three was to ride about Windsor, Reading, and Newbury, with papers on their heads, and their faces turned to the horse-tails, and so to stand upon the pillory in every of these towns, for false accusation of the aforementioned martyrs, and for perjury.

And thus much touching the persecution of these good saints of Windsor, according to the copy of their own aets, received and written by John Marbeck, who is yet alive both a present witness, and also was then a party of the said doings, and can testify the truth thereof.

AN ANSWER TO THE CAVILLING ADVERSARIES, TOUCHING
JOHN MARBECK.

Hark you wraungers, and be satisfied.

Wherefore against these crooked cavillers, which make so much ado against my former book, because in a certain place I chanced to say<sup>1</sup> that Bennet and Filmer had their pardon (when indeed it was Bennet and Marbeck), be it therefore known, protested, denounced, and notified, to all and singular such carpers, wranglers, exclaimers, depravers, with the whole brood of all such whisperers, railers, quarrel-pickers, corner-creeper, fault-finders, and spider-catchers, or by what name else soever they are to be titled, that here I openly say and affirm, profess, hold, maintain, and write the same as I said and wrote before, in the latter castigations of my book : that is, that John Marbeck was, with the others, condemned, but not burned ; cast by the law, but by pardon saved ; appointed with the rest to die, and yet not dead ; but liveth, God be praised, and yet to this present day singeth merrily, and playeth on the organs, not as a dead man amongst "Foxe's Martyrs" (as it hath pleased some in the court to encounter against me), but as one witnessed and testified truly in the book of Foxe's Martyrs to be alive. And, therefore, such manner of persons, if the disposition of their nature be such that they must needs find faults, then let them find them where they are, and where those faults, by their finding, may be corrected. But whereas they be corrected already, and found to their hands, and also amended before, let then these legend-liars look on their own legends, and there cry out of lies, where they may find enough ; and cease their biting there, where they have no just cause to bark.

And admit that I had not foreseen and corrected this escape before, touching the matter of John Marbeck, but that the place still had remained in the book as it was (that is, that the said John Marbeck, who is yet alive, had then died and suffered with the other three, the same time at Windsor),<sup>1</sup> yet, what gentle or courteous reader could have therein any just matter to triumph and insult against me, seeing the judicial acts, the records and registers, yea and the bishop's certificate, and also the writ of execution remaining yet on record, sent to the king, did lead me so to say and think ? For what man, writing histories, who cannot be in all places to see all things, but following his records and registers, wherein he seeth the said Marbeck to be judged and condemned with the rest, would otherwise write or think, but that he also was executed and burned in the same company.

But now I correct and reform the same again, and first of all others, I find the fault, and yet I am found fault withal. I correct myself, and yet I am corrected of others. I warn the reader of the truth, and yet am a liar. The book itself showeth the escape,<sup>2</sup> and biddeth instead of four, to read three burned ; and yet is the book made of lies !

Briefly, whereas I prevent all occasion of cavilling to the uttermost of my diligence, yet cannot I have that law, which all other books have, that is, to recognise and reform mine own "errata."

Wherefore, to conclude : these men, whosoever they are, if they will be satisfied, I have said enough ; if they will not, whatsoever I can say, it will not serve ; and so I leave them. I would I could better satisfy them. God himself amend them !

him one George Bucker, named otherwise Adam Damlip, who, having continued in the said prison three or four years, at last, by the commandment of Winchester, was had to Calais by John Massy, the keeper of the Marshalsea, and there hanged, drawn, and quartered for treason pretended, which was a little before the condemnation of the Windsor men aforesaid, as is by the letters of the said John Marbeck to me signified.

Touching which story of Adam Damlip, forasmuch as it includeth matter of much trouble and persecution that happened in Calais, to digest, therefore, and comprise the whole narration thereof in order, first I will enter (the Lord willing) the story of Damlip, and so proceed in order to such as, by the said occasion, were afflicted and persecuted in the town of Calais.

See Appendix.

PERSONS PERSECUTED IN THE TOWN OF CALAIS:—George Bucker, or else called Adam Damlip; a poor labouring man; W. Stevens; Thomas Lancaster; John Butler, commissary; William Smith, priest; Thomas Brook; Ralph Hare; Jacob, a surgeon; a Fleming; Clement Philpot, servant; Jeffery Loveday; Dodde; sir Edmund, priest; William Touched, postmaster; Peter Becket; Anthony Pickering, gentleman; Henry Tourney, gentleman; George Darby, priest; John Shepard; William Pellam; William Keverdal; John Whitwood; John Boote; Ro. Cloddet; Coppen de Hanc, alias James Cocke; Matthew Hound; William Button, crossbow-maker.

PERSECUTORS:—John Dove, prior of the Grey Friars in Calais; sir Gregory Buttoll, priest; Stephen Gardiner, bishop of Winchester; Dr. Sampson, bishop of Chichester; Dr. Clerke, bishop of Bath; Dr. Repse, bishop of Norwich; Harvey, commissary in Calais; lady Honor, wife to lord Lisle, deputy of Calais; sir Thomas Palmer, knight; John Rookwood, esquire; Richard Long, soldier of Calais; Francis Hastings, a soldier; Edmund Payton, Robert Poole, and Thomas Boyse; Hugh Counsel, a servant; sir Ralph Ellerker, knight; sir John Gage.

In the year of our Lord 1539, the lord Cromwell being yet alive, there came to Calais one George Bucker, alias Adam Damlip, who had been, in time past, a great papist and chaplain to Fisher bishop of Rochester; and, after the death of the bishop his master, had travelled through France, Dutchland, and Italy; and, as he went, conferred with learned men concerning matters of controversy in religion, and so proceeding in his journey to Rome, where he thought to have found all godliness and sincere religion, in the end he found there (as he confessed) such blasphemy of God, contempt of Christ's true religion, looseness of life, and abundance of all abominations and filthiness, that it abhorred his heart and conscience any longer a favourite subject of his 'cavilling adversaries,' the papists. It is true that the extract given on the last page, contains the words upon which their accusations are founded; with what fairness, however, the reader may best judge, when he reads the following words from page 1742 of the First Edition of the Acts and Monuments. 'Faultes and oversightes escaped, and to be restored in the reading of this history,' &c. 'Page 626, lin. 46. a. Finmore, rede Marbeck; lin. 48. Marbecke rede Finmore; lin. 43, these five, rede four men; lin. 46. saying that Benet, rede, for Benet was not condemned.'—So that, in fact, the passage really reads thus: 'Upon these articles these four men were condemned to death by the statute of the six arteles (whereof is spoken before), and adjudged to be burned: for Bennet was not condemned, and Marbecke escaped by the king's pardon: the other three, Peerson, Testwood, and Finmore, constantly and stoutly suffered martyrdom in the fire,' &c. The politic oversight of the papists is here remarkable, who could so acutely observe the error on page 626, but allow the contents of page 1742, entirely to escape their notice.—Ed.

there to remain; although he was greatly requested by cardinal Pole, there to continue, and to read three lectures in the week in his house, for which he offered him great entertainment, which he refused; and so, returning homeward, having a piece of money given him of the cardinal at his departure, to the value of a French crown, towards his charges, he came to Calais, as is aforesaid.<sup>1</sup> Who, as he was there waiting, without the gate, for passage into England, and being there perceived by certain Calais men, namely William Stevens and Thomas Lancaster, through conference of talk, to be a learned man, and also well affected; and moreover how that he, being of late a zealous papist, was now returned to a more perfect knowledge of true religion, was by them heartily entreated to stay at Calais a certain space, and to read and preach there a day or two, *therewith<sup>2</sup> to do the people to understand what he had found by his painful travelling to Rome; whereby they, who, through gross ignorance and vain superstition, had not altogether put out of their hearts that Antichrist of Rome, that ancient enemy of God and all godly religion, the pope, might the rather detest and abhor his filthy false doctrine, whereof this godly and learned man was a seeing witness.* To this request Adam gladly consented, so as he might be licensed by such as were in authority so to do.

Whereupon the said Stevens, at the opening of the gates, brought him unto the lord Lisle, the king's deputy of the town and marches of Calais, unto whom he declared thoroughly what conference and talk had been between Adam Damlip and him. Which known, the said lord deputy instantly desired the said Damlip to stay there, and to preach three or four days or more at his pleasure, saying, that he should have both his license and the commissary's also, who then was sir John Butler, so to do. Where, after he had preached three or four times, he was so well liked, both for his learning, his utterance, and the truth of his doctrine, that not only the soldiers and commoners, but also the lord deputy, and a great part of the council, gave him marvellous great praise and thanks for it; and the said lord deputy offered unto him a chamber in his own house, to dine and sup every meal at his own mess, to have a man or two of his to wait upon him, and to have whatsoever it were that he lacked, if it were to be had for money, yea, and what he would in his purse to buy books or otherwise, so as he would tarry there among them, and preach only so long as it should seem good to himself. Who, refusing his lordship's great offer, most heartily thanked him for the same, and besought him to be only so good unto him as to appoint him some quiet and honest place in the town, where he might not be disturbed or molested, but have opportunity to give himself to his book, and he would daily, once in the forenoon, and again by one o'clock in the afternoon, by the grace of God, preach among them, according unto the talent that God had lent him. At which answer the lord deputy greatly rejoiced, and thereupon sent for the aforesaid William Stevens, whom he earnestly required to receive and lodge the said Damlip in his house, promising, whatsoever he should demand, to see it paid with the most: and, moreover, would send every meal, from his own

This godly man, by the space of twenty days or more, once every day, at seven of the clock, preached very godly, learnedly, and plainly, the truth of the blessed sacrament of Christ's body and blood, mightily inveighing against all papistry, and confuting the same ; but especially those two most pernicious errors or heresies, touching transubstantiation, and the pestilent propitiatory sacrifice of the Romish mass, by true conference of the Scriptures, and applying of the ancient doctors ; earnestly therewith oftentimes exhorting the people to return from their popery ; declaring how popish he himself had been, and how, by the detestable wickedness that he did see universally in Rome, he was returned so far homeward, and now became an enemy, through God's grace, to all papistry : showing therewith, that if gain or ambition could have moved him to the contrary, he might have been entertained of cardinal Pole (as you have heard before) ; but, for very conscience' sake, joined with true knowledge, grounded on God's most holy word, he now utterly abhorred all papistry, and willed them most earnestly to do the same.

And thus he continued awhile reading in the chapter-house of the White Friars ; but, the place being not big enough, he was desired to read in the pulpit : and so, proceeding in his lectures (wherein he declared how the world was deceived by the Roman bishops, who had set forth the damnable doctrine of transubstantiation, and the real presence in the sacrament, as is aforesaid), he came, at length, to speak against the pageant or picture set forth of the resurrection, which was in St. Nicholas's church, declaring the same to be but mere idolatry, and an illusion of the Frenchmen before Calais was English.

Upon which sermon or lecture, there came a commission from the king to the lord deputy, Master Greenfield, sir John Butler commissary, the king's mason and smith, with others, that they should search whether there were (as was put in writing, and under bull and pardon) three hosts lying upon a marble stone besprinkled with blood ; and if they found it not so, that immediately it should be plucked down ; and so it was. For in searching thereof, as they brake up a stone in a corner of the tomb, they, instead of the three hosts, found soldered in the cross of marble lying under the sepulchre, three plain white counters, which they had painted like unto hosts, and a bone that is in the tip of a sheep's tail. All which trumpery Damlip showed unto the people the next day following, which was Sunday, out of the pulpit, and, after that, they were sent by the lord deputy to the king.

Notwithstanding, the devil stirred up a Dove (he might well be called a cormorant), the prior of the White-Friars ; who, with sir Gregory Buttoll, chaplain to the lord Lisle, began to bark against him. Yet, after the said Adam had, in three or four sermons, confuted the said friar's erroneous doctrine of transubstantiation, and of the propitiatory sacrifice of the mass ; the said friar outwardly seemed to give place, ceasing openly to inveigh, and secretly practised to impeach him by letters sent unto the clergy here in England ; so that, within eight or ten days after, the said Damlip was sent for to appear before the archbishop of Canterbury, with whom was assistant Stephen Gardiner bishop of Winchester, Dr. Sampson bishop of Chichester, and divers others, before whom he most constantly affirmed and defended the doctrine which he had taught, in such sort answering, confuting, and soluting the objections, as his adversaries, yea even among other the learned, godly, and blessed martyr Cranmer most meek, then yet but a Lutheran, marvelled at it, and said plainly, that the Scripture knew no such term of "transubstantiation." Then began the other bishops to threaten him, shortly to confute him with their accustomed argument (I mean fire and faggot), if he should still stand to the defence of that he had spoken: whereunto he constantly answered, that he would the next day deliver unto them fully so much in writing as he had said, whereunto also he would stand; and so was dismissed.

The next day, at the hour appointed to appear, when they looked surely to have apprehended him, in the mean season he had secret intimation from the archbishop of Canterbury, that if he did any more personally appear, he should be committed unto ward, not likely to escape cruel death. Whereupon he (playing indeed then somewhat old Adam's part, for such is man, left in his own hands) had him commended unto them, and sent them four sheets of paper learnedly written in the Latin tongue, containing his faith, with his arguments, conferences of the Scriptures, and allegations of the doctors, by a messenger or friend of his. This done, he, having a little money given him in his purse by his friends, stepped aside, and went into the West country, and there kept all the time, while great trouble kindled against God's people in Calais upon the same; as ye shall hear, the Lord permitting.

After his departure, the king's majesty was advertised, that there was great dissension and diversity of pernicious opinions in his said town of Calais, greatly tending to the danger of the same. Whereupon, during yet the days of the lord Cromwell, were sent over Dr. Champion, doctor of divinity, and Master Garret, who after was burned, two godly and learned men, to preach and instruct the people, and to confute all pernicious errors, who in effect preached and maintained the same true doctrine which Adam Damlip had before set forth; and by reason thereof they left the town at their departure very quiet, and greatly purged of the slander that had run on it.

After the departure of the said Champion and Garret, one sir William Smith, curate of our Lady's parish in Calais (a man very zealous, though but meanly learned), did begin to preach, and earnestly to inveigh against papistry and wilful ignorance; exhorting men obediently to receive the word, and no longer to contemn the same, lest God's heavy plagues and wrath should fall upon them, which always followeth the contempt of his holy word. This sir William Smith, for that sometimes he would be very fervent and zealous, sharply inveighing against the despisers of the word, was moved by some of the council there, who would seem to favour God's word, that he should not be so earnest against them that yet could not away with the same; willing him to bear with such, for, by bearing with them, they might hap to be won.

“ Well, well,” said the same Smith (openly in the pulpit one day as he preached), “ some say I am too earnest, and will me to bear with such as continue open enemies against Christ’s holy gospel, and refuse, nay forbid that any should read the Bible or holy Scripture within their house : but let all such take heed, for, before God, I fear that God, for their contemning of his word, will not long bear with them, but make them in such case as some of them shall not have a head left them upon their shoulders to bear up their cap withal.”

This Smith continued in the diligent bestowing of his talent there, till, shortly after, the devil got such hold in the hearts of a number of God’s enemies, that he with divers other godly men were called over to England, and charged with erroneous opinions worthy of great punishment, as hereafter more at large shall appear.

*And<sup>3</sup> forsomuch as we have entered into the story of Calais, and matters which were done in that town, it cometh to remembrance of one Thomas Brook, an alderman of that town, and burgess of the parliament before mentioned, wherein was concluded this same year, A. D. 1539, the Act of Six Articles, as is before said.<sup>4</sup>

After this bill of the Six Articles had passed the Higher House, and was brought to the burgesses of the Lower House, the lord Cromwell gave intelligence, not only that it was the king’s majesty’s determinate pleasure to have the bill to pass in sort as it had come down from the Lords, but, also, that if any man should stand against it earnestly, the same should put himself in great danger of his life.

Notwithstanding, this Thomas Brook, with great danger and peril of his life, did repugn and refute the same bill with divers reasons and good ground of Scripture : insomuch that message came down, by Sir N. Pollard, from the lord Cromwell to the said Brook, willing him, as he loved his life, not to speak against the said bill. Notwithstanding, Brook proceeding in his enterprise, the lord Cromwell, meeting him the next time after that, called him unto him, and said, that he never knew man play so desperate a part as to speak against that bill, unless he made a reckoning to be either hanged or burned : “ but God,” said he, “ hath mightily preserved thee ; whereof I am glad.”

(3) For the matter from hence to page 505, see Edition 1563, pp. 658—660.—Ed.

(4) See p. 262. Foxe is wrong, however, in dating this Act at both places “ A. D. 1540,” as the session in which this act of the Six Articles was passed, terminated on the 28th of June 1539. See 31st Henry VIII., cap. 11. The Act is printed entire in the Statutes at Large (4to. Lond. 1769,) vol. ix. Appendix, pp. 127—132.—Ed.

This fear caused men, much against their consciences (such is man's frailty), to establish that act; but yet not in such sort as the bill came down from the Lords; for where before, by that first bill sent down, it only was felony for a priest to have, or take unto him, a wife of his own (though St. Paul say that marriage is honourable among all men, and willeth that every man, for the avoiding of fornication, should have his own wife; and, rendering as it were a cause thereof, affirmeth, that it is better to marry than to burn), but no punishment at all was appointed for such shameless whoremongers, incontinent priests, as, contemning holy matrimony, abused their bodies both with women married and unmarried; now—upon the said Brook's urging that, unless men had better opinion of whoredom than of holy matrimony (called of St. Paul a bed undefiled), it was of necessity to be granted, that at the least the incontinent life of priests unmarried should, by that act, have like pain and punishment as such priests which, not having the gift of continency, therefore entered into the holy yoke of matrimony—thereupon the greater part of the House so fully agreed to the equal punishment, that unless it had been made felony, as well for thone and thother, that act had never passed the House; and, therefore, equal punishment was assigned for either of those deeds in that session, though in the next session or parliament after there was mitigation or qualification of the punishment for the horrible whoredom of priests; the marriage of priests standing still under the danger and punishment limited in the statute afore.

[Part of a Speech delivered by Thomas Brook, in the Lower House, on the Bill of the Six Articles.]

The said Broke also required to be certified of them that were learned, how it might be proved by the Scriptures, that God at all commanded laymen to receive the sacrament of his blessed body and blood in one kind (to wit, in material bread), to do it in remembrance of him who shed his blood for the remission of their sins, and to show the Lord's death until his coming; if it be so, that in giving this commandment, 'Bibite ex hoc omnes,' 'Drink ye all of this,' no layman at all be included, but, contrariwise, this other kind of the sacrament, to wit, the cup, or the material wine, be by God forbidden them. 'For,' said he, 'if in that universal proposition, Drink you all of this, be included every one of that number unto whom Christ, when he took bread in his hand, and gave thanks unto his heavenly Father, did give this commandment, saying, Take ye, eat ye; this is my body; do ye this in remembrance of me: then needs must our clergy grant unto us which be laymen, that either it is leful for us also, with the priests, to receive the sacrament in both the kinds (that is to wit, both in bread and the cup or wine), either else, that we silly laymen are not commanded to receive the sacrament at all; and, consequently, neither thereby to remember him to be our merciful Saviour, who hath died for remission of our sins, nor to show his death until he come, whereby he declared his most tender love towards us.' Wherefore, if it might not be granted that it was lawful to receive the blessed sacrament in both kinds, he required some authority of Scripture to be brought for the same; alleging farther, that albeit, through gross ignorance, contempt of God's holy word, and the insatiable ambition and covetousness of such men as made marchandise of men's souls (affirming in effect that Christ died in vain), that gross and foolish error of transubstantiation hath within this four or five hundred year crept in, and, as a festered canker, now spread itself abroad in all those places where the bishop of Rome hath established his usurped authority: 'yet,' said Brook,

'even unto this day, in all the Greek church that blind error and foolish opinion of transubstantiation was never received: and St. Paul himself calleth it bread, after those words which they call the consecration, five times in one chapter: neither hath man,' said he, 'I think, ever heretofore presumed to affirm, that the bread, after the consecration, should be both the body and blood, and the wine both the blood and body, in such sort as either of those kinds divided unto many parts, should, in every of those parts, contain the whole natural body and blood of our Saviour Jesu Christ, as this present act affirmeth. Therefore, before this act do pass, such doubts are to be resolved, whereby many afterward might incur danger of life, for lack of the plain explication of our meaning of them; as for example, where this act affirmeth that the wine, after the consecration is Christ's natural blood and body both, how would our clergy that the silly unlearned layman should answer, if it were asked him (as it is like enough to be) what he believes to be in the chalice, when the priest holds it over his head? for they make an infusion, you know, of water, and that before the consecration; so that there is a mixture of the water and wine. Whether now shall we affirm the thing which before was water, is now, by the commixion of the wine, turned with the wine into both the natural blood and body of Christ? either else, will it content them that it be answered thus: That the water remaineth water still?

'Divers such doubts might be put: but, to come to an end, If this bill must needs pass as an act, I most heartily wish that first, such places of the Scripture and allegations of holy fathers, as the bishops and other the learned of this realm do recite in confirmation of this doctrine, those they would vouchsafe to communicate unto this House, to thentent that men which be yet of contrary minds, being overcome by their true conference of the Scriptures and strength of arguments, might without grudge of conscience agree unto that, which, while they be otherwise minded, they cannot without sin grant unto. And finally, where by this act we greatly differ from many christian realms and provinces, all which profess Christ's true religion, and, nevertheless, set not forth these laws at all (much less with such pains of death), I heartily beseech God, it may please the king's majesty, that this whole act, with the conferences of Scriptures, allegation of doctors, and forms of arguments, which our clergy and other, the furtherers of this act, have brought in and affirmed for the establishing of it now for a law, may be truly translated into the Latin tongue; to this intent, that other nations likewise professing Christ's religion, seeing by those authorities what hath moved this realm to pass this act, either being overcome with our truth, thus lately found out, may be procured to receive the like doctrine, for that they see it sufficiently proved to be sincere and true; either else, seeing us by ignorance to be in error, by refelling or refuting the same as erroneous, may not only reduce us to the truth again, but, also, have cause to judge of this realm, that this act passed not through trust in men's own wits only, without respect had to the holy Scriptures of God, but as men that had ignorantly fallen, and not obstinately contemned the Scriptures. So will it come to pass, that, if this act be good, the goodness thereof shall be the more common, and, if it be otherwise, it shall do the less hurt, yea and continue the less while, when other men, not in thraldom or fear of this law, shall freely and out of good consciences write and show, what opinion they have of it.

Unto the which words of the said Brook, no man took upon him to make any direct answer, but yet, first, one Master Hall, a gentleman of Gray's-inn,<sup>1</sup> acknowledging that he was not able to refel the objections made against the bill, for that he lacked learning thereunto, said:

[Master Hall, of Gray's Inn, in reply to Brook.]

That he would only speak his conscience touching the passing of that bill, which he grounded (he said) upon this: that he had read in chronicles, that some one prince of this realm had, by laws, commanded auricular confession to be used through all his provinces and dominions; another prince, the keeping of this holy day or that. 'And, to be short, in chronicles may be found,' said he, 'that the most part of ceremonies now used in the church of England were by princes either first invented, or at the least was established; and, as we see, the same do till this day continue. Where, if the subjects' receiving the same ceremonies and rites of the church at their prince's order and commandment had been against God's law, or the prince's commandment to the subjects not a sufficient discharge in their consciences before God for the observing of them, I cannot think but the learned clergy at those days (for in all ages some of the clergy were well learned) would have stand therein, and proved to their princes, that it was not lawful to command such things.

'Wherefore, and forsomuch as far the greater part of us laymen are unlearned in the Scriptures and ancient doctors, me thinketh it is the bounden duty of us that be subjects, to be obedient and ready to observe all such things touching our religion, as our prince for the time being, specially, with the consent of the bishops and the rest of the clergy, shall at any time please to set forth for to be observed or believed; which his said commandment, with the clergy's consent, I verily believe shall be a sufficient discharge for us, his loving subjects, before the face of God,' said he; for it is written, Obey your king. Nevertheless, I like right well (so as it stood with the king's majesty's pleasure) the request that the gentleman made that spake last before, for the quieting of many men's consciences; that is, that the learned of this House might see the conferences of Scriptures, and the allegations of the ancient fathers, which the bishops, and the other learned of the clergy, bring in, for the passing of this act, or at the least way, if that cannot be obtained, that yet this act, with all their allegations, might be printed in the Latin tongue, whereby other nations might see upon what ground we proceed. But, touching mine own conscience, I am sufficiently persuaded, whereupon I have showed such simple reasons as you have heard.'

His words ended, sir William Kingston, knight, comptroller of the King's House, much offended with the said Brook's words, stood up and said: "Gentleman! you there, that spake last save one, I know not your name, nor indeed I am not able to dispute with you; but, in the stead of an argument, I will say thus much unto you: Tell this tale the xii day of July next, and I will bring a faggot to help to burn you withal." (In which xii day of July that bloody act should take place.) This his eloquent oration ended, he sat him down again, not without that, that he offended in a manner the whole House, and caused them to say, "It was very unseemly, that a gentleman of the House should so ungodly be used, where it was equally lawful for every man reverently to speak plainly his mind; besides that nothing was spoken by him but the same was reverently uttered, rather to try learning and truth of doctrine, than any wise in contempt or displeasure against the bill." Whereupon the speaker, verifying as much, desired the said sir William Kingston not to be offended, for he himself had done contrary to the order of the House, rather than the other.*

But leaving the parliament at Westminster, I will leap to Calais, where the lord Lisle, the king's deputy there (whom we showed to be the maintainer of Damlip), albeit he were himself of a most gentle nature, and of a right noble blood, the base son of that noble prince king Edward IV., being fiercely set on and incessantly enticed by the wicked lady Honor his wife, who was an utter enemy to God's honour, and in idolatry, hypocrisy, and pride, incomparably evil, she being daily and hourly thereunto incited and provoked by sir Thomas

Palmer knight, and John Rookwood esquire, two enemies to God's word, beginning now to flourish at Calais—these, I say, with certain other of the council of the said town of Calais, to the number of seven more besides themselves, seeking occasion, or rather a quarrel where no just cause was given, began to write very heinous letters and grievous complaints unto the lords of the privy council, against divers of the town of Calais, affirming that they were horribly infected with heresies and pernicious opinions; as first, the aforesaid Adam Damlip, who, though he were for a time escaped their hands, yet stuck still in their remembrance from time to time, until, at last, the innocent man was cruelly put to death as a traitor, as hereafter shall appear.

Also, besides this Damlip, they complained of Thomas Brook, and Ralph Hare; likewise of sir John Butler, then commissary; of sir W. Smith, James Coeke, alias Coppen de Hanc, James Barber, and others; and the names of all them they sent over. Of these persons, first the said Thomas Brook, and Ralph Hare, Coppen de Hanc, and James Barber, were apprehended and sent over, and committed to prison in Westminster gate, and then commanded to appear before the archbishop of Canterbury, the bishop of Winchester, the bishop of Chichester, and ten others appointed by the king's majesty's commission for the examination of them. And their accusers were sent over with letters from the council there, unto the privy council here, in the furtherance of their malicious suits against those honest men, with certain special letters directed unto the lord Fitzwilliam, then earl of Southampton, great admiral of England, and to the lord Sands, lord chamberlain of the household; likewise also to sir William Kingston knight, comptroller of the household, and to Dr. Sampson, then bishop of Chichester, and others, tending all to one effect, that is to say, the utter destruction of these godly men, if God, after his wonted manner, had not mightily preserved them, and as it were overshadowed them with the wings of his mercy.

charge against him.

That the same may the better appear, you shall understand, that first Ralph Hare, a man rude, and so unlearned that he could scarce read, yet, through God's grace, was very zealous; and therewith led so godly and temperate a life, as not one of his enemies could accuse or blame the same his sober life and conversation. This Ralph Hare was charged to be one that had spoken against auricular confession, against holy bread and holy water: yea, and beside that, he was one who would not lightly swear an oath, nor use almost any manner of pastime, nor good fellowship, as they term it, but was always in a corner by himself, looking on his book. This poor simple man, being charged by the commissioners that he was a naughty man and erroneous, and that he could not be otherwise (coming out of a town so infected with pernicious errors and sects, as that was), was willed by them to take good heed to himself, lest, through obstinacy, he turned his erroneous opinions into plain heresy: for an error defended, is heresy.

His
answer.

"My good lords," said the poor man, "I take God to record, I would not willingly maintain any error or heresy. Wherefore, I beseech you, let my accusers come face to face before me: for, if they charge me with that which I have spoken, I will never deny it. Moreover, if it be truth, I will stand unto it; and otherwise, if it be an error, I will, with all my heart, utterly forsake it: I mean if it be against God's holy word. For the Lord is my witness, I seek and daily pray to God, that I may know the truth, and flee from all errors; and I trust the Lord will save me and preserve me from them."

Henry VIII.

"Aha!" quoth the bishop of Winchester, "do you not hear what he saith, my lord? I perceive now thou art a naughty fellow." "Alas, my lord!" said Ralph Hare, "what evil said I?" "Marry, sir, you said, 'the Lord!' 'the Lord!'" and that is 'symbolum hæreticorum,'" said Winchester. "What is that, my lord? for God's sake tell me," said Hare. "Thou art naught, thou art naught," said he. At which words the simple man began to tremble, and seemed much dismayed. *Wherewith<sup>1</sup> the above-named Brook, standing by next to the said Hare, said, "My lord! I beseech your honour not to conceive evil opinion of the poor man for using this word, 'the Lord.' For, by your lordship's favour, no man who at any time hath translated the Bible, hath used to English these two Hebrew words, 'Jehovah' and 'Adonai,' and this Greek word 'Κύριος,' but only thus: 'The Lord.' So that, under your lordship's correction, it might rather be called 'symbolum christianorum,' or 'piorum,' than 'symbolum hæreticorum.'" "I pray you, sir, then," said the bishop of Winchester, "why doth Christ teach us to say, 'Our Father which art in heaven,' and not 'the Father?'" "My lord, by your favour," said Brook, "he useth there the vocative case, teaching us to invoke God; and joineth thereto this pronoun 'noster;' so that this article 'the,' were not there to be used, neither should it express the full meaning of Christ in those words. But if your lordship would descend down a little from the Lord's Prayer unto the Ave Maria or Salutation, there it manifestly appeareth, that the angel (in no part falsifying God's message committed to him) saith 'ὁ Κύριος μετὰ σου:' which is truly turned into English, no otherwise but thus: 'The Lord (and not our Lord, nor thy Lord, nor my Lord) is with thee.' Wherefore the poor man is there taught plainly of God, and that by an angel, to say (as he said) 'the Lord;' and, therefore, he is worthy of no blame." At these words the bishop began to be much moved and offended: wherupon Dr. Gwent, dean of the Arches, one of those commissioners, said: "Well, Master Brook! well; you abuse my lord here very much: it were a matter rather to be disputed of in the schools, than thus to be reasoned of openly here." Whereat the said Brook answered that he was sorry that he had offended my lord, or any other; but what he had spoken, he spake it of charity, and pity taken on the simple poor man: and therewith he held his peace. But the truth is, that, through the cavillation of Winchester, rose more contention than profit needful about the Lord and our Lord, the papists holding with Winchester, and the other part with the Lord. But now, to return to the said Ralph Hare's examination again, within half an hour after Dr. Gwent had blamed the said Brook, for that he spake in the behalf of Ralph Hare, whilst the said Brook was there present, and standing by, he heard among the names of those that were by the counsell of Calceis letters charged with pernicious errors and heresies, himself named and called. Some of the commissioners answered "Yea, yea; but it makes no matter; let him alone till hereafter." At the muttering forth of which words, the said Brook stood forth and said, "I know, and it like your honours, no Thomas Brook of Calais but myself. Is it your lordships' pleasures to have any thing with me?" "Nay, Master Brook," answered the commissioners; "we may not meddle with you, and that you know right well; or else, we suppose, you would not have been here now. You consider you are a burgess of the parliament." "Truth it is," said Brook, "that unworthily so I am; but, if your lordships and the rest of the commissioners have any thing wherewith to charge me, I here openly renounce the privilege of that high court, and submit myself to the laws of the realm, to answer to that which may be objected against me."

"Write, scribe!" said Winchester. And straightway the said Brook was commanded not to depart without license. Furthermore, they commanded him to be had aside, lest he should give any instructions unto Ralph Hare. Then they called again for the said Ralph Hare, and there charged him with many heinous and detestable errors, namely that he was a great reader of the New Testament in English; that he was such a one that in deed neither used to take holy bread, holy water, holy ashes, nor holy palm, but spake against them, and against auricular confession also: wherefore, they threatened him, that if he would stand in the defence of these things, and of such other as would evidently be laid and proved against him, it would cost him his life.*

These words drew the man yet into a greater agony and fear; which thing Winchester well perceiving, said unto him, "Ralph Hare! Ralph Hare! by my troth I pity thee much. For, in good faith, I think thee to be a good simple man, and of thyself wouldest mean well enough, but that thou hast had shrewd and subtle school-masters, that have seduced thee, good poor simple soul; and therefore I pity thee. And it were indeed pity that thou shouldest be burned, for thou art a good fellow, a tall man, and hast served the king right well in his wars. I have heard thee well commended, and thou art yet able to do the king as good service as ever thou wast; and we all will be a mean to his grace to be good gracious lord unto thee, if thou wilt take pity of thyself, and leave thy errors. For I dare say for us all that be commissioners, that we would be loth that thou shouldest be cast away: for, alas! poor simple man, we perceive thou hast been seduced, I say, by others. How sayest thou therefore? thou knowest my lord of Canterbury's grace here is a good gentle lord, and would be loth thou shouldest be cast away. Tell me, canst thou be content to submit thyself unto him, and to stand unto such order as he and we shall take in this matter? how sayest thou, man? Speak!" The poor man therewith falling upon his knees, and shedding tears, answered, speaking to my lord's grace, the archbishop of Canterbury, in this wise: "My good lord! for Christ's sake be good unto me; and I refer myself unto your grace's order, to do with me what you please."

The archbishop of Canterbury, considering what danger he was ready to fall in, and pitying the same (though the simplicity of the man was so great that he perceived it not), said, "Nay, Ralph Hare, stand up and advise thyself well, and commit not thyself to me, for I am but one man, and in commission but as the others are, so that it lieth in me to do nothing. But, if thou do commit thyself unto us all, then thou committest thyself unto the law, and the law is ordained to do every man right." "Go to, Ralph Hare," said Winchester, "submit thyself to my lord and us: it is best for thee to do so." Whereupon he fell upon his knees again, and said, "My lords and masters all! I submit myself wholly unto you." And therewith a book was holden him, and an oath given him to be obedient unto them, and to all ecclesiastical laws. And straightway he was enjoined to abjure, and to bear a faggot three several days; and, moreover, the poor man lost his whole living that he had at Calais.

Henry VIII.

A. D. 1539.

The words of the archbishop of Canterbury to Hare.

Penance enjoined to Hare.

This simple man, hearing his penance, piteously lamented, and earnestly at the first denied to stand thereunto, with piteous exclamation, saying, "O my lord of Winchester! my lord of Winchester! have you made me a log, ready to be laid upon the fire whensoever any wicked man falsely, of malice, by provocation of the devil, shall lay any small trifle to my charge? or shall I be thus handled, nothing proved to my face against me? Alas I have always hated errors and heresies." "Content thyself, Hare, there is now no remedy: thou must either do thy penance, or be burned," said the commissioners. Thus have you heard how Ralph Hare did speed.

Then was Thomas Brook called for, against whom it was objected by some of the council's letters of Calais, that he was a seditious fellow. Among these accusers, besides the rest, was one Richard Long, another Francis Hastings, men at arms, who charged the aforesaid Thomas Brook, and one Jeffery Loveday esquire, for staying and maintaining the aforesaid Adam Damlip at Calais, as who had promised unto him a stipend to preach such heresies and pernicious opinions as afterwards he taught there: and that these two daily gathered many several sums of money for the entertainment of the said Adam. Howbeit the aforesaid Hastings failed in the proof thereof: for Loveday proved that he was, eight days before Damlip's coming to Calais, and during fourteen days continually after he began to preach, abiding at Paris, there occupied about necessary affairs of Charles duke of Suffolk. And Brook, during the said time was at London, daily attendant in the parliament house, whereof he had enough to bear witness against that untrue surmise.

The examination and trouble of Thomas Brook and Jeffery Loveday. Long and Hastings their accusers.

After that, came three at once against the said Brook, well armed, as they thought, who had not only consulted together before of the matter, and put it in writing at Calais, besides their conference and talk by the way keeping company from thence hither, but also had obtained from the lord deputy, and others of the council, special letters, as is aforesaid, and, among others, one letter unto the bishop of Chichester, for the earnest and speedy furtherance of the advancement of their accusations against Brook.

Three other accusers.

The first of these three was a young gentleman lately brought up under the said Brook in the office of customs, whose name was Payton the first accuser.

*Henry VIII.*A. D.

third
accuser.

Edmund Payton, * whose<sup>1</sup> love to that office, rather than truth of the matter, moved him, through frailty of youth, as it is to be thought, to do that he did. For afterwards, as the said Brook hath to divers of his friends reported the matter, [he] not only acknowledged to him his fault, but also behaved himself towards him as his loving friend.* The other was one Robert Poole, a man (as it was commonly reported) both base born, and also such a one as, in his youth, for murdering a man with a club, in Bow-lane in London, was fain, by obtaining the king's pardon, to save his neck, * which<sup>2</sup> Poole had (chiefly by the said Brook's means) attained to twenty pound a year living during his life; which he recompensed as hereafter shall appear.* The third was one Thomas Boyse, who, showing more honesty than the rest, affirmed not that he himself heard the said Brook speak any thing of that which was objected against him, but justified that which each of the other two had steadfastly affirmed to him, that Brook had spoken unto them those things which, here beneath, he said were objected against him.

The first young man objected against the said Brook, that he should say, that the thing which the priest useth to hold up over his head at mass, is not the natural body of Jesus Christ: for, if that were so, whoso would might have their stomach full of gods, their entrails full of gods; and he that had lately received the sacrament before he went to the sea, might haply cast god up again on shipboard.

And thus much he brought over in writing with him from Calais, and added thereto, as it should seem, to exasperate the commissioners and the rest of the clergy against him, certain other heinous words spoken against bishops and priests: * as,<sup>3</sup> that the knaves, the bishops and priests, for their own gain and belly sake, bare us laymen so in hand, and would shamefully blear our eyes:" which words he never spake; "for it did abhor both his heart and his ears, to hear either so shameful and uneverent words concerning the blessed sacrament, or so arrogant and disdainful words spoken against the bishops and other inferior ministers, unto whom God had given authority (though they, for the most part, were very unworthy thereof"), * confessing, nevertheless, that he had secret and private talk with the young man touching the truth of the sacrament, wherein he showed, as reverently as he could speak, to the young man the right use of the same: concluding that, albeit with our mouths we received (*even<sup>4</sup> after the words of consecration as they called it*) very material bread and wine, yet by faith all christian men do receive, eat, and drink, to their great comfort and benefit, the very natural body and blood of Christ, which was both born of the Virgin Mary, and suffered death on the cross for the remission of their sins: which most holy sacrament whoso cometh unworthily unto, the same was so far from eating of Christ's body and blood, that all such, without hearty repentance, do eat their own damnation. And, to conclude with him, in that private talk he told him, that if the gross and unlearned error of transubstantiation were indeed matter of truth and sincere doctrine, then not only this should follow of it, that every man who would might have everlasting life (for they might, when they would, receive the outward sacrament, seen with our eyes, which the priests call Christ's natural body, and whoso eateth Christ's natural body, and drinketh his blood, hath everlasting life, saith Christ), but also there should great absurdities follow thereby, as when a man happeneth to go to sea, having lately received the sacrament, he should put it overboard, or upon the hatches; and, therefore, exhorted the said Payton to leave that gross error.

Henry VIII.

A. D. 1539.

The second accuser was Poole, who objected against him, that, about two years past, he himself, dining with the said Brook with fifteen or sixteen other honest men, heard him say thus at the table: that the thing which the priests use to hold up over their heads, was not the very body and blood of Christ, but a sacrament to put us in remembrance thereof. Unto whose objections the said Brook answered, that a man in mirth might well enough in charity beshrew such a guest as, when he had dined with a man, could, so long after, remember to say him such a grace: and required of Poole, from whence the rest of the guests were. He answered, they were of the town, all. Then inferred he, that he was sure Poole could as well remember some of their names who then were present, as freshly to keep in mind (for so by oath upon a book he had affirmed) every word of the whole matter which he objected; but that the matter was utterly untrue. Whereupon the said Brook desired their honours to consider the slenderness of his tale.

Poole's accusation against Brook.

To be short, he, with the rest of his fellows, to wit, Ralph Hare, Coppen, and James the barber, were for that time dismissed.

THE STORY OF WILLIAM SMITH, CURATE; ALSO THE TROUBLE OF JOHN BUTLER, COMMISSARY; AND THE RECAN-TATION OF DIVERS CALAIS MEN.

During the time while these four were thus in examination at London, the other two, to wit, sir William Smith, preacher, and John Butler, by commandment were apprehended in Calais, and bound by surety not to pass the gates of the town of Calais. In that town, the said John Butler, commissary, was accused by Richard Thorpe and John Ford, soldiers of Calais, saying, that he should say, that if the sacrament of the altar be flesh, blood, and bone, then there is good "aqua vitæ"<sup>1</sup> at John Spicer's. Upon which accusation the said Thorpe and Ford brought for records before the council of Calais, Marraunt, Haynes, John Luckes, Harry Husson, and Harry Trost, all of the district of Oye, beside Calais. Whereupon, shortly after, the said John Butler and sir William Smith were sent for, and, by one Swallow a pursuivant, who fetched up the others aforesaid, brought into England, unto the house of the said Swallow dwelling by St. James's, where the king's majesty lay at that time. And the next day, being Thursday after dinner, Butler and Smith were brought to the star-chamber before the privy council, where both sedition and heresy were objected against them. And after much talk it was said unto them by the lord Cromwell, that they should make their purgation by the law. And from thence, by the aforesaid Swallow, they were sent to the fleet.

The next day, being Friday, after dinner, Butler and Smith were sent for to come to Bath-place, where they were brought into the chapel, there sitting Dr. Clerke, bishop of Bath, and Dr. Sampson, then bishop of Chichester: Dr. Repse, the bishop of Norwich, who was a monk, being fast asleep. Then was objected unto Butler, with great reverence, the opprobrious words spoken against the blessed sacrament (rehearsing, as is aforesaid, the articles). Butler required to have them in writing, and so he would make answer in writing; the which they would not grant him: and upon that answer he stood. Then choler gathered in the bishop of Chichester. The story were too long to write, yet part ye shall understand.

Chichester found great fault that Butler made not low courtesy, being stubborn and arrogant, as he said, and, in fine, found fault with his shirt. Then, turning him about, he called to his brother Banester, being present (that time dwelling in Paternoster-row), to make answer for the shirt. He said, "I can make answer for the shirt." "No good answer," said Chichester. "Forsooth," said he, "the shirt is mine; I lent it him, because he brought none with him, for he was not permitted to have any servant." "A good answer," said the bishop of Bath. Then Butler made low courtesy, and said, "The shirt is answered." Then Chichester said, "Thou mockest us;" but he said "No." And thus much concerning that time.

Then, after Butler, was sir William Smith, curate of our Lady's parish in Calais, called before them, and charged in a manner with the same heinous errors and pernicious opinions that were objected against the said Ralph Hare; and thereto was added, that he had spoken and preached against our blessed Lady, against praying to saints, against doing of good works, and many other like things: and therewithal one Richard Long, a man at arms at Calais, proved against the said sir William Smith, and the aforesaid Brook, by an oath taken upon a book, that the said Smith and Brook did eat flesh together in Lent, in the said Brook's house. "For a miller's boy," said he, "came into Brook's kitchen, and saw half a lamb lie a roasting at the fire." Whereas the truth is, that the said sir William Smith, during all the Lent, came never once within the said Brook's house. And it is as true also, that the said Richard Long, upon a displeasure taken with his wife, went shortly after out of his own house, to the jutting end of the haven at Calais, where desperately he drowned himself; not one boy, but many men, women, girls and boys seeing him miserably taken up again stark dead, all which lamented his pitiful ruin. A terrible example unto all such as are ready to forswear themselves on a book upon malice, or whatsoever other cause it be; a thing in these days over rife everywhere, and almost nowhere regarded as it ought to be. *But<sup>1</sup> to return to sir William Smith; for the heinousness of his errors, equal every wit to Ralph Hare's, and worse (though no matter sufficient in the law to burden him, that could be proved), yet he must needs (no remedy was there) recant at Calais openly in the pulpit, and to depart the town and Marches. Which recantation he did in such sort, as he in effect denied nothing at all that he had before preached or taught, but yet it satisfied somewhat his adversaries' malicious hearts, in that it bare the name of a recantation, and therewith was done according to the commissioners' order; whilst the other heretic, Ralph Hare, stood before him with a faggot on his shoulder: and, also, it seemed unto such of the council of Calais, as had by their letters complained so grievously of the pernicious sects and heresies of that town, that now, what with the aforesaid Brooks inveighing against the six articles in the parliament-house, and the punishment of these two heretics, they had won their spurs by making of such complaints: in so much as the matters fell out as you hear.*

Henry VIII.

A. D. 1539.

There was also called before them sir John Butler, then commissary of Calais, whom they would have burdened with the maintenance, or, at the least wise, sufferance of the aforesaid Adam Damlip, who preached so long time there, and was not by him punished. Butler, for his defence, answered, that the lord deputy, and the whole council there, so highly entertained, and so friendly used the said Damlip, and with their own presence and high commendations outwardly so allowed and commended his doctrine, that it lay not in him to do otherwise than he did; and therefore, humbly besought their lordships and other the commissioners to be good unto him: at whose hands, after long attendance given, he was discharged, and so returned home again; being also dismissed of his commissaryship.

The trouble of John Butler, commissary.

Now, to declare what order was taken with these aforesaid Calais men, it was appointed that sir William Smith, priest, Ralph Hare, James Cocke, and James Barber, should be sent to Calais, there to abjure and to do penance; where sir William Smith was enjoined to make the sermon, Ralph Hare, James Cocke, and James Barber standing with faggots upon their shoulders. The sermon was made in the market of Calais. Which being done, they went with their faggots about the market-place, the drum and fife going before them; and then, returning to the commissioners with the testimonial of the same, they departed. Albeit, in this recantation, the said William Smith, curate of our Lady's church, handled his sermon after that sort, that, in effect, he denied nothing at all that he had before preached or taught, but yet it satisfied somewhat his adversaries' malicious hearts, in that it bore the name of a recantation, according to the commissioners' order; appointing him thus openly to preach, and so to depart the town and marches.

The recantation and penance of Smith, Hare, Cock, and Barber.

As touching James Barber aforesaid, forasmuch as his dwelling was not at Calais, but four miles off from the town, it was therefore enjoined him to bear his faggot, not at Calais, but on the Saturday next following to stand in the market there where he dwelt, with his faggot upon his shoulder; and the said sir William Smith likewise there preached as before.

James Barber.

And thus much concerning the first commission sent over to Calais,<sup>1</sup> to inquire upon the heretics there.

(1) 'The first commission sent over to Calais.' It does not appear (from the previous narrative at least) that this first commission was so sent: on the contrary, all its sittings seem to have been held in London.—Ed.

After all these things done and past, the grudging minds of the adversaries were not yet satisfied, but still suggested new complaints to the king's ears against the town of Calais, making the king believe that, through new opinions, the town was so divided, that it was in great danger to be overcome of the adversary.

Whereupon, shortly after, the week before Easter next following, other new commissioners were sent over by the king to Calais: to wit, the earl of Sussex, lord great chamberlain; the lord St. John; sir John Gage, knight; sir John Baker, knight; Master Layton, clerk of the closet; and Dr. Currin; with special instructions besides, signed by the king's majesty's own hand. For his highness had been incensed once again from the council of Calais, that the town was in peril, through dissension and diversity of opinions. Upon their arrival, Dr. Currin preached a notable sermon, exhorting all men to charity, having nothing in his mouth but "charity," "charity." But, as it seemed afterwards, such a burning charity was in him and the rest of the commissioners, that had not God pitied the innocency of men's causes, there had a hundred been burned or hanged shortly after.

Example of God's punishment upon false
accusers.

But it happened far otherwise, for, of the number of those accusers, four were, by those commissioners, sent over into England, to wit, Clement Philpot, servant to the lord Lisle; sir Edmund, curate of our Lady's church; W. Touched, a post-master; Peter Bequet. Of the which four, Touched and Bequet were sent to their places again; the other two were drawn, hanged, and quartered at London. But contrary, of all them that were accused, there was not one that lost one hair of his head.

After the sermon was done, on the morrow, to wit, on Share-Thurs-day, all the commissioners solemnly received the sacrament. And, at afternoon, the council were with the commissioners; and after their consultation, tip-staves warned above the number of fourscore, such perverse persons as the like were not in the town or marches, to appear on the morrow at eight of the clock before the council at the Staple inn; who, at their appearance, were commanded upon their allegiance to present all such heretics, schismatics, and seditious persons, as they did know; and in no wise to doubt or dread so to do, for they should have great advantage thereby; yea, they should either have their livings or their goods; and, besides that, they should have great thanks at the king's majesty's hand, and his honourable council, and what friendship they of the king's council there could show them.

Great
tion at Calais.

All that Good-Friday, even till ten of the clock at night, those wicked and malicious persons occupied their time in answering to sundry and divers questions. These things were not so secretly done, but they were bewrayed and came to honest men's knowledge. Whereupon such fear and distrust assaulted all men, that neighbour distrusted neighbour, the master the servant, the servant the master, the husband the wife, the wife the husband, and almost every one the other, that lamentable it was to see how mourningly men and women went in the streets, hanging down their heads, showing evident tokens of the anguish of their hearts.

THE SECOND TROUBLE OF THOMAS BROOK AND WILLIAM STEVENS: ALSO THE IMPRISONMENT OF DIVERS OTHER CALAIS MEN, FOR THEIR FAITH.

Henry VIII.

A. D.
1540.

Upon Easter Monday, one Hugh Councill an honest man, servant to the said Brook, was convented before them, and by the space of fourteen days not suffered to return to his master's house, but was kept in custody; and was many times examined upon articles and interrogatories, in hope to have found worthy matter, either of heresy or treason, against the said Brook; and the same day that Brook was committed to ward, the said Hugh Councill was discharged.

The second trouble of Thomas Brook.

The Wednesday in the Easter week, sundry quests were charged, by their oaths, to make inquisition for all manner of heresies, erroneous opinions, and seditious: as a quest of aldermen, another of men at arms, and another of constables and vintners, another of common soldiers, and another of commoners.

And shortly after their presentments, on Good-Friday, there were convented before the commissioners, and straight were sent to close prison, Anthony Pickering, gentleman; Harry Tourney, gentleman; sir George Darby, priest; John Shepherd, William Pellam, William Keverdale, John Whitwood, John Boote, Robert Clodder, Copen de Hane, and Matthew de Hound:<sup>1</sup> upon whom ran sundry bruits. Some said they should be hanged; some said burned; some said hanged, drawn, and quartered; some said nailed to the pillory: so that pitiful it was to see the lamentation that their wives, their children, servants, and friends, made secretly where they durst; for that they found everywhere words of discomfort, and nowhere of comfort, but still inquisition was made.

Thirteen Calais men imprisoned for their faith.

See Adversaria

The aforesaid William Stevens, after his return from London abovementioned<sup>2</sup>, besides many other articles laid to him for religion, to the number of forty or well nigh, was, by the lord deputy, charged that he had stayed the aforesaid Adam Damlip, hired him to preach, and given him meat, drink, and lodging, coming from the arrant traitor cardinal Pole, and suborned by him; and that he had received money of him, to the intent he should preach in Calais false and erroneous doctrine, whereby the town, being divided and at contention within itself, might easily be overcome and won by the Frenchmen. Whereunto the said Stevens answered, that whatsoever he had done unto the said Adam Damlip, he had done it at the earnest request and commandment of the said lord deputy. Whereupon, if it had been treason indeed, he must have been more faulty.

The second trouble of William Stevens. False crimes forged against him.

Then the said William Stevens was again, the second time<sup>2</sup>, by the said commissioners sent over into England, and clapped in the Tower, and afterwards, to wit, immediately after the said commissioners' repair unto the king's highness, the said lord deputy was sent for over, and likewise put into the Tower, where he continued a long time. And when the king's majesty minded to have been gracious unto him, and to have let him come forth, God took him out of this world, whose body resteth in the Tower, and his soul with God, I trust, in heaven: for he died very repentant. But the wicked lady, his wife, immediately upon his apprehension, fell distraught of mind, and so continued many years after. God, for his mercy, if she yet live, give her his grace to repent.

The second Monday after Easter, the aforesaid Brook was conveyed before the commissioners, and committed to close prison in the mayor's jail *whither<sup>1</sup> no man of his calling was ever committed, unless sentence of death had first been pronounced against him; for otherwise the ordinance of the town was, that his prison should be only another alderman's house, with license at night to lie in his own house.* Then the council of Calais, doubting lest there should not be any sedition or heresy proved against him, did call one George Bradway before them, who occupied the comptroller's office in the Custom-house. This man was kept in close prison, so that neither his wife, then great with child, nor any other of his friends might repair unto him. Where, after that he had oftentimes been borne in hand, that there were divers concealments come to light that were made by Brook in the office of the Customs, and that the said Bradway should be grievously punished, if he would acknowledge none of them, nor burden the said Brook with some kind of concealment; the poor simple man, hoping thereby to get release of his imprisonment, accused the said Brook, that he had, for a long time, concealed four groats every day for his clerk's wages; and to that accusation they caused the simple man to set his own hand before witnesses.

False accusation

God's hand.

God's mercy in

ing.

Hereupon, after a day or two, the said Bradway, grieved in his conscience for the same his most untrue accusation, did, with a knife, enterprise to cut his own throat: but God, of his mercy, so directed his wicked purpose, that the back of his knife was towards his weasand; whereby, though the wound were broad, yet he escaped with life. And as he gave a groan with the sudden pain that he felt, the jailor came up, and bereft him of the knife. But, through the guiltiness of the false accusation, and shame of the world, the man lost his wits, who then, staring and dismayed, was dismissed out of prison, and a long time after went, in piteous case, so dismayed about the street, to the great impoverishing of him, his poor wife, and family.

Letters sent to the lord
Cromwell from Calais.

This kind of handling of the said Brook made all his friends, but especially his wife, to be greatly afraid of the malice of his enemies: the rather, also, for that all his goods and lands were seized, and his wife thrust into the meanest place of all his house, with her children and family; the keys of all the doors and chests also taken from her. Who, for that she was rigorously treated at sir Edward Kingley's hand, comptroller of the town (an office of no small charge, though he knew not a "B" from a battledore, nor ever a letter of the book), saying unto her, that if she liked not the room, he would thrust her quite out of the doors: "Well, sir," said she, "well; the king's slaughterhouse had wrong, when you were made a gentleman." And with all speed she wrote a letter to the lord Cromwell, therein discoursing how hardly and sore those poor men were handled, that were committed to ward and close prison; and that all men feared (what through the malice of their papistical enemies, and the great rigour and ignorant zeal of those that were in authority), they should shortly, for their faith and consciences, being true men, and such as reverently feared God, be put to death; but, chiefly, her husband, who was yet more extremely handled than any others: so that unless his honour vouchsafed to be a means to the king's majesty, that they, with their causes, might be sent over into England, they were but dead men. *Sundry<sup>1</sup> other letters she wrote to divers friends, to solicit the cause. But when, at noon time, a servant of hers was seen to receive again the same packet of letters, of one to whom before he had taken them to carry them into England, and now, for that the passage served not till the afternoon, to carry them back to his mistress, he that so saw them declared so much to the commissioners, at dinner time. Whereupon they gave very straight commandment that the thing should be kept close, and straight wait laid, to whom any servant of his should deliver any letters: and that, attaching the same, they should be brought to them. Whereupon one Francis Hall esquire, a man of great wisdom, godliness, and temperance, hearing what was said, and nothing distrusted of the commissioners, pretended a sudden qualm to come over his stomach, and rising from the table speedily told Mistress Brook what had happened; whereupon, with all speed, she writ as many other letters with like directions, but with far unlike contents. For unto the lord Cromwell she highly advanced the honours, wisdom, and justice which she knew to abound in the honourable commissioners, doubting nevertheless, she said, only the maliciousness of her husband's enemies and their untrue accusations, and, therewith, the weakness of her husband's body, greatly subject to sickness when it was best cherished: wherefore, though she assuredly knew her husband should have at their honours true justice and equity, so as she would not wish any other in all England to be commissioners in their places, yet she most humbly besought his lordship to write his favourable letters unto them, to this end, that in respect of his weakness and infirmity, he might have justice with as much expedition as conveniently might be; and, in the mean time, to let him have somewhat more liberty, and open air. And in the other letters to her friends she wrote like honour of the said commissioners, and also desired them to crave his lordship's letters to like effect. These letters, closed and delivered as the first were, were straightway seized upon and brought to the commissioners, who immediately sent for her, and, the while opening the letters, and understanding the effect, they were, in their minds, well pleased with her; and, therefore, when she fell on her knees before them, and besought their honours to be good unto her husband, and to forgive her, in that she had presumed to write in his behalf, which, she said, was but her bounden duty: they, thinking thereby to have comforted her well, bade her never take thought for him (he was a naughty fellow), saying, they would themselves bestow her much better, and, the rather, for her father's sake, whom they knew right well a man of good service, whom the king favoured well. So she departed from them, and the next day also, about three of the clock at afternoon, she sent one William Manton unto a house without the gates, where he kept himself close, till a mariner, appointed for that purpose, called him up at midnight, and, taking him only into the ship, through God's goodness, set him on land in the morning before day; who, with speed repairing to the lord Cromwell, made discourse of the whole state of his master and the other honest men.*

(1) See Edition, 1563, p. 666.—Ed.

The lord Cromwell's letter to the commissioners at Calais.

Whereupon the said lord Cromwell wrote speedily his letters unto the commissioners, declaring, that the king's majesty's pleasure and commandment was, that the errant traitor and heretic Brook, with a dozen or twenty complices, should, with their accusers, be immediately sent over, that here in England they might receive their judgment, and there, at Calais, to the great terror of like offenders hereafter, suffer according to their demerits.

Now, by the time that the said commissioners had received these letters, they had made out precepts for eight or nine score honest men more to be cast in prison: but these letters so appalled them, that they stayed, and afterwards sent no more to ward. But, making then as diligent inquisition as was possible, to have found some worthy matter against those before named, whereby there might have been some colour both of the council's grievous complaints, and of the commissioners' rigorous dealing; when no such thing could fall out, because they would be assured that they should not go unpunished, they first banished them the town and marches of Calais with a trumpet blown, under pain of death, for a hundred years and a day (if that one day had been left out, all had been marred); and then sent them back to prison: staying them there upon hope that the lord Cromwell should come into captivity sooner than he did.

The thirteen prisoners of Calais sent to London.

But, at last, to wit, on May-day, they sent the thirteen prisoners through the market, the said Brook going before with irons on his legs, as the chief captain, the rest following him, two and two, without irons, unto shipboard, and then were they all coupled in irons, two and two together. Where, because they were loth to go under the hatches, sir John Gage, with a staff, smote some of them cruelly.

The cruelty of a popish persecutor.

Whereupon Anthony Pickering said unto him, "Sir, I beseech you yet be as good to us, as ye would be to your horses or dogs; let us have a little air that we be not smothered." Yet that request could not be obtained, but the hatches were put down close, and they, guarded and kept with a great company of men; and so, sailing forward, by God's merciful providence, were, within four-and-twenty hours at anchor before the Tower of London. *But<sup>1</sup> by the way thitherward, upon what occasion it was not known, whilst the hatch stood open to thentent one of the prisoners might do that nature required, his fellow-prisoner the while, for weariness, lying upon his back and easting his arm over his face, the kettle, with the hot scalding beef-broth, fell down upon the prisoners, namely upon the gown-sleeve of Brook and the boots of Tourney, whereby both the fur of the sleeve, and the leather of the boot, were skorkned and rattled, yet nother the face nor the leg, through God's goodness, hurt; which sight caused their keepers to be amazed, and to say, that surely they were men that God loved, and were wrongfully punished.* And when the lord Cromwell understood they were come, he commanded their irons to be smit off at the Tower wharf, and the prisoners to be brought unto him.

Henry VIII.

A. D. 1540.

When he saw them, he smiled upon them, steadfastly beholding each of them, and then said, "Sirs! you must take pain for a time; go your way to the Fleet, and submit yourselves prisoners there, and shortly you shall know more." So indeed they did; and that evening he sent them word they should be of good cheer, for, if God sent him life, they should shortly go home with as much honesty, as they came with shame.

The prisoners put in the Fleet.

Whilst these thirteen persecuted men lay in the Fleet, and William Stevens in the Tower, to wit, the 28th day of July, A. D. 1540,<sup>1</sup> the aforesaid lord Cromwell, for treason laid against him, was at Tower-hill beheaded, as is before specified in his story, who made there a very christian end. Then had the poor Calais men great cause to fear, if they had not altogether depended on the merciful providence of their heavenly Father, whose blessed will they knew directed all things. But He, in the midst of their deep troubles and miseries, so comforted them, that even as their dangers and troubles increased, so likewise did their consolation and joy in him; so far forth that Matthew de Hound, one of these thirteen, who was in trouble only for that he heard Copen de Hane read a chapter of the New Testament, and was as deep in punishment, and in banishment from his wife, children, and country, as the rest, got, in short time, such instruction, that having therewith a soul and conscience fraught full of godly zeal unto God's glory, and the true doctrine of Christ, within a few months after his deliverance out of the Fleet, for inveighing constantly against the wicked honouring of images, and praying to saints departed, he was cruelly, in a most constant faith and patience, burned in Flanders.

Matthew de Hound afterwards became a blessed martyr of God, and was burned in Flanders.

Now, therefore, when all hope in man was past, the right honourable lord Audeley, lord chancellor of England, without further examination, discharged first the said thirteen that were in the Fleet, and at length, two years after, he delivered William Stevens also, by the king's own motion, out of the Tower; saying, at the discharging of those thirteen, "Sirs! pray for the king's majesty; his pleasure is, that you shall all be presently discharged. And though your livings be taken from you, yet despair not, God will not see you lack. But, for God's sake, sirs, beware how you deal with popish priests; for, so God save my soul! some of them be knaves all. Sirs," said he, "I am commanded by the council to tell you, that you are discharged by virtue of the king's general pardon; but that pardon excepteth and forbiddeth all sacramentaries, and the most part, or all of you, are called sacramentaries: therefore I cannot see how that pardon doth you any pleasure. But pray for the king's highness, for his grace's pleasure is, that I should dismiss you; and so I do, and pity you all. Farewell, sirs!"

So, giving God most hearty thanks for his mighty and merciful delivering of them, they departed dismissed as you have heard, being indeed in very poor estate; but not in so miserable estate as all those eight councillors of Calais were, within one year and a half after. For, whereas the other three councillors who seemed favourable unto them (to wit, the lord Gray, sir George Carew, and sir Richard Grenville), who purged the town of those slanders that untruly were raised upon it, were there-for, for a time, in their prince's high displeasure; within that year they were all three in greater favour with his majesty than ever they were before, and that not without the reward of twenty pounds by year to him and to his heirs, who had least. The other eight councillors, unjustly charging them and the town with sedition and heresy (that is to say, the lord Lisle, the lord Sands, sir John Wallop, sir Edward Kingsly, Robert Fowler, esquire, vice-treasurer; sir Thomas Palmer, knight, called Long Palmer; William Simpson, esquire, under-marshal; and John Rockwood), were either greatly out of their prince's favour, and in the Tower, or else were prisoners, or else by very desperate deaths, in outward appearance, taken out of this world.

For tediousness, I will rehearse but only the horrible end of the said Rockwood, the chief stirrer-up of all the afflictions afore spoken of; who, even to his last breath, staring and raging, cried, he was utterly damned. And being willed to ask God mercy, who was ready to forgive all that asked mercy of him, he brayed and cried out, "All too late, for I have sought maliciously the deaths of a number of the most honest men in the town; and though I so thought them in my heart, yet I did what lay in me to bring them to an evil death: all too late therefore, all too late!" Which same words he answered to one, who, at the departure of the thirteen in irons towards England, said, "Sir! I never saw men of such honesty so sharply corrected, and taking it so patiently and joyfully." Rockwood then, fetching a frisk or two, scoffingly answered, "All too late!" The under-marshal suddenly fell down in the council-chamber, and never spake a word after, nor showed any token of remembrance. The plagues of the others also, as I am credibly informed, were little better.

THE SECOND APPREHENSION OF ADAM DAMLIP; WITH HIS MARTYRDOM.

Concerning Adam Damlip, otherwise called George Bucker, ye heard before declared, how he, being convented before the bishops at Lambeth, and afterwards secretly admonished, and having money given him by his friends to avoid, and not to appear again before the bishops; after he had sent his allegations in writing unto them, departed into the west country, and there continued teaching a school a certain space, about a year or two. After that, the good man was again apprehended by the miserable inquisition of the Six Articles, and brought up to London, where he was, by Stephen Gardiner, commanded into the Marshalsea, and there lay the space of other two years or thereabouts.

See Appendix.

During the imprisonment of this Damlip in the Marshalsea, John Marbeck (as partly ye heard before) was also committed unto the same prison, which was the morrow after Palm Sunday. The manner of that time so required, that at Easter every person must needs come to confession. Whereupon Marbeck, with the rest of the prisoners there, was enforced to come upon Easter-day to sir George Bucker aforesaid, to be confessed, who was then confessor to the whole house. By this occasion John Marbeck, who had never seen him before, entering into conference with him, perceived what he was, what he had been, what troubles he sustained, how long he had lain there in prison, by whom and wherefore; who declared, moreover, his mind to Marbeck, to the effect as followeth: "And now, because," said he, "I think they have forgotten me, I am fully minded to make my humble suit to the bishop of Winchester, in an epistle, declaring therein mine obedience, humble submission, and earnest desire to come to examination. I know the worst: I can but leese my life present, which I had leaver do, than here to remain, and not be suffered to use my talent to God's glory. Wherefore, God willing, I will surely put it in proof."

Henry VIII.

George Bucker, confessor to the prisoners in the Marshalsea.

This Damlip, for honest and godly behaviour, was beloved of all the whole house, but especially of the keeper himself, whose name was Massy, whom he always called master; and being suffered to go at liberty within the house whither he would, he did much good among the common and rascal sort of prisoners, in rebuking vice and sin, and kept them in such good order and awe, that the keeper thought himself to have a great treasure in him. And no less also Marbeck himself confesseth, to have found great comfort by him; for, notwithstanding the straight precept given by the bishop of Winchester, that no man should come to him, nor he to speak with any man, yet the said Adam many times would find the means to come and comfort him.

Damlip well beloved among the prisoners, especially of Massy, the keeper of the Marshalsea.

Now, when he had made and drawn out his epistle, he delivered the same to his master the keeper, upon Saturday in the morning, which was about the second week before Whitsunday following, desiring him to deliver it at the court, to the bishop of Winchester. The keeper said, he would; and so did. The bishop, what quick speed he made for his dispatch I know not, but thus it fell out, as ye shall hear.

Damlip writeth to the bishop of Winchester
See Appendix.

The keeper came home at night very late, and when the prisoners (who had tarried supper for his coming) saw him so sad and heavy, they deemed something to be amiss. At last the keeper, casting up his eyes upon sir George! said, "O George, I can tell thee tidings." "What is that, master?" quoth he. "Upon Monday next thou and I must go to Calais." "To Calais, master? What to do?" "I know not," quoth the keeper: and pulled out of his purse a piece of wax with a little label of parchment hanging out thereat, which seemed to be a precept. And when sir George saw it, he said, "Well, well, master, now I know what the matter is." "What?" quoth the keeper. "Truly, master, I shall die in Calais." "Nay," quoth the keeper, "I trust it to be not so." "Yes, yes, master; it is most true, and I praise God for his goodness therein." And so the keeper and they went together to supper, with heavy cheer for sir George, as they there called him; who, notwithstanding, was merry himself, and did eat his meat as well as ever he did in all his life: insomuch that some at the board said unto him, that they marvelled how he could eat his meat so well, knowing he was so near his death. "Ah, masters!" quoth he, "do you think that I have been God's prisoner so long in the Marshalsea and have not yet 1543.

Upon Saturday next was the day of execution for Damlip. The cause which first they laid to his charge, was for heresy. But, because by an act of parliament all such offences, done before a certain day, were pardoned (through which act he could not be burdened with any thing that he had preached or taught before), yet, for the receiving of the aforesaid French crown of cardinal Pole (as you heard before), he was condemned of treason, and in Calais cruelly put to death; being drawn, hanged, and quartered.

The day before his execution, came unto him one Master Mote, then parson of our Lady's church in Calais, saying, "Your four quarters shall be hanged at four parts of the town." "And where shall my head be?" said Damlip. "Upon the Lantern gate," said Mote. Then Damlip answered, "Then shall I not need to provide for my burial." At his death, sir Ralph Ellerker knight, then knight-marshal there, would not suffer the innocent and godly man to declare either his faith, or the cause he died for, but said to the executioner, "Dispatch the knave; have done!" For sir William Mote, appointed there to preach, declared to the people, how he had been a sower of heretical doctrine; and albeit he was for that pardoned by the general pardon, yet he was condemned for being a traitor against the king. To the which when Adam Damlip would have replied and purged himself, the aforesaid sir Ralph Ellerker would not suffer him to speak a word, but commanded him to be had away. And so, most meekly, patiently, and joyfully, the blessed and innocent martyr took his death, sir Ralph Ellerker saying, that he would not away before he saw the traitor's heart out. But, shortly after, the said sir Ralph Ellerker, in a skirmish or rout between the Frenchmen and us at Boulogne, was, among others, slain; whose only death sufficed not his enemies, but after they had stripped him stark naked, they shamefully mutilated him, and cut the heart out of his body; and so left him a terrible example to all bloody and merciless men. For no cause was known why they showed such indignation against the said sir Ralph Ellerker, more than against the rest, but that it is written, "Faciens justitias Dominus et judicia, omnibus injuria pressis;" *and<sup>3</sup> because his innocent blood, as Abel's, cried unto God.

Our Lord grant unto the like offenders grace, speedily, by that lively and terrible example, either heartily to repent, or else give like profitable example to such as would not be warned by other men's evils.*

As touching John Butler, and sir Daniel his curate, imprisoned (as ye heard) the same day with Damlip, upon Sunday next following they were committed to John Massy aforesaid, keeper of the Marshalsea, and his company, and brought to the Marshalsea, where he and his curate continued nine months and more. At last, being sore laid unto by sir George Gage, sir John Baker, and sir Thomas Arundel, knights, but especially by Stephen Gardiner, bishop of Winchester, for the retaining of Adam Damlip, yet, by friends soliciting the king's highness for him (namely sir Leonard Musgrave, and his brother Baunster, who were bound for his appearance in a thousand pounds), he, at length, by great labour and long time, was discharged, and, at last, by license permitted to return to Calais again.<sup>1</sup>

Furthermore, as touching William Stevens above mentioned, who remained all this while prisoner in the Tower, the same was also condemned with Adam Damlip of treason; which was, for note and crime of popery, in lodging Adam Damlip the traitor, who came from cardinal Pole, in his house, at the lord deputy's commandment. Notwithstanding, the king afterward, understanding more of the said William Stevens, how innocent he was from that crime, being known to all men to be an earnest and zealous protestant, gave him his pardon, and sent him home again to Calais; and so, likewise, all the other thirteen above mentioned.

THE STORY OF A POOR LABOURING MAN, AND ALSO OF ONE TODD, A SCOTCHMAN, BURNED IN CALAIS.

See Addenda.

By the credible information and writing of the said Calais men, who were then in trouble, it is reported of a certain poor labouring man of Calais, that after the preaching of Adam Damlip, being in a certain company, he said that he would never believe that a priest could make the Lord's body at his pleasure. Whereupon he was then accused, and also condemned by one Harvey, commissary there; which Harvey, in time of his judgment inveighing against him with opprobrious words, said, that he was a heretic, and should die a vile death. The poor man (whose name yet I have not certainly learned), answering for himself again, said that he was no heretic, but was in the faith of Christ: "And whereas thou sayest," said he, "that I shall die a vile death, thou thyself shalt die a viler death, and that shortly." And so it came to pass; for, within half a year after, the said Harvey was hanged, drawn, and quartered, for treason, in the said town of Calais.

A notable example of God's judgement upon a bloody persecutor.

After the burning of this poor man, there was also another certain scholar, counted to be a Scotchman, named Todd, who, coming out of Germany, was there taken with certain German books about him; and, being examined thereupon, and standing constantly to the truth that he had learned, was therefore condemned to death, and there burned in the said town of Calais, within the space of a year, or thereabouts, after the other godly martyr above mentioned.

THE STORY OF WILLIAM CROSSBOWMAKER, BEARING A BILLET IN CALAIS.

And, forasmuch as I am presently in hand with matters of Calais, I cannot pass from thence without the memory of another certain honest man of the same township, named William Button, alias Crossbowmaker; although the time of this story is a little more ancient in years: which story is this.

William Crossbowmaker's question.

William Crossbowmaker, a soldier of Calais, and the king's servant, being a man (as some natures be) somewhat pleasantly disposed, used, when he met with priests, to demand of them certain merry questions of pastime; as these: Whether, if a man were suddenly taken, and wanted another thing, he might not without offence occupy one of the pope's pardons instead of a broken paper?

Another question was, Whether in the world might better be wanting, dogs or priests? And if it were answered that dogs might rather be spared; to that he would reply again and infer, that if there were no dogs, we could make no more; but if there lacked ignorant priests, we might soon, and too soon, make too many of them.

It happened in the time of Dr. Darly, parson of our Lady's church in Calais, being commissary there for archbishop Warham, there came a black friar to Calais with the pope's pardons, who, for four pence, would deliver a soul out of purgatory. The friar was full of Romish virtues, for what money came for pardons by day, he bought no land with it at night. This aforesaid William Button, alias Crossbowmaker, coming to the pardoner, and pretending that he would deliver his father and friends' souls, asked, if the holy father the pope could deliver souls out of purgatory? The friar said, "There is no doubt of that." "Why then," quoth Button, "doth not he, of charity, deliver all the souls thereout?" Of which words he was accused to the commissary; who, at his appearing before the said commissary, confessed to have asked such questions. The commissary, being angry thereat, said, "Doubtest thou thereof, thou heretic?" There was standing by a black friar named Capel, an Englishman, who said to the commissary, "There be ten thousand of these heretics between Gravelines and Triers." Button answered, "Master friar! of all men you may keep silence; for your coat hath been twice cut off from the faith. The first time your order was enjoined to have your black coat shorter than your white; and, for the second time, your order must go to the furthest part of their church, and there sing an anthem of our Lady."<sup>(1)</sup> The commissary chafed at these words, calling Button "heretic," with many other opprobrious words. Then said Button to the commissary, "If your holy father the pope may deliver souls out of purgatory, and will not of charity deliver them, then, I would to God the king would make me pope, and I would surely deliver all out without money." At these words the commissary raged, and reviled Button exceedingly, causing him to bear a billet, and procured his wages (which were six pence a day) to be taken from him. Then went Button to the king's majesty, declaring all the whole matter to his grace, who sent him to Calais again, and gave him after that eight pence a day.

Heresy, to doubt of the pope's charity.

(1) This anthem the black friars were enjoined to sing every night to our Lady, in praise of her conception.

A NOTABLE EXAMPLE, WHEREIN MAY APPEAR AS WELL THE DESPITE OF DR. LONDON AND OTHER PAPISTS AGAINST THE GOSPELLERS, AS ALSO THE FIDELITY OF A MATRON TOWARDS HER HUSBAND.

Forasmuch as mention was made a little before of Dr. London, we will somewhat more add of him, because the matter seemeth neither impertinent nor unfruitful, to the intent it may more evidently appear, what truth and trust is to be looked for of this cruel kind of papists. This Dr. London was warden of New college in Oxford, where it happened that certain plate was stolen, and conveyed and brought up to London, and sold to a goldsmith, named William Callaway. This Callaway was a man of good and honest name and reputation among his neighbours, but especially earnest and zealous towards the gospel, and a great maintainer thereof. He had, oftentimes before, bought much plate of the same man without any peril or danger: wherefore, he doubted the less of his fidelity.<sup>1</sup>

Cruel malice of Dr. London.

William Callaway goldsmith of London.

At last the principal of the theft being taken,<sup>2</sup> and the goldsmith also, that was the buyer, being known, Dr. London, when he understood him to be a favourer of the gospel (whereof he himself was an extreme adversary), began straightways to be in a rage, and to swear great and deep oaths, that he would spare neither labour nor cost, but would bring the goldsmith to the gallows, although it should cost him five hundred pounds. To be short, this good goldsmith was arraigned as accessory, and an action of felony brought against him. He, contrariwise alleged, that they ought not to proceed against him, the principal being alive. Dr. London, on the contrary part, affirmed that the principal was hanged; which was most false, for he was one of the same college, and was alive, and but lately set at liberty. To be brief, he being found guilty, the judge asked him what he could allege why he should not die? He required to have the privilege of his book according to the ancient custom and manner. But here it was objected against him that he was "bigamus,"<sup>3</sup> and therefore he might not have his book by the law: notwithstanding that, he never had two wives; but, because his wife had two husbands, it was imputed to him for bigamy.

Callaway claimeth the privilege of his book.

Thus this good goldsmith, being secluded from all hope of life by the crafty spite of his malignant adversaries, his wife, being a woman of proved honesty and good fame, came in before the judges; and, perceiving her former marriage to be hurtful unto her husband, to save her husband's life, she took an oath before the judges that she was not "bigama," and that she was never married to more men than to the said goldsmith: and, although she had children by her other husband, and continued divers years with him, yet she sware that she was never married unto him. Thus this woman, by defaming of herself, to her great praise and singular example of love, delivered her innocent husband; thinking it better for her to live with ignominy and reproach, than for her husband to die; less esteeming the loss of her good name, than of his life.<sup>1</sup>

As touching the quality of this fact or perjury, I intermeddle not here to discuss, but leave it at large to the judgment of lawyers to define upon. Truth it is, that perjury neither in man nor woman is to be commended, neither ought it to be defended. But yet, the true heart and faithful love between this man and his wife, counterpoising again as much or more on the other side, the more rare and strange I see it in many couples now-a-days, the more I think it worthy, not only to be praised, but also, for example's sake, to be notified. But, in the mean time, what shall we say to these priests and adversaries, who, in such sort violently do press and force the poor sheep of Christ, with peril of their conscience, unto such perjury; and that, in such causes, where no such truth is sought, but innocency oppressed, true religion persecuted, and only their spite and wrath against God's word wreaked.

QUALIFICATIONS OF THE ACT OF THE SIX ARTICLES.

During the time of these six articles aforesaid, which brought many good men unto death, yet so it happened by another contrary act, set forth before for the king's supremacy (as ye have heard), that the contrary sect also of the papists was not all in quiet. For, besides the death of More, and the bishop of Rochester, and the other Charterhouse monks, friars, and priests above specified, about this year, also, were condemned and executed by the same law two others, of whom one was a priest of Chelsea, named Lark, who was put to death at London for defending the bishop of Rome's supremacy above the king's authority: the other was Germain Gardiner (near kinsman to Stephen Gardiner, and yet more near to his secret counsel, as it is supposed), who, likewise, in practising for the pope against the king's jurisdiction, was taken with the manner, and so brought unto the gibbet.

Suspicion against Stephen Gardiner.

Upon the detection of this Germain Gardiner, being secretary to Gardiner bishop of Winchester, his kinsman, it seemed to some, and so was also insinuated unto the king not to be unlike, but that the said Germain neither would, nor durst, ever attempt any such matter of popery, without some setting on or consent of the bishop, he being so near unto him, and to all his secrets, as he was. Whereby the king began somewhat more to smell and misdoubt the doings of the bishop; but yet the bishop so covertly and clearly conveyed his matters, playing under the board, after his wonted fetches, in such sort that (I cannot tell how) he still kept in with the king, to the great inquietation of the public state of the realm, and especially of Christ's church.

In declaring the dreadful law, before set forth, of the Six Articles, which was A. D. 1539,<sup>2</sup> ye heard what penalty was appointed for the breach of the same, in like case as in treason and felony; so that no remedy of any recantation would serve. This severity was a little mitigated by another parliament, holden afterwards, A.D. 1543 by which parliament it was decreed,<sup>1</sup> that such offenders as were convicted in the said articles for the first time, should be admitted to recant and renounce their opinions. And if the party refused to recant in such form as should be laid unto him by his ordinary, or, after his recantation, if he eftsoons offended again, then, for the second time, he should be admitted to abjure and bear a faggot; which if he deny to do, or else, being abjured, if he the third time offended, then he to sustain punishment according to the law, &c. Although the straightness and rigour of the former act was thus somewhat tempered, as ye see, and reformed by this present parliament, yet, notwithstanding, the venom and poison of the errors and mischief of those articles remained still behind; not removed, but rather confirmed by this parliament aforesaid. By the same parliament, moreover, many things were provided for the advancement of popery, under the colour of religion; so that all manner of books of the Old and New Testament, bearing the name of William Tyndale, or any others, having prologues, or containing any matters, annotations, preambles, words, or sentences, contrary to the six articles, were debarred. In like manner all songs, plays, and interludes, with all other books in English, containing matter of religion tending any way against the said articles, were abolished.

(1) Ex Ed. Hallo.

(2) Foxe again says A. D. 1540. See page 502, note 4.—Ed.

Henry VIII.
A. D. 1544.
The rigour of the six articles a little tempered.

In the same parliament, furthermore, it was provided, that the text of the New Testament, or of the Bible, being prohibited to all women, artificers, prentices, journeymen, servingmen, yeomen, husbandmen, and labourers; yet was permitted, notwithstanding, to noblemen, and gentlemen, and gentlewomen, to read and peruse, to their edifying, so that they did it quietly, without arguing, discussing, or expounding upon the Scripture.

Over and besides, whereas before, the offender or defendant might not be suffered to bring in any witnesses to purge and try himself, in this parliament it was permitted to the party detected or complained of, to try his cause by witnesses, as many, or more in number, as the others who deposed against him, &c.

After this parliament, moreover, followed another parliament, A.D. 1544, wherein other qualifications, more special, of the six articles were provided: that whereas before, the cruel statute of the six articles was so straight, that if any of the king's subjects had been complained of by any manner of person, as well being his enemy as otherwise, he should be indicted presently upon the same, without any further examination or knowledge given to the party so accused; and so thereupon to be attached, committed, and in fine to be condemned: it was, therefore, by this parliament provided, that all such presentments and indictments should not be brought before the commissioners, otherwise than by the oaths of twelve men, or more, of honesty and credit, without corruption or malice accordingly.

Other qualifications of the act of the Six Articles

Item, That no such indictments or presentments should be taken, but within one year of the offences committed; or else the said indictments to stand void in the law.

Item, That no person accused upon any such offence against the six articles, should be attached, or committed to ward, before he were thereof indicted, unless by special warrant from the king.

Item, By the authority of the said parliament, it was considered and enacted, that if any preacher or reader, for any word spoken, supposed to be against the six articles, should be accused, but not within the space of forty days of the said his reading or preaching, then the party accused to be acquitted.

Item, That the justices or inquirers of such presentments should have full power to alter and reform all panels of inquiry returned before them, in like manner as the justices of peace may do in their sessions, upon any other inquiries.

Item, That the party so accused or indicted, upon his trial, may have all manner of challenges (peremptory only excepted), as other persons arraigned for felony may have, by the laws of this realm.<sup>1</sup>

By these qualifications and moderations of the six articles, it may appear that the king began somewhat to grow out of favour with Stephen Gardiner, and to discredit his doings, whereby he was the more forward to incline somewhat in furthering the desolate cause of religion, as may appear both by these premises, and also by other provisions and determinations of the aforesaid parliament, A. D. 1544, wherein it was decreed by act of parliament, that the king should have full power and authority to appoint thirty-two persons; to wit, sixteen of the clergy, and sixteen of the temporality, to peruse, oversee, and examine the canons, constitutions and ordinances of the canon law, as well provincial as synodal; and so, according to their discretions, to set and establish an order of ecclesiastical laws, such as should be thought by the king and them convenient to be received and used within this realm: which statute, as it is most needful for the government of the church of England, so, would God it had been brought to perfection!

for examination of the canon law.

In this year, touching matters of history, we read no great thing worthy of memory, but only of two persons, John Athy<sup>2</sup> and John Heywood. Of which two, we find first John Athy to be indicted by the king's writ for certain words against the sacrament, which words in the indictment are specified to be these: "That he would not believe in the thing which the knave priest made, neither in that which Long's wife selleth; but only in God that is in heaven. And, when it was told him that God, through his word, could make it flesh and blood, he answered, 'So he might, if he would, turn it into a chicken's leg;' meaning the sacrament of the altar."

The same year also followed the recantation of John Heywood; who although he was attached for treason, for denying the king's supremacy, yet, using the clemency of the king, upon his better reformation and amendment, he made an open and solemn recantation in the face of all the people, abandoning and renouncing the pope's usurped supremacy, and confessing the king to be chief supreme head and governor of this church of England, all foreign authority and jurisdiction being excluded. The tenor and effect of whose recantation here followeth.

The Recantation of John Heywood.<sup>3</sup>

I am come hither at this time, good people! willingye and of mine own desyrouse suit, to show and declare unto you briefly, first of all, the great and inestimable clemency and mercifulness of my most sovereign and redoubted prince the king's majesty, the which his highness hath most graciously used towards me a wretch, most justly and worthily condemned to die for my manifold and outrageous offences, heinously and traitorously committed against his majesty and his laws. For, whereas his majesty's supremacy hath so often been opened unto me, both by writing and speaking (if I had had grace either to open mine eyes to see it, or mine ears to hear it), to be surely and certainly grounded and established upon the very true word of God, yet, for lack of grace, I have most wilfully and obstinately suffered myself to fall to such blindness, that I have not only thought that the bishop of Rome hath been, and ought to be, taken the chief and supreme head of the universal church of Christ in earth; but also, like no true subject, concealed and favoured such as I have known or thought to be of the same opinion. For the which most detestable treasons and untruths, I here most humbly, and with all my heart, first of all axe the king's majesty forgiveness, and secondarily all the world; beseeching all these that either now do, or hereafter shall, hear of these my great transgressions, to take this mine example for an instruction for them to call for grace, that they thereby be stayed from falling at any time into such miserable blindness and folly.

Moreover, here, afore God and you (good christian people), I do utterly, and with all my heart, recant and revoke all mine aforesaid erroneous and traitorous opinions. And (as my conscience now doth force) I do protest that even with my heart I firmly think, and undoubtedly believe, that the bishop of Rome neither now hath, nor at any time hath had, or can have, by any law of God or man, any more authority, without the precinct of his own country about him, than any other bishop hath without his own diocese. Whereby I assuredly take the abolishing of the pretended and usurped power or authority of the bishop of Rome out of this realm, to be done most justly and truly by the law of God. And also I take our sovereign lord the king's highness to be supreme head, immediately next under Christ, of the church of England and Ireland, and all other his grace's dominions, both of the spirituality and the temporality. And I confess not only that his majesty so is by the law of God; but also his progenitors, kings of this realm, so have been; and his highness's heirs and successors, kings of this realm, so shall be.

Thus have I showed you my mind as well as I can, but neither so well as I would, nor so full as I should, namely concerning the multitude of mercy which my most gracious prince hath showed toward me, not only for saving my body after worthy condemnation to death, as is aforesaid, but, also, for saving my soul from perishing, if my body had perished before the receiving of such wholesome counsel as I had at his highness's most charitable assignment. And of this confession declared unto you (I say as far forth as I can), I heartily pray you all to bear me record, and most entirely to pray Almighty God for long and most prosperous estate of our sovereign lord, the king's majesty, in all his affairs and proceedings.

By me, John Heywood.

In the year aforesaid, 1544, as there was no other thing done in England worthy to be noted, so now the order of story here requireth, by the course of years, next to infer the discourse of the troubles and persecutions which happened in Scotland against Master George Wisheart and divers other good men of the same country, about the same year of our Lord 1544, and somewhat before.<sup>1</sup> But, because we are now come to the latter end almost of king Henry's reign, we will make an end (the Lord willing) with a few

Kerby, and Roger Clarke, of Suffolk, Martyrs.

A bill brought to lord Wentworth, at the arraignment.

The words of Wingfield to Kerby and Roger.

The answer of Kerby to Master Wingfield.

The behaviour of Kerby and Roger when brought before the judges.

Questions propounded to them.

Coming now to the year of our Lord 1545, first passing over the priest, whose name was Saxy, who was hanged in the porter's lodge of Stephen Gardiner, bishop of Winchester, and that, as it is supposed, not without the consent of the said bishop and the secret conspiracy of that bloody generation ; to pass over also one Henry, with his servant, burned at Colchester ; I will now proceed to the story of Kerby, and of Roger Clarke of Mendelsham, who were apprehended at Ipswich, A. D. 1545, the Friday before Gang-Monday, and brought before the lord Wentworth, with other commissioners appointed there to sit upon their examinations, judgments, and causes. The night before they were arraigned, a bill was set upon the town-house door (by whom, it was unknown), and brought the next day unto the lord Wentworth ; who answered, that it was good counsel : which bill, in the latter end, shall appear.

In the mean time Kerby and Roger being in the jailor's house, named John Bird, an honest and a good man (who had cheeks divers times at the bar, that he was more meet to be kept, than to be a keeper), came in Master Robert Wingfield, son and heir of Humfrey Wingfield, knight, with Master Bruess of Wenham ; who then, having conference with Kerby (being then in a several chamber separate from the other), Master Wingfield said to Kerby, "Remember the fire is hot, take heed of thine enterprise, that thou take no more upon thee, than thou shalt be able to perform. The terror is great, the pain will be extreme, and life is sweet. Better it were betimes to stick to mercy, while there is hope of life, than rashly to begin, and then to shrink ;" with such like words of persuasion. To whom he answered again, "Ah, Master Wingfield ! be at my burning, and you shall say, there standeth a christian soldier in the fire. For I know that fire and water, sword, and all other things, are in the hands of God, and he will suffer no more to be laid upon us, than he will give us strength to bear." "Ah, Kerby !" said Master Wingfield, "if thou be at that point, I will bid thee farewell ; for, I promise thee, I am not so strong that I am able to burn." And so both the gentlemen, saying that they would pray for them, shook hands with them, and so departed.

Now first, touching the behaviour of Kerby and Roger when they came to the judgment-seat, the lord Wentworth with all the rest of the justices there ready, the commissary also, by virtue of the statute "ex officio," sitting next to the lord Wentworth, but one between ; Kerby and Roger lifted up their eyes and hands to heaven with great devotion in all men's eyes, making their prayers secretly to God for a space of time, while they might say the Lord's Prayer five or six times. That done, their articles were declared unto them with all circumstances of the law : and then it was demanded and inquired of them, Whether they believed, that after the words spoken by a priest (as Christ spake them to his apostles), there were not the very body and blood of Christ, flesh, blood, and bone, as he was born of the Virgin Mary, and no bread after?

Henry VIII.

A. D. 1545.

Unto the which words they answered and said, No, they did not so believe; but that they did believe the sacrament which Christ Jesus did institute at his last supper, on Maunday Thursday at night, to his disciples, was only to put all men in remembrance of his precious death and blood-shedding for the remission of sins; and that there was neither flesh nor blood to be eaten with the teeth, but bread and wine; and yet more than bread and wine, for that it is consecrated to a holy use. Then, with much persuasions, both with fair means and threats besides (if it would have served), were these two poor men hardly laid to; but most at the hands of Foster, an inferior justice, not being learned in such knowledge. But these two continued both faithful and constant, choosing rather to die than to live; and so continued unto the end.

Their answer.

The sacrament more than bare bread and wine.

Foster a sore enemy to God's people.

Then sentence was given upon them both, Kerby to be burned in the said town on the next Saturday, and Roger to be burned at Bury the Gang-Monday after. Kerby, when his judgment was given by the lord Wentworth, with most humble reverence holding up his hands and bowing himself devoutly, he said, "Praised be Almighty God;" and so stood still without any more words.

Sentence given against Kerby and Roger.

Then did the lord Wentworth talk secretly, putting his head behind another justice that sat between them. The said Roger, perceiving that, said with a loud voice, "Speak out, my lord! and if ye have done any thing contrary to your conscience, ask God mercy; and we, for our parts, do forgive you: and speak not in secret, for ye shall come before a Judge, and then make answer openly, even before him that shall judge all men;" with other like words.

Roger's word to the lord Wentworth.

The lord Wentworth, somewhat blushing, and changing his countenance (through remorse, as it was thought), said, "I did speak nothing of you, nor have I done any thing unto you, but as the law is." Then were Kerby and Roger sent forth; Kerby to prison there, and Roger to St. Edmund's Bury. One of the two, bursting out with a loud voice (Roger it is supposed), thus spake with a vehemency, "Fight," said he, "for your God; for he hath not long to continue."

A prophecy.

The next day, which was Saturday, about ten of the clock, Kerby was brought to the market-place, where a stake was ready, wood, broom, and straw, and did off his clothes unto his shirt, having a nightcap upon his head; and so was fastened to the stake with irons, there being in the gallery the lord Wentworth, with the most part of all the justices of those quarters, where they might see his execution, how every thing should be done, and also might hear what Kerby did say; and a great number of people, about two thousand by estimation. There was also standing in the gallery by the lord Wentworth Dr. Rugham, who was before a monk of Bury, and sexton of the house, having on a surplice, and a stole about his neck. Then silence was proclaimed, and the said doctor began to disallow himself not meet to declare the holy Scriptures, being unprovided because the time was so short; but that he hoped, in God's assistance, it should come well to pass.

All this while Kerby was trimming with irons and faggots, broom and straw, as one that should be married with new garments, nothing changing cheer nor countenance, but with a most meek spirit glorified God; which was wonderful to behold. Then master doctor, at last, entered into the sixth chapter of St. John, who, in handling that matter, so oft as he alleged the Scriptures, and applied them rightly, Kerby told the people that he said true, and bade the people believe him. But, when he did otherwise, he told him again, "You say not true; believe him not, good people." Whereupon, as the voice of the people was, they judged Dr. Rugham a false prophet. So when master doctor had ended his collation, he said unto Kerby, "Thou, good man! dost not thou believe that the blessed sacrament of the altar is the very flesh and blood of Christ, and no bread, even as he was born of the Virgin Mary?" Kerby, answering boldly, said, "I do not so believe." "How dost thou believe?" said the doctor. Kerby said, "I do believe that in the sacrament that Jesus Christ instituted at his last supper, on Maunday Thursday, to his disciples (which ought of us likewise to be done), is the death and passion, and his blood-shedding for the redemption of the world, to be remembered: and (as I said before) yet bread, and more than bread; for that it is consecrated to a holy use." Then was master doctor in his dumps, and spake not one word more to Kerby after.

Then said the undersheriff to Kerby, "Hast thou any thing more to say?" "Yea, sir," said he, "if you will give me leave." "Say on," said the sheriff.

Then Kerby, taking his nightcap from his head, was putting it under his arm, as though it should have done him service again; but, remembering himself, he cast it from him, and lifting up his hands, he said the hymn Te Deum, and the Belief, with other prayers in the English tongue. The lord Wentworth, whilst Kerby was thus doing, did shroud himself behind one of the posts of the gallery, and wept, and so did many other. Then said Kerby, "I have done: you may execute your office, good Master Sheriff." Then was fire set to the wood, and with a loud voice he called unto God, knocking on his breast, and holding up his hands, so long as remembrance would serve, and so ended his life; the people giving shouts, and praising God, with great admiration of his constancy, being so simple and unlettered.

On the Gang-Monday, A. D. 1545, about ten of the clock, Roger Clarke of Mendesham was brought out of prison, and went on foot to the gate, called Southgate, in Bury, and, by the way, the procession met with them; but he went on, and would not bow cap, nor knee, but with most vehement words rebuked that idolatry and superstition, the officers being much offended. And without the gate, where was the place of execution, the stake being ready, and the wood lying by, he came, and kneeled down, and said 'Magnificat' in the English tongue, making as it were a paraphrase upon the same, wherein he declared how that the blessed Virgin Mary, who might as well rejoice in pureness, as any others, yet humbled herself to her Saviour. "And what sayest thou, John Baptist," said he, "the greatest of all men's children?" Behold the Lamb of God, which take away the sins of the world.'"<sup>1</sup> And thus, with a loud voice, he cried unto the people, while he was in fastening unto the stake, and then the fire was set to him, where he suffered pains unmercifully; for the wood was green, and would not burn; so that he was choked with smoke. And, moreover, being set in a pitch-barrel, with some pitch sticking still by the sides, he was therewith sore pained, till he had got his feet out of the barrel. And, at length, one standing by took a faggot-stick, and striking at the ring of iron about his neck, so pashed him, and struck him belike upon the head, that he shrank down on the one side into the fire; and so was dissolved.<sup>2</sup>

Henry VIII.

A. D. 1545.

His painful burning and martyrdom.

In the beginning of this story of Kerby and Roger, mention was made of a certain bill put upon the Town-house door, and brought the next day to the lord Wentworth, the words of which bill were these.

The Bill set upon the Town-house Door in Ipswich, the Night before Kerby and Roger were condemned.

'Justè judicate filii hominum:' yet, when ye shall judge, minister your justice with mercy.

'A fearful thing it is, to fall into the hands of the living God:' be ye learned, therefore, in true knowledge, ye that judge the earth; lest the Lord be angry with you.

'The blood of the righteous shall be required at your hands.' What though the veil hanged before Moses' face; yet at Christ's death it fell down.

'The stones will speak, if these should hold their peace:' therefore harden not your hearts against the verity.

For fearfully shall the Lord appear in the day of vengeance to the troubled in conscience. No excuse shall there be of ignorance, but every fat shall stand on his own bottom. Therefore have remorse in your conscience; fear him that may kill both body and soul.

Beware of innocent blood-shedding; take heed of justice ignorantly ministered; work discreetly as the Scripture doth command: look to it, that ye make not the truth to be forsaken.

We beseech God to save our king, king Henry the Eighth, that he be not led into temptation. So be it.

This year also it was ordained and decreed, and solemnly given out in proclamation, by the king's name and authority, and his council, that the English procession should be used throughout all England, according as it was set forth by his said council, and none other to be used throughout the whole realm.

About the latter end of this year, 1545, in the month of November, when the king had subdued the Scots, and afterwards, joining together with the emperor, had invaded France, and had got from them the town of Boulogne, he summoned his high court of parliament. In that was granted unto him, besides other subsidies of money, all colleges, chantries, free chapels, hospitals, fraternities, brotherhoods, guilds, and perpetuities of stipendiary priests, to be disposed of at his will and pleasure.<sup>3</sup> Whereupon, in the month of December following, the king, after the wonted custom, came into the parliament-house to give his royal assent to such acts as were there passed; where, after an eloquent oration made to him by the speaker, he, answering again unto the same, not by the lord chancellor (as the manner was), but by himself, uttered forth this oration, word for word, as it is reported and left in story.

In the contents of which oration, first, eloquently and lovingly, he declared his grateful heart to his loving subjects for their grants and subventions, offered unto him. In the second part, with no less vehemency he exhorteth them to concord, peace and unity. Whereunto if he had also joined the third part, that is, as in words he exhorted to unity, so he had begun indeed first himself to take away the occasion of division, disobedience, and disturbance from his subjects; that is, had removed the stumbling-block of the Six Articles out of the people's way, which set brother against brother, neighbour against neighbour, the superior against the subject, and the wolves to devour the poor flock of Christ: then, had he not only spoken, but also done, like a worthy prince. But of this, more shall be said in the sequel hereof, God willing.

The King's Oration in the Parliament-House.

Although my chancellor for the time being hath, before this time, used very eloquently and substantially to make answer to such orations as have been set forth in this high court of parliament, yet is he not so able to open and set forth my mind and meaning, and the secrets of my heart, in so plain and ample manner as I myself am, and can do. Wherefore I, taking upon me to answer your eloquent oration, Master Speaker! say, that whereas you, in the name of our well-beloved Commons, have both praised and extolled me for the notable qualities that you have conceived to be in me, I most heartily thank you all that you put me in remembrance of my duty, which is, to endeavour myself to obtain and get such excellent qualities and necessary virtues, as a prince or governor should or ought to have; of which gifts I recognise myself both bare and barren.

But for such small qualities as God hath endued me withal, I render to his goodness my most humble thanks, intending, with all my wit and diligence, to get and acquire to me such notable virtues and princely qualities, as you have alleged to be incorporate in my person.

The king's thanks to his commons.

Promises the well bestowing of chantries and colleges.

These thanks for your loving admonition and good counsel first remembered, I eftsoons thank you again, because that you, considering our great charges (not for our pleasure, but for your defence; not for our gain, but to our great cost), which we have lately sustained, as well in defence against our and your enemies, as for the conquest of that fortress, which was to this realm most displeasent and noisome, and shall be, by God's grace, hereafter to our nation most profitable and pleasant, have freely, of your own mind, granted to us a certain subsidy here in an act specified; which, verily, we take in good part, regarding more your kindness than the profit thereof, as he that setteth more by your loving hearts, than by your substance. Besides this hearty kindness, I cannot a little rejoice, when I consider the perfect trust and sure confidence which you have put in me, as men having undoubted hope, and unfeigned belief, in my good doings and just proceedings; for that you, without my desire or request, have committed to mine order and disposition all chantries, colleges, hospitals, and other places specified in a certain act, firmly trusting that I will order them to the glory of God, and the profit of our commonwealth. Surely if I, contrary to your expectation, should suffer the ministers of the church to decay; or learning, which is so great a jewel, to be minished; or poor and miserable people to be unrelieved; you might say that I, being put in so special a trust as I am in this case, were no trusty friend to you, nor charitable man to mine even-christened, neither a lover of the public wealth, nor yet one that feared God, to whom account must be rendered of all our doings. Doubt not, I pray you, but your expectation shall be served more godly and goodly than you will wish or desire, as hereafter you shall plainly perceive.

Now, since I find such kindness on your part towards me, I cannot choose but love and favour you, affirming that no prince in the world more favoureth his subjects than I do you, nor any subjects or commons more love and obey their sovereign lord, than I perceive you do me, for whose defence my treasure shall not be hidden, nor, if necessity require, shall my person be unadventured. Yet, although I with you, and you with me, be in this perfect love and concord, this friendly amity cannot continue, except you, my lords temporal, and you, my lords spiritual, and you, my loving subjects, study and take pains to amend one thing, which is surely amiss and far out of order, to the which I most heartily require you; which is, that charity and concord is not among you, but discord and dissension beareth rule in every place. St. Paul saith to the Corinthians, in the thirteenth chapter, 'Charity is gentle, charity is not envious, charity is not proud,' and so forth, in the said chapter. Behold then what love and charity<sup>1</sup> is amongst you, when the one calleth the other heretic, and anabaptist; and he calleth him again papist, hypocrite, and pharisee. Be these tokens of charity amongst you? Are these the signs of fraternal love between you? No, no, I assure you that this lack of charity amongst yourselves will be the hindrance and assuaging of the fervent love between us, as I said before, except this wound be salved and clearly made whole. I must needs judge the fault and occasion of this discord to be partly by the negligence of you, the fathers and preachers of the spirituality. For if I know a man which liveth in adultery, I must judge him a lecherous and carnal person. If I see a man boast and brag himself, I cannot but deem him a proud man. I see and hear daily, that you of the clergy preach one against another, teach one contrary to another, inveigh one against another, without charity or discretion. Some be too stiff in their old 'mumpsimus,' others be too busy and curious in their new 'sumpsimus.'

Thus all men almost be in variety and discord, and few or none do preach truly and sincerely the word of God, according as they ought to do. Shall I now judge you charitable persons doing this? No, no, I cannot so do. Alas! how can the poor souls live in concord, when you preachers sow amongst them, in your sermons, debate and discord? Of you they look for light, and you bring them to darkness. Amend these crimes, I exhort you, and set forth God's word,<sup>2</sup> both by true preaching and good example-giving; or else I, whom God hath appointed his vicar and high minister here, will see these divisions extinct, and these enormities corrected, according to my very duty; or else I am an unprofitable servant, and an untrue officer.

Although (as I say) the spiritual men be in some fault, that charity is not kept amongst you, yet you of the temporality be not clean and unspotted of malice and envy; for you rail on bishops, speak slanderously of priests, and rebuke and taunt preachers, both, contrary to good order and christian fraternity. If you know surely that a bishop or preacher erreth, or teacheth perverse doctrine, come and declare it to some of our council, or to us, to whom is committed by God, the authority to reform and order such causes and behaviours; and be not judges<sup>3</sup> yourselves of your own fantastical opinions and vain expositions, for in such high causes ye may lightly err. And although you be permitted to read holy Scripture,<sup>4</sup> and to have the word of God in your mother tongue, you must understand that it is licensed you so to do, only to inform your own conscience, and to instruct your children and family; and not to dispute and make Scripture a railing and a taunting stock against priests and preachers, as many light persons do. I am very sorry to know and hear how unreverently that most precious jewel, the word of God, is disputed, rhymed, sung,<sup>5</sup> and jangled in every alehouse and tavern, contrary to the true meaning and doctrine of the same: and yet I am even as much sorry that the readers of the same follow it, in doing, so faintly and coldly. For of this I am

(1) Charity and concord, in commonwealths, be things most necessary: but, in matters of religion, charity and concord be not enough, without verity and true worship of God. If true religion had been maintained and error reformed, these terms of variance had not need now to be reprov'd.

(2) And wherein else consisteth all this variance, but only because God's word hath not its free course, but that those who set it forth, are condemned and therefore burned.

(3) This can touch none but only the papists, who will needs be both accusers, and also judges in their own opinions and causes.

(4) How are they permitted to hear God's word, when no one is permitted to read it under the degree of a gentleman.

(5) St. Jerome wisheth the Scriptures not only to be read of all men, but also to be sung of women at their rocks, of ploughmen at the ploughs, of weavers at their looms, &c.

sure, that charity was never so faint amongst you, and virtuous and godly living<sup>1</sup> was never less used, nor was God himself amongst Christians ever less revered, honoured, or served. Therefore (as I said before) be in charity one with another like brother and brother: love, dread, and fear God (to the which I, as your supreme head and sovereign lord, exhort and require you): and then, I doubt not but that that love and league, which I spake of in the beginning, shall never be dissolved or broken between us. And as touching the laws which be now made and concluded, I exhort you, the makers, to be as diligent in putting them in execution, as you were in making and furthering the same; or else your labour shall be in vain, and your commonwealth nothing relieved.

NOTES UPON THE AFORESAID EXHORTATION OF KING HENRY.

The oration expended with notes upon the same.

Princes who exhort to concord and charity do well; but princes who seek out the causes of discord, and reform the same, do much better. The papist and protestant, heretic and pharisee, the old "mumpsimus" and the new "sumpsimus," be terms of variance and dissension, and be, I grant, "symptomata" of a sore wound in the commonwealth. But he that will amend this wound must first begin to search out the causes, and to purge the occasion thereof: otherwise, to cure the sore outwardly, which inwardly doth fester and rankle still, it is but vain.

The root and ground of all this grievance riseth hence: from the prelates and clergy of Rome seeking, as it seemeth, altogether after riches, pomp, and honour of this world; who, to maintain the same under pretence of religion, do in very deed subvert religion. Under that title of the church, they bring into the church manifest errors and absurdities intolerable, who, pretending to be fathers of the church, if they transgressed but in manners and lightness of life, or negligence of government, they might be borne withal, for peace and concord's sake; and here modesty, civility, quietness, unity, and charity, might have place amongst modest natures. But now, they obscure the glory of the Son of God, which in no case ought to be suffered; they extinguish the light and grace of the gospel; they clog men's consciences; they set up idolatry, and maintain idols; they bring in false invocation, and restrain lawful matrimony, whereby groweth filthy pollution, adultery, and whoredom in the church unspeakable; they corrupt the sacraments; they wrest the Scripture to worldly purposes; they kill and persecute God's people: briefly their doctrine is damnable, their laws be impious, their doings are detestable. And yet, after all this, they creep craftily into the hearts of princes, under the title of the church, and colour of concord; making kings and princes believe that all be heretics and schismatics, who will not be subject to their ordinary power. Now Almighty God, who is a jealous God, and not suffering the glory of his Son to be defaced, nor his truth to be trodden under foot, stirreth up again the hearts of his people to understand his truth, and to defend his cause. Whereupon, of these two parts, as two mighty flints thus smiting together, cometh out the sparkle of this division, which can in no wise be quenched, but that one part must needs yield and give over. There is no neutrality, nor mediation of peace, nor exhortation to agreement, that will serve between these two contrary doctrines, but either the pope's errors must give place to God's word, or else the verity of God must give place unto them.

(1) Godly living, though it increase not with the gospel so much as we wish, yet the defect thereof is not to be imputed to the gospel: and if we well compare time with time, we shall find, by viewing the books of the old wardmote quests of whores and bawds and wicked livers, etc. presented to one now, besides priests and the common stewards.

Wherefore, as the good intent, and plausible oration of the king, in this behalf, was not to be discommended, in exhorting his subjects to charity, so had he much more deserved commendation, if he had sought the right way to work charity, and to help innocency amongst his subjects, by taking away the impious law of the Six Articles, the mother of all division and manslaughter. For what is this to the purpose, to exhort in words ever so much to charity, and indeed to give a knife to the murderer's hand, to run upon his naked brother, who never in conscience can leave his cause, nor yet hath power to defend himself? as by experience here followeth to be seen, what charity ensued after this exhortation of the king to charity, by the racking and burning of good Anne Askew, with three other poor subjects of the king, within half a year after; whereof shortly you shall hear more declared.

When these chantries and colleges thus, by act of parliament, were given into the king's hands as is above remembered (which was about the month of December, A. D. 1545), the next Lent following, Dr. Crome, preaching in the Mercer's chapel, among other reasons and persuasions to rouse the people from the vain opinion of purgatory, inferred this (grounding upon the said act of parliament): that if trentals and chantry masses could avail the souls in purgatory, then did the parliament not well in giving away monasteries, colleges, and chantries, which served principally to that purpose. But, if the parliament did well (as no man could deny) in dissolving them, and bestowing the same upon the king, then is it a plain case, that such chantries and private masses do nothing to confer and relieve them in purgatory. This dilemma of Dr. Crome, no doubt, was insoluble. But, notwithstanding, the charitable prelates, for all the king's late exhortation unto charity, were so charitable unto him, that on Easter next they brought him "coram nobis," where they so handled him, that they made him to recant. And if he had not, they would have dissolved him and his argument in burning fire, so burning hot was their charity, according as they burned Anne Askew and her fellows in the month of July the year following: whose tragical story and cruel handling now, consequently, the Lord willing, you shall hear.

The First Examination before the Inquisitors, A.D. 1545.

A. D.
1545.

To satisfy your expectation, good people (said she), this was my first examination, in the year of our Lord 1545, and in the month of March.

Christopher Dare, inquisitor.

First Christopher Dare examined me at Sadler's Hall, being one of the quest, and asked, if I did not believe that the sacrament hanging over the altar was the very body of Christ really. Then I demanded this question of him, Wherefore was St. Stephen stoned to death? and he said, he could not tell. Then I answered that no more would I assail his vain question.

Secondly, he said, that there was a woman who did testify that I should read, how God was not in temples made with hands. Then I showed him chapters vii. and xvii. of the Acts of the Apostles; what Stephen and Paul had said therein. Whereupon he asked me how I took those sentences? I answered, I would not throw pearls amongst swine, for acorns were good enough.

Thirdly, he asked me, wherefore I said, I had rather to read five lines in the Bible, than to hear five masses in the temple. I confessed that I said no less; not for the dispraise of either the epistle or the gospel, but because the one did greatly edify me, and the other nothing at all. As St. Paul doth witness in 1 Cor. xiv., where he saith, 'If the trumpet giveth an uncertain sound, who will prepare himself to the battle?'

Fourthly, he laid unto my charge, that I should say, If an ill priest ministered, it was the devil and not God.

Ill condi-
the ministers hurt not the faith of the receivers.

My answer was, that I never spake any such thing. But this was my saying: that whosoever he were that ministered unto me, his ill conditions could not hurt my faith, but in spirit I received, nevertheless, the body and blood of Christ.

Fifthly, he asked me what I said concerning confession. I answered him my meaning, which was, as St. James saith, that every man ought to acknowledge his faults to other, and the one to pray for the other.

Sixthly, he asked me what I said to the king's book: and I answered him that I could say nothing to it, because I never saw it.

Seventhly, he asked me if I had the Spirit of God in me. I answered, if I had not, I was but a reprobate or castaway.

A priest brought to examine
Anne
Askew.

Then he said, he had sent for a priest to examine me, who was there at hand. The priest asked me what I said to the sacrament of the altar, and required much to know my meaning therein. But I desired him again to hold me excused concerning that matter: none other answer would I make him, because I perceived him to be a papist.

Private masses
idolatry.

Eighthly, he asked me, if I did not think that private masses did help the souls departed. I said, it was great idolatry to believe more in them, than in the death which Christ died for us.

Anne
brought to the
mayor.

Then they had me thence unto my lord mayor, and he examined me, as they had before, and I answered him directly in all things, as I answered the quest before. Besides this, my lord mayor laid one thing to my charge, which was never spoken of me, but by them; and that was, whether a mouse, eating the host, received God or no? This question did I never ask, but indeed they asked it of me, whereunto I made them no answer, but smiled.

Women forbidden to speak in the congregation, and how.

Then the bishop's chancellor rebuked me, and said that I was much to blame for uttering the Scriptures. For St. Paul, he said, forbade women to speak or to talk of the word of God. I answered him that I knew Paul's meaning as well as he, which is, in 1 Cor. xiv., that a woman ought not to speak in the congregation by the way of teaching: and then I asked him how many women he had seen go into the pulpit and preach? He said he never saw any. Then I said, he ought to find no fault in poor women, except they had offended the law.

Anne
commanded
compter.

Then my lord mayor commanded me to ward. I asked him if sureties would not serve me; and he made me short answer, that he would take none. Then was I had to the Compter, and there remained eleven days, no friend admitted to speak with me. But, in the meantime, there was a priest sent unto me, who said that he was commanded of the bishop to examine me, and to give me good counsel, which he did not. But, first, he asked me for what cause I was put in the Compter; and I told him, I could not tell. Then he said, it was great pity that I should be there without cause, and concluded, that he was very sorry for me.

Secondly he said, it was told him that I should deny the sacrament of the altar. And I answered him again, that what I had said, I had said.

Thirdly he asked me, if I were content to be shriven. I told him, so that I might have one of these three, that is to say, Dr. Crome, sir Guillam, or Huntington, I was contented, because I knew them to be men of wisdom. As for you, or any other, I will not dispraise, because I know you not. Then, said he, 'I would not have you think but that I, or any other that shall be brought you, shall be as honest as they: for if we were not, you may be sure the king would not suffer us to preach.' Then I answered with the saying of Solomon, 'By communing with the wise I may learn wisdom, but by talking with a fool I shall take scathe.' [Prov. xiii. 20.]

Fourthly he asked, if the host should fall, and a beast did eat it, whether the beast did receive God or no? I answered, 'Seeing that you have taken the pains to ask the question, I desire you also to assoil it yourself: for I will not do it, because I perceive you come to tempt me.' And he said it was against the order of schools, that he who asked the question should answer it. I told him I was but a woman, and knew not the course of schools.

Fifthly he asked me, if I intended to receive the sacrament at Easter, or no? I answered, that else I were no christian woman; and thereat I did rejoice, that the time was so near at hand. And then he departed thence with many fair words.

The 23d day of March, my cousin Brittainne came into the Compter unto me, and asked me whether I might be put to bail, or no? Then went he immediately unto my lord mayor, desiring him to be so good lord unto me, that I might be bailed. My lord answered him and said, that he would be glad to do the best that in him lay; howbeit he could not bail me, without the consent of a spiritual officer: requiring him to go and speak with the chancellor of London. For, he said, like as he could not commit me to prison without the consent of a spiritual officer, no more could he bail me without the consent of the same.

So, upon that, he went to the chancellor, requiring of him as he did before of my lord mayor. He answered him, that the matter was so heinous, that he durst not of himself do it, without my lord of London were made privy thereunto. But, he said, he would speak unto my lord in it, and bade him repair unto him the next morrow, and he should well know my lord's pleasure. And upon the morrow after, he came thither, and spake both with the chancellor and with my lord bishop of London. The bishop declared unto him, that he was very well contented that I should come forth to communication; and appointed me to appear before him the next day after, at three of the clock at afternoon. Moreover he said unto him, that he would there should be at the examination such learned men as I was affectioned to, that they might see, and also make report, that I was handled with no rigour. He answered him, that he knew no man that I had more affection to, than to other. Then said the bishop, 'Yes, as I understand, she is affectioned to Dr. Crome, sir Guillam, Whitehead, and Huntington, that they might hear the matter, for she doth know them to be learned and of a godly judgment.' Also he required my cousin Brittainne, that he should earnestly persuade me to utter even the very bottom of my heart; and he sware by his fidelity, that no man should take any advantage of my words, neither yet would he lay ought to my charge for any thing that I should there speak; but, if I said any manner of thing amiss, he, with others more, would be glad to reform me therein, with most godly counsel.

On the morrow after, the bishop of London sent for me at one of the clock, his hour being appointed at three; and as I came before him, he said he was very sorry for my trouble, and desired to know my opinions in such matters as were laid against me. He required me also, in any wise, boldly to utter the secrets of my heart, bidding me not to fear in any point, for whatsoever I did say in his house, no man should hurt me for it. I answered, forasmuch as your lordship appointed three of the clock, and my friends will not come till that hour, I desire you to pardon me of giving answer till they come. Then said he, that he thought it meet to send for those four men who were aforementioned and appointed. Then I desired him not to put them to pain, for it should not need, because the two gentlemen which were my friends, were able enough to testify what I should say.

Anon after he went into his gallery with Master Spilman, and willed him in any wise that he should exhort me to utter all that I thought. In the meanwhile he commanded his archdeacon to commune with me, who said unto me, 'Mistress, wherefore are you accused and thus troubled here before the bishop?' To whom I answered again and said, 'Sir, ask, I pray you, my accusers; for I know not as yet.' Then took he my book out of my hand, and said, 'Such books as this, have brought you to the trouble that you are in. Beware,' said he, 'beware, for he that made this book, and was the author thereof, was a heretic, I warrant you, and burned in Smithfield.' And then I asked him, if he were certain and sure that it was true which he had spoken. And he said, he knew well the book was of John Frith's making. Then I asked him if he were not ashamed to judge of the book before he saw it within, or yet knew the truth thereof. I said also, that such unadvised hasty judgment is a token apparent of a very slender wit. Then I opened the book and showed it him. He said he thought it had been another, for he could find no fault therein. Then I desired him no more to be so unadvisedly rash and swift in judgment, till he thoroughly knew the truth: and so he departed from me.

Immediately after came my cousin Brittainne in, with divers others, as Master Hall of Gray's Inn, and such other like. Then my lord of London persuaded my cousin Brittainne, as he had done oft before, which was, that I should utter the bottom of my heart in any wise. My lord said after that unto me, that he would I should credit the counsel of such as were my friends and well-willers in this behalf, which was, that I should utter all things that burdened my conscience; for he assured me, that I should not need to stand in doubt to say any thing. For, like as he promised them (he said), he promised me, and would perform it; which was, that neither he, nor any man for him, should take me at advantage for any word that I should speak: and therefore he bade me say my mind without fear. I answered him, that I had nought to say, for my conscience (I thanked God) was burdened with nothing.

Then brought he forth this unsavoury similitude; that if a man had a wound, no wise surgeon would minister help unto it before he had seen it uncovered. 'In like case,' saith he, 'can I give you no good counsel, unless I know where-with your conscience is burdened.' I answered, that my conscience was clear in all things, and to lay a plaster unto the whole skin, it might appear much folly.

'Then you drive me,' saith he, 'to lay to your charge your own report, which is this: you did say, He that doth receive the sacrament by the hands of an ill priest, or a sinner, receiveth the devil, and not God.' To that I answered, 'I never spake such words: but, as I said before, both to the quest and to my lord mayor, so say I now again, that the wickedness of the priest should not hurt me, but in spirit and faith I received no less than the body and blood of Christ.' Then said the bishop unto me, 'What saying is this, in spirit? I will not take you at that advantage.' Then I answered, 'My lord, without faith and spirit, I cannot receive him worthily.'

Then he laid unto me, that I should say, that the sacrament remaining in the pix, was but bread. I answered that I never said so; but indeed the quest asked me such a question, whereunto I would not answer (I said) till such a time as they had assoiled me this question of mine, Wherefore Stephen was stoned to death? They said, they knew not. Then said I again, no more would I tell them what it was.

Then said my lord unto me, that I had alleged a certain text of the Scripture. I answered that I alleged none other but St. Paul's own saying to the Athenians, in the 17th chapter of the Acts of the Apostles, that 'God dwelleth not in temples made with hands.' Then asked he me, what my faith and belief was in that matter? I answered him, 'I believe as the Scripture doth teach me.'

Then inquired he of me, 'What if the Scripture doth say, that it is the body of Christ?' 'I believe,' said I, 'as the Scripture doth teach me.' Then asked he again, 'What if the Scripture doth say, that it is not the body of Christ?' My answer was still, 'I believe as the Scripture informeth me.' And upon this argument he tarried a great while, to have driven me to make him an answer to his mind : howbeit, I would not, but concluded this with him, that I believed therein, and in all other things, as Christ and his holy apostles did leave them.

Then he asked me, why I had so few words? And I answered, 'God hath given me the gift of knowledge, but not of utterance: and Solomon saith, That a woman of few words is the gift of God.' [Prov. xix. 14]

Thirdly, my lord laid unto my charge, that I should say that the mass was superstitious, wicked, and no better than idolatry. I answered him, 'No, I said not so. Howbeit I say the quest did ask me whether private mass did relieve souls departed or no? Unto whom then I answered, O lord! what idolatry is this, that we should rather believe in private masses, than in the healthsome death of the dear Son of God!' Then said my lord again, 'What an answer is that!' 'Though it be but mean,' said I, 'yet is it good enough for the question.'

Then I told my lord, that there was a priest who did hear what I said there before my lord mayor and them. With that the chancellor answered, Who was the same priest? 'So she spake it in very deed,' saith he, 'before my lord mayor and me.'

Then were there certain priests, as Dr. Standish and others, which tempted me much to know my mind. And I answered them always thus: 'That I said to my lord of London, I have said.' Then Dr. Standish desired my lord to bid me say my mind concerning the same text of St. Paul's [I answered, that it was against St. Paul's] learning, that I, being a woman, should interpret the Scriptures; especially where so many wise learned men were.

Then my lord of London said, he was informed that one should ask of me, if I would receive the sacrament at Easter, and I made a mock of it.

Then I desired that mine accuser might come forth; which my lord would not. But he said again unto me, 'I sent one to give you good counsel, and at the first word you called him papist.' That I denied not, for I perceived he was no less, yet made I him none answer unto it.

Then he rebuked me, and said that I should report, that there were bent against me threescore priests at Lincoln. 'Indeed,' quoth I, 'I said so. For my friends told me, if I did come to Lincoln, the priests would assault me, and put me to great trouble, as thereof they had made their boast: and when I heard it, I went thither indeed, not being afraid, because I knew my matter to be good. Moreover I remained there nine days, to see what would be said unto me. And as I was in the minster, reading upon the Bible, they resorted unto me by two and two, by five and by six, minding to have spoken unto me, yet went they their ways again without words speaking.'

Then my lord asked if there were not one that did speak unto me. I told him, yes; that there was one of them at last, who did speak to me indeed. And my lord then asked me what he said? And I told him his words were of small effect, so that I did not now remember them. Then said my lord, 'There are many that read and know the Scripture, and yet follow it not, nor live thereafter.' I said again, 'My lord! I would wish that all men knew my conversation and living in all points; for I am sure myself this hour, that there are none able to prove any dishonesty by me. If you know that any can do it, I pray you bring them forth.' Then my lord went away, and said he would entitle somewhat of my meaning, and so he wrote a great circumstance: but what it was, I have not all in my memory; for he would not suffer me to have the copy thereof. Only do I remember this small portion of it:

'Be it known,' saith he, 'of all men, that I, Anne Askew, do confess this to be my faith and belief, notwithstanding many reports made afore to the contrary. I believe that they which are houseled at the hands of a priest, whether his conversation be good or not, do receive the body and blood of Christ in substance really. Also, I do believe, that after the consecration, whether it be received or reserved, it is no less than the very body and blood of Christ in substance. Finally, I do believe in this and all other sacraments of holy church in all points, according to the old catholic faith of the same. In witness whereof, I, the said Anne, have subscribed my name.'

There was somewhat more in it, which because I had not the copy, I cannot now remember. Then he read it to me, and asked me if I did agree to it. And I said again, 'I believe so much thereof, as the holy Scripture doth agree unto: wherefore I desire you, that ye will add that thereunto.' Then he answered, that I should not teach him what he should write. With that he went forth into his great chamber and read the same bill before the audience, who inveigled and willed me to set to my hand; saying also, that I had favour showed me. Then said the bishop, I might thank others, and not myself, for the favour that I found at his hand; for he considered, he said, that I had good friends, and also that I came of a worshipful stock.

Then answered one Christopher, a servant unto Master Denny: 'Rather ought you, my lord, to have done it in such case for God's sake, than for man's.' Then my lord sat down, and took me the writing to set thereto my hand, and I wrote after this manner: 'I, Anne Askew, do believe all manner of things contained in the faith of the catholic church.'

And forasmuch as mention here is made of the writing of Bonner, which this godly woman said before she had not in memory, therefore I thought in this place to infer the same, both with the whole circumstance of Bonner, and with the title thereunto prefixed by the register, and also with her own subscription; to the intent the reader, seeing the same subscription neither to agree with the time of the title above prefixed, nor with the subscription after the writing annexed, might the better understand thereby what credit is to be given hereafter to such bishops, and to such registers. Here mayest thou note, gentle reader, in this confession, both in the bishop and his register, a double sleight of false conveyance. For although the confession purporteth the words of the bishop's writing, whereunto she did set her hand, yet by the title prefixed before, mayest thou see that both she was arraigned and condemned before this was registered; and also, that she is falsely reported to have put to her hand, which indeed, by this her own book, appeareth not so to be, but after this manner and condition: "I, Anne Askew, do believe all manner of things contained in the faith of the catholic church, and not otherwise." It followeth more in the story:

Then, because I did add unto it 'the catholic church,' he flung into his chamber in a great fury. With that, my cousin Brittainne followed, desiring him, for God's sake, to be good lord unto me. He answered, that I was a woman, and that he was nothing deceived in me. Then my cousin Brittainne desired him to take me as a woman, and not to set my weak woman's wit to his lordship's great wisdom.

Then went in unto him Dr. Weston, and said, that the cause why I did write there the catholic church, was, that I understood not the church written afore. So, with much ado, they persuaded my lord to come out again, and to take my name, with the names of my sureties, which were my cousin Brittainne, and Master Spilman of Gray's Inn.

This being done, we thought that I should have been put to bail immediately, according to the order of the law: howbeit he would not suffer it, but committed me from thence to prison again until the next morrow, and then he willed me to appear in the Guildhall, and so I did. Notwithstanding they would not put me to bail there neither, but read the bishop's writing unto me, as before, and so commanded me again to prison. Then were my sureties appointed to come before them on the next morrow, in Paul's church, which did so indeed. Notwithstanding, they would once again have broken off with them, because they would not be bound also for another woman, at their pleasure, whom they knew not, nor yet what matter was laid unto her charge! Notwithstanding at the last, after much ado and reasoning to and fro, they took a bond of them of recognisance for my forth-coming: and thus I was at the last delivered.

Written by me, Anne Askew.

The latter Apprehension and Examination of the worthy Martyr of God, Mistress Anne Askew, A. D. 1546. See Appendix.

I do perceive, dear friend in the Lord, that thou art not yet persuaded thoroughly in the truth concerning the Lord's supper, because Christ said unto his apostles, 'Take, eat, this is my body which is given for you.'

In giving forth the bread as an outward sign or token to be received with the mouth, he minded them in perfect belief to receive that body of his which should die for the people, and to think the death thereof to be the only health and salvation of their souls. The bread and the wine were left us for a sacramental communion, or a mutual participation of the inestimable benefits of his most precious death and blood-shedding, and that we should, in the end thereof, be thankful together for that most necessary grace of our redemption. For, in the closing up thereof he said thus, 'This do ye in remembrance of me: yea, so oft as ye shall eat it or drink it.'<sup>2</sup> Else should we have been forgetful of that we ought to have in daily remembrance, and also have been altogether unthankful for it. Therefore it is meet that in our prayers we call unto God to grant in our

The sum of my Examination before the King's Council at Greenwich.

Your request as concerning my prison-fellows I am not able to satisfy, because I heard not their examinations. But the effect of mine was this: I, being before the council, was asked of Master Kyme.<sup>4</sup> I answered, that my lord chancellor knew already my mind in that matter. They with that answer were not contented, but said it was the king's pleasure that I should open the matter unto them. I answered them plainly, I would not so do; but if it were the king's pleasure to hear me, I would show him the truth. Then they said, it was not meet for the king to be troubled with me. I answered, that Solomon was reckoned the wisest king that ever lived, yet misliked he not to hear two poor common women, much more his grace a simple woman and his faithful subject. So, in conclusion, I made them none other answer in that matter. Then my lord chancellor asked of me my opinion in the sacrament. My answer was this, 'I believe that so oft as I, in a christian congregation, do receive the bread in remembrance of Christ's death, and with thanksgiving, according to his holy institution, I receive therewith the fruits, also, of his most glorious passion. The bishop of Winchester bade me make a direct answer: I said, I would not sing a new song of the Lord in a strange land. Then the bishop said, I spake in parables. I answered, it was best for him, 'for if I show the open truth,' quoth I, 'ye will not accept it.' Then he said I was a parrot. I told him again, I was ready to suffer all things at his hands, not only his rebukes, but all that should follow besides, yea, and all that gladly.

Then had I divers rebukes of the council, because I would not express my mind in all things as they would have me. But they were not in the mean time unanswered for all that, which now to rehearse were too much, for I was with them there about five hours. Then the clerk of the council conveyed me from thence to my lady Garnish.

The next day I was brought again before the council. Then would they needs know of me what I said to the sacrament. I answered, that I already had said what I could say. Then, after divers words, they bade me go by. Then came my lord Lisle, my lord of Essex, and the bishop of Winchester requiring me earnestly that I should confess the sacrament to be flesh, blood, and bone. Then, said I, to my lord Parre and my lord Lisle, that it was a great shame for them to counsel contrary to their knowledge. Whereunto, in few words, they did say, that they would gladly all things were well.

Then the bishop said he would speak with me familiarly. I said, 'So did Judas, when he unfriendly betrayed Christ.' Then desired the bishop to speak with me alone. But that I refused. Then my lord chancellor began to examine me again of the sacrament. Then I asked him how long he would halt on both sides. Then would he needs know where I found that. I said, in the Scripture.<sup>7</sup> Then he went his way. Then the bishop said I should be burned. I answered, that I had searched all the Scriptures, yet could I never find that either Christ, or his apostles, put any creature to death. 'Well, well,' said I, 'God will laugh your threatenings

Then they made me a bill of the sacrament, willing me to set my hand thereto; but I would not. Then, on the Sunday, I was sore sick, thinking no less than to die: therefore I desired to speak with Master Latimer, but it would not be. The Confession of me Anne Askew, for the time I was in Newgate, concerning my belief.

I find in the Scripture, that Christ took the bread and gave it to his disciples, saying, 'Take, eat, this is my body which shall be broken for you;' meaning in substance, his own very body, the bread being thereof an only sign or sacrament. For, after like manner of speaking, he said he would break down the temple, and in three days build it up again, signifying his own body by the temple, as St. John declareth it,<sup>3</sup> and not the stony temple itself. So that the bread is but a remembrance of his death, or a sacrament of thanksgiving for it, whereby we are knit unto him by a communion of christian love; although there be many that cannot perceive the true meaning thereof: for the veil that Moses put over his face before the children of Israel, that they should not see the clearness thereof,<sup>4</sup> I perceive the same veil remaineth to this day. But when God shall take it away, then shall these blind men see. For it is plainly expressed in the history of Bel in the Bible, that God dwelleth in nothing material. 'O king,' saith Daniel, 'be not deceived;<sup>5</sup> for God will be in nothing that is made with hands of men. 'Oh! what stiff-necked people are these, that will always resist the Holy Ghost. But, as their fathers have done, so do they, because they have stony hearts.'<sup>6</sup>

As Christ's body is called the temple in the Scripture, so is the bread called Christ's body.

Written by me, Anne Askew, that neither wish death, nor yet fear his might; and as merry as one that is bound towards heaven.

'Truth is laid in prison.'<sup>7</sup> 'The law is turned to wormwood.'<sup>8</sup> 'And there can no right judgment go forth.'<sup>9</sup>

'Oh! forgive us all our sins, and receive us graciously.' 'As for the works of our hands, we will no more call upon them; for it is thou, Lord, that art our God. Thou showest ever mercy unto the fatherless.'

'Oh! if they would do this,' saith the Lord, 'I should heal their sores, yea with all my heart would I love them.'

'O Ephraim, what have I to do with idols any more?' 'Whoso is wise, shall understand this; and he that is rightly instructed will regard it, for the ways of the Lord are righteous. Such as are godly, will walk in them; and as for the wicked, they will stumble at them.'<sup>10</sup>

'Solomon,' saith St. Stephen, 'builded a house for the God of Jacob. Howbeit, the Highest of all dwelleth not in temples made with hands, as saith the prophet, Heaven is my seat, and earth is my footstool. What house will ye build for me, saith the Lord? or what place is it that I shall rest in? Hath not my hand made all things?'<sup>11</sup>

'Woman, believe me,' saith Christ to the Samaritan, 'the time is at hand, that ye shall neither in this mountain, nor yet at Jerusalem, worship the Father. Ye worship ye wot not what; but we know what we worship: for salvation cometh of the Jews. But the hour cometh, and is now, when the true worshippers shall worship the Father in spirit and verity.'<sup>12</sup>

(2) The following passage is omitted by Foxe, but is given by John Bale:—"Then came Master Paget to me with many glorious words, and desired me to speak my mind unto him: I might, he said, deny it again if need were. I said that I would not deny the truth. He asked me, how I could avoid the very words of Christ, 'Take, eat, this is my body which shall be broken for you?' I answered that Christ's meaning was there as in these other places of the Scripture. 'I am the door;' 'Behold the Lamb of God;' 'The rock-stone was Christ;' as well as others. Ye may not here, said I, take Christ for the material thing that he is signified by; for these ye will make him a very door, a vine, a lamb, a stone; clean contrary to the Holy Ghost's meaning. All these do signify Christ, like as the bread doth signify his body in that place. And though he did say there, 'Take, eat this in remembrance of me; yet did he not bid them hang up that bread in a box and make it a god, or bow to it." The song which Anne Askew sang at her death, is given by Bale, and will be found in the appendix.—ED.

The sum of the Condemnation of me Anne Askew at the Guildhall.

The substance of the sacrament denied to be God.

They said to me there, that I was a heretic, and condemned by the law, if I would stand in my opinion. I answered, that I was no heretic, neither yet deserved I any death by the law of God. But, as concerning the faith which I uttered and wrote to the council, I would not, I said, deny it, because I knew it true. Then would they needs know, if I would deny the sacrament to be Christ's body and blood. I said, 'Yea: for the same Son of God that was born of the Virgin Mary, is now glorious in heaven, and will come again from thence at the latter day like as he went up.'<sup>2</sup> And as for that ye call your God, it is a piece of bread. For a more proof thereof (mark it when you list,) let it but lie in the box three months, and it will be mouldy, and so turn to nothing that is good. Whereupon I am persuaded that it cannot be God.'

After that, they willed me to have a priest; and then I smiled. Then they asked me, if it were not good; I said, I would confess my faults unto God, for I was sure that he would hear me with favour. And so we were condemned without a quest.<sup>3</sup>

Her belief concerning the sacrament.

My belief which I wrote to the council was this: That the sacramental bread was left us to be received with thanksgiving, in remembrance of Christ's death, the only remedy of our soul's recovery; and that thereby we also receive the whole benefits and fruits of his most glorious passion.

Then would they needs know, whether the bread in the box were God or no: I said, 'God is a Spirit, and will be worshipped in spirit and truth.'<sup>4</sup> Then they demanded, 'Will you plainly deny Christ to be in the sacrament?' I answered, that I believe faithfully the eternal Son of God not to dwell there; in witness whereof I recited again the history of Bel,<sup>5</sup> Dan. xix., Acts vii. and xvii., and Matt. xxiv., concluding thus: 'I neither wish death, nor yet fear his might; God have the praise thereof with thanks.'

My Letter sent to the Lord Chancellor.

The Lord God, by whom all creatures have their being, bless you with the light of his knowledge. Amen.

My duty to your lordship remembered, &c.: It might please you to accept this my bold suit, as the suit of one who, upon due consideration, is moved to the same, and hopeth to obtain. My request to your lordship is only that it may please the same to be a mean for me to the king's majesty, that his grace may be certified of these few lines which I have written concerning my belief, which when it shall be truly conferred with the hard judgment given me for the same, I think his grace shall well perceive me to be weighed in an uneven pair of balances. But I remit my matter and cause to Almighty God, who rightly judgeth all secrets. And thus I commend your lordship to the governance of him, and fellowship of all saints, Amen.

By your handmaid, Anne Askew.

My Faith briefly written to the King's Grace.

Her belief touching the sacrament.

I, Anne Askew, of good memory, although God hath given me the bread of adversity and the water of trouble, yet not so much as my sins have deserved, desire this to be known unto your grace, that, forasmuch as I am by the law condemned for an evil doer, here I take heaven and earth to record, that I shall die in my innocency: and, according to that I have said first, and will say last, I utterly abhor and detest all heresies. And as concerning the supper of the Lord, I believe so much as Christ hath said therein, which he confirmed with his most blessed blood. I believe also so much as he willed me to follow and believe, and so much as the catholic church of him doth teach: for I will not forsake the commandment of his holy lips. But look, what God hath charged me with his mouth, that have I shut up in my heart. And thus briefly I end, for lack of learning.

THE CRUEL HANDLING AND RACKING OF ANNE ASKEW AFTER HER CONDEMNATION.*Henry VIII.*A. D.
1546.The Effect of my Examination and Handling since my Departure from Newgate.*See
Appendix.*

On Tuesday I was sent from Newgate to the sign of the Crown, where Master Rich, and the bishop of London, with all their power and flattering words went about to persuade me from God : but I did not esteem their glosing pretences.

Then came there to me Nicholas Shaxton, and counselled me to recant as he had done. I said to him, that it had been good for him never to have been born ; with many other like words.

Then Master Rich sent me to the Tower, where I remained till three o'clock.

Then came Rich and one of the council,<sup>1</sup> charging me upon my obedience, to show unto them, if I knew any man or woman of my sect. My answer was, that I knew none. Then they asked me of my lady of Suffolk, my lady of Sussex, my lady of Hertford, my lady Denny, and my lady Fitzwilliam. To whom I answered, if I should pronounce any thing against them, that I were not able to prove it. Then said they unto me, that the king was informed that I could name, if I would, a great number of my sect. I answered, that the king was as well deceived in that behalf, as dissembled with in other matters.

Anne Askew urged to accuse others.

Then commanded they me to show how I was maintained in the compter, and who willed me to stick to my opinion. I said, that there was no creature that therein did strengthen me : and as for the help that I had in the compter, it was by means of my maid. For as she went abroad in the streets, she made moan to the prentices, and they, by her, did send me money ; but who they were I never knew.

Then they said that there were divers gentlewomen that gave me money : but I knew not their names. Then they said that there were divers ladies that had sent me money. I answered, that there was a man in a blue coat who delivered me ten shillings, and said that my lady of Hertford sent it me ; and another in a violet coat gave me eight shillings, and said my lady Denny sent it me : whether it were true or no, I cannot tell ; for I am not sure who sent it me, but as the maid did say. Then they said, there were of the council that did maintain me : and I said, No.

Refuseth to accuse any.

Then they did put me on the rack, because I confessed no ladies or gentlewomen to be of my opinion, and thereon they kept me a long time ; and because I lay still, and did not cry, my lord chancellor and Master Rich took pains to rack me with their own hands, till I was nigh dead.

Put on the rack.

Then the lieutenant caused me to be loosed from the rack. Incontinently I swooned, and then they recovered me again. After that I sat two long hours reasoning with my lord chancellor upon the bare floor ; where he, with many flattering words, persuaded me to leave my opinion. But my Lord God (I thank his everlasting goodness) gave me grace to persevere, and will do, I hope, to the very end.

Then was I brought to a house, and laid in a bed, with as weary and painful bones as ever had patient Job ; I thank my Lord God there-for. Then my lord chancellor sent me word, if I would leave my opinion, I should want nothing : if I would not, I should forthwith to Newgate, and so be burned. I sent him again word, that I would rather die, than break my faith.

Anne Askew threatened to be burned.

Thus the Lord open the eyes of their blind hearts, that the truth may take place. Farewell, dear friend, and pray, pray, pray !

Touching the order of her racking in the Tower thus it was ; first she was let down into a dungeon, where sir Anthony Knevet, the lieutenant, commanded his jailor to pinch her with the rack. Which being done as much as he thought sufficient, he went about to take her down, supposing that he had done enough. But Wriothlesley, the chancellor, not contented that she was loosed so soon, confessing nothing, commanded the lieutenant to strain her on the rack again : which because he denied to do, tendering the weakness of the woman, he was threatened therefore grievously of the said Wriothesley, saying, that he would signify his disobedience unto the king. And so consequently upon the same, he and Master Rich, throwing off their gowns, would needs play the tormentors themselves ; first asking her, if she were with child. To whom she answering again, said, "Ye shall not need to spare for that, but do your wills upon me." And so, quietly and patiently praying unto the Lord, she abode their tyranny, till her bones and joints were almost plucked asunder, in such sort as she was carried away in a chair. When the racking was past, Wriothesley and his fellow took their horse towards the court.

In the mean time, while they were making their way by land, the good lieutenant, aftsoons taking boat, sped him to the court in all haste to speak with the king before the others, and so did ; who there making his humble suit to the king, desired his pardon, and showed him the whole matter as it stood, and of the racking of Mistress Askew, and how he was threatened by the lord chancellor, because, at his commandment, not knowing his highness's pleasure, he refused to rack her ; which he, for compassion, could not find in his heart to do, and therefore humbly craved his highness's pardon. Which when the king had understood, he seemed not very well to like of their so extreme handling of the woman, and also granted to the lieutenant his pardon, willing him to return and see to his charge.

Great expectation was in the mean season among the warders and other officers of the Tower, waiting for his return ; whom when they saw come so cheerfully, declaring unto them how he had sped with the king, they were not a little joyous, and gave thanks to God therefor.

Anne Askew's Answer unto John Lancel's Letter.

O friend, most dearly beloved in God ! I marvel not a little what should move you to judge in me so slender a faith as to fear death, which is the end of all misery. In the Lord I desire you not to believe of me such wickedness : for I doubt it not, but God will perform his work in me, like as he hath begun. I understand the council is not a little displeased, that it should be reported abroad that I was racked in the Tower. They say now, that what they did there was but to fear me ; whereby I perceive they are ashamed of their uncomely doings, and fear much lest the king's majesty should have information thereof ; wherefore they would no man to noise it. Well ! their cruelty God forgive them.

Your heart in Christ Jesu. Farewell and pray.

The Purgation or Answer of Anne Askew, against the false Surmises of her Recantation.

Anne Askew falsely suspected to recant.

I have read the process, which is reported of them that know not the truth to be my recantation. But, as the Lord liveth, I never meant a thing less than to recant. Notwithstanding this I confess, that in my first troubles I was examined of the bishop of London about the sacrament. Yet had they no grant of my mouth but this : that I believed therein as the word of God did bind me to believe. More had they never of me. Then he made a copy, which is now in print, and required me to set thereunto my hand ; but I refused it. Then my two sureties did will me in no wise to stick thereat, for it was no great matter, they said.

Then with much ado, at the last I wrote thus : 'I, Anne Askew, do believe 'his, if God's word do agree to the same, and the true catholic church.' Then the bishop, being in great displeasure with me because I made doubts in my writing, commanded me to prison, where I was awhile; but afterwards, by means of friends, I came out again. Here is the truth of that matter. And as concerning the thing that ye covet most to know, resort to John vi., and be ruled always thereby. Thus fare ye well quoth Anne Askew.

The Confession of the Faith which Anne Askew made in Newgate, before she suffered.

I, Anne Askew, of good memory, although my merciful Father hath given me the bread of adversity and the water of trouble, yet not so much as my sins have deserved, do confess myself here a sinner before the throne of his heavenly Majesty, desiring his forgiveness and mercy. And forasmuch as I am by the law unrighteously condemned for an evil doer concerning opinions, I take the same most merciful God of mine, who hath made both heaven and earth, to record, that I hold no opinions contrary to his most holy word. And I trust in my merciful Lord, who is the giver of all grace, that he will graciously assist me against all evil opinions which are contrary to his blessed verity. For I take him to witness that I have done, and will unto my life's end utterly abhor them to the uttermost of my power.

But this is the heresy which they report me to hold: that after the priest hath spoken the words of consecration, there remaineth bread still. They both say, and also teach it for a necessary article of faith, that after those words be once spoken, there remaineth no bread, but even the self-same body that hung upon the cross on Good Friday, both flesh, blood, and bone. To this belief of theirs say I, nay. For then were our common creed false, which saith, that he sitteth on the right hand of God the Father Almighty, and from thence shall come to judge the quick and the dead. Lo, this is the heresy that I hold, and for it must suffer the death. But as touching the holy and blessed supper of the Lord, I believe it to be a most necessary remembrance of his glorious sufferings and death. Moreover, I believe as much therein as my eternal and only Redeemer Jesus Christ would, I should believe.

The matter and cause why she suffered death.

Finally, I believe all those Scriptures to be true, which he hath confirmed with his most precious blood. Yea, and as St. Paul saith, those Scriptures are sufficient for our learning and salvation, that Christ hath left here with us; so that I believe we need no unwritten verities to rule his church with. Therefore look, what he hath said unto me with his own mouth in his holy gospel, that have I, with God's grace, closed up in my heart, and my full trust is, as David saith, that it shall be a lantern to my footsteps.

Scripture sufficient to our salvation.

There be some do say, that I deny the eucharist or sacrament of thanksgiving; but those people do untruly report of me. For I both say and believe it, that if it were ordered like as Christ instituted it and left it, a most singular comfort it were unto us all. But as concerning your mass, as it is now used in our days, I do say and believe it to be the most abominable idol that is in the world: for my God will not be eaten with teeth, neither yet dieth he again. And upon these words that I have now spoken, will I suffer death.

Anne Askew falsely reported to deny the holy eucharist.

A Prayer of Anne Askew.

O Lord! I have more enemies now, than there be hairs on my head: yet Lord, let them never overcome me with vain words, but fight thou, Lord, in my stead; for on thee cast I my care. With all the spite they can imagine, they fall upon me, who am thy poor creature. Yet, sweet Lord, let me not set by them that are against me; for in thee is my whole delight. And, Lord, I heartily desire of thee, that thou wilt of thy most merciful goodness forgive them that violence which they do, and have done, unto me. Open also thou their blind hearts, that they may hereafter do that thing in thy sight, which is only acceptable before thee, and to set forth thy verity aright, without all vain fantasies of sinful men. So be it, O Lord, so be it!

By me, Anne Askew.

Henry VIII.

A. D. 1546.

Anne Askew brought unto the stake, lamed upon the rack; Shaxton preacheth at her burning.

Hitherto we have entreated of this good woman: now it remaineth that we touch somewhat as concerning her end and martyrdom. After that she (being born of such stock and kindred that she might have lived in great wealth and prosperity, if she would rather have followed the world than Christ) now had been so tormented, that she could neither live long in so great distress, neither yet by her adversaries be suffered to die in secret, the day of her execution being appointed, she was brought into Smithfield in a chair, because she could not go on her feet, by means of her great torments. When she was brought unto the stake, she was tied by the middle with a chain, that held up her body. When all things were thus prepared to the fire, Dr. Shaxton, who was then appointed to preach, began his sermon. Anne Askew, hearing and answering again unto him, where he said well, confirmed the same; where he said amiss, "There," said she, "he misseth, and speaketh without the book."

The sermon being finished, the martyrs, standing there tied at three several stakes ready to their martyrdom, began their prayers. The multitude and concourse of the people was exceeding; the place where they stood being railed about to keep out the press. Upon the bench under St. Bartholomew's church sat Wriothsley, chancellor of England; the old duke of Norfolk, the old earl of Bedford, the lord mayor, with divers others. Before the fire should be set unto them, one of the bench, hearing that they had gunpowder about them, and being alarmed lest the faggots, by strength of the gunpowder, would come flying about their ears, began to be afraid: but the earl of Bedford, declaring unto him how the gunpowder was not laid under the faggots, but only about their bodies, to rid them out of their pain; which having vent, there was no danger to them of the faggots, so diminished that fear.

She refuseth the king's pardon.

Then Wriothsley, lord chancellor, sent to Anne Askew letters, offering to her the king's pardon if she would recant; who, refusing once to look upon them, made this answer again, that she came not thither to deny her Lord and Master. Then were the letters likewise offered unto the others, who, in like manner, following the constancy of the woman, denied not only to receive them, but also to look upon them. Whereupon the lord mayor, commanding fire to be put unto them, cried with a loud voice, "Fiat justitia."

Justitia! Justitia!

And thus the good Anne Askew, with these blessed martyrs, being troubled so many manner of ways, and having passed through so many torments, having now ended the long course of her agonies, being compassed in with flames of fire, as a blessed sacrifice unto God, she slept in the Lord A. D. 1546, leaving behind her a singular example of christian constancy for all men to follow.

The Martyrdom of John Lancel, John Adams, and Nicholas Belenian.

There was, at the same time, also burned together with her, one Nicholas Belenian, priest of Shropshire; John Adams, a tailor; and John Lancel, gentleman of the court and household of king Henry.

It happened well for them, that they died together with Anne Askew: for, albeit that of themselves they were strong and stout men, yet, through the example and exhortation of her, they, being the more boldened, received occasion of greater comfort in that so painful and doleful kind of death; who, beholding her invincible constancy, and also stirred up through her persuasions, did set apart all kind of fear.

Henry VIII.

A. D. 1546.

Thus they, confirming one another with mutual exhortations, tarried looking for the tormentor and fire, which, at the last, flaming round about them, consumed their blessed bodies in happy martyrdom, in the year of our salvation 1546, about the month of June.<sup>1</sup>

See Appendix.

There is also a certain letter extant, which the said John Lacels briefly wrote, being in prison, touching the sacrament of Christ's body and blood; wherein he doth both confute the error of them, who, being not contented with the spiritual receiving of the sacrament, will leave no substance of bread therein, and, also, confuteth the sinister interpretation of many thereupon: the tenor of which letter is as hereunder followeth.

The Copy of the Letter of John Lacels, written out of Prison.

St. Paul, because of sects and dissension among the Corinthians, wrote this epistle unto them; and, in like case pertaining to my conscience, I do protest my whole heart in the blessed supper of the Lord; wherein I trust in God to bring nothing for me, but I shall be able, with God's holy word, to declare and manifest the same. And herein I take occasion to recite the saying of St. Paul, in the said epistle, chap. xi., 'That which I delivered unto you, I received of the Lord. For the Lord Jesus, the same night in which he was betrayed, took bread, gave thanks, and brake it, and said, Take ye, eat ye; this is my body, which is broken for you.'

Here, me seemeth, St. Paul durst not take upon him his Lord and Master's authority. Wherefore, as at God's hand the breaking of the most innocent and immaculate body and blood of Christ is the quietness of all men's consciences, the only remedy of our sins, and the redemption of mankind, which is called in the Scripture the daily offering: so the mass, which is the invention of man (whose author is the pope of Rome, as it doth appear in Polydore Virgil and many others), is the unquietness of all Christendom, a blasphemy unto Christ's blood, and (as Daniël calleth it) the abominable desolation, as the Scripture shall hereafter more manifest it. St. Paul was belike to learn of the Romans' church the manner of the consecration as they call it, with the breathing over the host, and other ceremonies besides, that he durst not take upon him to say, 'Hoc est corpus meum.' But this I will admit: it was the Lord Jesus that made the supper; who also did finish it, and made an end of the only act of our salvation, not only here in this world, but with his Father in heaven; as he declareth himself, that he will drink no more of this bitter cup, till he drink it new in his Father's kingdom, where all bitterness shall be taken away.

Blasphemy and wickedness of the mass.

A prophecy. St. Paul did not take upon him in the person of Christ to say, 'Hoc est corpus meum,' as our priests do.

Now, if any man be able to finish the act of our Saviour, in breaking of his body and shedding of his blood here, and also to finish it with the Father in heaven, then let him say it. But I think that if men will look upon St. Paul's words well, they shall be forced to say, as St. Paul saith, 'The Lord Jesus said it,' and once for all; who only was the fulfiller of it. For these words 'Hoc est corpus meum' were spoken of his natural presence (which no man is able to deny), because the act was finished on the cross, as the story doth plainly manifest it to them that have eyes. Now this bloody sacrifice is made an end of; the supper is finished, forasmuch as 'Christ hath once suffered for sins, the just for the unjust, to bring us to God, and was killed as pertaining to the flesh, and hath entered in by his own blood once for all, into the holy place, and found eternal redemption.'<sup>3</sup>

None but Christ can say, 'Hoc est corpus meum,' and he said it once for all.

Here now followeth the administration of the supper of the Lord, which I will take at Christ's hands after the resurrection, although other men will not be ashamed to bring the wicked counsels of foolish inventions for them. ' And it came to pass, as Christ sat at meat with them, he took bread, blessed, and brake it, and gave it to them; and their eyes were opened, and knew him, and he vanished out of their sight '1 And the apostles did know him in breaking of bread.

The right use of the Lord's supper in the apostles' time.

How far the power of the minister extendeth in consecrating the supper.

How the flesh of Christ is eaten in the supper.

Popish Priests take upon them to do more than Christ did.

Here, also, it seemeth to me the apostles to follow their master Christ, and to take the right use of the sacrament, and also to teach it to those that were converted to Christ, as mention is made in the Acts of the Apostles, where it is said, ' They continued in the apostles' doctrine and fellowship, in breaking of bread, and prayer, and they continued daily with one accord in the temple, and brake bread in every house, and did eat there with gladness and singleness of heart, praising God; and had favour with all the people.'2 And St. Paul, following the same doctrine, doth plainly show the duty of the minister, and also of them that shall receive it: ' As oft as ye shall eat this bread, and drink this cup, ye shall show the Lord's death until he come.'3 Here I do gather, that the minister hath no further power and authority than to preach and pronounce the Lord's death, or else to say, the Lord Jesus said it, who did fulfil it on the cross.

Furthermore, I do steadfastly believe, that where the bread is broken according to the ordinance of Christ, the blessed and immaculate Lamb is present to the eyes of our faith, and so we eat his flesh, and drink his blood, which is, to dwell with God, and God with us. And in this we are sure we dwell with God, in that he giveth us his Holy Spirit, even as the forefathers, that were before Christ's coming, did presently see the Lord's death, and did eat his body, and drink his blood.

In this I do differ from the pope's church, that the priests have authority to make Christ's natural presence in the bread, for so doth he more than our Lord and Saviour did; as the example is manifest in Judas, who, at Christ's hands, received the same wine and bread as the other apostles did. But the pope and his adherents are even they whom Daniel speaketh of,4 saying, ' He shall set men to unhallow the sanctuary, and to put down the daily offering, and to set up the abominable desolation. Yea, he' of Rome 'shall speak marvellous things against the God of heaven, and God of all gods, wherein he shall prosper so long, till the wrath be fulfilled, for the conclusion is devised already. He shall not regard the God of heaven, nor the God of his fathers, yea in his place shall he worship the mighty idol, and the God whom his fathers knew not, which is the god Maozim.'5

For lack of time, I leave the commemoration of the blessed supper of the Lord, and the abominable idol the mass, which is it that Daniel meaneth by the god Maozim.6 Read the second and last chapters of Daniel, and 2 Thess. ii., where they recite the abomination of desolation, which Matthew saith 'standeth in the holy place,'7 that is, in the consciences of men. Mark saith, 'where it ought not to stand,'8 which is a plain denial of all the inventions of men. Further, Luke saith, 'the time is at hand.'9 Paul saith, 'the mystery of iniquity worketh already, yea, and shall continue till the appearance of Christ,'10 which in my judgment is at hand.

The faithful and reverend confession of Laeels, touching the Lord's supper.

Now for the supper of the Lord, I do protest to take it as reverently as Christ left it, and as his apostles did use it, according to the testimonies of the prophets, the apostles, and our blessed Saviour Christ, which accordingly St. Paul to the Ephesians doth recite.

Now, with quietness, I commit the whole world to their pastor and herdsman Jesus Christ, the only Saviour and true Messias: and I commend my sovereign lord and master the king's majesty, king Henry VIII., to God the Father, and to our Lord Jesus Christ: the queen, and my lord the prince, with this whole realm, ever to the innocent and immaculate Lamb, that his blood may wash and purify their hearts and souls from all iniquity and sin, to God's glory, and to the salvation of their souls. I do protest, that the inward part of my heart doth groan for this; and I doubt not but to enter into the holy tabernacle which is above, yea, and there to be with God for ever. Farewell in Christ Jesu.

One Rogers, a Martyr, burned in Smithfield.

Like as Winchester and other bishops did set on king Henry against Anne Askew and her fellow martyrs, so Dr. Repse, bishop of Norwich, did incite no less the old duke of Norfolk against one Rogers in the county of Norfolk ; who, much about the same year and time, was there condemned and suffered martyrdom for the six articles. After which time it was not long, but within a half year, both the king himself, and the duke's house decayed : albeit, the duke's house, by God's grace, recovered again afterwards, and he himself converted to more moderation in this kind of dealing.

WHEREIN APPEARETH IN WHAT DANGER SHE WAS FOR THE GOSPEL, BY MEANS OF STEPHEN GARDINER AND OTHERS OF HIS CONSPIRACY ; AND HOW GRACIOUSLY SHE WAS PRESERVED BY HER KIND AND LOVING HUSBAND THE KING.

After these stormy stories above recited, the course and order as well of the time as the matter of the story doth require now somewhat to treat, likewise, touching the troubles and afflictions of the virtuous and excellent lady queen Katharine Parr, the last wife to king Henry : the story whereof is this.

About the same time above noted, which was about the year after the king returned from Boulogne, he was informed that queen Katharine Parr, at that time his wife, was very much given to the reading and study of the holy Scriptures, and that she, for that purpose, had retained divers well learned and godly persons to instruct her thoroughly in the same ; with whom as at all times convenient she used to have private conference touching spiritual matters, so also of ordinary, but especially in Lent, every day in the afternoon, for the space of an hour, one of her said chaplains, in her privy chamber, made some collation to her and to her ladies and gentlewomen of her privy chamber, or others that were disposed to hear; in which sermons they oftentimes touched such abuses as in the church then were rife. As these things were not secretly done, so neither were their preachings unknown to the king; whereof, at first, and for a great time, he seemed very well to like. This made her the more bold (being indeed become very zealous toward the gospel, and the professors thereof) frankly to debate with the king touching religion, and therein flatly to discover herself; oftentimes wishing, exhorting, and persuading the king, that as he had, to the glory of God, and his eternal fame, begun a good and a godly work in banishing that monstrous idol of Rome, so he would thoroughly perfect and finish the same, cleansing and purging his church of England clean from the dregs thereof, wherein as yet remained great superstition.

And albeit the king grew, towards his latter end, very stern and opinionate, so that of few he could be content to be taught, but worst of all to be contended withal by argument; notwithstanding, towards her he refrained his accustomed manner (unto others in like case used), as appeared by great respects, either for the reverence of the cause, whereunto of himself he seemed well inclined, if some others could have ceased from seeking to pervert him, or else, for the singular affection, which, until a very small time before his death, he always bare unto her. For never handmaid sought with more careful diligence to please her mistress, than she did, with all painful endeavour, apply herself, by all virtuous means, in all things to please his humour.

Moreover, besides the virtues of the mind, she was endued with very rare gifts of nature, as singular beauty, favour, and comely personage, being things wherein the king was greatly delighted: and so enjoyed she the king's favour, to the great likelihood of the setting at large of the gospel within this realm at that time, had not the malicious practice of certain enemies professed against the truth (which at that time also were very great) prevented the same, to the utter alienating of the king's mind from religion, and almost to the extreme ruin of the queen and certain others with her, if God had not marvelously succoured her in that distress. The conspirers and practisers of her death were Gardiner bishop of Winchester, Wriothesley, then lord chancellor, and others, as well of the king's privy chamber, as of his privy council. These, seeking (for the furtherance of their ungodly purpose) to revive, stir up, and kindle, evil and pernicious humours in their prince and sovereign lord, to the intent to deprive her of this great favour which then she stood in with the king (which they not a little feared would turn to the utter ruin of their antichristian sect, if it should continue), and thereby to stop the passage of the gospel; and consequently (having taken away her, who was the only patroness of the professors of the truth), openly, without fear of check or controlment, with fire and sword, after their accustomed manner, to invade the small remainder, as they hoped, of that poor flock—made their wicked entry unto this their mischievous enterprise, after this manner following.

The king's majesty, as you have heard, misliked to be contended withal in any kind of argument. This humour of his, although not in smaller matters, yet in causes of religion as occasion served, the queen would not stick, in reverent terms and humble talk, entering with him into discourse, with sound reasons of Scripture now and then to contrary; the which the king was so well accustomed unto in those matters, that at her hands he took all in good part, or, at least, did never show countenance of offence thereat: which did not a little appal her adversaries to hear and see. During which time, perceiving her so thoroughly grounded in the king's favour, they durst not for their lives once open their lips unto the king in any respect to touch her, either in her presence, or behind her back. And so long she continued this her accustomed usage, not only of hearing private sermons (as is said), but also of her free conference with the king in matters of religion, without all peril; until, at the last, by reason of his sore leg (the anguish whereof began more and more to increase), he waxed sickly, and therewithal froward, and difficult to be pleased.

Henry VIII.

A. D. 1546.

The king sometimes contrary to the queen in argument.

Waxeth sickly and difficult to please.

In the time of this his sickness, he had left his accustomed manner of coming, and visiting the queen: and therefore she, according as she understood him, by such assured intelligence as she had about him, to be disposed to have her company, sometimes being sent for, at other times of herself, would come to visit him, either after dinner or after supper, as was most fit for her purpose: at which times she would not fail to use all occasions to move him, according to her manner, zealously to proceed in the reformation of the church. The sharpness of the disease had sharpened the king's accustomed patience, so that he began to show some tokens of misliking; and, contrary unto his manner, upon a day breaking off that matter, he took occasion to enter into other talk, which somewhat amazed the queen: to whom, notwithstanding, in her presence he gave neither evil word nor countenance, but knit up all arguments with gentle words and loving countenance; and after other pleasant talk, she, for that time, took her leave of his majesty; who, after his manner, bidding her "Farewell, sweet heart!" (for that was his usual term to the queen,) licensed her to depart.

Beginneth to mislike the queen.

At this visitation chanced the bishop of Winchester aforementioned to be present, as also at the queen's taking her leave (who very well had printed in his memory the king's sudden interrupting of the queen in her tale, and falling into other matter), and thought, that if the iron were beaten whilst it was hot, and that the king's humour were holpen, such misliking might follow towards the queen, as might both overthrow her, and all her endeavours; and he only awaited some occasion to renew in the king's memory the former misliked argument. His expectation in that behalf did nothing fail him; for the king at that time showed himself no less prompt and ready to receive any information, than the bishop was maliciously bent to stir up the king's indignation against her. The king, immediately upon her departure from him, used these or like words: "A good hearing," quoth he, "it is, when women become such clerks; and a thing much to my comfort, to come in mine old days to be taught by my wife."

Winchester taketh occasion to work mischief.

The bishop, hearing this, seemed to mislike that the queen should so much forget herself as to take upon her to stand in any argument with his majesty, whom he, to his face, extolled for his rare virtues, and especially, for his learned judgment in matters of religion, above not only princes of that and other ages, but also above doctors professed in divinity; and said that it was an unseemly thing for any of his majesty's subjects to reason and argue with him so malapertly, and grievous to him, for his part, and other of his majesty's counsellors and servants, to hear the same; and that they all, by proof, knew his wisdom to be such, that it was not needful for any to put him in mind of any such matters: inferring, moreover, how dangerous and perilous a matter it is, and ever hath been, for a prince to suffer such insolent words at his subjects' hands; who, as they take boldness to contrary their sovereign in words, so want they no will, but only power and strength, to overthrow them in deeds.

Besides this, that the religion by the queen, so stiffly maintained, did not only disallow and dissolve the policy and politic government of princes, but also taught the people that all things ought to be in common; so that what colour soever they pretended, their opinions were indeed so odious, and for the prince's estate so perilous, that (saving the reverence they bear unto her for his majesty's sake) they durst be bold to affirm that the greatest subject in this land, speaking those words that she did speak, and defending those arguments that she did defend, had, with indifferent justice, by law deserved death.

Howbeit, for his part, he would not, nor durst he, without good warrant from his majesty, speak his knowledge in the queen's case, although very apparent reasons made for him, and such as his dutiful affection towards his majesty, and the zeal and preservation of his estate, would scarce give him leave to conceal, though the uttering thereof might, through her and her faction, be the utter destruction of him and of such as indeed did chiefly tender the prince's safety, without his majesty would take upon him to be their protector, and as it were their buckler: which if he would do (as in respect of his own safety he ought not to refuse), he, with others of his faithful counsellors, could within short time disclose such treasons cloaked with this cloak of heresy, that his majesty should easily perceive how perilous a matter it is, to cherish a serpent within his own bosom: howbeit, he would not, for his part, willingly deal in the matter, both for reverent respect aforesaid, and, also, for fear lest the faction was grown already too great, there, with the prince's safety, to discover the same. And therewithal, with heavy countenance, and whispering together with them of that sect there present, he held his peace.

ter abus-

king with his flattery.

These, and such other kinds of Winchester's flattering phrases, marvellously whetted the king both to anger and displeasure towards the queen, and also to be jealous and mistrustful of his own estate; for the assurance whereof, princes use not to be scrupulous to do any thing. Thus then Winchester, with his flattering words seeking to frame the king's disposition after his own pleasure, so far crept into the king at that time, and with doubtful fears he, with other his fellows, so filled the king's mistrustful mind, that before they departed the place, the king (to see, belike, what they would do) had given commandment, with warrant to certain of them made for that purpose, to consult together about the drawing of certain articles against the queen, wherein her life might be touched; which the king by their persuasions pretended to be fully resolved not to spare, having any rigour or colour of law to countenance the matter. With this commission they departed for that time from the king, resolved to put their pernicious practice to as mischievous an execution.

During the time of deliberation about this matter, they failed not to use all kind of policies and mischievous practices, as well to suborn accusers, as otherwise to betray her, in seeking to understand what books, by law forbidden, she had in her closet. And the better to bring their purpose to pass,<sup>1</sup> because they would not upon the sudden, but by means, deal with her, they thought it best, at first, to begin with some of those ladies, whom they knew to be great with her, and of her blood; the chiefest whereof, as most of estimation, and privy to all her doings, were these: the lady Herbert, afterwards countess of Pembroke, and sister to the queen, and chief of her privy chamber; the lady Lane, being of her privy chamber, and also her cousin german; the lady Tyrwit, of her privy chamber, and, for her virtuous disposition, in very great favour and credit with her.

Henry VIII.

1546.

Ladies
Herbert,
Lane, and Tyrwit.

It was devised that these three above named should, first of all, have been accused and brought to answer unto the six articles; and, upon their apprehension in the court, their closets and coffers should have been searched, that somewhat might have him found whereby the queen might be charged; which, being found, the queen herself, presently, should have been taken, and likewise, by barge, carried by night unto the Tower. This platform thus devised, but yet in the end coming to no effect; the king, by those aforesaid, was forthwith made privy unto the device by Winchester and Wriothesley, and his consent thereunto demanded; who (belike to prove the bishop's malice, how far it would presume), like a wise politic prince, was contented dissemblingly to give his consent, and to allow of every circumstance; knowing, notwithstanding, in the end what he would do. And thus the day, the time, and the place of these apprehensions aforesaid, were appointed; which device yet after was changed.

Winches-
form.

The king at that time lay at Whitehall, and used very seldom, being not well at ease, to stir out of his chamber or privy gallery; and few of his council, but by especial commandment, resorted unto him; these only except, who, by reason of this practice, used, oftener than ordinary, to repair unto him. This purpose so finely was handled, that it grew now within few days of the time appointed for the execution of the matter, and the poor queen neither knew, nor suspected, any thing at all, and therefore used, after her accustomed manner, when she came to visit the king, still to deal with him touching religion, as before she did.

The king, all this while, gave her leave to utter her mind at the full, without contradiction; not upon any evil mind or misliking (ye must conceive) to have her speedy dispatch, but rather closely dissembling with them, to try out the uttermost of Winchester's fetches. Thus, after her accustomed conference with the king, when she had taken her leave of him (the time and day of Winchester's final date approaching fast upon), it chanced that the king of himself, upon a certain night after her being with him, and her leave taken of him, in misliking her religion brake the whole practice unto one of his physicians, either Dr. Wendy, or else Owen, but rather Wendy, as is supposed: pretending unto him, as though he intended not any longer to be troubled with such a doctress as she was; and also declaring what trouble was in working against her by certain of her enemies, but yet charging him withal, upon peril of his life, not to utter it to any creature living: and thereupon declared unto him the parties above named, with all circumstances, and when and what the final resolution of the matter should be.

The wiles of this Ahithophel, Winchester, dispatched.

The queen all this while, compassed about with enemies and persecutors, perceived nothing of all this, nor what was working against her, and what traps were laid for her by Winchester and his fellows; so closely was the matter conveyed. But, see what the Lord God (who from his eternal throne of wisdom seeth and dispatcheth all the inventions of Ahithophel, and comprehendeth the wily, beguily, themselves) did for his poor handmaiden, in rescuing her from the pit of ruin, whereinto she was ready to fall unawares.

How the articles drawn against the queen, came to her hands.

The queen in an agony.

For, as the Lord would, so came it to pass, that the bill of articles drawn against the queen, and subscribed with the king's own hand (although dissemblingly you must understand), falling from the bosom of one of the aforesaid councillors, was found and taken up of some godly person, and brought immediately unto the queen; who, reading there the articles comprised against her, and perceiving the king's own hand unto the same, for the sudden fear thereof fell incontinent into a great melancholy and agony, bewailing and taking on in such sort as was lamentable to see, as certain of her ladies and gentlewomen, being yet alive, who were then present about her, can testify.

Wendy, the king's physician, sent to her.

The exhortation of Wendy to her.

The king, hearing what perplexity she was in, almost to the peril and danger of her life, sent his physicians unto her; who, travelling about her, and seeing what extremity she was in, did what they could for her recovery. Then Wendy, who knew the cause better than the others, and perceiving, by her words, what the matter was, according to that the king before had told him, for the comforting of her heavy mind, began to break with her in secret manner, touching the said articles devised against her, which he himself (he said) knew right well to be true: although he stood in danger of his life, if ever he were known to utter the same to any living creature. Nevertheless, partly for the safety of her life, and partly for the discharge of his own conscience, having remorse to consent to the shedding of innocent blood, he could not but give her warning of that mischief that hanged over her head; beseeching her most instantly to use all secrecy in that behalf, and exhorting her somewhat to frame and conform herself unto the king's mind, saying, he did not doubt but, if she would so do, and show her humble submission unto him, she should find him gracious and favourable unto her.

The king somewhat to the queen to comfort her.

It was not long after this, but the king hearing of the dangerous state wherein she yet still remained, came unto her himself; unto whom, after that she had uttered her grief, fearing lest his majesty (she said) had taken displeasure with her, and had utterly forsaken her, he, like a loving husband, with sweet and comfortable words so refreshed and appeased her careful mind, that she, upon the same, began somewhat to recover; and so the king, after he had tarried there about the space of an hour, departed.

After this the queen, remembering with herself the words that Master Wendy had said unto her, devised how, by some good opportunity, she might repair to the king's presence. And so, first commanding her ladies to convey away their books which were against the law, the next night following, after supper, she (waited upon only by the lady Herbert her sister, and the lady Lane, who carried the candle before her) went unto the king's bed-chamber, whom she found sitting and talking with certain gentlemen of his chamber; whom when the king did behold, very courteously he welcomed her, and, breaking off the talk which, before her coming, he had with the gentlemen aforesaid, began of himself, contrary to his manner before accustomed, to enter into talk of religion, seeming as it were desirous to be resolved by the queen, of certain doubts which he propounded.

The queen, perceiving to what purpose this talk did tend, not being unprovided in what sort to behave herself towards the king, with such answers resolved his questions as the time and opportunity present did require, mildly, and with reverent countenance, answering again after this manner:

'Your majesty,' quoth she, 'doth right-well know, neither I myself am ignorant, what great imperfection and weakness by our first creation is allotted unto us women, to be ordained and appointed as inferior and subject unto man as our head; from which head all our direction ought to proceed: and that as God made man to his own shape and likeness, whereby he, being endued with more special gifts of perfection, might rather be stirred to the contemplation of heavenly things, and to the earnest endeavour to obey his commandments, even so, also, made he woman of man, of whom and by whom she is to be governed, commanded, and directed; whose womanly weaknesses and natural imperfection ought to be tolerated, aided, and borne withal, so that, by his wisdom, such things as be lacking in her ought to be supplied.

The queen's politic submission to the king.

'Since, therefore, God hath appointed such a natural difference between man and woman, and your majesty being so excellent in gifts and ornaments of wisdom, and I a silly poor woman, so much inferior in all respects of nature unto you, how then cometh it now to pass that your majesty, in such diffuse causes of religion, will seem to require my judgment? which when I have uttered and said what I can, yet must I, and will I, refer my judgment in this, and in all other cases, to your majesty's wisdom, as my only anchor, supreme head and governor here in earth, next under God, to lean unto.'

'Not so by St. Mary,' quoth the king; 'you are become a doctor, Kate, to instruct us (as we take it), and not to be instructed or directed by us.'

'If your majesty take it so,' quoth the queen, 'then hath your majesty very much mistaken me, who have ever been of the opinion, to think it very unseemly, and preposterous, for the woman to take upon her the office of an instructor or teacher to her lord and husband; but rather to learn of her husband, and to be taught by him. And whereas I have, with your majesty's leave, heretofore been bold to hold talk with your majesty, wherein sometimes in opinions there hath seemed some difference, I have not done it so much to maintain opinion, as I did it rather to minister talk, not only to the end your majesty might with less grief pass over this painful time of your infirmity, being attentive to our talk, and hoping that your majesty should reap some case thereby; but also that I, hearing your majesty's learned discourse, might receive to myself some profit thereby: wherein, I assure your majesty, I have not missed any part of my desire in that behalf, always referring myself, in all such matters, unto your majesty, as by ordinance of nature it is convenient for me to do.'

"And is it even so, sweet heart!" quoth the king, "and tended your arguments to no worse end? Then, perfect friends we are now again, as ever at any time heretofore." And as he sat in his chair, embracing her in his arms, and kissing her, he added this, saying, that it did him more good at that time to hear those words of her own mouth, than if he had heard present news of a hundred thousand pounds in money fallen unto him. And with great signs and tokens of marvellous joy and liking, with promises and assurances never again in any sort more to mistake her, entering into other very pleasant discourses with the queen and lords, and the gentlemen standing by, in the end (being very far in the night) he gave her leave to depart: whom, in her absence, to the standers-by, he gave as singular and as affectuous commendations, as before time, to the bishop and the chancellor (who then were neither of them present), he seemed to dislike of her.

Now then, God be thanked! the king's mind was clean altered, and he detested in his heart (as afterwards he plainly showed) this tragical practice of those cruel Caiaphases; who, nothing understanding of the king's well-reformed mind and good disposition toward the queen, were busily occupied about thinking and providing for their next day's labour, which was the day determined to have carried the queen to the Tower.

The day and almost the hour appointed being come, the king, being disposed in the afternoon to take the air (waited upon with two gentlemen only of his bed-chamber), went into the garden, whither the queen also came, being sent for by the king himself, the three ladies above named alone waiting upon her; with whom the king, at that time, disposed himself to be as pleasant as ever he was in all his life before: when suddenly, in the midst of their mirth, the hour determined being come, in cometh the lord chancellor into the garden with forty of the king's guards at his heels, with purpose indeed to have taken the queen, together with the three ladies aforesaid,<sup>1</sup> whom they had before purposed to apprehend alone, even then unto the Tower. Whom then the king sternly beholding, breaking off his mirth with the queen, stepping a little aside, called the chancellor unto him; who, upon his knees, spake certain words unto the king, but what they were (for that they were softly spoken, and the king a pretty good distance from the queen) it is not well known, but it is most certain that the king's replying unto him, was "Knave!" for his answer; yea, "arrant knave! beast! and fool!" And with that the king commanded him presently to avault out of his presence. These words, although they were uttered somewhat low, yet were they so vehemently whispered out by the king, that the queen did easily, with her ladies aforesaid, overhear them; which had been not a little to her comfort, if she had known at that time the whole cause of his coming, as perfectly as after she knew it. Thus departed the lord chancellor out of the king's presence as he came, with all his train; the whole mould of all his device being utterly broken.

The king, after his departure, immediately returned to the queen; whom she perceiving to be very much chafed (albeit, coming towards her, he enforced himself to put on a merry countenance), with as sweet words as she could utter she endeavoured to qualify the king's displeasure, with request unto his majesty in behalf of the lord chancellor, with whom he seemed to be offended; saying, for his excuse, "that albeit she knew not what just cause his majesty had at that time to be offended with him, yet she thought that ignorance, not will, was the cause of his error," and so besought his majesty (if the cause were not very heinous), at her humble suit, to take it.

"Ah! poor soul," quoth he, "thou little knowest how evil he deserveth this grace at thy hands. Of my word, sweet-heart! he hath been towards thee an arrant knave, and so let him go." To this the queen in charitable manner replying, in few words ended that talk; having also, by God's only blessing, happily, for that time and ever, escaped the dangerous snares of her bloody and cruel enemies for the gospel's sake.

The pestiferous purpose of this bishop, and of such like bloody adversaries practising thus against the queen, and proceedings of God's gospel (as ye have heard), putteth me in remembrance of another like story of his wicked working in like manner, a little before; but much more pernicious and pestilent to the public church of Jesus Christ, than this was dangerous to the private estate of the queen: which story, likewise, I thought here, as in convenient place, to be adjoined and notified, to be known to all posterity, according as I have it faithfully recorded and storied by him who heard it of the archbishop Cranmer's own mouth declared, in order and form as followeth.

A Discourse touching a certain Policy used by Stephen Gardiner, Bishop of Winchester, in staying King Henry the Eighth from redressing of certain Abuses of Ceremonies in the Church; being Ambassador beyond the Seas.

ALSO THE COMMUNICATION OF KING HENRY THE EIGHTH HAD WITH THE AMBASSADOR OF FRANCE AT HAMPTON-COURT, CONCERNING THE REFORMATION OF RELIGION, AS WELL IN FRANCE AS IN ENGLAND, A.D. 1546, IN THE MONTH OF AUGUST.

It chanced in the time of king Henry the Eighth, when his highness did lastly (not many years before his death) conclude a league between the emperor, the French king, and himself, that the bishop of Winchester, Stephen Gardiner by name, was sent in embassy beyond the seas for that purpose; in whose absence the archbishop of Canterbury, Thomas Cranmer, attending upon the king's court, sought occasion somewhat to further the reformation of the corrupt religion, not yet fully restored unto perfection. For, like as the said archbishop was always diligent and forward to prefer and advance the sincere doctrine of the gospel, so was that other bishop a contrary instrument, continually spurning against the same, in whatsoever coast of the world he remained. For even now he, being beyond the seas in the temporal affairs of the realm, forgot not, but found the means, as a most valiant champion of the bishop of Rome, to stop and hinder, as well the good diligence of the said archbishop, as the godly disposition of the king's majesty in that behalf, which thus chanced:—

Whilst the said bishop of Winchester was now remaining beyond the seas about the affairs aforesaid, the king's majesty and the said archbishop having conference together for the reformation of some superstitious enormities in the church, amongst other things the king determined forthwith to pull down the roods in every church, and to suppress the accustomed ringing on Allhallow-night, with a few such like vain ceremonies; and therefore, when the said archbishop took his leave of the king to go into Kent, his diocese, his highness willed him to remember that he should cause two letters to be devised: "By me," quoth the king, "to be signed; the one to be directed unto you, my lord, and the other unto the archbishop of York, wherein I will command you both, to send forth your precepts unto all other bishops within your provinces, to see those enormities and ceremonies reformed undelayedly, that we have communed of."

So upon this, the king's pleasure known, when the archbishop of Canterbury was then come into Kent, he caused his secretary to conceive and write these letters according to the king's mind; and, being made in a readiness, he sent them to the court to sir Anthony Denny, for him to get them signed by the king. When Master Denny had moved the king thereunto, the king made this answer:—

"I am now otherways resolved, for you shall send my lord of Canterbury word, that since I spake with him about these matters, I have received letters from my lord of Winchester, now being on the other side of the sea, about the conclusion of a league between us, the emperor, and the French king, and he writeth plainly unto us, that the league will not prosper nor go forward, if we make any other innovation, change, or alteration, either in religion or ceremonies, than heretofore hath been already commenced and done. Wherefore, my lord of Canterbury must take patience herein, and forbear until we may espy a more apt and convenient time for that purpose."

This matter of reformation began to be revived again, at what time the great ambassador from the French king came to the king's majesty at Hampton Court, not long before his death;<sup>1</sup> where then no gentleman was permitted to wait upon his lord and master, without a velvet coat, and a chain of gold. And, for that entertainment of the ambassador, were builded in the park there three very notable, great, and sumptuous banqueting-houses; at the which it was purposed, that the said ambassador should have been, three sundry nights, very richly banqueted. But, as it chanced, the French king's great affairs were then suddenly such, that this ambassador was sent for home in post-haste, before he had received half the noble entertainment that was prepared for him, so that he had but the fruition of the first banqueting-house.

Now, what princelike order was there used in the furniture of the banquet, as well in placing of the noble estates, namely, the king's majesty, and the French ambassador, with the noble men both of England and France on the one part, and of the queen's highness and the lady Anne of Cleve, with other noble women and ladies on the other part, as also touching the great and sumptuous preparation of costly and fine dishes there out of number spent, it is not our purpose here presently to treat thereof, but only to consider and note the conference and communication had the first night after the said banquet was finished, between the king's majesty, the said ambassador, and the archbishop of Canterbury (the king's highness standing openly in the banqueting-house, in the open face of all the people, and leaning one arm upon the shoulder of the archbishop of Canterbury, and the other arm upon the shoulder of the ambassador), touching the establishing of godly religion between those two princes in both their realms: as, by the report of the said archbishop unto his secretary, upon occasion of his service to be done in king Edward's visitation, then being registrar in the same visitation, relation was made on that behalf in this sort:—

Henry VIII.

A. D. 1546.

Secret communication between the king and the French ambassador and the archbishop of Canterbury.

When the said visitation was put in a readiness, before the commissioners should proceed in their vyage, the said archbishop sent for the said registrar,<sup>1</sup> his man, unto Hampton Court, and willed him in any wise to make notes of certain things in the said visitation, whereof he gave unto him instruction: having then further talk with him touching the good effect and success of the said visitation. Upon this occasion the registrar said thus unto his master the archbishop.

The testimony and credit of the story.

Registrar:—‘I do remember, that you, not long ago, caused me to conceive and write letters, which king Henry the Eighth should have signed, and have directed unto your grace and the archbishop of York, for the reformation of certain enormities in the churches, as taking down of the roods, and forbidding of ringing on Allhallow-night, and such like vain ceremonies: which letters your grace sent to the court to be signed by the king's majesty, but as yet I think that there was never any thing done therein.’

‘Why,’ quoth the archbishop again, ‘never heard you those letters were suppressed and stopped?’ Whereunto the archbishop's servant, answering again: ‘As it was,’ said he, ‘my duty to write those letters, so was it not my part to be inquisitive what became thereupon.’ ‘Marry!’ quoth the archbishop, ‘my lord of Winchester then being beyond the seas, about the conclusion of a league between the emperor, the French king, and the king our master, and fearing that some reformation should here pass in the realm touching religion, in his absence, against his appetite, wrote to the king's majesty,<sup>2</sup> bearing him in hand that the league then towards, would not prosper nor go forwards on his majesty's behalf, if he made any other innovation or alteration in religion, or in the ceremonies in the church, than was already done; which his advertisement herein caused the king to stay the signing of those letters, as sir Anthony Denny wrote to me by the king's commandment.’

Then said his servant again unto him, ‘Forasmuch as the king's good intent took no place then, now your grace may go forward in those matters, the opportunity of the time much better serving thereunto than in king Henry's days.’

‘Not so,’ quoth the archbishop. ‘It was better to attempt such reformation in king Henry the Eighth's days than at this time; the king being in his infancy. For, if the king's father had set forth any thing for the reformation of abuses, who was he that durst gainsay it? Marry! we are now in doubt how men will take the change, or alteration of abuses, in the church; and, therefore, the council hath forborne especially to speak thereof, and of other things which gladly they would have reformed in this visitation, referring all those and such-like matters unto the discretions of the visitors. But, if king Henry the Eighth had lived unto this day with the French king, it had been past my lord of Winchester's power to have visored the king's highness, as he did when he was about the same league.’

‘I am sure you were at Hampton Court,’ quoth the archbishop, ‘when the French king's ambassador was entertained there at those solemn banquetinghouses, not long before the king's death; namely, when, after the banquet was done the first night, the king was leaning upon the ambassador and upon me: if I should tell what communication between the king's highness and the said ambassador was had, concerning the establishing of sincere religion then, a man would hardly have believed it: nor had I myself thought the king's highness had been so forward in those matters as then appeared. I may tell you, it passed the pulling down of roods, and suppressing the ringing of bells. I take it that few in England would have believed, that the king's majesty and the French king had been at this point, not only, within half a year after, to have changed the mass in both the realms into a communion (as we now use it), but also utterly to have extirped and banished the bishop of Rome, and his usurped power, out of both their realms and dominions. Yea, they were so thoroughly and firmly resolved in that behalf, that they meant also to exhort the emperor to do the like in Flanders and other his countries and seignories; or else they would break off from him. And herein the king's highness willed me, quoth the archbishop, 'to pen a form thereof to be sent to the French king, to consider of. But the deep and most secret providence of Almighty God, owing to this realm a sharp scourge for our iniquities, prevented for a time this their most godly device and intent, by taking to his mercy both these princes.'

Here would also something be said of sir George Blage, one of the king's privy chamber, who, being falsely accused by sir Hugh Caverley, knight, and Master Littleton, was sent for by Wriothesley, lord chancellor, the Sunday before Anne Askew suffered, and the next day was carried to Newgate, and from thence to Guildhall, where he was condemned the same day, and appointed to be burned the Wednesday following. The words which his accusers laid unto him were these: "What if a mouse should eat the bread? then, by my consent, they should hang up the mouse?" whereas, indeed, these words he never spake, as to his life's end he protested. But the truth (as he said) was this, that they, craftily to undermine him, walking with him in Paul's church after a sermon of Dr. Crome, asked if he were at the sermon. He said, "Yea." "I heard say," saith Master Littleton, "that he said in his sermon, that the mass profiteth neither for the quick, nor for the dead." "No," saith Master Blage. "Wherefore then?" "Belike for a gentleman, when he rideth a hunting, to keep his horse from stumbling." And so they departing, immediately after he was apprehended (as is showed), and condemned to be burned. When this was heard among them of the privy chamber, the king, hearing them whispering together (which he could never abide), commanded them to tell him the matter. Whereupon the matter being opened, and suit made to the king, especially by the good earl of Bedford, then lord privy seal, the king, being sore offended with their doings, that they would come so near him, and even into his Privy Chamber, without his knowledge, sent for Wriothesley, commanding eftsoons to draw out his pardon himself, and so was he set at liberty; who, coming after to the king's presence, "Ah! my pig" (saith the king to him, for so he was wont to call him). "Yea," said he, "if your majesty had not been better to me than your bishops were, your pig had been roasted ere this time."

But to let this matter of sir George Blage pass, we will now reduce our story again to Anne Askew and her fellow martyrs, who, the same week, were burned, and could find no pardon.

Then the catholic fathers, when they had brought this christian woman, with the residue, as above hath been declared, unto their rest, they, being now in their ruff and triumph, like as the pharisees, when they had brought Christ to his grave, devised with themselves how to keep Him down still, and to overtread truth for ever. Whereupon, consulting with certain of the council, they made out a strait and hard proclamation, authorized by the king's name, for the abolishing of the Scripture, and all such English books as might give any light to the setting forth of God's true word, and the grace of the gospel: the copy and tenour of which proclamation is this, as followeth.

Henry VIII.

A. D. 1546.

A Proclamation for the abolishing of English Books, after the Death of Anne Askew, set forth by the King, A. D. 1546, the eighth day of July.<sup>2</sup>

The king's most excellent majesty—understanding how, under pretence of expounding and declaring the truth of God's Scripture, divers lewd and evil-disposed persons have taken upon them to utter and sow abroad, by books imprinted in the English tongue, sundry pernicious and detestable errors and heresies, not only contrary to the laws of this realm, but also repugnant to the true sense of God's law and his word,<sup>1</sup> by reason whereof certain men of late, to the destruction of their own bodies and souls, and to the evil example of others, have attempted arrogantly and maliciously to impugn the truth, and therewith trouble the sober, quiet, and godly religion, united and established under the king's majesty in this his realm; his highness, minding to foresee the dangers that might ensue of the said books, is enforced to use his general prohibition, commandment, and proclamation, as followeth:

First, That from henceforth no man, woman, or person, of what estate, condition, or degree soever he or they be, shall, after the last day of August next ensuing, receive, have, take, or keep in his or their possession, the text of the New Testament, of Tyndale's or Coverdale's translation in English, nor any other than is permitted by the act of parliament made in the session of the parliament holden at Westminster in the thirty-fourth and thirty-fifth year of his majesty's most noble reign; nor, after the said day, shall receive, have, take, or keep, in his or their possession, any manner of books printed or written in the English tongue, which be, or shall be, set forth in the names of Frith, Tyndale, Wickliff, Joy, Roy, Basil, Bale, Barnes, Coverdale, Turner, Tracy, or by any of them; or any other book or books containing matter contrary to the said act made in the year thirty-four, or thirty-five; but shall, before the last day of August next coming, deliver the same English book or books, to his master in that household, if he be a servant, or dwell under any other; and the master or ruler of the house, and such others as dwell at large, shall deliver all such books of these sorts aforesaid as they have, or shall come to their hands, delivered as afore or otherwise, to the mayor, bailiff, or chief constable of the town where they dwell, to be by them delivered over openly within forty days next following after the said delivery, to the sheriff of the shire, or to the bishop's chancellor, or commissary of the same diocese; to the intent the said bishop, chancellor, commissary, and sheriff, and every of them, may cause them incontinently to be openly burned: which thing the king's majesty's pleasure is, that every of them shall see executed in most effectual sort, and of their doings thereof make certificate to the king's majesty's most honourable council, before the first day of October next coming.

And, to the intent that no man shall mistrust any danger of such penal statutes as be passed in this behalf, for the keeping of the said books, the king's majesty is most graciously contented, by this proclamation, to pardon that offence to the said time appointed by this proclamation for the delivery of the said books; and commandeth that no bishop, chancellor, commissary, mayor, bailiff, sheriff, or constable, shall be curious to mark who bringeth forth such books, but only order and burn them openly, as is in this proclamation ordered. And if any man, after the last day of August next coming, shall have any of the said books in his keeping, or be proved and convicted, by sufficient witness, before four of the king's most honourable council, to have hidden them, or used them, or any copy of any of them, or any part of them, whereby it should appear that he willingly hath offended the true meaning of this proclamation, the same shall not only suffer imprisonment and punishment of his body at the king's majesty's will and pleasure, but also shall make such fine and ransom to his highness for the same, as by his majesty, or four of his grace's said council, shall be determined, &c.

Finally, His majesty straitly chargeth and commandeth, that no person or persons, of what estate, degree, or condition soever he or they be, from the day of this proclamation, presume to bring any manner of English book, concerning any manner of christian religion, printed in the parts beyond the seas, into this realm, to sell, give, or distribute any English book, printed in outward parts, or the copy of any such book, or any part thereof, to any person dwelling within this his grace's realm, or any other his majesty's dominions, unless the same shall be specially licensed so to do by his highness's express grant, to be obtained in writing for the same, upon the pains before limited; and therewithal to incur his majesty's extreme indignation.

Untrue dealing of the papists in gathering heresies where none are.

Forasmuch as it is, and always hath been, the common guise and practice of the pope's church, to extinguish, condemn, and abolish all good books and wholesome treatises of learned men, under a false pretence of errors and heresies, whereof examples abundantly appear in this history above: now, for the better trial hereof, to see and try the impudent and shameless vanity of these catholic clergymen, in mistaking, falsifying, depraving, blaspheming, and slandering, where they have no cause, against all right and honest dealing, yea, against their own knowledge, conscience, and manifest verity of God's word; I shall therefore desire the attentive reader, before we pass any further, to consider and expend here two things by the way: First, what opinions and articles these men gather out of their books for errors and heresies. Secondly, how wittingly and willingly they wrest, pervert, and misconstrue their sayings and writings in such sense as the writers never spake nor meant; and all, to bring them into hatred of the world, after they have burned their books.

Articles of Wickliff and others, falsified by the papists.

So did they before with John Wickliff, John Huss, and Jerome: so did they before with Martin Luther, Tyndale, Frith, Lambert, Barnes, Joye, Roy, Seton; and, briefly, yet do still with all the protestants, either perverting their sayings otherwise than they meant, or noting for heresies such as are manifest principles and grounds of our religion: or else falsely belieing them, or untruly mistaking them, either in mangling the places, or adding to their words, as may serve for their most advantage, to bring them out of credit with princes and all the people.

For the more evident probation and experience whereof, thou shalt see here, christian reader, as in a table laid before thine eyes, the book or catalogue of such errors, blasphemies, and heresies, which the catholic papists in their own registers have extracted out of their books, whom in this, and other proclamations, they have condemned. Whereunto, moreover, we have annexed the very places also of the authors, out of which every article is gathered, keeping also the same signature of verse and page, which they in their registers do send us unto. So that with little diligence thou mayest now, loving reader, easily perceive, conferring the articles and places together, what truth and fidelity these bloody catholics have used toward the children of God: first, in burning up their bodies; then, in consuming and abolishing their books; and afterwards, in drawing out articles, such as they list themselves, out of their works, to make the people believe what damnable heretics they were, as by these articles hereunder ensuing, collected and contained in their own registers, may well appear. In all which articles, there is not one (speaking of these writers which here they have condemned) but either it is a perfect truth, and a principle of christian doctrine, or else it is falsely gathered, or perversely recited, or craftily handled, and maliciously mangled; having either something cut from it, or some more added, or else racked out of his right place, or wrested to a wrong meaning, which the place giveth not, or else which some other place following doth better expound and declare. This false and malicious dealing hath always been a common practice amongst God's enemies from the beginning, to falsify, wrest, and deprave all things, whatsoever maketh not to their faction and affection, be it ever so true and just. So began they with Stephen, the first martyr of Jesus Christ,<sup>1</sup> and so have they continued still, and yet do to this present day.

The words of St. Stephen falsely depraved.

Long it were to recite, but more grievous to behold, what spite and falsehood were used in the articles of the Albigenses, Waldenses, Wickliff, Swinderby, Brute, Thorpe, Armachanus, sir John Oldecastle, John Huss, the Bohemians, and such others: which thing, if the books and places whence these articles were gathered against them had been suffered to remain, we might more plainly understand. In the mean season, as touching these articles here present, forasmuch as the bishops' own registers have offered them unto us, and do yet remain with the selfsame books from whence they be excerpted, I shall therefore desire thee, friendly reader, first to consider the articles, and lay them with the places which the registers themselves do assign, and then judge thyself, what is to be thought thereof. The articles, gathered out of the aforesaid books, with the bishops' decree prefixed before the same, are as hereunder follow:

whom this under-written shall or may touch or appertain unto in any manner of wise in time to come; William, by the sufferance of Almighty God arch-bishop of Canterbury, primate of all the realm of England, sendeth greeting in our Lord God everlasting. We signify unto you all, and let you well to wit and know by these presents, that the king, our sovereign lord, hearing of many books in the English tongue, containing many detestable errors, and damnable opinions, printed in the parts beyond the seas, to be brought into divers towns, and sundry parts of this his realm of England, and sown abroad in the same, to the great decay of our faith catholic, and perilous corruption of his people, unless speedy remedy were briefly provided; his highness, willing evermore to employ all his study and mind, in the high degree which Almighty God hath called him unto, to the wealth of his subjects, that they might live not only in tranquillity and peace, but also be kept pure and clean of all contagion, and wrong opinions in Christ's religion: considering also, that he, being defender of the faith, would be full loth to suffer such evil seed sown amongst his people, and so take root that it might overgrow the corn of the catholic doctrine before sprung in the souls of his subjects: for the repelling of such books, calling unto him of his great goodness and gracious disposition, not only certain of the chief prelates and clerks of his realm, but also of each university a certain number of the chief learned men, proposed such of those books as his grace had ready to be read unto them, requiring to hear in that behalf their advice and judgment of them: who, both by great diligence and mature deliberation, perusing over the said books, found in them many errors and heresies, both detestable and damnable, being of such sort, that they were like briefly to corrupt a great part of his people (if they might be suffered to remain in their hands any space); gathering also out of them many great errors and pestilent heresies, and noting them in writing, to the intent to show for what cause they reputed the said books damnable; of which hereafter, out of each book gathered, many do ensue: albeit many more there be in the said books, which books totally do swarm full of heresies and detestable opinions.

Heresies and Errors collected by the Bishops out of the Book of Tyndale, named "The Wicked Mammon,"

WITH THE PLACES OF THE BOOK ANNEXED TO THE SAME, OUT OF WHICH EVERY ARTICLE IS COLLECTED.

First Article. "Faith only justifieth." Fol. 62.<sup>1</sup>

The papists, of the principles of divinity, make heresy.

This article being a principle of the Scripture, and the ground of our salvation, is plain enough by St. Paul and the whole body of the Scripture; neither can any make this a heresy, but they must make St. Paul a heretic, and show themselves enemies unto the promises of grace, and to the cross of Christ.

See Appendix.

Article.

II. "The law maketh us to hate God, because we be born under the power of the devil." Fol. 62.

III. "It is impossible for us to consent to the will of God." Fol. 62.

The place of Tyndale from whence these articles be wrested, is in the "Wicked Mammon," as followeth: which place I beseech thee indifferently to read, and then to judge.

'In the faith which we have in Christ, and in God's promises, find we mercy, life, favour, and peace. In the law we find death, damnation, and wrath: moreover, the curse and vengeance of God upon us. And it, that is to say the law, is called of Paul, the ministration of death and damnation. (2 Cor. iii.) In the law we are proved to be enemies of God, and that we hate him: for how can we be at peace with God, and love him, seeing we are conceived and born under the power of the devil, and are his possession and kingdom, his captives and bondmen, and led at his will, and he holdeth our hearts, so that it is impossible for us to consent to the will of God: much more is it impossible for a man to fulfil the law by his own strength and power, seeing that we are by birth and nature the heirs of eternal damnation,' etc.<sup>1</sup>

Article

IV. "The law requireth impossible things of us." Fol. 62.

Read the place :

'The law, when it commandeth that thou shalt not lust, giveth thee not power so to do, but damneth thee because thou canst not so do. If thou wilt therefore be at peace with God, and love him, then must thou turn to the promises, and to the gospel, which is called of Paul [in the place before rehearsed of the Corinthians] the ministrations of righteousness, and of the spirit.'<sup>2</sup>

V. "The Spirit of God turneth us and our nature, that we do good, as naturally as a tree doth bring forth fruit." Fol. 65. Article

The place is this :

'The Spirit of God accompanieth faith, and bringeth with her light, where-with a man beholdeth himself in the law of God, and seeth his miserable bondage and captivity, and humbleth himself, and abhorreth himself. She bringeth God's promises of all good things in Christ. God worketh him with his word, and in his word, and as his word is preached, faith rooteth herself in the hearts of the elect. And as faith entereth, and the word of God is believed, the power of God looseth the heart from the captivity and bondage under sin, and knitteth and coupleth him to God, and to the will of God; altereth him and changeth him clean; fashioneth and forgeth him anew; giveth him power to love and to do that which before was impossible for him either to love or do, and turneth him into a new nature; so that he loveth that which before he hated, and hateth that which he before loved, and is clean altered and changed and contrarily disposed, and is knit and coupled fast to God's will, and naturally bringeth forth good works, that is to say, that which God commandeth to do, and not things of his own imagination: and that doth he of his own accord, as a tree bringeth forth fruit of her own accord,' etc.<sup>3</sup>

VI. "Works do only declare to thee that thou art justified." Fol. 67. Article.

If Tyndale say that works do only declare our justification, he doth not thereby destroy good works; but only showeth the right use and office of good works to be nothing to merit our justification, but rather to testify a lively faith, which only justificth us. The article is plain by the Scripture and St. Paul.

VII. "Christ with all his works did not deserve heaven." Fol. 69. Article

Read the place :

'All good works must be done freely, with a single eye, without respect of any thing, and that no profit be sought thereby. That commandeth Christ,<sup>4</sup> where he saith, Freely have ye received, freely give again. For look, as Christ with all his works did not deserve heaven<sup>5</sup> (for that was his already), but did us service therewith; and neither looked [for], nor sought his own profit, but ours, and the honour of God his Father only: even so we, with all our works, may not seek our own profit, neither in this world nor in heaven; but must and ought freely to work to honour God withal, and without all manner [of] respect seek our neighbour's profit, and do him service,' etc.

VIII. "Labouring by good works to come to heaven, thou shamest Christ's blood." Fol. 70. Article.

(1) Herein is nothing contained but what is rightly consonant unto the Scripture.

(2) 2 Cor. iii. What heresy is in these words?

(3) This place speaketh of the operation and effect of faith, containing nothing but what is maintainable by the Scripture.

(4) Matt. x.

(5) He meaneth in his divinity, but in his humanity he deserved heaven by his works, not only for himself, but for us all.

Henry
1516.

To say that heaven is gotten by our deservings, is a popish heresy, and contrary to the Scriptures.
Article.

Read the place :

‘ If thou wouldest obtain heaven with the merits and deservings of thine own works, so doest thou wrong, yea and shamest the blood of Christ, and unto thee Christ is dead in vain. Now is the true believer heir of God by Christ’s deservings, yea and in Christ was predestinate and ordained unto eternal life before the world began. And when the gospel is preached unto us, we believe the mercy of God ; and, in believing, we receive the Spirit of God, which is the earnest of eternal life ; and we are in eternal life already, and feel already in our hearts the sweetness thereof, and are overcome with the kindness of God and Christ, and, therefore, love the will of God, and of love are ready to work freely ; and not to obtain that which is given us freely, and whereof we are heirs already.’

IX. “ Saints in heaven cannot help us thither.” Fol. 70.

Whether saints can help us unto heaven, see the Scripture ; and mark well the office of the Son of God, our only Saviour and Redeemer, and thou shalt not need to seek any further.

Article.

X. “ To build a church in the honour of our Lady, or any other saint, is in vain ; they cannot help thee, they be not thy friends.” Fol. 71.

Read the place of Tyndale :

Thy friends, to be made of the wicked mammon, mean the poor alive, and not the saints departed.
Article.

‘ What buildest thou churches, foundest abbeys, chantries, and colleges, in honour of saints, to my Mother, to St. Peter, Paul, and saints that be dead, to make of them thy friends? They need it not, yea, they are not thy friends, [but theirs which lived then when they did, of whom they were holpen.] Thy friends are thy poor [which are now in thy time and live with thee, thy poor] neighbours, which need thy help and succour. Them make thy friends with the unrighteous mammon, that they may testify of thy faith, and that thou mayest know and feel that thy faith is right, and not feigned.’

XI. “ All flesh is in bondage of sin, and cannot but sin.” Fol. 74.

This article is evident enough of itself, confirmed by the Scripture, and needeth no allegations.

Article.

XII. “ Thou canst not be damned without Christ be damned, nor Christ be saved without thou be saved.” Fol. 75, 76.

Read the place :

‘ A physician serveth but for sick men, and that for such [sick] men as feel their sickness, and mourn there-for, and long for health. Christ, likewise, serveth but for such sinners only as feel their sin, and that for such sinners that sorrow and mourn in their hearts for health. Health is the power or strength to fulfil the law, or to keep the commandments : Now, he that longeth for that health, that is to say, for to do the law of God, is blessed in Christ, and hath a promise that his lust shall be fulfilled, and that he shall be made whole : Blessed are they which hunger and thirst for righteousness’ sake, (that is, to fulfil the law,) for their lust shall be fulfilled. Matt. 5.

‘ This longing, and the consent of the heart unto the law of God, is the working of the Spirit, which God hath poured into thine heart, in earnest, that thou mightest be sure that God will fulfil all his promises that he hath made thee.’ It is also the seal and mark which God putteth on all men that he chooseth unto everlasting life. So long as thou seest thy sin, and mournest, and consentest to the law, and lonigest (though thou be never so weak), yet the Spirit shall keep thee in all temptations from desperation, and certify thine heart, that God, for his truth, shall deliver thee, and save thee ; yea, and by thy good deeds shalt thou be saved—not which thou hast done, but which Christ hath done for thee. For Christ is thine, and all his deeds are thy deeds. Christ is in thee, and thou in him, knit together inseparably; neither canst thou be damned, except Christ be damned with thee; neither can Christ be saved, except thou be saved with him'

(1) The believing man, standing upon the certainty of God’s promise, may assure himself of his salvation, as truly as Christ himself is saved ; and he can no more than Christ himself be damned ; and, although the Scripture doth not use this phrase of speaking, yet it importeth no less its effect, by reason of the verity of God’s promise, which impossible it is to fail.

Henry VIII.

A. D.
1516.

The like comfortable words he hath afterwards, fol. 82, which are these :

'He that desireth mercy, the same feeleth his own misery and sin, and mourneth in his heart to be delivered, that he might honour God, and God for his truth must hear him, which saith by the mouth of Christ,<sup>1</sup> Blessed are they which hunger and thirst after righteousness, for they shall be satisfied. God, for his truth's sake, must put the righteousness of Christ in him, and wash his unrighteousness away in the blood of Christ. And be the sinner never so weak, so feeble and frail, though he have sinned never so oft and so grievous; yet so long as this lust, desire, and mourning to be delivered, remaineth in him, God seeth not his sins, reckoneth them not, for his truth's sake, and love to Christ. He is not a sinner in the sight of God, that would be no sinner: he that would be delivered, hath his heart loose already: his heart sinneth not, but mourneth, repenteth, and consenteth unto the law and will of God, and justifieth God, that is, beareth record that God who made the law, is righteous and just. And such a heart, trusting in Christ's blood, is accepted for full righteousness, and his weakness, infirmity, and frailty is pardoned, and his sins are not looked upon, until God put more strength in him, and fulfil his lust.'

XIII. "The commandments be given us, not to do them, but to know our damnation, and to call for mercy of God." Fol. 76. Article

Read the place :

'If thou wilt enter into life, keep the commandments.<sup>2</sup>—First remember, that when God commandeth us to do any thing, he doth it not therefore, because that we, of ourselves, are able to do that he commandeth, but that by the law we might see and know our horrible damnation and captivity under sin, and should repent and come unto Christ, and receive mercy,' etc.<sup>3</sup>

XIV. "Fasting is only to avoid surfeit, and to tame the body; all other purposes be nought." Fol. 81. Article.

The words of Tyndale be these :

'Fasting is to abstain from surfeiting or overmuch eating, from drunkenness and cares of the world, as thou mayest read in Luke xxi. And the end of fasting, is to tame the body, that the spirit may have a free course unto God, and may quietly talk with God. For overmuch eating and drinking, and care of worldly business, press down the spirit, choke her, and tangle her, that she cannot lift up herself to God. Now he that fasteth for any other intent than to subdue the body, that the spirit may wait on God, and freely exercise herself in the things of God, the same is blind, and wotteth not what he doth; erreth, and shooteth at a wrong mark; and his intent and imagination is abominable in the sight of God.'

The true end of fasting.

XV. "To bid the poor man pray for me, is only to remember him to do his duty; not that I have any trust in his prayer." Fol. 82. Article.

The words of Tyndale be these :

'When we desire one another to pray for us, that do we to put our neighbour in remembrance of his duty, and not that we trust in his holiness: our trust is in God, in Christ, and in the truth of God's promises. We have also a promise, that when two or three or more agree together in one thing, according to the will of God, God heareth us. Notwithstanding, as God heareth many, so heareth

XVI. "Though thou give me a thousand pounds to pray for thee, I am no more bound now than I was before." Fol. 83.

The words be these :

'If thou give me a thousand pounds to pray for thee, I am no more bound than I was before. Man's imagination can make the commandment of God neither greater nor smaller; neither can to the law of God either add or diminish. God's commandment is as great as himself.'<sup>2</sup>

Article.

XVII. "A good deed done, and not of fervent charity, as Christ's was, is sin." Fol. 83.

The words of Tyndale be these :

'Though thou show mercy unto thy neighbour, yet if thou do it not with such burning love as Christ did unto thee, so must thou acknowledge thy sin, and desire mercy in Christ.'<sup>3</sup>

Article.

XVIII. "Every man is lord of another man's goods." Fol. 83.

The words of Tyndale be these :

'Christ is Lord over all, and every christian is heir annexed with Christ, and therefore lord of all, and every one lord of whatsoever another hath. If thy brother or neighbour therefore need, and thou have to help him, and yet showest not mercy, but withdrawest thy hands from him, then robbest thou him of his own, and art a thief.'<sup>4</sup>

XIX. "I am bound to love the Turk with the very bottom of my heart." Fol. 84.

The place of this article is this :

'I am bound to love the Turk with all my might and power, yea and above my power, even from the ground of my heart, after the ensample that Christ loved me; neither to spare goods, body, nor life, to win him to Christ. And what can I do more for thee, if thou gavest me all the world? Where I see need, there can I not but pray, if God's Spirit be in me.'

Article.

XX. "The worst Turk living hath as much right to my goods at his needs, as my household, or mine own self."<sup>5</sup> Fol. 84.

Read and mark well the place in "The Wicked Mammon :"

'In Christ, we are all of one degree without respect of persons. Notwithstanding, though a Christian man's heart be open to all men, and receiveth all men, yet, because that his ability of goods extendeth not so far, this provision is made, that every man shall care for his own household; as father and mother, and thine elders that have holpen thee; wife, children, and servants. If thou shouldst not care and provide for thine household, then were thou an infidel, seeing thou hast taken on thee so to do; and forasmuch as that is thy part, committed unto thee of the congregation. When thou hast done thy duty to thine household, and yet hast further abundance of the blessing of God, that owest thou to the poor that cannot labour, or would labour and can get no work, and

(1) The place biddeth us put our trust in Christ only, and not in poor men's prayers; and so doth the Scripture likewise, and yet no heresy therein.

(2) This place answereth for itself sufficiently.

(3) This place tendeth to no such meaning as is in the article, but only showeth our good deeds to be imperfect.

(4) This place giveth to none any propriety of another man's goods but only by way of christian communion.

(5) Lo! reader, how peevishly this place is wrested. First, here is no mention made of any Turk. Secondly, this place speaking of an infidel, meaneth of such Christians as forsake their own households. Thirdly, by his right in thy goods, he meaneth no propriety that he hath to claim, but only to put thee in remembrance of thy christian duty what to give.

are destitute of friends: to the poor, I mean, which thou knowest; to them of thine own parish. [For that provision ought to be had in the congregation, that every parish care for their poor.] If thy neighbours which thou knowest be served, and thou yet have superfluity, and hearest necessity to be among the brethren a thousand miles off, to them art thou debtor: yea, to the very infidels we be debtors, if they need, so far forth as we maintain them not against Christ, or to blaspheme Christ. Thus is every man that needeth thy help, thy father, mother, sister, and brother in Christ; even as every man that doth the will of the Father, is father, mother, sister, and brother unto Christ.

'Moreover, if any be an infidel and a false christian, and forsake his household, his wife, children, and such as cannot help themselves, then art thou bound to them, and thou have wherewith, even as much as to thine own household; and they have as good right in thy goods, as thou thyself,' etc.

'If the whole world were thine, yet hath every brother his right in thy goods and is heir with thee, as we are all heirs with Christ.'

XXI. "Alms deserve no meed." Fol. 84.

Article.

The place is this:

'He that seeketh with his alms more than to be merciful, to be a neighbour, to succour his brother's need, to do his duty to his brother, to give his brother that he oweth him, the same is blind, and seeth not what it is to be a christian man, and to have fellowship in Christ's blood.'

XXII. "There is no work better than another to please God, to make water, to wash dishes, to be a souter,<sup>1</sup> or an apostle, all is one; to wash dishes and to preach is all one, as touching the deed to please God." Fol. 85.

Article.

The words of Tyndale be these:

'As pertaining to good works, understand that all works are good which are done within the law of God, in faith and with thanksgiving to God; and understand that thou, in doing them, pleasest God, whatsoever thou doest within the law of God; as when thou makest water, etc.

'Moreover, put no difference between works, but whatsoever cometh into thy hands, that do, as time, place, and occasion giveth, and as God hath put thee in degree, high or low: for as touching to please God, there is no work better than another. God looketh not first on thy works, as the world doth, as though the beautifulness of the works pleased him, as it doth the world, or as though he had need of them. But God looketh first on the heart; what faith thou hast to his words; how thou believest him [trustest him], and how thou lovest him for his mercy that he hath showed thee. He looketh with what heart thou workest, and not what thou workest; how thou acceptest the degree that he hath put thee in, and not of what degree thou art, whether thou be an apostle or a shoemaker.

'Set this ensample before thine eyes: Thou art a kitchen-page, and wastest thy master's dishes. Another is an apostle, and preacheth the word of God. Of this apostle hark what St. Paul saith,<sup>2</sup> If I preach (saith he), I have nought to rejoice in, for necessity is put unto me. As who should say, God hath made me so: woe is unto me if I preach not. If I do it willingly (saith he), then have I my reward; that is, then am I sure that God's Spirit is in me, and that I am elect to eternal life. If I do it against my will, an office is committed unto me; that is, if I do it not of love to God, but to get a living thereby, and for a worldly purpose, and had rather otherwise live; then do I that office which God hath put me in, and yet please not God myself, etc.

'Moreover, howsoever he preacheth, he hath not to rejoice in that he preacheth. But and if he preach willingly, with a true heart, and of conscience to God, then hath he his reward; that is, then feeleth he the earnest of eternal life, and the working of the Spirit of God in him. And as he feeleth God's goodness and mercy, so be thou sure he feeleth his own infirmity, weakness, and unworthiness, and mourneth and acknowledgeth his sin, in that the heart will not arise to work with that full lust and love that is in Christ our Lord: and, nevertheless, is he yet at peace with God, through faith and trust in Christ Jesu. For the earnest of the Spirit that worketh in him, testifieth and beareth witness unto his heart, that God hath chosen him, and that his grace shall suffice him, which grace is now not idle in him. In his works putteth he no trust.

'Now thou that ministerest in the kitchen, and art but a kitchen-page, receivest all things of the hand of God, knowest that God hath put thee in that office, submittest thyself to his will, and servest thy master, not as a man, but as Christ himself, with a pure heart, according as Paul teacheth us; putteth thy trust in God, and with him seekest thy reward. Moreover, there is not a good deed done, but thy heart rejoiceth therein; yea, when thou hearest that the word of God is preached by this apostle, and seest the people turn to God, thou consentest unto the deed; thy heart breaketh out in joy, springeth and leapeth in thy breast, that God is honoured; and thou, in thine heart, doest the same that the apostle doth, and haply with greater delectation and a more fervent spirit. Now, he that receiveth a prophet in the name of a prophet, shall receive the reward of a prophet (Matt. x.); that is, he that consenteth to the deed of a prophet, and maintaineth it, the same hath the same Spirit, and earnest of everlasting life, which the prophet hath, and is elect as the prophet is.

'Now if thou compare deed to deed, there is great difference betwixt washing of dishes and preaching the word of God: but, as touching to please God, none at all. For neither that, nor this pleaseth, but as far forth as God hath chosen a man; hath put his Spirit in him, and purified his heart, by faith and trust in Christ,' etc.<sup>1</sup>

Article. XXIII. "Ceremonies of the church have brought the world from God." Fol. 86.

Read the place of Tyndale:

'Seek the word of God in all things, and without the word of God do nothing, though it appear ever so glorious. Whatsoever is done without the word of God, that count idolatry. The kingdom of heaven is within us.<sup>2</sup> Wonder therefore at no monstrous shape, nor at any outward thing without the word. For the world was never drawn from God, but with an outward show, and glorious appearance and shining of hypocrisy, and of feigned and visored fasting, praying, watching, singing, offering, sacrificing, hallowing of superstitious ceremonies, and monstrous disguising.'

Article. XXIV. "Beware of good intents: they are damned of God." Fol. 87.

Article. XXV. "See thou do nothing but that God biddeth thee." Fol. 87. The words of Tyndale out of which these two articles be gathered are these:

'Beware of thy good intent, good mind, good affection or zeal, as they call it. Peter, of a good mind, and of a good affection or zeal, chid Christ, because he said that he must go to Jerusalem and there be slain. But Christ called him Satan for his labour (a name that belongeth to the devil), and said that he perceived not godly things, but worldly.<sup>3</sup> Of a good intent, and of a fervent affection to Christ, the sons of Zebedee would have had fire to come down from heaven to consume the Samaritans; but Christ rebuked them, saying, that they wist not of what spirit they were; that is, that they understood not how that they were altogether worldly and fleshly-minded.<sup>4</sup> Peter smote Malchus of a good zeal, but Christ condemned his deed. The very Jews, of a good intent and of a good zeal, slew Christ, and persecuted the apostles, as Paul beareth them record. I bear them record (saith he), that they have a fervent mind to God-ward, but not according to knowledge.<sup>5</sup> It is another thing, then, to do of a good mind, and to do of knowledge. Labour for knowledge, that thou mayest know God's will, and what he would have thee to do.

(1) The words of Tyndale sufficiently discharge the article of all heresy, if they be well-weighed. The meaning whereof is this, that all our acceptation with God, standeth only upon our faith in Christ, and upon no work nor office. Cornelius the soldier, believing in Christ, is as well justified before God, as the apostle or preacher; so that there is no rejoicing now either in work or office, but only in our faith in Christ, which only justifieth us before God. 'Our mind, intent, and affection or zeal, are blind, and all that we do of them is damned of God; and for that cause hath God made a testament between him and us, wherein is contained both what he would have us to do, and what he would have us to ask of him. See, therefore, that thou do nothing to please God withal, but that he commandeth; neither ask any thing of him but that he hath promised thee.'

XXVI. "Churches are for preaching only, and not as they be used now." Fol. 87. Article

This article containeth neither error nor heresy, but is plain enough of itself, to all them that have their minds exercised in the scriptures of God.

XXVII. "To worship God otherwise than to believe that he is just and true in his promise, is to make God an idol." Fol. 87. Article.

Read the words of Tyndale with this article.

'God is honoured on all sides, in that we count him righteous in all his laws and ordinances, and also true in all his promises. Other worshipping of God none, except we make an idol of him.'

XXVIII. "Pharaoh had no power to let the people depart at God's pleasure." Fol. 95. Article.

XXIX. "Our prelates, in sin say they have power." Fol. 95. Article.

Read the place in "The Wicked Mammon," out of the which these two articles are gathered.

'Paul saith, If thou confess with thy mouth that Jesus is the Lord, and believe with thine heart that God raised him from death, thou shalt be safe: <sup>1</sup> that is, if thou believe he raised him up again for thy salvation. Many believe that God is rich and almighty, but not unto themselves; and that he will be good to them, and defend them, and be their God. Pharaoh, for pain of the plague, was compelled to confess his sins; but had yet no power to submit himself unto the will of God, and to let the children of Israel go, and to lose so great profit for God's pleasure: as our prelates confess their sins, saying, Though we be never so evil, yet have we the power. And again, The scribes and the pharisees, say they, sat in Moses' seat: Do as they teach, but not as they do. Thus confess they that they are abominable.'

HERE FOLLOW OTHER HERESIES AND ERRORS, COLLECTED BY THE BISHOPS OUT OF TYNDALE'S BOOK NAMED, "THE OBEDIENCE OF A CHRISTIAN MAN," WITH THE PLACES OF THE BOOK ANNEXED TO THE SAME.

First Article.—"Tyndale saith, 'We are bound to make satisfaction to our neighbour, but not to God.'" Fol. 132. Article.

Satisfaction is a full recompense or a mends-making to him whom we have offended, which recompense we are able to make one man to another, and are bound so to do; but to God no man can make any mends or recompense, but only God's own Son Christ Jesus our Saviour: for else, if man could have made satisfaction to God, then had Christ died in vain.<sup>2</sup> Lo! what heresy or error is in this article?

II. "He saith, that children ought not to marry without the consent of their parents." Fol. 120. Article

The words of Tyndale in the "Obedience," be these:

' Let the fathers and mothers mark how they themselves were disposed at all ages, and, by experience of their own infirmities, help their children, and keep them from occasions. [Let them teach children to ask marriages of their fathers and mothers, and] let them provide marriages for them in season, teaching them also to know, that she is not his wife which the son taketh, nor he her husband which the daughter taketh, without the consent and good will of their elders, or them that have authority over them. If their friends will not marry them, then are they not to blame, if they marry themselves. Let not the fathers and mothers always take the uttermost of their authority of their children, but, at all times, suffer with them, and bear their weakness, as Christ doth ours.'

Article. III. "He saith, that vows are against the ordinance of God." Fol. 109.

They that say that this article is a heresy, let them show where these vows in all the New Testament be ordained of God; especially such vows of single life, and wilful poverty, as by the canon law be obtruded on young priests and novices. St. Paul plainly forefendeth any widows to be admitted under the age of threescore years. Is not here, trow you, a perilous heresy?

Article. IV. "He saith, that a christian man may not resist a prince being an infidel and an ethnic." This taketh away freewill." Fol. 112.

Article.

St. Peter willeth us to be subject to our princes.<sup>1</sup> St. Paul also doth the like;<sup>2</sup> who was also himself subject to the power of Nero; and, although every commandment of Nero against God he did not follow, yet he never made resistance against the authority and state of Nero; as the pope useth to do against the state not only of infidels, but also of christian princes.

Article. V. "Whatsoever is done before the Spirit of God cometh and giveth us light, is damnable sin." This is against moral virtues." Fol. 113.

What heresy Aristotle in his Ethics can find by this article, I cannot tell. Sure I am, that the Word and Spirit of God, well considered, can find none, but rather will pronounce the contrary to be a damnable heresy.

Article. VI. "He reproverth men that make holy saints their advocates to God, and there he saith, that saints were not rewarded in heaven for their holy works." Fol. 114.

The words of Tyndale be these :

' They turn from God's word, and put their trust and confidence in the saint, and his merits, and make an advocate, or rather a God, of the saint.' * * *
' They ascribe heaven unto their imaginations and mad inventions, and receive it not of the liberality of God, by the merits and deserving of Christ.'

Article. VII. "God moved the hearts of the Egyptians to hate the people; likewise he moved kings," etc. Fol. 118.

The words in the "Obedience" be these :

' In Psalm cvii. thou readest, He destroyed the rivers, and dried up the springs of water, and turned the fruitful land into barrenness, for the wickedness of the inhabitants thereof. When the children of Israel had forgotten God in Egypt, God moved the hearts of the Egyptians to hate them, and to subdue them with craft and wiliness.<sup>3</sup>

' In 2 Sam. xxiv. God was angry with his people, and moved David to number them, when Joab and the other lords wondered why he would have them numbered; and because they feared lest some evil should follow, dissuaded the VIII. "Paul was of higher authority than Peter." Fol. 125.

A. D. 1546.

The words in "The Obedience" be these :

Article.

'I suppose, saith he (meaning Paul), that I was not behind the high apostles; meaning in preaching Jesus Christ and his gospel, and in ministering the Spirit. And, in the same chapter, he proveth by the doctrine of Christ, that he was greater than the high apostles: for Christ saith, 'To be great in the kingdom of God, is to do service, and take pain for others.' Upon which rule Paul disputeth, saying, If they be the ministers of Christ, I am more: in labours more abundant, in stripes above measure, in prison more plenteous, in death oft, etc. If Paul preached Christ more than Peter, and suffered more for his congregation, then is he greater than Peter, by the testimony of Christ.'

IX. "A priest ought to have a wife for two causes." Fol. 133. Article.

The words of Tyndale be these :

'He must have a wife for two causes; one, that it may thereby be known who is meet for the room: he is unapt for so chargeable an office, which had never household to rule. Another cause is, that chastity is an exceeding seldom gift, and unchastity exceeding perilous for that degree, inasmuch as the people look as well unto the living as unto the preaching, and are hurt at once if the living disagree, and fall from the faith, and believe not the word.'

True doctrine made heresy.

X. "He condemneth auricular confession." Fol. 140.

Article.

Of this read above.

XI. "Every man is a priest, and we need no other priest to be a mean for us unto God." Fol. 144. Article.

The words in "The Obedience" be these :

'There is a word called in Latin 'sacerdos,' in the Greek, 'ιερευς,' in Hebrew 'cohan;' that is, a minister, an officer, a sacrificer, or a priest, as Aaron was a priest, and sacrificed for the people, and was a mediator between God and them; and in the English it should have had some other name than priest: but Antichrist hath deceived us with unknown and strange terms to bring us into confusion and superstitious blindness. Of that manner is Christ a priest for ever, and all we are priests through him, and need no more of any such priest to be a mean for us unto God," etc.

XII. "He destroyeth the sacraments of matrimony and orders." Fol. 144. Article.

As truly as matrimony and orders be sacraments, so truly is this article a heresy.

XIII. "He saith that purgatory is the pope's invention, and, therefore, he may do there whatsoever he will." Fol. 150. Article.

One of the pope's own writers saith thus: "Souls being in purgatory are under the pope's jurisdiction, and the pope may, if he will, evacuate all purgatory." Furthermore, the old fathers make little mention of purgatory; the Greek church never believed purgatory; St. Augustine doubteth of purgatory; and the Scriptures plainly disprove purgatory. St. John saith, "The blood of Jesus Christ the Son of God purgeth us from all sin;" and the pope saith, "Sin cannot be purged but by the fire of purgatory." Now, whose invention can purgatory be, but only the pope's?

- Henry VIII.* XIV. "Saints be saved not by their merits, but only by the merits of Christ." Fol. 151.
- A. D. 1516. What can be more manifest and plain by the Scriptures, than this? Isaiah saith, "All we have erred, every man in his own ways, and God hath laid upon him all our iniquities," etc.
- Article XV. "He saith, 'No man may be hired to pray.'" Fol. 155.
The words in "The Obedience" be true, which are these:
'To pray one for another, are we equally bound: and to pray, is a thing that we may always do, whatsoever we have in hand; and that to do, may no man hire another: Christ's blood hath hired us already;' etc.
- Article XVI. "He saith, 'Why should I trust in Paul's prayer or holiness?' If St. Paul were alive, he would compare himself to St. Paul, and be as good as he." Fol. 159.
The words of Tyndale be these:
'Why, am not I also a false prophet, if I teach thee to trust in Paul, or in his holiness or prayer, or in any thing save in God's word, as Paul did? If Paul were here, and loved me as he loved them of his time, to whom he was a servant to preach Christ, what good could he do for me, or wish me, but preach Christ, and pray to God for me, to open my heart, to give me his Spirit, and to bring me to the full knowledge of Christ? Unto which port or haven when I am once come, I am as safe as Paul, fellow with Paul, joint heir with Paul of all the promises of God;' etc.
- Article XVII. "He saith, that all that be baptized, become Christ himself." Fol. 163.
With this article confer the words of "The Obedience," which be these:
'In Matt. xxv. saith Christ, Inasmuch as ye have done it to any of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it to me: and inasmuch as ye have not done it unto one of the least of these, ye have not done it unto me. Here seest thou that we are Christ's brethren, and even Christ himself, and whatsoever we do one to another, that do we to Christ?' etc.
- Article XVIII. "He saith, that the children of faith be under no law." Fol. 163.
The words of Tyndale be these:
'I serve thee not because thou art my master or my king, for hope of reward or fear of pain, but for the love of Christ. For the children of faith are under no law, as thou seest in the epistles to the Romans, to the Galatians, and the first of Timothy, but are free. The Spirit of Christ hath written the lively law of love in their hearts, which driveth them to work of their own accord, freely and willingly, for the great love's sake only which they see in Christ; and, therefore, need they no law to compel them,' etc.
- Article XIX. "There is no deed so good, but that the law condemneth it." Fol. 167.
The place in "The Obedience" is this:
'Thou hast the story of Peter, how he smote Malchus' ear, and how Christ healed it again. There hast thou, in the plain text, great learning, great fruit, and great edifying, which I pass over. Then come I, when I preach of the law and the gospel, and borrow this example, to express the nature of the law and of the gospel, and to paint it unto thee before thine eyes; and of Peter and his sword make I the law, and of Christ the gospel, saying, As Peter's sword cutteth off the ear, so doth the law. mangleth the conscience. There is no ear so righteous, that can abide the hearing of the law. There is no deed so good, but that the law damneth it. But Christ (that is to say, the gospel, the promises and testament that God hath made in Christ), healeth the ear and conscience, which the law hath hurt.'

XX. "To ask of God more than he hath promised, cometh of a false faith, and is plain idolatry." Fol. 171. Article.

The words of Tyndale are these :

'Look wherein thou canst best keep the commandments; thither get thyself, and there abide,' etc. 'If we have infirmities that draw us from the laws of God, let us cure them with the remedies that God hath made. If thou burn, marry; for God hath promised thee no chastity, as long as thou mayest use the remedy that he hath ordained; no more than he hath promised to slack thine hunger without meat. Now, to ask of God more than he hath promised, cometh of a false faith, and is plain idolatry,' etc.

What heresy is in this?

XXI. "Our pain-taken in keeping the commandments, doth nothing but purge the sin that remaineth in the flesh; but to look for any other reward or promotion in heaven, than God hath promised for Christ's sake, is abominable in the sight of God." Fol. 171. Article.

Consider the place in "The Obedience," which is this :

'To look for any other reward or promotion in heaven, or in the life to come, than that which God hath promised for Christ's sake, and which Christ hath deserved for us with his pain-taking, is abominable in the sight of God; for Christ only hath purchased the reward. And our pain-taking to keep the commandments, doth but purge the sin that remaineth in the flesh, and certify us, that we are chosen and sealed with God's Spirit, unto the reward that Christ hath purchased for us.'

XXII. "The pope hath no other authority but to preach only." Fol. 173. Article.

Christ said to Peter, "Feed my sheep;"<sup>1</sup> "and thou being converted, confirm thy brethren."<sup>2</sup> And to his apostles he said, "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel," etc. Again, St. Paul<sup>3</sup> saith, that Christ sent him not to baptize, but to preach: to what other office or function he sent the pope, let them judge, who consider the Scriptures.<sup>4</sup>

XXIII. "If thou bind thyself to chastity, to obtain that which Christ purchased for thee, so surely art thou an infidel." Fol. 175. Article.

Read and confer the place of Tyndale, which is this :

'Chastity canst thou not give to God, further than God lendeth it thee. thou canst not live chaste, thou art bound to marry, or to be damned. Last of all for what purpose thou bindest thyself, must be seen. If thou do it to obtain thereby that which Christ hath purchased for thee, so art thou an infidel, and hast no part with Christ. If thou wilt see more of this matter, look in Deuteronomy, and there thou shalt find it more largely entreated.'

If Chastity.

XXIV. "He denieth, rebuketh, and damneth miracles." Fol. 176. Article.

The words in Tyndale's "Obedience" be these :

'And when they cry Miracles, Miracles, remember that God hath made an everlasting testament with us in Christ's blood; against which we may receive no miracles, no, neither the preaching of Paul himself, if he came again (by his own teaching to the Galatians), neither yet by the preaching of the angels of heaven,' etc.

Miracles how far to be believed

(1) John xxi.

(2) Luke xxii.

(3) 1 Cor. i.

(4) This heresy is only to the pope: but none at all to God.

Henry VIII.

A. D. 1546.

'The end of God's miracles is good : the end of these miracles is evil. For the offerings, which are the cause of the miracles, do but minister and maintain vice, sin, and all abomination, and are given to them that have too much, so that for very abundance they foam out their own shame, and corrupt the whole world with the stench of their filthiness.' Fol. 159.

Article. XXV. "He saith, that no man should serve God with good intent or zeal ; for it is plain idolatry." Fol. 177.

The place is this in "The Obedience :"

Good intents, without God's word.

'Remember Saul was cast away of God for ever, for his good intent. God requireth obedience unto his word, and abhorreth all good intents and good zeals which are without God's word ; for they are nothing else but plain idolatry, and worshipping of false Gods.'

HERE FOLLOW OTHER HERESIES AND ERRORS, COLLECTED BY THE BISHOPS, OUT OF THE BOOK CALLED "THE REVELATION OF ANTICHRIST,"<sup>1</sup> WITH THE PLACES OF THE BOOK, OUT OF WHICH THEY WERE GATHERED, ANNEXED TO THE SAME.

Article. I. "To bind a man perpetually to any vow of religion, is without doubt an error." Fol. 19.

The place of the book called "The Revelation," whence this article is gathered, is this that followeth :

'Which the fathers did neither make nor keep (he meaneth vows), but with the liberty of the spirit, binding no man perpetually to them. For, if they did, without doubt, they erred according to man's fragility.'

Article. II. "To say the constitutions of religion are good, because holy men did ordain them, as Augustine, Benedict, Francis, Dominic, and such others, and to follow such examples of fathers, is to leave the faith." Fol. 19.

The place of the article is this :

'But they object, The statutes and ordinances are good: holy men did make them, as Augustine, Benedict, Bernard, Francis, Dominic, and such others. To this I answer, that is even it, that Christ and the apostles did mean,<sup>2</sup> that these works should be like to those things which are taught in the gospel, for that they call counterfeiting of the doctrine, and privily bringing in of sects and heresies, because they take only of the fathers' examples of works, and leave the faith,' etc.

Article. III. "All moral divines have a wicked conscience, full of scrupulosity." Fol. 3.

Moral divines be they, whose doctrine and hope of salvation consisteth in moral virtues, rather than in christian faith, apprehending the free promises of God in Christ. And they that be such, can never be certified in conscience of their salvation, but always be full of fear and scrupulosity. St. Paul, therefore, saith, "It is therefore of faith, that it might come by grace, and the promise might be firm and sure to the whole seed."<sup>3</sup>

Article. IV. "Moral virtues, as justice, temperance, strength, chastity, described by natural reason, make a synagogue, and corrupt Christ's faith." Fol. 64.

(1) Translated by John Frith, A. D. 1529. (8vo. Marlborow in Hesse). This work, and 'The Sum of the Scriptures,' are extremely scarce.—Ed.

(2) 2 Pet. ii.

(3) Rom. iv.

The place of this article, gathered out of “The Revelation,” is this: Henry VIII.

‘So many he (the pope he meaneth) corrupteth, as he hath subdued and led under his laws and empery. And who is he in the world that is not subject under him, except they be infants, or peradventure some simple persons, who are reserved by the inscrutable counsel and provision of God? O thou man of sin! O thou son of perdition! O thou abomination! O thou corrupter! O thou author of evil consciences! O thou false master of good consciences! O thou enemy of faith and christian liberty! Who is able to rehearse, yea, or to comprehend in his mind, the infinite waves of this monstrous king’s evils?’<sup>1</sup>

A. D.

‘If he had ordained these his laws in those works of virtues that are commended in the ten precepts, or else in such as the philosophers and natural reason did describe, as are justice, strength, temperance, chastity, mildness, truth, goodness, and such others, peradventure they should only have made a synagoge, or else have ordained in the world a certain civil justice; for, through these, faith also should have been corrupted, as it was among the Jews. Howbeit, now he keepeth not himself within these bounds, but runneth at riot, and more at large, raising infinite tempests of mischief, enticing and drawing us to ceremonies, and his own feigned traditions, and bindeth us like asses and ignorant fools, yea and like stocks unto them,’ etc.

V. “Christ took away all laws, and maketh us free and at liberty; and most of all he suppresseth all ceremonies.” Fol. 63, 65. Article

The place of this article, gathered out of “The Revelation,” is this:

‘Christ, taking away all laws to make us free and at liberty, did most of all suppress and disannul the ceremonies, which did consist in places, persons, garments, meats, days, and such other; so that their use should be to all men most free and indifferent,’ etc.

What he meaneth by taking away all laws, he declareth a little before, saying:

‘He hath not delivered us from the law, but from the power and violence of the law, which is the very true loosing. But, for all that, he hath not taken away from the powers and officers their right, sword, and authority to punish the evil: for such pertain not to his kingdom, until they are made spiritual; and then freely and with a glad heart they serve God.’

VI. “If the pope would make all the observation of the ceremonies, as Lent, fasting, holy-days, confession, matrimony, mass, matins, and relies, etc., free and indifferent, he should not be Antichrist; but now, because he commandeth them in the name of Christ, he utterly corrupteth the church, suppresseth the faith, and advanceth sin.” Fol. 67. Article.

If the pope will infer a necessity of those things which Christ leaveth free and indifferent, then what doth he make himself but Antichrist? The article is plain, and is founded upon the doctrine of Christ, and St. Paul.

VII. “To believe in Christ, maketh sure inheritors with Christ.” Fol. 1. Article.

VIII. “If a man say, ‘Then shall we do no good works?’ I answer as Christ did: ‘This is the work of God to believe in him whom he hath sent.’” Fol. 1. Article

(1) By this king, he meaneth the king of faces which Daniel speaketh of in the eighth chapter. [Dan. viii. 23. ‘A king of fierce countenance, and understanding dark sentences.’ See also Note 1, page 589.—Ed.]

Henry VIII.

The place of these two articles, gathered out of "The Revelation," is this :

A. D.

'Who is this light, that we are exhorted to believe in? Truly it is Christ, as St. John doth testify. He was the true light, that lighteneth all men who come into the world.<sup>1</sup> To believe in this light, maketh us the children of light, and the sure inheritors with Jesus Christ. Even now have we cruel adversaries, who set up their bristles, saying, Why! shall we then do no good works? To these we answer, as Christ did to the people, in the sixth of St. John, who asked him what they should do, that they might work the works of God. Jesus answered and said unto them, This is the work of God, that ye believe in him whom he hath sent. And after it followeth, Verily, verily I say unto you, he that believeth on me hath everlasting life. To this also consenteth St. John, in his epistle, saying, These things have I written unto you that believe on the name of the Son of God, that you may surely know, how that you have eternal life.—What is the name of the Son of God? Truly his name is Jesus, that is to say, a Saviour; therefore thou must believe that he is a Saviour.

'But what availeth this? The devils do thus believe and tremble.<sup>2</sup> They know, that he is the Son of God, and said unto him, crying, O Jesu, the Son of God! what have we to do with thee? They know, that he hath redeemed mankind by his passion, and they laboured to let it: for when Pilate was set down to give judgment, his wife sent unto him, saying, Have thou nothing to do with that just man; for I have suffered many things this day in my sleep about him.<sup>3</sup> No doubt she was vexed of the devil, to the intent that she should persuade her husband to give no sentence upon him, so that Satan might the longer have had jurisdiction over mankind. They know, that he hath suppressed sin and death; as it is written, Death is consumed into victory. Death, where is thy sting? Hell, where is thy victory? The sting of death is sin; the strength of sin is the law; but thanks be unto God which hath given us victory through our Lord Jesus Christ: who by sin damned sin in the flesh. For God made him to be sin for us, that is to say, a sacrifice for our sin (and so is sin taken in many places) which knew no sin, that we, by his means, should be that righteousness, which before God is allowed.<sup>4</sup> It is not, therefore, sufficient to believe that he is a Saviour and Redeemer; but that he is a Saviour and Redeemer unto thee,' etc.

Article. IX. "Numbering of sins maketh a man more a sinner, yea, a blasphemer of the name of God." Fol. 3.

The place of this article, gathered out of "The Revelation," is this :

'Acknowledge thyself a sinner, that thou mayest be justified. Not that the numbering of thy sins can make thee righteous, but rather a greater sinner, yea, and a blasphemer of the holy name of God, as thou mayest see in Cain, who said that his sins were greater than that he might receive forgiveness; and so was a reprobate,' etc.

Article. X. "God bindeth us to that which is impossible for us to accomplish." Fol. 3.

The place of this article, gathered out of "The Revelation," is this :

'If thou ask of me, why he bindeth us to that which is impossible for us to accomplish, thou shalt have St. Augustine's answer, who saith, in the second book that he wrote to Jerome, that the law was given us, that we might know what to do, and what to eschew; to the intent that when we see ourselves not able to do that which we are bound to do, nor avoid the contrary, we may then know what we shall pray for, and of whom we shall ask this strength, so that we may say unto our Father, Good Father! command whatsoever it pleaseth thee, but give us thy grace to fulfil what thou commandest. And when we perceive that we cannot fulfil his will, yet let us confess that the law is good and holy, and that we are sinners and carnal, sold under sin.<sup>5</sup> But let us not

XI. “ Sin cannot condemn us, for our satisfaction is made in Christ who died for us.” Fol. 4. Article.

The place of this article, gathered out of “ The Revelation,” is this :

‘ Sin hath no power over us, neither can condemn us, for our satisfaction is made in Christ, who died for us that were wicked and naturally the children of wrath. But God, which is rich in mercy, through the great love wherewith he loved us, even when we were dead through sin, hath quickened us with Christ, and with him hath raised us up, and with him hath made us sit in heavenly places, through Jesus Christ; to show, in times to come, the exceeding riches of his grace in his kindness towards us through Christ Jesus. For by grace are ye saved, through faith; and that not of yourselves, for it is the gift of God, and cometh not of works, lest any man should boast himself,’<sup>2</sup> etc.

XII. “ I will show thee an evident argument and reason, that thou mayest know without doubt, who is Antichrist. All they that do pursue, are Antichrists. The pope, bishops, cardinals, and their adherents do pursue: therefore the pope, bishops, and cardinals, and their adherents, are Antichrists. I ween our syllogismus be well made.” Fol. 9. Article.

The place of this article gathered out of “ The Revelation,” is this :

‘ I will show thee an evident reason, that thou mayest know without doubting who is the very Antichrist: and this argument may be grounded upon their furious persecution, which Paul doth confirm, writing to the Galatians. We, dear brethren, are the children of promise, as Isaac was; not the sons of the bondwoman, as Ishmael. But, as he that was born after the flesh did persecute him that was born after the Spirit, even so it is now. Mark Paul's reason. By Isaac, are signified the elect; and by Ishmael, the reprobate. Isaac did not persecute Ishmael; but, contrary, Ishmael did persecute Isaac. Now let us make our reason :

Bar- All they that do persecute as Ishmael, be reprobates and Antichrists. Major.
ba- But all the popes, cardinals, bishops, and their adherents, do persecute. Minor.

ra. Therefore all the popes, cardinals, bishops, and their adherents, be Ishmael; reprobates and Antichrists. Conclusion.

‘ I ween our syllogismus is well made, and in the first figure.’

Read the place, and see how he proveth the parts of this argument more at large.

XIII. “ I think verily, that so long as the successors of the apostles were persecuted and martyred, there were good christian men, and no longer.” Fol. 10. Article.

The bishops of Rome in the primitive church, were under persecution the space of well near three hundred years, under which persecution, as good as thirty of them, and more, died martyrs. Since that time have succeeded two hundred and four popes, who have lived in great wealth and abundance, amongst whom if the book of “ The Revelation ” think that there be not four to be found good christian men, I think no less but that he may so think without any heresy.

St. Paul saith, "Whosoever will live virtuously in Christ Jesus, shall suffer persecution."<sup>1</sup> And how then can this be truth in Paul, and in this man heresy?

Article.

XV. "That the apostles did ever curse any man, truly we cannot read in Scripture: for Christ commanded them to bless those that cursed them." Fol. 11.

Upon what good ground of "The Revelation" this heresy is wrung out, let the place be conferred, which is written in these words following:

'They are as merciful as the wolf is on his prey. They were ordained to bless men;<sup>2</sup> but they curse as the devil were in them. Paul saith, that he hath power to edify, and not to destroy.<sup>3</sup> But I wot not of whom these bloody beasts have their authority, which do so much rejoice in cursing and destruction. We read how Paul did excommunicate the Corinthian (and that for a great transgression), to the intent that he might be ashamed of his iniquity, and desired again the Corinthians to receive him with all charity:<sup>4</sup> but, that the apostles did curse any man, truly we cannot read in Scripture;<sup>5</sup> for Christ commanded them to bless those that cursed them, and to pray for those that persecuted them,' etc.

Article.

XVI. "By works, superstitions, and ceremonies, we decay from the faith, which alone doth truly justify and make holy." Fol. 15.

Note here, good reader, how perversely and corruptly this article is drawn. For whereas the place of this book, which is written in fol. 15, expressly speaketh of trusting to works, meaning that we should put no confidence in works, but only in faith in Christ Jesus, this article, to make it appear more infamous and heretical, leaveth out the false trust, and speaketh simply as though works should decay faith. Read the place, which is written in these words following:

False
wresting.

'Daniel calleth not this word peschiam, any manner of sin, but those special and chief sins, which resist and fight against the truth and the faith: as are the trusting in works, superstitions and ceremonies, by which we decay from the faith,' etc.

Article.

XVII. "The abuson of the mass with all its solemnities, with vigils, year-minds, foundations, burials, and all the business that is done for the dead, is but a face and a cloak of godliness, and a deceiving of the people; as they were good works, rather for the dead, than for the quick." Fol. 24.

'True godliness consisteth in faith, that is, in the true knowledge of the Son of God, whom he hath sent, and in the observation of God's commandments. All their rites and additions instituted by man, are no part of true godliness. And whoso putteth trust and confidence therein, as being things meritorious for the dead, is deceived. Such funerals St. Augustine calleth rather refreshings of the living, than relievings and helps of the dead.

The truth of this article is manifest enough to be void of all error and heresy, unless it be heresy, to believe and hold with the Scripture. St. Paul saith, “ If heaven, and our righteousness, come by the law, then Christ died in vain.”<sup>1</sup>

XIX. “ The multiplication of holy-days, of feasts of Corpus Christi, of the Visitation of our Lady, etc., is a wicked face and colour; and indeed foolish, unprofitable and vain.” Fol. 30. Article.

This article, likewise, needeth no declaration, containing in it a true and necessary complaint of such superfluous holy-days of the pope’s making: which, as they bring with them much occasion of wickedness, idleness, drunkenness, and vanity, and so having also joined unto them opinion of religion, and meritorious devotion and God’s service, they gender superstition, and nourish the people in the same.

XX. “ Keeping of virginity and chastity of religion is a devilish thing.” Fol. 30. Article.

The place, cited in the book of “ The Revelation of Antichrist,” doth sufficiently open itself, speaking and meaning only of those monkish vows, which, by the canonical constitution of the pope, are violently forced upon priests and monks, the coercion whereof St. Paul doth rightly call “ the doctrine of devils.” And here note by the way another trick of a popish caviller: for, where the words of the book speak plainly of the chastity of the religious, he, fraudulently turning it to a universality, saith, “ the chastity of religion,” whereby it might seem to the simple reader more odious and heretical. The words of the place be these:

Another place falsely depraved by the papists.

‘ Keeping of virginity and chastity of the religious seemeth to be a godly and a heavenly thing; but it is a devilish thing: of the which it is spoken in 1 Tim. iv., Forbidding to marry, etc. Whereas, again, our most reverend father maketh that thing necessary, that Christ would have free, whereof Daniel<sup>2</sup> speaketh, He shall not be desirous of women. Here Daniel meaneth, that he shall refuse and abstain from marriage, for a cloak of godliness, and not for love of chastity.’

XXI. “ Worshipping of relics is a proper thing, and a cloak of advantage against the precept of God, and nothing but the affection of men.” Fol. 30, 31. Article.
See Addenda.

These be the words in “ The Revelation :”

‘ This (the worshipping of relics he meaneth) is a proper and most fruitful cloak of advantage. Out of this were invented innumerable pilgrimages, with which the foolish and unlearned people might lose their labour, money, and time; nothing, in the mean season, regarding their houses, wives, and children; contrary to the commandment of God; when they might do much better deeds to their neighbours, which is the precept,’ etc.

XXII. “ There is but one special office that pertaineth to thine orders, and that is, to preach the word of God.” Fol. 36. Article.

Of this matter sufficient hath been said before in the twenty-second article alleged out of the book of “ The Obedience.”

'Who is an adversary (the pope he meaneth), and is exalted above all that is called God, or that is worshipped : so that he shall sit in the temple of God, and show himself as God.' Doth he not sit in the temple of God, who saith and professeth himself to be the master in the whole church? What is the temple of God? Is it stones and wood? Doth not Paul say, The temple of God is holy, which temple are ye? Neither in the time of Paul was there any house, which was called 'the temple of God,' as we now call them. What meaneth this sitting, but reigning, teaching and judging? Who, since the beginning of the church, durst presume to call himself the master of the whole church, but only the pope? etc.

XXIV. "He that fasteth no day, that saith no matins, and doth none of the precepts of the pope, sinneth not, if he think that he doth not sin." Fol. 43.

The place is here clear and plain without any danger of heresy.

'Because he feareth the consciences under the title and pretence of Christ's name, he maketh of those things which in themselves are no sins, very grievous offences. For he that believeth that he doth sin if he eat flesh on the apostles' even, or say not matins and prime in the morning, or else leave undone any of the pope's precepts, no doubt he sinneth; not because the deed which he doth is sin, but because he believeth it is sin, and because against this foolish belief and conscience he offendeth : of which foolish conscience the pope only is head-author; for another, doing the same deed, thinking that he doth not sin, truly offendeth not. And this is the cause, that the spirit of Paul complaineth that many shall depart from the faith. And for this foolish conscience men's traditions be pernicious and noisome, the snares of souls, hurting the faith and the liberty of the gospel. If it were not for this cause, they should do no hurt. Therefore the devil, through the pope, abuseth these consciences to establish the laws of his tyranny, to suppress the faith and liberty, and to replenish the world with error, sin, and perdition,' etc.

'Satan hated the sacrament, and knew no way how to suppress and disannul it; therefore he found this craft: that the sacrament, which Christ did only ordain to nourish and establish the faith of them that live, should be counted for a good work and sacrifice, and bought and sold. And so faith is suppressed, and this wholesome ministry is applied, not to the quick, but unto the dead; and this wholesome ministry is applied, not to the quick, but yet to the dead. Oh this incredible fury of God!' etc.

XXVI. "These signs (he speaketh of miracles and visions, or apparitions) are not to the increase of the faith and gospel, for they are rather against the faith and gospel, and they are the operation of Satan, and lying signs." Fol. 49.

The place is as followeth :

The place
containeth a true complaint of false visions, and may well be borne.

'Who is able to number the monstrous marvels only of them that are departed? Good Lord! what a sea of lies hath invaded us, of apparitions, conjurings, and answers of spirits? by which it is brought to pass, that the pope is also made the king of them that are dead, and reigneth in purgatory, to the great profit of his priests, who have all their living, riches, and pomp out of purgatory. Howbeit they should have less, if they did so well teach the faith of them that live, as they do [teach] riddles of them that are dead: neither was there, since the beginning of the world, any work found of so little labour and great advantage. For truly to this purpose were gathered almost the possessions of all princes and rich men; and, through these riches, sprang up all pleasures and idleness, and of idleness came very Babylon and Sodom,' etc.

‘Neither are these signs to the increase of the faith and gospel (for they are rather against the faith and gospel); but they are done to establish the tyranny of these faces and riddles,<sup>1</sup> and to set up and confirm the trust in works. Among these illusions are those miracles to be reputed, which are showed in visions, pilgrimages, and worshippings of saints, as there are plenty now-a-days, which the pope confirmeth by his bulls, yea, and sometimes doth canonize saints that he knoweth not. Now behold what is the operation of Satan in lying signs,’ etc

The words out of which this article is gathered, are these :

‘They are the people of Christ, who willingly do hear and follow him, not for any fear of the law, but only enticed and led with a gracious liberty and faithful love; not doing any thing because it is commanded, but because it is pleasant and acceptable unto them, though it were not commanded: for they that would do otherwise, should be counted the people of the law and syna- The place

XXVIII. “In the whole new law is no urgent precept, nor Article.
grievous; but only exhortations to observe things necessary for soul-health.” Fol. 63.

The place of this article, gathered out of “The Revelation,” is this :

‘A christian should work nothing by compulsion of the law, but all through the spirit of liberty, as Paul saith:<sup>2</sup> The law is not given to a righteous man. For whatsoever is done by compulsion of the law, is sin, for it is not done with a glad and willing spirit, but with a contrary will, and rebelling against the law; and this truly is sin. Therefore, in Corinthians,<sup>3</sup> he calleth the preachers of the New Testament the ministers of the Spirit, and not of the letter, because they teach grace, and not the law. Wherefore in the whole New Testament are there no urgent or grievous precepts, but only exhortations to observe those things which are necessary to our health: neither did Christ and his apostles at any time compel any man. And the Holy Ghost was for that cause called Paracletus, that is to say, an exhorter and comforter,’ etc. The place is sound,

ment, but no man is compelled, but to do according to his own will. Therefore Christ teacheth,<sup>4</sup> that a rebel should not be killed, but avoided.” Fol. 63, 66.

The words in “The Revelation” are these :

‘In the New Testament are all things declared, which we ought to do and leave undone; what reward is ordained for them that do and leave undone; and of whom to seek, find, and obtain help to do and to leave undone. But no man is compelled, but suffered to do according to their own will. Therefore in Matthew,<sup>5</sup> he teacheth that a rebel should not be killed, but avoided, and put out of company like a Gentile,’ etc.

XXXI. "He railteth against all the rites and ceremonies of the mass, as he were mad." Fol. 68.

The place out of which this article is collected, is as followeth :

'If a nun touch the super-altare, or corporas (as they call it), it is a sin. To touch the chalice is a great transgression. To say mass with an unhallowed chalice, is a grievous offence. To do sacrifice in vestments which are not consecrated, is a heinous crime. It is reputed for a sin, if in ministering any sacrament the priest doth lack any ornament that pertaineth thereunto. If he call a child, or speak in the words of a canon, it is a sin. He offendeth also that doth stutter or stammer in the words of the canon. He sinneth that toucheth the holy relics of saints. He that toucheth the sacrament of the altar either with hand or finger, though it be for necessity, to pluck it from the roof of his mouth, committeth such villanous iniquity, that they will scrape and shave off the quick flesh from the part which did touch it. I think, at length, they will flay the tongue, the roof of the mouth, the throat, and the belly, because they touch the sacrament. But to hurt thy neighbour, or privily to convey away any of his goods, or not to help him in his need, is in a manner counted for no sin, nor yet regarded,'<sup>1</sup> etc.

XXXIII. "The sins of Manasseh, and other wicked kings, sacrificing their own children, are but light and childish offences to those. The cursed sacrifices of the Gentiles may not be compared to ours; we are seven times worse Gentiles than we were before we knew Christ." Fol. 70.

The words out of which these two articles are gathered, are these :

'They are so oppressed (those he meaneth who are under the servitude of the pope's laws and decrees), that they fulfil them only with the outward work; for their wills are clean contrary, as we see by experience in the troublesome business of vigils, masses, and hours, which must be both said and sung: in the which they labour with such weariness, that now-a-days no labour is more tedious. Yet nevertheless, the cruel exactors of these most hard works compel men to work such things without ceasing, which before God are nothing but grievous sins; although before men they be good works, and counted for the service of God. Here are invented the enticements of the senses through organs, music, and diversity of songs; but these are nothing to the spirit, which rather is extinct through these wanton trifles. Ah, Christ! with what violence, with what power, are they driven headlong to sin, and perish through this abomination.'<sup>2</sup>

'It is horrible to look into these cruel whirlpools of consciences, which perish with so great pains and labour. What light offences to these are the sins wherein Manasseh and other wicked kings sinned, by doing sacrifice with their own children and progeny?<sup>3</sup> Truly, the cursed sacrifices of the most rude Gentiles, no not of the Lestrighones,<sup>4</sup> may be compared unto ours. The saying of Christ may be verified in us: seven more wicked spirits make the

The words be these :

‘Plainly I think that the whole is taken away, since I see manifestly the one part gone (for the bread and the wine is but one sacrament); the other is left only for a laughing stock. For he that in one part offendeth against God, is guilty in all. Therefore it were better to receive neither of the parts, than the one alone; for so we might the more surely eschew the transgression of that which Christ did institute,’ etc.

The truth of this place may be avouched by good reason.

XXXV. “The law of the pope, that commandeth all men to communicate together upon one day, is a most cruel law, constraining men to their own destruction.” Fol. 73.

The place is this :

‘He (the pope he meaneth) setteth a most cruel and deadly snare to tangle the consciences; suffereth not the use of this sacrament to be free; but compelleth all together, on one certain day once in the year, to communicate. Here, I pray thee, christian brother! how many dost thou think to communicate only by the compulsion of this precept, who truly, in their heart, had rather not communicate? and all these sin (for they do not communicate in spirit, that is to say, neither in faith nor will, but by the compulsion of this letter and law), since this bread requireth a hungry, and not a full heart, and much less a disdainful and hateful mind. And of all these sins the pope is author, constraining all men, by his most cruel law, to their own destruction; whereas he ought to leave this communion free to every man, and only call and exhort them, and not compel and drive them unto it,’ etc.

Men ought not to be driven to the communion against their wills, but to be exhorted and left to their own disposition.

XXXVI. “The Spirit would that nothing should be done, but that which is expressly rehearsed in the Scripture.” Fol. 81.

In things appertaining to God’s worship and service, true it is that he is not to be worshipped, but only according to that which he hath revealed and expressed unto us in his own word. And this is the meaning of the author, as by his words doth plainly appear.

XXXVII. “St. Thomas Aquinas savoureth nothing of the Spirit of God.” Fol. 83.

The doctrine of Thomas Aquinas referreth the greatest, or a very great part of our righteousness to “opus operatum,” and unto merits. The Spirit of God referreth all our righteousness before God, only to our faith in Christ. Now, how these savour together, let any indifferent reader judge.

XXXVIII. “The pope did condemn the truth of the word of God openly at Constance in John Huss, persevering unto this day in the same stubbornness.” Fol. 86.

Touching the condemnation of John Huss, and the manner of his handling, and the cause of his death, read his story before; and consider, moreover, his prophecy of the hundred years after him expired, how truly the sequel did follow in Martin Luther, and then judge of his cause, good reader, as the truth of God’s word shall lead thee. HERE FOLLOW OTHER HERESIES AND ERRORS, COLLECTED BY THE BISHOPS OUT OF THE BOOK NAMED "THE SUM OF THE SCRIPTURE,"<sup>1</sup> WITH THE PLACES OF THE BOOK ANNEXED TO THE SAME.

Article I. First article.—"The water of the font hath no more virtue in it than hath the water of Rhine." Fol. 1.

Article. II. "The virtue of baptism lieth not in hallowed water, or in other outward thing, but only in faith." Fol. 6.

The place of these two articles gathered out of "The Sum of the Scripture," is this :

'The water of baptism taketh not away our sin; for then were it a precious water, and then it beloved us daily to wash ourselves therein: neither hath the water of the font more virtue in itself, than the water that runneth in the river of Rhine. When Philip baptized the eunuch,<sup>2</sup> the servant of Candace the queen of Ethiopia, there was then no hallowed water, nor candle, nor salt, nor cream, neither white habit; but he baptized him in the first water they came to upon the way. Here mayest thou perceive that the virtue of baptism lieth not in hallowed water, nor in the outward things that we have at the font, but in the faith only, etc. Christ hath healed us (saith St. Paul) by the bath of regeneration, and renovation of the Holy Ghost.'<sup>3</sup>

Article. III. "Godfathers and godmothers be bound to help their children that they be put to school, that they may understand the gospel, and the epistles of St. Paul." Fol. 15.

The place of this article, gathered out of the said book, is this :

'The godfathers and godmothers be bound to help the children that they be put to school, to the intent that they may understand the gospel, the joyful message of God, with the epistles of St. Paul. God hath commanded to publish, and to show the gospel, not only to priests, but to every creature: Go ye (saith Christ unto his disciples) into the universal world, and preach the gospel to every creature.<sup>4</sup> For we be all equally bound to know the gospel and the doctrine of the New Testament, etc. And St. Paul, writing to the Corinthians, confesseth that he sendeth his epistles to all the church; that is to say, to all the assembly of christian men, and to all them that call on the name of Jesus,' etc.

Article. IV. "We think, when we believe that God is God, and can our creed, that we have the faith that a christian man is bound to have; but so doth the devil believe." Fol. 17.

Article. V. "To believe that the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost, be one God, is not the principal that we must believe: our faith doth not lie principally in that; for so believeth the devil." Fol. 18.

The place out of the which these two articles are collected, is this :

'We think, when we believe that God is God, and can our creed, that we have the faith which a christian is bound to have. The devil believeth also that there is a God, and life everlasting, and a hell, but he is never the better for it; and he trembleth always for his faith, as saith St. James,<sup>5</sup> The devils believe, and they tremble. A man might ask, What shall I then believe? Thou shalt believe plainly and undoubtedly, that the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost, is one only God, etc. But this, likewise, believeth the wicked spirits, and are nothing the better there-for. There is yet another faith which Christ so much requireth of us in the gospel, and whereunto St. Paul in almost

VI. “If we believe that God hath promised everlasting life, it is impossible that we should perish.” Fol. 20. Article.

Lo here, good reader! another manifest example of the dishonest dealing and false cogging of these men. For whereas the place of the author speaketh expressly of putting our trust in God and his promises, the article prettily leaveth out our trusting in God’s promise, and saith only, if we believe that God hath promised. Read the place, and confer it with the article, and then judge whether there be no difference between trusting in the promise that God hath made of everlasting life, and believing only that God hath made the promise of everlasting life. The place here followeth as it is there written :

The place of the author falsely wrested.

‘When with a perfect courage we put all our trust in God and in his promises, it is impossible that we should perish, for he hath promised us life everlasting. And forasmuch as he is Almighty, he may well perform that which he hath promised; and in that he is merciful and true, he will perform his promise made unto us, if we can believe it steadfastly, and put all our trust in him.’

VII. “If thou canst surely and steadfastly believe in God, he will hold his promise: for he hath bound himself to us, and by his promise he oweth us heaven, in case that we believe him.” Fol. 21. Article.

Seeing all our hope standeth only upon the promise of God, what heresy then is in this doctrine, to say that God oweth us heaven by his promise, which is to mean no other but that God cannot break promise? And now judge thou, good reader, whether is more heresy to say, that God oweth us heaven by his promise, as we say; or this, that God oweth us heaven by the condignity and congruity of our works, as the papists say.

True doctrine made heresy.

VIII. “All Christ’s glory is ours.” Fol. 27. Article.

IX. “We need not to labour to be Christ’s heirs, and sons of God, and to have heaven; for we have all these things already.” Fol. 24. Article.

The words, out of which these two heresies are gathered, be these :

‘We be made his heirs, and all his glory is ours, as St. Paul largely declareth. This hath God given us without our deserving, and we need not to labour for all these things, for these we have already,’ etc.

They that note these articles for heresy, by the same judgment they may make heresy of St. John’s gospel, and of Paul’s epistle, and of all together. St. John saith, “The glory which thou gavest me, I have given them that they may be one, as we also are one.”<sup>2</sup> “As many as received him, to them gave he power to be the sons of God.”<sup>3</sup> St. Paul saith, “The same Spirit certifieth our spirit, that Article. XVII. “Men, trusting in their good works, are like to the thief on the left side, and are such men as come to the church daily, keep holy-days and fasting-days, and hear masses, and these people be soonest damned; for this is one of the greatest errors in Christendom, to think that thy good works shall help to thy salvation.” Fol. 47.

 True christianity turned into heresy.
 Article. XVIII. “To serve God in a tediousness, or for fear of hell, or for the joys of heaven, is but a shadow of good works, and such service doth not please God.” Fol. 41.

The place is this :

These contain no matter either of error or heresy.
 ‘Works done in faith be only pleasant unto God, and worthy to be called good works; for they be the works of the Holy Ghost, that dwelleth in us by this faith. But they that are done by tediousness, and evil will, for fear of hell, or for desire of heaven, be nothing else but shadows of works, making hypocrites. The end of our good works is only to please God, acknowledging that if we do ever so much, we can never do our duty; for they that for fear of hell, or for the joys of heaven, do serve God, do a constrained service, which God will not have. Such people do not serve God, because he is their God and their Father, but to have their reward, and to avoid his punishments; and such people are hired men and waged servants, and are not children. But the children of God serve their Father for love,’ etc.

XIX. “ We must love death, and more desire to die, than to fear death.” Fol. 36. Henry VIII.

Although our nature be frail, and full of imperfection, so that we do not as we should, yet doing as we ought, and as we are led by the Scriptures to do, we should not dread, but desire rather to die, and be with Christ, as the place itself doth well declare, which is this : A. D. 1546.

‘ We must love death, and more desire to die, and to be with God, as did St. Paul, than to fear death. For Jesus Christ died for us, to the intent that we should not fear to die; and he hath slain death, and destroyed the sting of death, as writeth St. Paul, saying, O death, where is thy sting? Death is swallowed up in victory! And to the Philippians, Christ is to me life, and death is to me advantage.’ The place is sound and perfect.

XX. “ God made us his children and his heirs, while we were his enemies, and before we knew him.” Fol. 44. Article.

I marvel what the papists mean in the registers to condemn this article as a heresy, unless their purpose be utterly to impugn and gainstand the Scripture, and the writings of St. Paul, who, in the fifth chapter to the Romans, and other his epistles, importeth even the same doctrine in all respects, declaring, in formal words, that we be made the children and heirs of God, and that we were reconciled unto him when we were his enemies.

XXI. “ It were better never to have done good works, and ask mercy there-for, than to do good works, and think that for them God is bound to a man by promise.” Fol. 48. Article.

XXII. “ We can show no more honour to God, than faith and trust in him.” Fol. 48. Article.

The place out of which these two articles be gathered, is this :

‘ It were better for thee a thousand fold, that thou hadst been a sinner, and never had done good deed, and to acknowledge thine offences and evil life unto God, asking mercy with a good heart, lamenting thy sins, than to have done good works, and in them to put thy trust, thinking that therefore God were bound to thee. There is nothing which (after the manner of speaking) bindeth God, but firm and steadfast faith and trust in him and his promises, etc. : for we can show unto God no greater honour, than to have faith and trust in him : for whosoever doth that, he confesseth that God is true, good, mighty, and merciful,’ etc. What heresy can be drawn out of this place.

XXIII. “ Faith without good works, is no little or feeble faith, but it is no faith.” Fol. 50. Article.

XXIV. “ Every man doth as much as he believeth.” Fol. 50. Article.

The place out of which these two articles be gathered, is this :

‘ If thy faith induce thee not to do good works, then hast not thou the right faith, thou doest but only think that thou hast it. For St. James saith, That faith without works is dead in itself.<sup>3</sup> He saith not, that it is little or feeble, but that it is dead; and that which is dead, is not. Therefore, when thou art not moved by faith unto the love of God, and by the love of God unto good works, thou hast no faith, but faith is dead in thee; for the Spirit of God, that by faith cometh into our hearts to stir up love, cannot be idle. Every one doth as much as he believeth, and loveth as much as he hopeth, as writeth St. John : He that hath this hope, that he is the Son of God, purifieth himself as he is pure. He saith not, he that purifieth himself hath this hope, for the hope must come before, proceeding from the faith; as it behoveth that the tree must first be good, which must bring forth good fruit.’ Heresy picked out where none is.

No man can find any heresy in this place, except he be a pharisee.

XXV. "We cannot be without motions of evil desires; but we must mortify them in resisting them." Fol. 52.

They that note this article of heresy, may note themselves rather to be like the pharisee,<sup>1</sup> who, foolishly flattering himself in the false opinion of his own righteousness, was not subdued to the righteousness which standeth before God by faith; and, therefore, went home to his house less justified than the publican. If the Scriptures condemn the heart of man to be crooked, even from his youth;<sup>2</sup> and also condemn all the righteousness of man to be like a defiled cloth; and if St. Paul could find in his flesh no good thing dwelling, but showeth a continual resistance between the old man and the new; then must it follow, that these pharisees, who condemn this article of heresy, either carry no flesh, and no old man about them to be resisted; or, verily, say what they will, they cannot choose but be cumbered with evil motions, for the inward man continually to fight against. The place of the author sufficiently defendeth itself, as followeth:

'St. Paul biddeth us mortify all our evil desires and carnal lusts, as uncleanness, covetousness, wrath, blasphemy, detraction, pride, and other like vices.<sup>3</sup> And unto the Romans,<sup>4</sup> he saith, Let not sin reign in your mortal bodies: that is to say, albeit we cannot live without the motion of such evil desires, yet we shall not suffer them to rule in us, but shall mortify them in resisting them,' etc.

Article. XXVI. "All true Christianity lieth in love of our neighbours for God: and not in fasting, keeping of holy-days, watching, praying, and singing, and long prayers, daily and all day long hearing mass, running on pilgrimage," etc. Fol. 52.

The place of this article is this:

Confer this article with the Scripture, and thou shalt see no heresy in it. 'Thou hast always occasion to mortify thine evil desires, to serve thy neighbour, to comfort him, and to help him with word and deed, with counsel and exhortation, and other semblable means. In such love towards our neighbour for the love of God, lieth all the law and the prophets, as saith Christ, yea, and all Christianity; and not in fasting, keeping of holy-days, watching, singing, and long prayers; daily and all day long hearing of masses, setting up of candles, running on pilgrimages, and such other things, which as well the hypocrites, proud people, envious, and subject to all wicked affections, do,' etc.

Article. XXVII. "Many doctors in divinity, and not only common people, believe that it is the part of christian faith only to believe that Jesus Christ hath lived here on earth." Fol. 53, 54.

The place is this:

To believe, that Christ here lived and died, is good: but this is not the only thing that maketh a christian man. 'We believe that Jesus Christ hath here lived on earth, and that he hath preached, and that he died for us, and did many other things. When we believe these things after the story, we believe that this is our christian faith. This not only the simple people believe, but also doctors in divinity, who are taken for wise men. Yea, the devil hath also this faith; as saith St. James, The devils believe, and they tremble.<sup>5</sup> For, as we have said before, the devil believeth that God is God, and that Jesus Christ hath here preached, that he died, was buried, and rose again. This must we also believe, but this is not the faith whereof speaketh the gospel, and St. Paul,' etc.

The place is this :

‘ All good deeds, which are not done by love and good will, are sin before God, as saith St. Augustine: He that doth good against his will, doth evil; albeit that he doth be good : for that which I do against my will, I hate; and when I hate the commandment, I hate also him that hath commanded it,’ etc.

XXIX. “ No man doth more than he is bound to do, and therefore no man may make others partakers of their good works.” Fol. 59.<sup>1</sup>

Article.

The words be these :

‘ The prophet Isaiah saith, We are all as an unclean thing, and all our justice is as it were a filthy cloth :<sup>2</sup> and therefore I can never marvel enough, that many of the religious persons would make others partakers of their good works, seeing that Christ saith in the gospel, When ye have done all those things which are commanded you, say, We are unprofitable servants; we have done but that which was our duty to do. For none can do too much. None doth more than he is bound to do, but only Jesus Christ (who only, as saith St. Peter, never did sin, neither was there deceit found in his mouth<sup>3</sup>) hath done that he was not bound to do; and as the prophet Isaiah saith, hath taken upon him our infirmities, and borne our sorrows; he was wounded for our offences, and smitten for our wickedness, and by his stripes are we made whole,<sup>4</sup> etc.

XXX. “ Christ hath gotten heaven by his passion; but that right hath he no need of, but hath granted it to all them that believe in his promises.” Fol. 59.

Article.

Read the place :

‘ Jesus Christ possesseth the kingdom of heaven by double right : first, because he is the Son of God, and very inheritor of his kingdom : secondly, because he hath gotten it by his passion and death. Of his second right he hath no need, and therefore he giveth it to all them that believe and trust in him and his promises.’

The doctrine of this article is sound.

XXXI. “ If God had promised us heaven for our good works, we should ever be unsure of our salvation.” Fol. 59.

Article.

XXXII. “ Be our sins never so great, so that it seemeth impossible to us to be saved, yet without any doubt we must believe to be saved.” Fol. 59.

Article.

The words out of which these two articles be gathered are these :

‘ If God had promised heaven unto us because of our works, we should ever then be unsure of our salvation : for we should never know how much, nor how long, we should labour to be saved, and should ever be in fear that we had done too little, and so we should never die joyfully. But God would assure us of heaven by his promise, to the intent we should be certain and sure, for he is the truth, and cannot lie; and also to the intent that we should have trust and hope in him. And, notwithstanding that after the greatness and multitude of our sins, it seem to us a thing impossible, yet always we must believe it without any doubt, because of his sure promise : and whosoever doth this, he may joyfully die, and abide the judgment of God, which, else, were intolerable.

The doctrine of these articles, as true as the gospel.

XXXIII. "If thou love thy wife because she is thy wife, that is no love before God, but thou shalt love her because she is thy sister in God." Fol. 83.

The words be these :

A difference between carnal love and spiritual love; and yet in matrimony both are necessary.

'Our Saviour Christ hath commanded nothing so straitly, as to love one another; yea, to love our enemies also: then how much more should the man and wife love together? But there be but few that know how to love the one the other as they ought to do. If thou love thy wife only because she is thy wife, and because she serveth, and pleaseth thee after the flesh, for beauty, birth, riches, and such-like, this is no love before God. Of such love speaketh not St. Paul, for such love is among harlots, yea, among brute beasts: but thou shalt love her because she is thy sister in the christian faith; and because she is inheritor together with thee in the glory of God; and because ye serve together one God; because ye have received together one baptism, etc. Thou shalt also love her for her virtues, as shamefastness, chastity, and diligence, sadness, patience, temperance, secrecy, obedience, and other godly virtues,' etc.

XXXIV. "It is nothing but all incredulity, to run in pilgrimage, and seek God in one certain place, who is alike mighty in all places." Fol. 62.

The matter of this article is evident to all indifferent and learned judgments, to be void of all doubt of heresy.

Article.

XXXV. "Men should see that their children come to church, to hear the sermon." Fol. 89.

The place of this article is this :

'On the festival-days thou shalt bring thy children to the church, to hear the sermon; and when thou shalt come home, thou shalt ask them what they have kept in memory of the sermon. Thou shalt teach them the christian faith. Thou shalt admonish them to live well, and to put all their hope and trust in God, and rather to die, than to do any thing that is against the will of God; and, principally, thou shalt learn them the contents of the prayer of our Saviour Christ, called the Pater-noster; that is to say, how they have another Father in heaven, of whom they must look for all goodness, and without whom they can have no good thing; and how that they may seek nothing in all their works, and in all their intents, but the honour of their heavenly Father: and how they must desire that this Father would govern all that they do or desire: and how that they must submit all to His holy will, who cannot be but good, etc. Thou shalt buy them wholesome books, as the holy gospel, the epistles of the holy apostles, yea, both the New and the Old Testament, that they may understand and drink of the sweet fountain and waters of life.'

Article.

XXXVI. "Thou shalt not vex or grieve, by justice or otherwise, the poor that oweth unto thee: for thou mayest not do it without sin." Fol. 97.

The place is this :

'Thou shalt not vex or grieve by justice, etc., as Christ saith, Resist not evil, but whosoever striketh thee on the right cheek, turn to him the other also,<sup>2</sup> etc. St. Paul saith, Render not evil for evil; and, if it be possible, and as much as is in you, live in peace with all men, not revenging yourselves, my well-beloved, but give place to wrath: for it is written, To me be the vengeance, and I will render it, saith the Lord God.'<sup>3</sup>

A. D. 1546.

As touching war, to be moved or stirred first of our parts against any people or country upon any rash cause, as ambition, malice, or revenge, the gospel of Christ giveth us no such sword to fight withal. Notwithstanding, for defence of country and subjects, the magistrate, being invaded or provoked by others, may lawfully, and is bound to do his best: as the city of Marburg did well in defending itself against the emperor, etc.

How Christians may war lawfully.

XXXIX. “The gospel maketh all true christian men servants to all the world.” Fol. 79.

Article

He that compiled this article, to make the matter to appear more heinous, craftily leaveth out the latter part which should expound the other, that is, “by the rule of charity;” for that the author addeth withal. By which rule of charity, and not of office and duty, every christian man is bound one to help another; as Christ himself, being lord of all, yet, of charity, was a servant to every man to do him good. Read the place of the Sum of the Scripture, in the page as in the article it is assigned.

Crafty cogging in this article.

XL. “The gospel is written for persons of all estates, prince, duke, pope, emperor.” Fol. 112.

Article.

They that noted this article for a heresy, I suppose could little tell either what God, or what the Scripture meaneth.

XLI. “When judges have hope that an evil doer will amend, they must be always merciful, as Christ was to the woman taken in advoury. The temporal law must obey the gospel; and them that we may amend by warning, we shall not correct by justice.” Fol. 113.

Article.

The purpose of the book whence this article is wrested, being well understood, intendeth not to bind temporal judges and magistrates from due execution of good laws, but putteth both them, and especially spiritual judges, in remembrance, by the example of Christ, to discern who be penitent offenders, and who be otherwise; and where they see evident hope of earnest repentance and amendment, if they be ecclesiastical judges, to spare them; if they be civil magistrates, yet to temper the rigour of the law as much as conveniently they may, with merciful moderation, which the Greeks do call ἐπιείκεια.

And thus much hitherto of these heresies and articles collected by the bishops, and inserted in their own registers out of the books above specified. The names of the bishops and collectors were these, sir Thomas More, lord chancellor; William Warham, archbishop of Canterbury; Tostall, bishop of Durham; Stephen Gardiner, secretary to the king; Richard Sampson, dean of the chapel; Richard Woolman, master of the requests; John Bell; Dr. Wilson, with a great number more, as in the registers doth appear.<sup>1</sup>

I shall not need, I trust, gentle reader, further here to tarry thee with reciting more places, when these already rehearsed may suffice for a taste and a trial for thee, sufficient to note and consider how falsely, and most slanderously, these catholics have depraved and misreported the books and writings of good men, who might almost gather heresies as well of St. John's gospel, and St. Paul's epistles, as out of these places. Thus may we see, what cannot malice do, being set on mischief? or what cannot the spirit of spite and cavilling find out, being inflamed with hatred, and blown with the bellows of ambition and iniquity? And as they have done with these, the like parts they have and do practise still against all others, whosoever, in defence of truth, dare touch ever so little either the pope's crown, or the bellies of his clergy: for these two sores in no case they can abide to be touched.

And hereof only cometh all this crying out, Heresy, Heresy; Blasphemy, Error, and Schism. Although the doctrine be ever so sound and perfect after the Scripture, yet if the writer be not such, in all points (especially in these two above touched), as will sing after their tune, and dance after their pipe, he is by and by a heretic, by virtue of their inquisition. So did they with the articles of the learned carl Johannes Picus Mirandula. So did they also with John Reveline or Capnion. So did they also with good John Colet here in England. Also, with the like spirit of lying and cavilling, the catholic faculties of Louvain, Spain, and Paris, condemned the works and writings of Erasmus, and many more. So full they are of censures, articles, suspicions, offences, inquisitions. So captious they be in taking, so rash in judging, so slanderous of report, so practised in depraving, misconstruing, and wresting, true meanings into wrong purposes. Briefly, so pregnant they be in finding heresies where none are, that either a man must say nothing, or serve their devotion, or else he shall procure their displeasure, that is, shall be deemed for a heretic. Yea, and though no just cause of any heresy be ministered, yet where they once take disliking, they will not stick sometimes, with false accusations, to press him with matter which he never spake nor thought. If Luther had not stirred against the pope's pardons and authority, he had remained still a white son of the mother catholic church, and all had been well done, whatsoever he did. But, because he adventured to touch once the triple crown, what floods of heresies, blasphemies, and articles were cast out against him, enough to drown a whole world! what lies and forged crimes were invented against him!

Here now cometh Staphylus<sup>1</sup> and furious SURIUS,<sup>2</sup> with their fraternity, and say, that he learned his divinity of the devil. Then followeth another certain chronographer,<sup>3</sup> who, in his lying story reporteth most falsely, that Luther died of drunkenness. With like malice the said chronographer writeth also of Master Bucer, falsely affirming upon his information, that he should deny at his death Christ our Messias to be come; when not only Dr. Redman, who preached at his burial, but also all Englishmen who knew the name of Bucer, did know it to be contrary.

So was it laid against one Singleton, chaplain some time to queen Anne Bullen, that he was the murderer of Packington, and afterwards, that he was a stirrer up of sedition and commotion; who, also suffered as a traitor for the same. Whereas, in very deed, the true cause was for nothing else, but for preaching the gospel unto the people; whose purpose was ever so far from stirring sedition, that he never once dreamed of any such matter, as he himself declared and protested to one Richard Lant his scholar, who is yet alive, and can testify the truth hereof. But this is no new practice amongst the Romish bishops; whereof enough hath been said before in the story of sir John Oldcastle, and sir Roger Acton, etc.

*Henry VIII.*A. D. 1516.

Another like practice of such malicious slander we find also in one Merial a bricklayer, whose name, with his abjuration, remaineth yet in the registers of the bishop of London.

Merial belied.

The story is this, and not unworthy to be remembered. In the year of our Lord 1534, which was about the first beginning of queen Anne Bullen, at what time purgatory and such trumpery began to grow in contempt, Stokesley, bishop of London, made a sermon in the Shrouds, upon the Sunday before May-day; where he, preaching in the commendation of the virtue of masses, declared to the people, that, for a little cost, if they procured masses to be said, wives might deliver their husbands, and husbands their wives out of the bitter pains of purgatory. At this sermon, besides many others, was Thomas Merial, a zealous favourer of God's word; who, being in the watch on May-even, made relation of these words of the bishop unto the company about him, amongst whom then was one John Twyford, a furious papist, and who had the same time the setting-up of the stakes in Smithfield, wheremat the good saints of God were burned.

Bishop Stokesley's sermon in the Shrouds.

Twyford the common tormentor of the martyrs that suffered in Smithfield.

This Twyford, who then kept a tavern, and had an old grudge against the said Merial for striking his boy, hearing these words, allured home to his house certain lewd persons, to the number of ten, whose names were these: Blackwell, Laurence, Wilson, Thomas Clark, John Duffield, William Kenningham, Thomas Hosier, Worme a cutler, Allen Ryse, with another that was the tenth. Besides these he procured also secretly Master Chambers's clerk, whose name was Bright. And when he had craftily overcome them with wine, and made them to report what words he listed, and which they knew not themselves, the clerk by and by received the same in writing. Whereupon this article was gathered against Merial, that he should hold and affirm, that the passion of Christ doth not help them that came after him, but only them that were in limbo before: and also that he should say, that his wife was as good as our Lady. Upon this writing of the notary, he was immediately brought to bishop Stokesley, and there, by the deposition of these ten false witnesses, wrongfully accused, and also for the same should have been condemned, had not Dr. Barret the same time bid him speak one word (which he knew not) as the sentence was in reading, whereby the condemnation was stayed, and he put to do open penance, and to bear a faggot. Notwithstanding the said Merial sware before the bishop that he never spake nor meant any such word as there was said unto him, but only recited the words of the bishop's sermon, reporting the same in the person of the bishop, and not his own; which also was testified to be true, by the oaths of three others, to wit, William Tompson, Gregory Newman, and William Wit, who, being in the aforesaid watch the same time, did take upon their oath before the bishop, that his words were no other, but as is above declared. These three witnesses, at the second edition hereof,<sup>1</sup> were also living, with the wife of the aforesaid Merial, who would then also be sworn that the same was true: whereas, contrary, the other ten persons, * false perjured witnesses,* be all gone, and none of them all remaining. Of whom, moreover, the most of all the said ten came to a miserable end; whereas the other three who testified the truth with Merial, being living at the second edition hereof, did see the end of all the others. And as for Twyford, who was the executioner of Frith, Bayfield, Bainham, Tewkesbury, Lambert, and other good men, he died rotting above the ground, so that none could abide him, and thus came to a wretched end.<sup>2</sup>

Of this malicious and perverse dealing of these men contrary to all truth and honesty, in defaming them for heretics who indeed are none, and with opprobrious railing to slander their cause, which is nothing else but the simple truth of Christ's gospel, whoso listeth to search further (if these examples hitherto recited do not suffice), let him read the story of Merindol and Angrogne.<sup>3</sup> Let him consider the furious bull of pope Martin,<sup>4</sup> the like slanderous bull also of pope Leo X.<sup>5</sup> with the edict of Charles the emperor against Luther. Also let him survey the railing stories of Surius the monk of Cologne, the book of Hosius;<sup>6</sup> of Lindanus;<sup>7</sup> the chronography of Genebrarde,<sup>8</sup> the story of Cochleus against the Hussites and the Lutherans,<sup>9</sup> with the preface of Conradus Brunus the lawyer prefixed before the same, wherein he, most falsely and untruly railing against these protestants, whom he calleth heretics, chargeth them to be blasphemers of God, contemners of God and men, church-robbers, cruel, false liars, crafty deceivers, unfaithful, promise-breakers, disturbers of public peace and tranquillity, corrupters and subverters of commonweals, and all else that naught is.

In much like sort was Socrates accused of his countrymen for a corrupter of the youth, whom Plato notwithstanding defendeth. Aristides the just lacked not his unjust accusers. Was it not objected unto St. Paul, that he was a subverter of the law of Moses, and that we might do evil that good might come thereof?<sup>10</sup> How was it laid to the christian martyrs in the primitive church, for worshiping of an ass's head, and for sacrificing of infants. And, to come more near to these our latter days, you heard likewise how falsely the christian congregation of the Frenchmen, gathered together in the night at Paris, to celebrate the holy communion, were accused of

Henry VIII.

A. D. 1546.

No truth safe from false detraction.

Even so, likewise, it pleaseth our Lord and Saviour Christ to keep and to exercise his church under the like kind of adversaries now reigning in the church, who, under the name of the church, will needs maintain a portly state and kingdom in this world; and because they cannot uphold their cause by plain Scripture and the word of God, they bear it out with facing, railing, and slandering; making princes and the simple people believe, that all be hereties, schismatics, blasphemers, rebels, and subverters of all authority and commonweals, whosoever dare reply with any Scripture against their doings.

It is written of Nero, that when he himself had burned the city of Rome six days and seven nights, he made open proclamations that the innocent Christians had set the city on fire, to stir the people against them, whereby he might burn and destroy them as rebels and traitors.<sup>1</sup>

Not much unlike seemeth the dealing of these religious catholics, who, when they be the true hereties themselves, and have burned and destroyed the church of Christ, make out their exclamations, bulls, briefs, articles, books, censures, letters, and edicts against the poor Lutherans, to make the people believe, that they be the hereties, schismatics, disturbers of the whole world; who, if they could prove them, as they reprove them to be hereties, they were worthy to be heard. But now they cry out upon them hereties, and can prove no heresy; they accuse them of error, and can prove no error. They call them schismatics, and what church since the world stood, hath been the mother of so many schisms as the mother church of Rome? They charge them with dissension and rebellion; and what dissension can be greater than to dissent from the Scripture and word of God? or what is so like rebellion, as to rebel against the Son of God, and against the will of his eternal Testament? They are disturbers, they say, of peace and public authority; which is as true, as that the Christians set the city of Rome on fire. What doctrine did ever attribute so much to public authority of magistrates, as do the protestants? or who ever attributed less to magistrates, or deposed more dukes, kings, and emperors, than the papists? He that saith that the bishop of Rome is no more than the bishop of Rome, and ought to wear no crown, is not by and by a rebel against his king and magistrates, but rather a maintainer of their authority; which, indeed, the bishop of Rome cannot abide. Briefly, wilt thou see whether be the greater hereties, the protestants or the papists? Let us try it by a measure, and let this measure be the glory only of the Son of God, which cannot fail. Now judge, I beseech thee, whosoever knowest the doctrine of them both, whether of these two do ascribe more or less to the majesty of Christ Jesus our King and Lord; the protestants, who admit no other head of the church, nor justifier of our souls, nor forgiver of our sins, nor advocate to his Father, but him alone; or else the papists, who can abide none of these articles, but condemn the same for heresy? This being so (as they themselves will not deny), now judge, good reader, who hath set the city of Rome on fire—Nero, or the Christians.

But to return again to the purpose of our former matter, which was to show forth the proclamation of the bishops for the abolishing of English books above rehearsed as being corrupt and full of heresy, which, notwithstanding, we have declared to contain no heresy, but sound and wholesome doctrine, according to the perfect word and scripture of God.

merciful help in time of need.

Here now, when the prelates of the pope's side had procured this edict and proclamation aforesaid, for the condemnation of all such English books, printed or unprinted, which made against their advantage, they triumphed not a little, weening they had made a great hand against the gospel's ever rising again, and that they had established their kingdom for ever; as indeed, to all men's thinking, it might seem no less. For who would have thought—after so strait, so precise, and so solemn a proclamation, set forth and armed with the king's terrible authority; also after the cruel execution of Anne Askew, Laelcs, and the rest: item, after the busy search moreover, and names-taking of many others, of whom some were chased away, some apprehended and laid up, divers in present peril, and expectation of their attachment,—who would have thought it (I say) otherwise possible, but that the gospel must needs have an overthrow, seeing what sure work the papists here had made, in setting up their side, and throwing down the contrary?

power worketh against man's presumption.

But it is no new thing with the Lord, to show his power against man's presumption, that when man counteth himself most sure, then is he furthest off, and when he supposeth to have done all, then is he anew to begin again. So was it in the primitive church before Constantine's time, that when Nero, Domitian, Maxentius, Decius, and other emperors, impugning the gospel and profession of Christ, did not only constitute laws and proclamations against the Christians, but also did engrave the same laws in tables of brass, minding to make all things firm for ever and a day; yet we see how, with a little turning of God's hand, all their puissant devices and brazen laws turned all to wind and dust: so little doth it avail for man to wrestle against the Lord and his proceedings! Howsoever man's building is mortal and ruinous, of brittle brick, and mouldering stones, yet that which the Lord taketh in hand to build, neither can time waste, nor man pluck down. What God setteth up, there is neither power nor striving to the contrary. What he intendeth, standeth; what he blesseth, that prevaieth. And yet man's unquiet presumption will not cease still to erect up towers of Babel against the Lord, which, the higher they are builded up, fall with the greater ruin: for what can stand, that standeth not with the Lord? Which thing, as in example of all ages it is to be seen, so, in this late proclamation devised by the bishops, is it in like manner exemplified; which proclamation, though it was sore and terrible for the time, yet, not long after, by reason of the king's death (whom the Lord shortly thereupon took to his mercy), it made at length but a castle come down. So that where the prelates thought to make their jubilee, it turned them to the "threnes" of Jeremy.<sup>1</sup> Such be the admirable workings of the Lord of hosts, whose name be sanctified for ever!

This I do not infer for any other purpose, but only for the works of the Lord to be seen; premonishing thee, good reader, withal, that as touching the king (who in this proclamation had nothing but the name only) here is nothing spoken but to his laud and praise; who, of his own nature and disposition, was so inclinable and forward in all things virtuous and commendable, that the like enterprise of redress of religion hath not lightly been seen in any other prince christened: as in abolishing the stout and almost invincible authority of the pope, in suppressing monasteries, in repressing custom of idolatry and pilgrimage, etc.; which enterprises, as never king of England did accomplish (though some began to attempt them) before him, so, yet to this day, we see but few in other realms dare follow the same. If princes have always their council about them, that is but a common thing. If sometimes they have evil counsel ministered, that I take to be the fault rather of such as are about them, than of princes themselves. So long as queen Anne, Thomas Cromwell, archbishop Cranmer, Master Denny, Doctor Butts, with such like were about him, and could prevail with him, what organ of Christ's glory did more good in the church than he? as is apparent by such monuments, instruments, and acts set forth by him, in setting up the Bible in the church, in exploding the pope with his vile pardons, in removing divers superstitious ceremonies, in bringing into order the inordinate orders of friars and sects, in putting chantry priests to their pensions, in permitting white meat in Lent, in destroying pilgrimage-worship, in abrogating idle and superfluous holy-days, both by act public, and also by private letters sent to Bonner tending to this effect.

A private Letter of the King to Bishop Bonner.

Right reverend father in God, right trusty and well beloved, we greet you well! And whereas, considering the manifold inconveniences which have ensued, and daily do ensue to our subjects, by the great superfluity of holy-days, we have, by the assents and consents of all you the bishops and other notable personages of the clergy of this our realm, in full congregation and assembly had for that purpose, abrogated and abolished such as be neither canonical, nor meet to be suffered in a commonwealth, for the manifold inconveniences which do ensue of the same, as is rehearsed. And to the intent our determination therein may be duly observed and accomplished, we have thought convenient to command you immediately upon the receipt hereof, to address your commandments, in our name, to all the curates, religious houses, and colleges within your diocese, with a copy of the act made for the abrogation of the holy-days aforesaid, a transumpt whereof ye shall receive herewith; commanding them and every of them, in no wise, either in the church or otherwise, to indict or speak of any of the said days and feasts abolished, whereby the people might take occasion either to murmur at, or to contemn the order taken therein, and to continue in their accustomed idleness, the same notwithstanding; but to pass over the same with such secret silence, as they may have like abrogation by disuse, as they have already by our authority in convocation. And forasmuch as the time of harvest now approacheth, our pleasure is ye him, so led.

Thus, while good counsel was about him, and could be heard, the king did much good. So again, when sinister and wicked counsel, under subtle and crafty pretences, had gotten once the foot in, thrusting truth and verity out of the prince's ears, how much religion and all good things went prosperously forward before, so much, on the contrary side, all revolted backward again. Whereupon proceeded this proclamation above mentioned, concerning the abolishing and burning of English books: which proclamation, bearing the name of the king's majesty, but being the very deed of the popish bishops, no doubt had done much hurt in the church among the godly sort, bringing them either into great danger, or else keeping them in much blindness, had not the shortness of the king's days stopped the malignant purposes of the aforesaid prelates, causing the king to leave that by death unto the people, which by his life he would not grant. For, within four months after, the proclamation coming out in August, he deceased in the beginning of January,<sup>1</sup> in the thirty-eighth year of his reign, A. D. 1547; leaving behind him three children, who succeeded him in his kingdom, king Edward, queen Mary, and queen Elizabeth: of whom it remaineth now to prosecute (by the permission and sufferance of Christ our high Lord and Prince) in the process of this history, according as the order of their succession, and acts done by them in the church, shall require; after that, first, I shall have prosecuted certain other matters by the way, according to my promise here to be inserted.

Thus, having finished the time and race of king Henry VIII., it remaineth now, according to my promise made before, here to place and adjoin so much as doth come to our hands, touching the persecution of Scotland, and of the blessed martyrs of Christ who in that country, likewise, suffered for the true religion of Christ, and the testimony of their faith.

THE ACT OR PROCESS, OR CERTAIN ARTICLES AGAINST SIR
JOHN BORTHWIKE, KNIGHT, IN SCOTLAND;<sup>1</sup>

With the Answer and Confutation of the said Borthwike; whose Preface to the Reader here followeth.

By the help of a certain friend of mine, there came certain articles unto my hand, for which the Scottish cardinal, and such others of his sect and affinity, did condemn me as a heretic. And forasmuch as this condemnation should not lack his cloak or defence, they gathered together a great number of witnesses, whereas, besides the bare names of the witnesses, they alleged none other proof at all. Wherefore I thought good to bestow some labour in refelling those articles, which they could not prove, partly that I might take away from all true Christians the occasion of all evil suspicion, as though that I, being vanquished or overthrown by their threatenings, would deny Christ; and, partly, that their errors being thereby made manifest, they should even for very shame repent, or else, hereafter, the less abuse the furor or madness of such witnesses to shed blood. Therefore I will first confirm, by evident testimonies of the Scriptures, those things which in times past I have taught; and afterwards I will refel their vain sophistications, whereby they go about to subvert the truth of God.

The Act or Process, &c.

Sir John Borthwike, knight, commonly called captain Borthwike, being accused, suspected, infamed, and convicted by unexceptionable witnesses, in the year of our Lord 1540, the twenty-eighth day of May, in the cloister of St. Andrew's, in the presence of the most reverend and reverend and venerable fathers in Christ, Gawine archbishop of Glasgow, chancellor of Scotland; William bishop of Aberdeen, Henry bishop of Candidatia,<sup>2</sup> John bishop of Brechin, and William, bishop of Dumblane; Andrew of Melrose, George of Dunfermline, John of Paslet,<sup>3</sup> John of Londrose,<sup>4</sup> Robert of Rillos<sup>5</sup> and William of Rulrose,<sup>6</sup> abbots; Mancolme of Quiterne<sup>7</sup> and John of Petinuaim,<sup>8</sup> priors; Master Alexander Balfour, vicar of Ritman,<sup>9</sup> rector of law, official of St. Andrew's; John Winryme, subprior; John Annand and Thomas Cunningham, canons of St. Andrew's; John Thompson of the university of St. Andrew's; and Master John Mairr and Peter Capel, bachelors of divinity and doctors; Martin Balfour, bachelor of divinity, and of the law, and official principal of St. Andrew's; John Tulildaffe, warden of the friars minors,<sup>10</sup> and John Patterson of the same convent: and also in the presence of the most noble, mighty, and right wor-

This church was famous for the great resort of pilgrims, who flocked thither from all parts to St. Ninian's sepulchre. There were two famous priors of this place, the one Gavin Dunbar A. shipful lords, George earl of Huntelo,<sup>1</sup> James earl of Arran, William earl marshali, William earl of Montrose; Malcolm lord Fleming, chamberlain of Scotland; John lord Lindsey, John lord Erskine, George lord Seton, Hugh lord Somerwyll, sir James Hamelton of Finwart,<sup>2</sup> Walter lord of the knights of St. John, of Torphichen; Master James Foules of Collington, clerk to the king's register; with divers other lords, barons, and honest persons, being called and likewise required for witnesses, that he did hold, publish, and openly teach, these errors following:<sup>3</sup>

THE FIRST ARTICLE :

'That our most holy father the pope, the vicar of Jesu Christ, hath not, neither can exercise, greater authority over Christians here on earth, than any other bishop or prelate.'

Sir John Borthwike's Answer.

They do magnify their lord with the title of 'Most Holy,' as common thieves and robbers are accustomed to prefer the captains and ringleaders of their robberies and mischiefs, proclaiming them in every place honest and good men, whereas it is evident that in the whole world there is no man more given to riot, who more greedily doth seek after all kind of delicateness and wantonness, and finally aboundeth with all kind of vice, as treason, murder, rapine, and all kind of such evils.

Furthermore, whereas they affirm him to be the vicar of Christ here on earth, it shall be easily convinced, when it shall be made manifest, that he neither hath, nor can exercise, more power or authority over Christians, than any other bishop or prelate. For unto that office of being vicar they refer that great authority which they do so greatly boast and brag of, which being taken away, the office of vicar doth also fall and decay. But now, to attempt the matter, I will first demand of the maintainers of this pre-eminency and authority, whereupon they will ground the same? I know that they will answer unto me, that Peter had power and authority over the other apostles, and consequently over the universal church, which power, by succession, is translated unto the bishops of Rome. But how unshamefastly do they lie herein, any may easily perceive who hath but any small spark of judgment in him, when he shall hear the testimonies of the Scriptures, which we will allege to confirm this our opinion. For Peter, in Acts xv., in the council, doth declare what is to be done, and admonisheth us what of necessity we ought to do. And he there did also hear others speak, and did not only give them place to say their minds, but also permit and receive their judgment; and whereas they decreed, he followed and obeyed the same. Is this then to have power over others?

Furthermore, whereas in his first epistle he writeth unto bishops and pastors, he doth not command them as a superior or head over them, by power and authority, but maketh them his fellow-companions, and gently exhorteth them as is accustomed to be done between equals of degree; for these are his words: 'I beseech and desire the bishops and pastors which are amongst you, forasmuch as I myself am also a bishop, and a witness of the afflictions of Christ, and also a partaker of the glory which shall be revealed, that they do diligently feed the flock of Christ, which is committed unto them.' Why then do they so challenge unto them the authority of Peter, which he never acknowledged in himself? Truly, I do not doubt but that if Peter were here present, he would, with like severity, rebuke their folly and madness, as Moses, in times past, did unto Joshua, who burned with too earnest a zeal towards him.

I doubt not but that many, in this feigned authority of Peter, do seek out more vain helps to maintain and uphold the tyranny of popes, rather than to make him ruler and governor over all others. For whereas in Acts viii. he is commanded by his fellows to go with John into Samaria, he did not refuse so to do. Insonmuch then as the apostles do send him, they declare thereby, that they do not count him as their head and superior, and in that he doth obey them, and taketh upon him the office or ministry committed unto him, he confesseth thereby that he hath a society and fellowship with them but no rule or empery over them, as he writeth in his epistle.

(1) 'Huntelo,' Huntly, a castle of the Gordons in Berwickshire.—Ed.

(2) 'Finwart,' Finnart, or Finlater, a castle of the Sinclairs and Ogilvys, to whom it has given the title of earl.—Ed.

(3) There has been some difference in the statements of this preamble as given by Hall and by Foxe; by the aid of the former several of the proper names have been corrected, while others are explained in the notes, on the authority of Keith and others. Neither Knox in his 'History of the Reformation,' nor Spotswood in his 'History of the Church of Scotland,' nor Hall in his 'Chronicle,' have preserved those interesting answers which Foxe has given us.—Ed.

But if none of these examples were evident or manifest, the only Epistle to the Galatians were sufficient to put us out of all doubt; where St. Paul, almost throughout two whole chapters, doth nothing else but declare and affirm himself to be equal unto Peter, in the honour or dignity of the apostleship. For, first of all, he rehearseth how he went up to Jerusalem unto Peter, not to the intent to profess any homage and subjection unto him, but only to witness, with a common consent and agreement, unto all men the doctrine which they taught; and that Peter did require no such things at his hand, but gave unto him the right side or upper hand of the fellowship, that they might jointly together labour in the vineyard of the Lord. Moreover, that he had no less favour and grace among the Gentiles, than Peter had amongst the Jews; and finally, when Peter did not faithfully execute his office and ministry, he was by him rebuked, and Peter became obedient unto his correction.

All these things do evidently prove, that there was equality between Paul and Peter, and also that Peter had no more power over the residue of the apostles, than he had over Paul: which thing St. Paul even of purpose doth treat of, lest any man should prefer Peter or John before him in the office of apostleship, who were but his companions, and not lords over one another. Whereupon these places of Scripture work this effect, that I cannot acknowledge Peter to be superior or head over other apostles, neither the pope over other bishops: but I acknowledge and confess Christ to be the only head of the church, the foundation and high priest thereof, who, with one only oblation, hath made perfect for evermore all those who are sanctified. And I boldly do affirm and say with St. Gregory, that whosoever calleth himself, or desireth to be named or called, the head or universal priest or bishop, in that his pride he is the fore-rider or predecessor of Antichrist; forasmuch as, through his pride, he doth exalt himself above all others.

Furthermore, whereas they allege, out of the old law, the high priesthood and the supreme judgment which God did institute and ordain at Jerusalem; I answer thereunto, that Christ was that high bishop, unto whom the right and title of priesthood is now transported and referred. Neither is there any man so impudent, which will take upon him to succeed in the place or degree of his honour; forasmuch as this priesthood doth not consist only in learning, but in the propitiation and mercy of God, which Christ hath fulfilled by his death, and in the intercession, by which he doth now entreat for us unto his Father.

Whereas also they do allege out of Matt. xvi.; 'Thou art Peter, and upon this rock,' etc. if they do think that this was particularly spoken unto Peter, St. Cyprian and St. Augustine shall sufficiently answer them, that Christ did it not for this purpose, to prefer one man above all the residue, but that thereby he might commend and set forth the unity of the church; for so saith St. Cyprian: 'In the person of one man God gave unto them all the keys, that he might thereby signify the unity of them all. For even as Peter was, even the very same were all the residue, being endued with like fellowship of honour and dignity. But it was convenient that it should take his original of one, that the church of God might be manifested to be one only.' St. Augustine's words are these:<sup>1</sup> 'If the mystery of the church were not in Peter, the Lord would not have said unto him, I will give unto thee the keys of the kingdom of heaven. If this were spoken unto Peter, the church hath them not. If the church have them, then Peter, when he received the keys, did figure the whole church. Again, when they were all demanded and asked, only Peter answered, Thou art Christ. Then was it said unto him, I will give unto thee the keys, as though he alone had received the power of binding and loosing; for, like as he alone spake that for them all, so he, as it were, bearing the person of that unity, received the same with them all. Therefore, one for them all, because he is united unto them all.'

Another argument they do gather upon the words which Christ spake unto Peter, 'Thou art Peter, and upon this rock will I build my church,' which words are not found to be spoken unto any other of the apostles. This argument shall easily be dissolved, if we do understand and know why Christ did give Peter that name, which otherwise was called Simon. In the first chapter of John, Christ speaketh thus unto him: 'Thou shalt be called Cephas;' which, by interpretation, signifieth Peter: in that point having respect unto the constant confession of Christ which he had made, like as God changed the name of Abraham, who at first was called Abram, because he should be a father of many nations. Then, even as Abraham took his name of the multitude, which should come forth of his seed, so likewise Peter took his name of the constant confession of Christ, who indeed is the true rock whereupon the church is builded, and not Peter himself; no otherwise than Abraham, who was not the multitude itself, whereof he took his name. Besides this, the church should be stayed, or builded upon an over weak foundation, if it should have Peter for the ground or foundation thereof, who, being amazed and overcome with the words of a little wench, did so constantly deny Christ.

Now, therefore, I think there is no man but that doth understand how these Romish builders do wrest the Scriptures hither and thither, and, like unto the Lesbian rule, do apply them according to their wills, to what end and use they themselves think good.

Another
objection
solved.

Furthermore, in that they do allege, out of John xx., 'Feed my sheep,' it is an over-childish argument; for to feed, is not to bear rule and dominion over the whole church. Besides all this, as Peter had received commandment of the Lord, so doth he exhort all other bishops to feed their flock, in his first epistle and fifth chapter. Hereby a man may gather by these words of Christ, that either there was no authority given unto Peter more than unto others, or else that Peter did equally communicate that right and authority, which he had received, unto others, and did not reserve it unto himself after his death, to be transported unto the bishops of Rome.

As for such reasons as they do allege, which are not gathered or taken out of Holy Scriptures, I pass them over, lest I might seem to contend with shadows.

THE SECOND ARTICLE.

'That indulgences and pardons, granted by our supreme head the pope, are of no force, strength, or effect; but tend only to the abusion of the people, and to the deceiving of their souls.'

Sir John Borthwike's Answer.

Indulgences of no effect.

It shall be evidently declared, that indulgences and pardons are of none effect, after that I have, first of all, taught what they do call indulgences or pardons. They say, they are the treasure of the church, that is to say, the merits of Christ, of the saints, apostles and martyrs, whom they impudently affirm to have performed and merited more at God's hand, at the time of their death, than was necessary or needful for them; and that of the abundance of their merits there did so much superabound, as was not only sufficient for themselves, but also might redound to the help of others. And, because so great a goodness should not be superfluous or in vain, they affirm and teach, that their blood was mixed and joined with the blood of Christ; and of them both, the treasure of the church was compound and made for the remission and satisfaction of sins. How cunning and notable cooks these are, who can make a confection of so many sundry herbs!

The trea-
the church as pope-holders take it.

Papists hold the pope to be lord treasurer of
church.

Furthermore, they do feign the custody and keeping of this treasure to be committed wholly unto the bishop of Rome, in whose power consisteth the dispensation of so great treasures, that either by himself he may give or grant, or otherwise give power unto others to give the same. And hereupon rise the plenary indulgences and pardons granted by the pope, for certain years; by cardinals, for a hundred days; by bishops, for forty days. This is the judgment and opinion which they hold of the indulgences. But I pray you, who taught those saints to work or deserve for others, but only Satan, who would utterly have the merits of Christ extinguished and blotted out, which he knoweth to be the only remedy of salvation? For, if the Scripture doth teach us that no man of himself can deserve or work his salvation, how did the saints then work or merit for others? It is manifest that Christ saith, in Luke xvii.,

No man can work his own salvation.

'When ye have done all that which is commanded you to do, yet,' saith he, 'ye are unprofitable servants.' Besides this, all that which may be deserved or merited in the righteousness of man, is, in Isaiah lxix., compared unto the garment menstruous and defiled, to be cast out.

There are almost infinite places in the Scripture, wherein man's power is so extenuated, and the corruption and frowardness of our nature so made manifest, that even in the best and most perfect works there lacketh not imperfection. Notwithstanding the parable of the ten virgins, written in Matthew xxv., ought to put us out of all controversy and doubt. There Christ describeth two kinds of men, the one kind of holy men, who observe and keep the inward righteousness of the heart, as the oil of faith; the other sort is of such as, having no mind of their oil, are answered by them that are wise, 'No! lest that there be not sufficient for you and for us; but go you rather to them which do sell, and buy for yourselves:' in which place it is manifestly declared how vainly the second sort of men do fly to the patronage of the elect, by whose merits they think to be saved.

Now let us weigh and consider upon what places of Scripture they build or establish their feigned invention of pardons. They allege the saying of St. Paul to the Colossians, 'I supply or fulfil the afflictions of Christ which were wanting in my flesh, for his body which is the church.' But Paul, in this place, doth not refer that defect or supplement to any work of redemption, expiation, or satisfaction; but to those afflictions, by which the members of Christ, that is to say, all the faithful, should be afflicted, so long as they live in the flesh: wherefore he saith, that this doth yet remain of the passion of Christ, that those afflictions which once he suffered in his own body, he now daily suffereth in his members. For Christ hath vouchsafed to honour us with this honour, that he doth impute and call our afflictions to be his.

And whereas St. Paul doth add this word 'for the church,' he doth not understand thereby for the redemption, reconciliation, satisfaction, or expiation of the church, but for the edifying and the profiting of the same, as in the second epistle to Timothy he saith, that 'for the elect's sake he suffered all these things, that they might obtain salvation.' But, to the intent that no man should think that salvation to depend upon those things which he himself had suffered, he added further, 'The which is in Christ Jesu.'

As touching the reason, that the blood of the martyrs is not shed in vain, without fruit or profit; and, therefore, ought to be conferred to the common utility and profit of the church; I answer, that the profit and fruit thereof is abundant: to glorify God by their death, to subscribe and bear witness unto the truth by their blood, and, by the contempt of this present life, to witness that they do seek after a better life; by their constancy and steadfastness, to confirm and establish the faith of the church, and subdue and vanquish the enemy.

THE THIRD ARTICLE.

'That the pope is an open user of simony, daily selling the gifts of the spiritualties: and that it is lawful for all priests to be coupled and joined in matrimony.'

Sir John Borthwike's Answer.

This article hath its several parts, for those things which we have spoken or answered unto the article before-written, do sufficiently declare, that the pope is not only a user of simony, but also a notable deceiver, who selleth such kind of merchandise as can in no place help or prevail; forasmuch as his pardons are nothing less than such as he feigneth them to be. Doth he not then show himself a manifest deceiver, when he maketh fairs and markets of them?

But, to the intent I will not seem in this behalf vainly to labour or travail, I will pass unto the second part, where I do say, that it is not only done against the word of God, but also against equity and justice, to forbid priests to marry, forasmuch as it is not lawful for any man, by any means, to forbid that thing which the Lord hath left at liberty. For St. Paul, in Hebrews xiii., declareth that matrimony is lawful for all men, saying, that 'marriage, and the undefiled bed [or chamber], is honourable amongst all men.' And in 1 Cor. vii., he saith, 'For avoiding of whoredom, let every man have a wife of his own.' But I know what these obstinate and stiff-necked will answer unto me, that the same is spoken and meant of others, and not of priests. But what will they answer unto me, as touching that which is written in 1 Tim. iii. 1., 'A bishop ought to be without rebuke, the husband of one wife?' and, by and by after, he saith, 'Deacons ought to be the husbands of one wife, the which should rule and govern their children and family uprightly.' Unto these Paul affirmeth matrimony to be meet and necessary, let them say what they can to the contrary.

What could be more vehemently spoken against their wicked tyranny, than that which by the Holy Ghost he declareth, in the fourth chapter of the same epistle, that in the latter days 'there should come wicked men, which should forbid matrimony?' and he calleth them not only 'deceivers,' but also 'wicked spirits;' attending unto the doctrine of wicked spirits. But these men think that they have very well escaped, when they wrest this sentence to those old ancient heretics the Tatianists.<sup>1</sup> 'They,' say these men, 'did condemn matrimony: we do not condemn it, but only forbid churchmen to marry; unto whom we think matrimony is not convenient.' As though that albeit this prophecy were first of all complete and fulfilled in the Tatianists, that it did not also redound unto them; or as though this their subtle sophistication were worthy to be regarded, that they do not deny or prohibit matrimony, because they do not forbid it unto all men generally! Like as if a tyrant would contend and affirm his law to be good, by the extremity and violence whereof only one part of the city is oppressed.

But now, let us hear the reasons of the contrary part: 'It behoveth,' say they, 'a priest to differ from the common sort of the people by some notable mark or token.' But read St. Paul, where he describeth the perfect image of a good bishop: did he not reckon and account marriage amongst the other good gifts which he required to be in them? But I know very well how these men interpret Paul: verily, that a bishop ought not to be chosen, who hath married his second wife. But also it appeareth openly by the text, that this interpretation is false, forasmuch as he doth, by and by, declare and show what manner of women the wives of bishops and deacons ought to be. Wherefore St. Paul numbereth matrimony amongst the principal virtues pertaining unto a bishop: and these men do teach it to be an intolerable vice amongst the orders of the church, and not being content with that general reproach or slander, they call it in the canons, 'the uncleanness, polluting, and defiling of the flesh.'

Now let every man consider with himself out of what shop this stuff is taken. God instituted matrimony: Christ sanctified it with his presence, by turning water into wine: and vouchsafed so to honour it, that he would have it the image or figure of his love and friendship with the church. What can be more famous or notably spoken to the commendation and praise of wedlock? But these unshamefaced faces do call it 'a filthy and unclean thing,' alleging the levitical priests, who, as often as they came unto the office of ministration, were bound to lie apart from their wives, whereby they, being clean and undefiled, might handle the holy things:<sup>2</sup> and our sacraments, forasmuch as they are much more noble and excellent than theirs, and daily used, it would be a very uncomely thing that they should be handled by married men! As though the office of the ministry of the gospel were all one with the levitical priesthood. For they, as figures, did represent Christ, who, being mediator between God and man, by his singular and absolute purity and cleanness, should reconcile the Father unto us. For forasmuch as on no part sinners could exhibit or show forth any type or form of his sanctity or holiness, yet, to the intent they might shadow him out with certain similitudes or lineaments, they were commanded that whensoever they should come unto the sanctuary or holy place, they should purify themselves above all men's order or fashion: for then did they most near and properly figurate Christ, who appeared in the tabernacle as peace-maker, to reconcile the people unto God. This image or personage, forasmuch as our ecclesiastical pastors at this day do not take upon them to execute, in vain are they compared unto them. Wherefore the apostle, without all exception, upon a sure and good ground doth pronounce and say, that 'marriage is honourable amongst all men,' and that 'whoremongers and adulterers do abide the judgment of God.'

Besides all this, the apostles themselves, by their examples, do prove that matrimony is not unworthy of any office or function, be it ever so excellent; for St. Paul himself is witness, that they did not only keep their wives, but also carried them about with them.

THE FOURTH ARTICLE.

'That all those heresies commonly called the heresies of England, or at least, the greater or most part of them, at this present maintained by the Englishmen, have been and are of themselves good and just, and to be maintained of all faithful Christians as most true and conformable unto the law of God; and that he had persuaded many persons to embrace the said heresies.'

Sir John Borthwike's Answer.

St. John, in his eleventh chapter, declareth how Caiaphas, high bishop of Jerusalem, did prophesy that Jesus should die for the people; which thing he spake, being utterly ignorant. The like image of blindness we have now presently in our luxurious cardinal of St. Andrews, and his adherents, who accused religion of heresy, which in the year of our Lord 1540 was had in estimation in England, at which time they proclaimed me an arch-heretic, although they esteem the same religion for most christian; for what religion at the time was used in England, the like the whole realm of Scotland did embrace: in this point only the Englishmen differed from the Scots, that they had cast off the yoke of Antichrist; the others not. Idols were worshipped by both nations; the profaning of the Supper and Baptism was alike unto them both; wicked superstition reigned on both parts, and true worship was deformed and defaced with detestable hypocrisy.

The state of religion in England. A. D. 1540.

Truly it is most false which they do affirm and say, that I had subscribed unto such kind of heresies, as though they had been conformable unto the law of God, whereas nothing is more adverse or repugnant thereunto: for even now of late, God of his goodness and mercy had opened my dazzling eyes, and had drawn me out of the filthy slough of idolatry and superstition, in which, amongst others, I have so long time wallowed and tumbled. Neither is it any less absurd, that they affirm me to have allured many to embrace the same; except peradventure they do understand that I have oftentimes wished that the yoke of Antichrist should be shaken and cast off from the necks of the Scots, as it is from the English men; which thing, with sincere and upright heart, and with an earnest mind, I do now also wish and desire.

THE FIFTH ARTICLE.

'That the Scottish nation and their clergy be altogether blinded; of whom he did also say and affirm, that they had not the true catholic faith. And this also he did openly teach and preach, that his faith was much better and more excellent, than the faith of all the clergy in the realm of Scotland.'

Sir John Borthwike's Answer.

No man will deny that people to be blinded, which neither hear Christ nor his apostles. Such are the people of Scotland; I speak of those unto whom the verity and truth of Christ hath not yet opened or manifested itself. There is no cause, therefore, why they should accuse me of heresy. Furthermore, how far off the nation and the people of Scotland be from the hearing of Christ (albeit the premises do sufficiently declare), in that they do challenge unto the Romish Antichrist the authority which Christ and his apostles do declare Christ himself to be endued withal, and that, contrary to the word of God, they forbid priests to marry, I will add something more unto it, whereby the matter may be more evident. Christ calleth himself the door whereby all men ought to enter in: see John x. Contrariwise, the Scots do say and affirm, that we must enter in by the Virgin Mary and St. Peter. Christ, in John iv., saith, 'The time shall come, when the true worshippers shall worship the Father in spirit and truth:' the Scots build themselves high temples and chapels for idols, in which, even as Israel in times past, they commit fornication. Paul, in his epistle to the Hebrews, chap. x., saith that Christ, 'by one only oblation, hath made perfect all those for evermore, which are sanctified:' which saying confirmeth also the words of Christ hanging upon the cross, saying, 'It is finished;' signifying that by his death there was a final end set to all sacrifices, which are offered up for sins. But the Scottish churchmen, as they are blasphemers indeed, so do they brag and boast, that they daily offer up Christ for the sins both of the quick and of the dead! God commandeth us that we shall not worship any graven image: the Scots do not only fall down flat before images, but also offer up incense unto them! St. Paul teacheth us that Christ is made our wisdom, righteousness, sanctification, and redemption: the Scots, being wise men in their own conceits, prefer and embrace traditions feigned and invented out by man's head, before the law of God; they stablish righteousness in their own works; sanctification in holy water and other external things; redemption in pieces of lead, which they do buy of their great Antichrist. Who then will quarrel with me, that I do allege that the people of Scotland are blind, and that my faith, which doth only behold the word of God, is much better and more excellent than theirs?

THE SIXTH ARTICLE.

'Agreeably to the ancient errors of John Wickliff and John Huss, arch-heretics condemned in the council of Constance, he hath affirmed and preached, that the clergy ought not to possess or have any temporal possessions; neither to have any jurisdiction or authority in temporalities, even over their own subjects; but that all these things ought to be taken from them, as it is at this present in England.'

The Lord, in the book of Numbers, chap. xviii., said thus unto Aaron, 'Thou shalt possess nothing in their land; neither shalt thou have any portion amongst them: I am thy portion and inheritance amongst the children of Israel. For unto the sons of Levi I have given all the tithes of Israel, that they should possess them for their ministry which they do execute in the tent of ordinaries.' Albeit I do not doubt but that the order of the Levites, and of our clergy, is far different and variable: for the administration of their sacred and holy things, after their death, passed unto their posterity as it were by right of inheritance; which happeneth not unto the posterity of our clergy in these days.<sup>1</sup>

Furthermore, if any heritage be provided or gotten for them, I do not gain-say but that they shall possess it: be still I do affirm, that all temporal jurisdiction should be taken from them. For when twice there rose a contention amongst the disciples, which of them should be thought the greatest, Christ answered, 'The kings of nations have dominion over them, and such as have power over them are called beneficial: you shall not do so; for he which is greatest amongst you shall be made equal unto the youngest or least; and he which is the prince or ruler amongst you, shall be made equal unto him that doth minister:' minding thereby, and willing utterly to debar the ministers of his word from all terrene and civil dominion and empire. For by these points he doth not only declare that the office of a pastor is distinct and divided from the office of a prince and ruler, but that they are in effect so much different and separate, that they cannot agree or join together in one man. Neither is it to be thought that Christ did set or ordain a harder law than he himself before did take upon him: forasmuch as in Luke xii. certain of the company said unto him, 'Master, command my brother that he divide his inheritance with me:' he answered; 'Man, who made me a judge or divider amongst you?' We see therefore that Christ even simply did reject and refuse the office of a judge; which thing he would not have done, if it had been agreeable unto his

An objection made by the example of Moses answered.

See Appendix.

Peter could not give that he had not. Peter had no lordly dominion: ergo Peter could not give lordly dominion to his successors.

Whereas they do allege that Moses did supply both offices at once, I answer, that it was done by a rare miracle. Furthermore, that it continued but for a time, until things were brought unto a better state. Besides that, there was a certain form and rule prescribed him of the Lord, when he took upon him the civil governance; and the priesthood he was commanded to resign unto his brother; and that not without good cause, for it is against nature, that one man should suffice both charges: wherefore it was diligently foreseen and provided for in all ages; neither was there any bishop, so long as any true face or show of the church did continue, who once thought to usurp the right and title of the sword. Whereupon, in the time of St. Ambrose this proverb took its original, 'that emperors did rather wish or desire the office of priesthood, than priests any empire.' For it was all men's opinion at that time, that sumptuous palaces did pertain unto emperors, and churches unto priests. St. Bernard, also, writeth many things which are agreeable unto this our opinion; as is this his saying: 'Peter could not give that which he had not, but he gave unto his successors that which he had, that is to say, carefulness over the congregation; for when the Lord and Master saith, that He is not constitute or ordained judge between two, the servant or disciple ought not to take it scornfully if that he may not judge all men.' And, lest that he might seem in that place to speak of the spiritual judgment, he straightway annexeth, 'Therefore,' saith he, 'your power and authority shall be in offence and transgression; not in possessions. For this purpose, and not for the other, have you received the keys of the kingdom of heaven. Why then do you invade other men's bounds or borders?' The rest I pass over for brevity's sake.

THE SEVENTH ARTICLE.

'Falsely, and against the honour, estate, and reverence of the sacred majesty of the king of Scots, he hath said, holden, and affirmed, that our most noble king of Scots, defender of the christian faith, desired, contrary to the right and liberty of the church, to appropriate unto himself all the possessions, lands, and rents of the church, given and granted by his predecessors and also by himself, and to convert them unto his own private uses. And for this end and purpose, as he hath many times written unto him, so hath he with his whole endeavour persuaded our said noble lord and king thereunto.'

Sir John Borthwike's Answer.

It is no marvel though these mad dogs do so bark against me, whom they think to have counselled the king's majesty (I would to God I had also thoroughly persuaded him), that he should take away from these unjust sacrilegious possessors the riches wherewithal they are fatted and engreased like swine. For this is the nature of dogs, that if any man go about to take away the bone out of their mouth, by and by to snatch at him, and tear him with their teeth. It is out of all controversy unto such as have any wit at all, that such were very childish, that is to say, ignorant of all learning and judgment, who did so fat and feed with their possessions these belly-beasts. For who would not judge it more than childish, to bestow the king's victuals or meat upon the bellies of the prophets of Baal and Jezebel? But all they that, at this present, do endue such filthy sinks (I will not call them dens of thieves) with such revenues, they do follow the steps of Jezebel; for what other thing do they, when daily they are bleating and bowing before their images, burning of incense, and falling flat down before their altars, but that which in times past the prophets of Baal did, when they transported the worship of God unto an idol? Wherefore, if Daniel and Elias were spotted with heresy, when they would have destroyed the priests of Baal, I grant that I also must be a heretic.

Comparison between our belly-priests and the priests of Baal.

But forasmuch as he then did nothing but that which was commanded him of the Lord, who was able to kill the prophets that had allured the people to follow strange gods, he could not truly and justly be accused of heresy: so neither can my adversaries spot me therewithal, except, peradventure, they will condemn in me, that whereas Elias dealt more rigorously with the prophets of

THE EIGHTH ARTICLE.

‘ He willed and desired, and oftentimes with his whole heart prayed, that the church of Scotland might come and be brought to the same point and state, and to like ruin, as the church of England was already come unto.’

Sir John Borthwike’s Answer.

Spiritual Babylon.

If the church of Israel decayed, when in the time of Zerubbabel, Nehemiah, and other holy men, it was released and set at liberty out of Babylon; I grant also, that it was a ruin unto the Englishmen, to have departed and gone away out of Babylon, the mother of all whoredom; upon whose rotten and filthy paps and breasts they have a long time depended and hanged, being made drunk with the wine of her whoredom and unshamefacedness. They [his persecutors] had rather cause to give me thanks, who, with so sincere and good a heart, wished unto them so happy a fall. But these unthankful persons thought it not enough with slander and reproach to tear me asunder, but now also, as blind rage and madness have taken away all sincerity and uprightness of mind and judgment, they lie in wait, and lay snares for my life.

THE NINTH ARTICLE.

‘ He hath openly holden, said and affirmed, preached and taught, that the laws of the church, that is to say, the sacred canons, approved and allowed by the holy catholic and apostolic church, are of no force, strength, or effect; inferring therefore, and affirming, that they are made and invented contrary to the law of God.’

Sir John Borthwike’s Answer.

Apostolic
church.

God forbid that I should say, that those things which are approved and allowed by the holy catholic church, should be of no effect or value. For well I know, that the holy apostolic church hath never allowed, ordained, or taught any thing which she hath not learned of the Lord. The apostles are witnesses thereof, Peter and Paul, whereof the one of them dareth not freely utter or speak of any of those things which Christ hath not wrought by himself for the obedience of the Gentiles. The other exhorteth, that if any man speak, he should speak as the oracles of God. But I condemn those laws which the bishops of Rome have made according to their own will and mind, and which they say are spiritual, pertaining unto the soul, and necessary unto everlasting life; forasmuch as the writings of the apostles do evidently declare, that there was no authority known amongst them to make or ordain any ordinances or laws.

Furthermore, the Scriptures do manifestly show the same, how oftentimes, even by the Lord’s own mouth, this aforesaid authority is taken from the ministers of the church; so that no excuse for them remaineth, but that they be plain rebels against the word of God, how many soever do presume or take upon them to appoint or set any new laws upon the people of God: which thing is more manifest and evident than the light itself, in many places of the Scripture; for in Joshua xxiii. it is written, ‘ You shall observe and do all that is written in the law of Moses, neither shall you swerve from that, either to the right hand or to the left hand.’ But that which is written in Deuteronomy xii., ought to move them somewhat more. ‘ Whatsoever I command,’ saith the Lord, ‘ that shall ye observe and do: thereunto you shall add nothing, neither shall you take any thing from it.’ The like he had said before in chapter iv. of the same book. And again Moses, in chapter xxxii of the same book, doth witness, that he did put forth life and blessing unto Israel, when he gave them that law which he had received of the Lord. How can they then excuse themselves of perjury, who ordain new laws to live by?

But let us proceed further, and see what authority the priests of Levi’s stock had, to make laws. I do not deny but that God, in Deut. xvii., ordained, under a great penalty, that the authority of the priests should not be contemned, but had in reverence. But in Malachi ii. he also declareth under what condition they are to be heard, where he saith, 'He hath made a covenant with Levi, that the law of truth should be in his mouth.' And, by and by after, he addeth, 'The lips of the priest shall keep and maintain wisdom; and the law they shall require at his mouth, who is the messenger of the Lord of hosts.' Therefore it is fit and necessary, if a priest will be heard, that he doth show himself the messenger of God, that is to say, that he faithfully report and declare the commandments which he hath received of the Lord. For where Malachi speaketh of hearing of them, he putteth this specially, that they do answer according to the law of the Lord. Therefore, like as the Levitical priests did break their covenant made with God, if they did teach any other law than that which they had received of him, so, likewise, these men must either acknowledge themselves to be covenant-breakers, or else they may not bind the consciences of men with any new law.

How far the office of priests extendeth. Malachi.

Furthermore, what power the prophets had universally, it is very lively described in Ezekiel, chapter xxxiii. 'Thou son of man, saith the Lord, 'I have made thee a guide unto the house of Israel: thou shalt hear the word out of mine own mouth, and declare it unto them from me.' He then who is commanded to hear of the mouth of the Lord, is he not forbidden to rehearse or speak any thing of himself? for what other thing is it to speak from the Lord, but so to speak that he may boldly affirm and say, that it is not his word, but the word of the Lord, which he speaketh?

Ezekiel.

Further, God, by his prophet Jeremy, calleth it chaff, whatsoever doth not proceed from himself. Wherefore none of the prophets have opened their mouths at any time to speak, but being premonished before by the word of God. Whereupon it happeneth, that these words are so often pronounced by them, 'The word of the Lord;' 'the charge or burden of the Lord;' 'the vision of the Lord;' 'thus saith the Lord;' 'the mouth of the Lord hath spoken it.'

Jeremy.

Now, that we may also confirm that which is before spoken, by the examples of the apostles, that they have taught nothing but that which they have learned of the Lord, the law which Christ prescribed unto them, when he endowed them with the dignity and honour of the apostleship, is somewhat more profoundly to be repeated. In Matthew xxviii. he commandeth them to go forth and teach, not such things as they themselves did rashly invent or devise, but those things which he had commanded them.

The apostles.

Furthermore, Paul, in 2 Corinthians i., denieth that he hath any dominion or rule over the faith of the Corinthians, albeit he was ordained by the Lord to be their apostle. If you require and desire a further reason of the moderation of St. Paul, read chap. x. of his Epistle to the Romans, where he teacheth, that faith cometh by hearing. It cometh not by the dreams of the bishop of Rome, or of any other bishop, but only by the word of God.

St. Paul.

Neither ought any man to think it strange, that Christ restrained his apostles by the law, that they should not teach any thing but that which they had learned of the mouth of the Lord: he set the same law upon himself, because it should not be lawful for any man to refuse it. 'My doctrine,' saith Christ, 'is not mine, but his which sent me; my Father's.' He who hath been the only and eternal counsellor of the Father, who also is ordained by the Father the Lord and Master over all, yet, for so much as he hath the office and part of a minister, he doth by his example prescribe unto all ministers, what rule and order they ought to follow in teaching. Wherefore the power of the church is not such, that she may, at her own will and discretion, teach new doctrines, or, as they term it, frame new articles of faith, or establish new laws; but is subject unto the word of the Lord, and as it were included in the same.

The church subject to the word of God.

But now let us behold what defence they do bring for their constitutions. The apostles, say they, and the elders of the primitive church, established a decree, besides the commandment of Christ, whereby they did command all people to abstain from all things offered unto idols, suffocation, and blood: If that were lawful for them so to do, why is it not lawful for their successors, as often as necessity shall require, to imitate and to follow them in doing the like?

Reason where-with they defend their constitutions.

But I deny that the apostles, in that behalf, did make any new decree or ordinance, forasmuch as Peter, in the same council, pronounceth God to be tempted, if any yoke be laid upon the necks of the disciples. Even he himself doth subvert and overthrow his own sentence, if they consent to lay any yoke upon them. But a yoke is laid upon them, if the apostles, by their own authority, do decree to prohibit the gentiles not to touch any thing offered unto idols or strangled.—But, you will say, they do write that they should abstain from those things. I grant that they do so write: but what doth St. James declare? that the gentiles who are converted unto God, are not to be troubled and vexed in such extern decrees and outward elements as these be. And the apostle sufficiently declareth that he goeth about nothing less, than to restrain the liberty of the gentiles, but only to admonish and warn them, how they should moderate and rule themselves among their brethren, lest they should abuse their liberty to the offence of the others.

Another reason.

They allege furthermore, that which is written in Matthew xxiii., 'The Scribes and Pharisees have sitten in the chair of Moses; therefore, all things whatsoever they command you to observe and keep, the same observe and do; but do you not as they do.'

Answer

I answer, the Lord in this place doth inveigh against the manners of the Pharisees, simply instructing his hearers whom before he had taught, that albeit they could perceive or see nothing in their life which they should follow, yet, for all that, they should not refuse to do the things which they did teach by the word: I say by the word, and not of their own head.

The prophet Isaiah, in his fifth chapter, crieth out, saying, 'Wo be unto you which call evil good, and good evil, darkness light, and light darkness, sour sweet, and sweet sour.' And it followeth in the same place, in the said prophet, 'Wo,' saith he, 'to you that be wise and sapient in your own eyes, and prudent in your own estimation.' No man can deny but that the cardinal of Scotland and his adherents be under this most heavy and grievous curse, when they do so generally confound the christian religion and their wicked monkey, that they do entitle them both by one name of holiness. I trust I will make it appear more manifest than the day, that they do it by a sacrilegious audacity or boldness, unto such as, setting apart all preposterous affection, will embrace the truth, when she doth manifestly show herself.

But before I enter into the matter, I will all men to understand, that I do not touch that kind of monkey, which St. Augustine and others do so often make mention of; as in which the monks, being gathered together, utterly contemning and despising the vanities of this world, did lead a most chaste and godly life, living in prayers, reading, and disputations; not pulled up with pride; nor contentious with frowardness, neither full of envy: no man possessed any things of his own; no man was chargeable or burdenous unto others. They wrought with their hands, to get that which might sustain the body, the spirit and mind not let and hindered from God. Whatsoever did superabound more than was necessary for their sustentation (as, by the restraint of their delicious and delicate fare much did redound of the labours of their hands), it was with such diligence distributed unto the poor and needy, as it was not with greater diligence gotten by them that did give the same. For they by no means went about to have abundance lying by them, but sought all means possible, that nothing should remain by them more than sufficient. Besides this, no man was forced to any extremity, which he could not bear or suffer, no man had any thing laid upon him which he refused, neither was he condemned of the rest, who confessed himself unable to imitate or follow. They had always in their mind how commendable a thing love and charity was; they remembered that all things are clean to them which are clean: therefore they did not refuse or reject any kinds of meat as polluted or defiled; but all their whole industry and labour was applied to subdue lust and concupiscence, and to retain love amongst brethren. Many of them did drink no wine, yet, notwithstanding, they thought not themselves defiled therewithal: for unto such as were sick and diseased, who could not recover the health of their body without the same, they did most gently permit it. And whereas many foolishly refused the same, they brotherly admonished them to take heed that they became not rather the weaker than the holier, through their vain superstition.

Hitherto I have repeated that which St. Augustine writeth of the monks of his time, whereby I would, as it were, paint out in a table, what manner of monkery there was in the old time, that all men might understand how great difference there is between that, and the monkery in these our later days. For he would have all extreme compulsion to be taken away in such things as, by the word of God, are left to us at liberty. But, now-a-days, there is nothing more severely and cruelly exacted: for they say it is a remediless offence if any do, but ever so little, swerve from their prescript order, in colour or kind of garment, or in any kind of meat, or in any other frivolous or vain ceremony.

Precepts of men more cruelly exacted than the precepts of God.

St. Augustine doth straightly affirm, that it is not lawful for monks to live idle upon other men's labour. He plainly denieth that in his time there was any such example of any well-ordered monastery. But our monks do constitute the principal part of holiness in idleness, which they call a contemplative life; wherefore the state or monkery of the old time, and of these our days, is in all points so diverse, that scarce can any thing be more unlike (I will not say, utterly contrary); for our monks, not content with that godliness to the study and desire whereof Christ commandeth all his continually to be attentive, imagine a new kind of godliness, I know not what, by the meditation whereof they are more perfect than all others. But it is a most pestilent error (which all godly men ought to abhor), to feign any other rule of perfection, than that common rule delivered unto the whole universal church, which we suppose to be sufficiently approved in the refutation of the article before passed.

Idleness and pleasure the weapons of the ancient enemy.

Now I also pass over with silence the great blasphemy, whereby they compare their monastical confession unto baptism. I also hold my peace, that they do dissipate and divide the communion of the church, when they do separate themselves from the lawful society and fellowship of the faithful, and claim unto themselves a peculiar ministry and private administration of the sacraments: but, as St. Augustine witnesseth, it was so far off, that the monks, in times past, had any several church or administration of the sacraments from others, that they were a part and portion of the common people, albeit they dwelt asunder.

But if a man may touch the manner of these our monks, what shall I call the cloisters in these our days, otherwise than brothel-houses, swine styes, and dens of discord. Besides that, I will pass over their fairs and markets, which in these later days they do make of their relics of martyrs, to build up Sodom again. Wherefore, I conclude that this their kind of life which they claim unto themselves, is utterly wicked and naught, the which is not established or grounded upon any certain calling of God, neither allowed by him; wherefore I may be bold to say that it is unlawful, because their conscience hath nothing whereby to sustain itself before God; and whatsoever is not of faith is sin.

See Appendix.

And furthermore, so long as they do entangle and bind themselves with so many and so perverse and wicked kinds of worshipping as the monkery now-a-days doth contain in it, I may well say that they are not consecrated unto God, but unto the devil. For why? was it lawful for the prophets to say, that the Israelites did offer their children unto wicked spirits, and not unto God, because they did corrupt and violate the true worshipping of God with profane ceremonies—is it not lawful then to speak the like of our monks, who, together with their cowls, have put on a thousand snares of most wicked superstitions? Let every man now weigh and consider with himself, if I have done wickedly to wish such religions as is this our monkery, to be utterly extinguished and rooted out. Moreover, all christian princes should rightly and truly do their office, if, as in times past Josias pulled down and overthrew the high places which his elders, the kings of Judah, had buildd, so they would abolish and drive away this kind of monks.

THE ELEVENTH ARTICLE.

It is plainly manifest by lawful proofs, that the said John Borthwike had, and presently hath, divers books suspected of heresy, condemned as well by the papal, as also regal and ordinary authorities, and prohibited by the law : that is to say, especially the New Testament, commonly printed, in English ; Œcolampadius, Melancthon ; and divers treatises of Erasmus and other condemned heretics ; also a book entitled 'Unio dissidentium,' the which containeth most manifest and great errors and heretical assumptions ; and hath read and studied the same as well openly as privately ; and hath presented and communicated them unto others ; and, also, hath instructed and taught many Christians in the same, to the end and purpose to divert and turn them away from the true christian and catholic faith.

Sir John Borthwike's Answer.

O good God! who can suffer so great a blasphemy ? with what a filthy cankered stomach do these Romish swine note the New Testament with heresy ! Who would not judge it a most venomous tongue, which dare pronounce and utter such contumelious words against the holy gospel of our Saviour Christ ? Truly these men (howsoever they do pronounce me an arch-heretic) do fill up the measure of all other heretics (I will not say blasphemers), as the Jews, who put Christ to death, did of all other murderers. How then shall these serpents and stock of vipers escape and flee the judgment of everlasting fire ? I do not greatly stand or stay, that they do suspect Œcolampadius, Melancthon, or Erasmus, neither am I so mad to plead their cause, who, as they are men of singular learning and eloquence, so do their writings manifestly declare, how falsely and wickedly these sycophants impute this crime and slander of heresy unto them.

THE TWELFTH ARTICLE.

It is manifest, that the said John Borthwike is so obstinate in all the afore-said errors and heresies, and hath maintained and taught them with such an obdurate heart and mind, that he would not by any means be persuaded from them by his friends, and divers other persons who did dearly love and favour him, but chose rather obstinately to persevere in his said errors.

Sir John Borthwike's Answer.

I am willingly contented to be reduced to the catholic faith, but if Satan raise up any storms or tempests against that, those I do something resist. Wherefore they most shamefully lie, who do otherwise jest or talk of me ; for I know not by what reason they call them my friends, who so greatly laboured to convert me, neither will more esteem them than the Midianites, who, in times past, called the children of Israel to do sacrifice unto their idols. And furthermore, I desire the most high and mighty God, that he will never suffer me to swerve or turn away from this so holy, godly, and christian obstinacy and stubbornness. 'The man is blest, that hath set his whole hope and confidence upon the Lord, and hath not regarded or looked upon the proud, or those which follow after lies.'

The Sentence of Condemnation against Sir John Borthwike, knight, by the Cardinal, Bishops, and Abbots in Scotland, A. D. 1540.

Addenda.*

Of all which premised and of many other errors by him holden, spoken, published, affirmed, preached, and taught, there is common fame and report ; and so the said sir John Borthwike is holden, reputed, and accounted of very many, as a heretic and heresiarch, holding very evil opinions of the catholic faith.

Wherefore we, David, by the title of St. Stephen in Monte Celi priestcardinal of the holy church of Rome, archbishop of St. Andrew's, primate of the whole kingdom of Scotland, and born-legate of the apostolic see, sitting after the manner of judges in our tribunal seat, the most holy gospels of God being laid before us, that our judgment might proceed from the face of God, and our eyes might behold and look upon equity and justice; having only God, and the verity and truth of the catholic faith before our eyes; his holy name being first called upon; having, as is before said, hereupon holden a council of wise men, as well divines as lawyers, we pronounce, declare, decree, determine, and give sentence, that the said sir John Borthwike, called captain Borthwike, being suspected, infamed, and accused of the errors and heresies before said, and wicked doctrines manifoldly condemned as is aforesaid, and, by lawful proofs against him in every of the premises had, being convict and lawfully cited and called, not appearing, but as a fugitive, runaway, and absent, we do adjudge even as though he were present, to be a heretic, and is, and hath been convict as a heretic; and as a convict heretic and heresiarch to be punished and chastened with due punishment, and afterwards to be delivered and left unto the secular power. Moreover we confiscate and make forfeit, and by these presents declare and decree to be confiscated and made forfeit, all and singular his goods, movables and unmovables, howsoever and by whatsoever title they be gotten, and in what place or part soever they be, and all his offices, whatsoever he hath hitherto had: reserving, notwithstanding, the dowry, and such part and portion of his goods belonging to his wife, as by the law, custom, and right of this realm, unto persons confiscate ought to appertain. Also we decree, that the picture of the said John Borthwike, being formed, made, and painted to his likeness, be carried through this our city to our cathedral church, and afterwards to the market-cross of the same city, and there, in token of malediction and curse, and to the terror and example of others, and for a perpetual remembrance of his obstinacy and condemnation, to be burned. Likewise we declare and decree, that notwithstanding, if the said John Borthwike be hereafter apprehended and taken, he shall suffer such punishment as is due by order of law unto heretics, without any hope of grace or mercy to be obtained in that behalf. Also we plainly admonish and warn, by the tenor of these presents, all and singular faithful Christians, both men and women, of what dignity, state, degree, order, condition, or pre-eminence soever they be, or with whatsoever dignity or honour, ecclesiastical or temporal, they be honoured withal, that from this day forward they do not receive or harbour the said John Borthwike, commonly called captain Borthwike, being accused, convict, and declared a heretic and heresiarch, into their houses, hospitals, castles, cities, towns, villages, or other hamlets, whatsoever they be; or by any manner of means admit him thereunto, either by helping him with meat, drink, or victuals, or any other thing, whatsoever it be; nor show unto him any manner of humanity, help, comfort, or solace, under the pain and penalty of the greater excommunication and confiscation: and if it happen that they be found culpable or faulty in the premises, that they shall be accused there-for as the favourers, receivers, defenders, maintainers, and abettors of heretics, and shall be punished there-for according to the order of law, and with such pain and punishment as shall be due unto men in such behalf.

of St. Andrews, and George Creighton, bishop of Dunkeld, a canon of St. Colm's Inche,<sup>1</sup> and vicar of Dolor, called dean Thomas Forret, preached every Sunday to his parishioners out of the Epistle or Gospel as it fell for the time; which then was a great novelty in Scotland, to see any man preach, except a black friar or a grey friar: and therefore the friars envied him, and accused him to the bishop of Dunkeld (in whose diocese he remained) as a heretic, and one that showed the mysteries of the Scriptures to the vulgar people in English, to make the clergy detestable in the sight of the people. The bishop of Dunkeld, moved by the friars' instigation, called the said dean Thomas, and said to him, "My joy dean Thomas, I love you well, and therefore I must give you my counsel, how you shall rule and guide yourself." To whom Thomas said, "I thank your lordship heartily." Then the bishop began his counsel after this manner:

Bishop :—My joy dean Thomas! I am informed that you preach<sup>2</sup> the epistle or gospel every Sunday to your parishioners, and that you take not the cow, nor the uppermost cloth from your parishioners, which thing is very prejudicial to the churchmen; and therefore, my joy dean Thomas, I would you took your cow, and your uppermost cloth, as other churchmen do; or else it is too much to preach every Sunday: for in so doing you may make the people think that we should preach likewise. But it is enough for you, when you find any good epistle, or any good gospel, that setteth forth the liberty of the holy church, to preach that, and let the rest be.'

The Martyr :—Thomas answered, 'My lord, I think that none of my parishioners will complain that I take not the cow, nor the uppermost cloth, but will gladly give me the same, together with any other thing that they have; and I will give and communicate with them any thing that I have; and so, my lord, we agree right well, and there is no discord among us. And whereas your lordship saith, It is too much to preach every Sunday, indeed I think it is too little, and also would wish that your lordship did the like.'

Bishop :—'Nay, nay, dean Thomas,' saith my lord, 'let that be, for we are not ordained to preach.'<sup>3</sup>

Martyr :—Then said Thomas, 'Whereas your lordship biddeth me preach when I find any good epistle, or a good gospel, truly, my lord, I have read the New Testament and the Old, and all the epistles and the gospels, and among them all I could never find an evil epistle, or an evil gospel: but, if your lordship will show me the good epistle and the good gospel, and the evil epistle and the evil gospel, then I shall preach the good, and omit the evil.'

Bishop :—Then spake my lord stoutly and said, 'I thank God that I never knew what the Old and New Testament was; [and of these words rose a proverb which is common in Scotland, Ye are like the bishop of Dunkeldene, that knew neither new nor old law:] therefore, dean Thomas, I will know nothing but my portuese and my pontifical. Go your way, and let be all these fantasies; for if you persevere in these erroneous opinions, ye will repent it, when you may not mend it.'

Martyr :—'I trust my cause be just in the presence of God, and therefore I pass not much what do follow thereupon.'

And so my lord and he departed at that time. And soon after a summons was directed from the cardinal of St. Andrews and the said bishop of Dunkeld, upon the said dean Thomas Forret, upon two black friars, one called friar John Kelow, and another called Beverage, and upon one priest of Stirling, called Duncan Sympson, and one gentleman called Robert Foster in Stirling, with other three or four with them, of the town of Stirling; who, at the day of their appearance after their summoning, were condemned to the death without any place for recantation, because (as was alleged) they were heresiarchs, or chief heretics and teachers of heresies; and, especially, because many of them were at the bridal and marriage of a priest, who was vicar of Tulibothy beside Stirling, and did eat flesh in Lent at the said bridal. And so they were all together burned upon the castle hill at Edinburgh,<sup>1</sup> where they that were first bound to the stake, godly and marvellously did comfort them that came behind.

The Manner of Persecution used by the Cardinal of Scotland against certain Persons in St. John's-town, or Perth.

Persecutor: David Beaton, Bishop and Cardinal of St. Andrews.<sup>2</sup>

First, there was a certain act of parliament made in the government of the lord Hamilton, earl of Arran, and governor of Scotland, giving privilege to all men of the realm of Scotland, to read the Scriptures in their mother tongue and language; secluding nevertheless all reasoning, conference, convocation of people to hear the Scriptures read or expounded. Which liberty of private reading being granted by public proclamation, lacked not its own fruit, so that in sundry parts of Scotland thereby were opened the eyes of the elect of God to see the truth, and abhor the papistical abominations; amongst whom were certain persons in St. John's-town, as after is declared.

Proclamation permitting the private reading of the Scripture.

At this time there was a sermon made by friar Spence, in St. John's-town, otherwise called Perth, affirming prayer made to saints to be so necessary, that without it there could be no hope of salvation to man. This blasphemous doctrine a burgess of the said town, called Robert Lamb, could not abide, but accused him, in open audience, of erroneous doctrine, and adjured him, in God's name, to utter the truth. This the friar, being stricken with fear, promised to do; but the trouble, tumult, and stir of the people increased so, that the friar could have no audience, and yet the said Robert, with great danger of his life, escaped the hands of the multitude, namely, of the women, who, contrary to nature, addressed them to extreme cruelty against him.

Blasphemous doctrine of a papist.

At this time, A. D. 1543, the enemies of the truth procured John Charterhouse, who favoured the truth, and was provost of the said city and town of Perth, to be deposed from his office by the said governor's authority, and a papist, called Master Alexander Marbeck, to be chosen in his room, that they might bring the more easily their wicked and ungodly enterprize to an end.

After the deposing of the former provost, and election of the other, in the month of January the year aforesaid, on St. Paul's day, came to St. John's-town, the governor, the cardinal, the earl of Argyle, justice sir John Campbell of Lundie, knight, and justice Defort, the lord Borthwike, the bishops of Dunblane and Orkney, with certain other of the nobility. And although there were many accused for the crime of heresy (as they term it), yet these persons only were apprehended upon the said St. Paul's day: Robert Lamb, William Anderson, James Hunter, James Raveleson, James Finlason, and Hellen Stirke his wife, and were cast that night in the Spay Tower of the said city, the morrow after to abide judgment.

prison.

Upon the morrow, when they appeared and were brought forth to judgment in the town, were laid in general to all their charge, the violating of the act of parliament before expressed, and their conference and assemblies in hearing and expounding of Scripture against the tenor of the said act. Robert Lamb was accused, in special, for interrupting of the friar in the pulpit; which he not only confessed, but also affirmed constantly, that it was the duty of no man, who understood and knew the truth, to hear the same impugned without contradiction; and therefore sundry who were there present in judgment, who hid the knowledge of the truth, should bear the burden in God's presence, for consenting to the same.

Hanging
St. Francis in a cord.

The said Robert also, with William Anderson and James Raveleson, were accused for hanging up the image of St. Francis in a cord, nailing of rams' horns to his head, and a cow's rump to his tail, and for eating of a goose on Allhallow-even.

Hunter, for using suspect company.

James Hunter, being a simple man and without learning, and a fleshier by occupation, so that he could be charged with no great knowledge in doctrine, yet, because he often used that suspected company of the rest, he was accused.

Hellen Stirke for calling upon Jesus and not our Lady in childbed.

The woman Hellen Stirke was accused, for that in her childbed she was not accustomed to call upon the name of the Virgin Mary, being exhorted thereto by her neighbours, but only upon God for Jesus Christ's sake; and because she said, in like manner, that if she herself had been in the time of the Virgin Mary, God might have looked to her humility and base estate, as he did to the Virgin's, in making her the mother of Christ: thereby meaning, that there were no merits in the Virgin, which procured her that honour, to be made the mother of Christ, and to be preferred before other women, but that only God's free mercy exalted her to that estate: which words were counted most execrable in the face of the clergy, and of the whole multitude.

Raveleson, for setting up a triple crown of
St. Peter.

James Raveleson aforesaid, building a house, set upon the round of his fourth stair, the three-crowned diadem of Peter carved of tree, which the cardinal took as done in mockage of his cardinal's hat; and this procured no favour to the said James, at their hands.

These aforementioned persons, upon the morrow after St. Paul's day, were condemned and judged to death, and that by an assize, for violating (as was alleged) the act of parliament, in reasoning and conferring upon Scripture, for eating flesh upon days forbidden, for interrupting the holy friar in the pulpit, for dishonouring of images, and for blaspheming of the Virgin Mary, as they alleged.

After sentence given, their hands were bound, and the men cruelly treated: which thing the woman beholding, desired likewise to be bound by the sergeants with her husband for Christ's sake.

History.*

A. D.
1543

There was great intercession made by the town in the mean season for the life of these persons aforementioned to the governor, who of himself was willing so to have done, that they might have been delivered: but the governor was so subject to the appetite of the cruel priests, that he could not do that which he would. Yea, they menaced to assist his enemies and to depose him, except he assisted their cruelty.

There were certain priests in the city, who did eat and drink before in these honest men's houses, to whom the priests were much bounden. These priests were earnestly desired to entreat for their hostess at the cardinal's hands: but they altogether refused, desiring rather their death, than preservation. So cruel are these beasts, from the lowest to the highest.

Then after, they were carried by a great band of armed men (for they feared rebellion in the town except they had their men of war) to the place of execution, which was common to all thieves, and that to make their cause appear more odious to the people.

*The martyrdom of these
ple.*

Robert Lamb, at the gallows' foot, made his exhortation to the people, desiring them to fear God, and leave the leaven of papistical abominations, and manifestly there prophesied of the ruin and plague which came upon the cardinal thereafter. So every one comforting another, and assuring themselves that they should sup together in the kingdom of heaven that night, they commended themselves to God, and died constantly in the Lord.

The woman desired earnestly to die with her husband, but she was not suffered; yet, following him to the place of execution, she gave him comfort, exhorting him to perseverance and patience for Christ's sake, and, parting from him with a kiss, said on this manner, "Husband, rejoice, for we have lived together many joyful days; but this day, in which we must die, ought to be most joyful unto us both, because we must have joy for ever; therefore I will not bid you good night, for we shall suddenly meet with joy in the kingdom of heaven." The woman, after that, was taken to a place to be drowned, and albeit she had a child sucking on her breast, yet this moved nothing the unmerciful hearts of the enemies. So, after she had commended her children to the neighbours of the town for God's sake, and the sucking bairn was given to the nurse, she sealed up the truth by her death.<sup>1</sup>

Wischart, made by the bloody enemies of Christ's faith. Note also the articles whereof he was accused, by order digested, and his meek answers so far as he had leave and leisure to speak. Finally, ponder with no dissembling spirit the furious rage and tragical cruelty of the malignant church, in persecuting of this blessed man of God; and, on the contrary, his humble, patient, and most godly answers made to them suddenly without all fear, not having respect to their glorious menacings and boisteous threats, but charitably and without stop of tongue answering, not moving his countenance, nor changing his visage, as in his accusation hereafter following manifestly shall appear.

But before I enter into his articles, I thought it not impertinent somewhat to touch concerning the life and conversation of this godly man, according as of late it came to my hands, and certified in writing by a certain scholar of his, some time named Emery Tylney, whose words of testimonial, as he wrote them to me, here follow.

Emery Tylney's Account of Master George Wischart.

About the year of our Lord 1543, there was, in the university of Cambridge, one Master George Wischart, commonly called Master George of Benet's college, who was a man of tall stature, polled-headed, and on the same a round French cap of the best; judged to be of melancholy complexion by his physiognomy, black haired, long bearded, comely of personage, well spoken after his country of Scotland, courteous, lowly, lovely, glad to teach, desirous to learn, and was well travelled; having on him for his habit or clothing, never but a mantle or frieze gown to the shoes, a black millian fustian doublet, and plain black hosen, coarse new canvass for his shirts, and white falling bands and cuffs at his hands. All the which apparel he gave to the poor, some weekly, some monthly, some quarterly, as he liked, saving his French cap, which he kept the whole year of my being with him.

He was a man modest, temperate, fearing God, hating covetousness; for his charity had never end, night, noon, nor day; he forbore one meal in three, one day in four for the most part, except something to comfort nature. He lay hard upon a puff of straw and coarse new canvass sheets, which, when he changed, he gave away. He had commonly by his bed-side a tub of water, in the which (his people being in bed, the candle put out and all quiet) he used to bathe himself, as I, being very young, being assured, often heard him, and, in one light night, discerned him. He loved me tenderly, and I him, for my age, as effectually. He taught with great modesty and gravity, so that some of his people thought him severe, and would have slain him; but the Lord was his defence. And he, after due correction for their malice, by good exhortation amended them and went his way. Oh that the Lord had left him to me, his poor boy, that he might have finished that he had begun! for in his religion he was as you see here, in the rest of his life, when he went into Scotland with divers of the nobility, that came for a treaty to king Henry the Eighth. His learning was no less sufficient than his desire; always prest and ready to do good in that he was able, both in the house privately, and in the school publicly, professing and reading divers authors.

If I should declare his love to me and all men; his charity to the poor, in giving, relieving, caring, helping, providing, yea, infinitely studying how to do good unto all, and hurt to none, I should sooner want words, than just cause to commend him.

All this I testify with my whole heart and truth, of this godly man. He that made all, governeth all, and shall judge all, knoweth that I speak the truth, that the simple may be satisfied, the arrogant confounded, the hypocrite disclosed.

To the said Master George, being in captivity in the castle of St. Andrews, the dean of the same town was sent by the commandment of the cardinal<sup>1</sup> and by his wicked counsel, and there summoned the said Master George, that he should, upon the morning following, appear before the judge, then and there to give account of his seditious and heretical doctrine. To whom Master George thus answered:

Wisehart summoned out of prison to appear.

Wisehart: 'What needeth,' said he, 'my lord cardinal to summon me to answer for my doctrine openly before him, under whose power and dominion I am thus straitly bound in irons? May not my lord compel me to answer of his extort power? or believeth he that I am unprovided to render account of my doctrine? To manifest yourselves what men ye are, it is well done that ye keep your old ceremonies and constitutions made by men.'

His answer to the dean that summoned him.

Upon the next morning, the lord cardinal caused his servants to address themselves in their most warlike array, with jack,<sup>2</sup> knapskal, splent, spear, and axe, more seeming for the war, than for the preaching of the true word of God. And when these armed champions, marching in warlike order, had conveyed the bishops into the abbey church, incontinently they sent for Master George, who was conveyed unto the said church by the captain of the castle, accompanied with a hundred men, addressed in manner aforesaid. Like a lamb led they him to sacrifice. As he entered in at the abbey-church door, there was a poor man lying, vexed with great infirmities, asking of his alms, to whom he flang his purse. And when he came before the lord cardinal, by and by the sub-prior of the abbey, called Dane John Winryme, stood up in the pulpit, and made a sermon to all the congregation there then assembled, taking his matter out of Matthew xiii.

Wisehart brought again before the bishops.

BRIEF ACCOUNT OF THE SERMON OF DANE JOHN WINRYME.

The sermon was divided into four principal parts. The first part was a brief and short declaration of the evangelist. The second part, of the interpretation of the good seed. And because he called the word of God the good seed, and heresy the evil seed, he declared what heresy was, and how it should be known; which he defined on this manner: Heresy is a false opinion defended with pertinacy, clearly repugning the word of God.

Heresy defined.

The third part of the sermon was, the cause of heresy within that realm, and all other realms. 'The cause of heresy,' quoth he, 'is the ignorance of them that have the cures of men's souls: to whom it necessarily belongeth to have the true understanding of the word of God, that they may be able to win again the false doctors of heresies, with the sword of the Spirit, which is the word of God; and not only to win again, but also to overcome them, as saith Paul: A bishop must be faultless, as it becometh the minister of God, not stubborn, nor angry; no drunkard, no fighter, nor given to filthy lucre, but harbourous; one that loveth goodness; sober-minded, righteous, holy, temperate, and such as cleaveth unto the true word of doctrine; that he may be able to exhort with wholesome learning, and to improve that which they say against him.'<sup>3</sup>

The fourth part of his sermon was, how heresies should be known. 'Heresies,' quod he, 'be known on this manner: as the goldsmith knoweth the fine gold from the unperfect by the touchstone, so likewise may we know heresy by the undoubted touchstone, that is, the true, sincere, and undefiled word of God.' At the last, he added, that heretics should be put down in this present life: to which proposition the gospel appeared to repugn, which he entreated of: 'Let them grow unto the harvest.' The harvest is the end of the world. Nevertheless, he affirmed that they should be put down by the civil magistrate and law.

THE EXAMINATION OF MASTER GEORGE WISEHART.

And when he ended his sermon, incontinently they caused Master George to ascend into the pulpit, there to hear his accusation and articles. And right against him stood up one of the fed flock, a monster, John Lander, laden full of cursings written in paper: the which he took out—a roll, both long and also full of cursings, threats, maledictions, and words of devilish spite and malice, saying to the innocent Master George so many cruel and abominable words, and hit him so spitefully with the pope's thunder, that the ignorant people dreaded lest the earth then would have swallowed him up quick. Notwithstanding Master George stood still with great patience, hearing their sayings, not once moving or changing his countenance.

rity.

When that this fed sow had read throughout all his lying menacings, his face running down with sweat, and frothing at the mouth like a boar, he spit at Master George's face, saying, "What answerest thou to these sayings, thou runnagate! traitor! thief! which we have duly proved by sufficient witness against thee?" Master George, hearing this, kneeled down upon his knees in the pulpit, making his prayer to God. When he had ended his prayer, sweetly and christianly he answered to them all in this manner:

Master George Wisheart: 'Many and horrible sayings unto me a christian man, many words abominable to hear, ye have spoken here this day, which not only to teach, but also once to think, I thought ever great abomination. Wherefore I pray your discretions quietly to hear me, that ye may know what were my sayings and the manner of my doctrine.

Three causes why Wisheart desired to be heard.

'This my petition, my lords, I desire to be heard for three causes. The first is, because, through preaching of the word of God, his glory is made manifest. It is reasonable therefore, for the advancing of the glory of God, that ye hear me, teaching truly the pure word of God, without any dissimulation.

'The second reason is, because that your health springeth of the word of God; for he worketh all things by his word. It were, therefore, an unrighteous thing, if ye should stop your ears from me, teaching truly the word of God.

'The third reason is, because your doctrine uttereth many blasphemous and abominable words, not coming of the inspiration of God, but of the devil, with no less peril than of my life. It is just, therefore, and reasonable, that your discretions should know what my words and doctrine are, and what I have ever taught in my time in this realm, that I perish not unjustly, to the great peril of your souls. Wherefore, both for the glory and honour of God, your own health, and safeguard of my life, I beseech your discretions to hear me; and, in the mean time, I shall recite my doctrine without any colour.

heart's doctrine.

'First and chiefly, since the time I came into this realm I taught nothing but the ten Commandments of God, the twelve Articles of the Faith, and the Prayer of the Lord in the mother tongue. Moreover in Dundee, I taught the Epistle of St. Paul to the Romans. And I shall show your discretions faithfully, what fashion and manner I used when I taught, without any human dread, so that your discretions give me your ears benevolent and attent.'

Suddenly then, with a high voice cried the accuser, the fed sow, 'Thou heretic, runnagate, traitor, and thief! it was not lawful for thee to preach. Thou hast taken the power at thine own hand, without any authority of the church. We forethink that thou hast been a preacher so long.'

Scottish History.

A. D. 1543 to 1558.

Then all the whole congregation of the prelates, with their accomplices, said these words; "And if we give him license to preach, he is so crafty, and in the holy Scripture so exercised, that he will persuade the people to his opinion, and raise them against us."

The cry of the scribes and pharisees.

Master George, seeing their malicious and wicked intent, appealed from the lord cardinal to the lord governor, as to an indifferent and equal judge. To whom the accuser, John Lander aforesaid, with hoggish voice answered, "Is not my lord cardinal the second person within this realm, chancellor of Scotland, archbishop of St. Andrews, bishop of Mirepois,<sup>1</sup> commendator of Aberbroshok,<sup>2</sup> legatus natus, legatus à latere?" And so, reciting as many titles of his unworthy honours as would have laden a ship, much sooner an ass, "Is not he," quoth John Lander, "an equal judge apparently unto thee? Whom other desirest thou to be thy judge?"

Wisehart appealeth to the governor.

The style and titles of the archbishop of St. Andrews.

To whom this humble man answered, saying :

Wisehart: 'I refuse not my lord cardinal, but I desire the word of God to be my judge, and the temporal estate, with some of your lordships mine auditors, because I am here my lord governor's prisoner.'

Hereupon the prideful and scornful people that stood by mocked him, saying, "Such man, such judge!" speaking seditious and reproachful words against the governor and other the nobles; meaning them, also, to be heretics. And incontinent, without all delay, they would have given sentence upon Master George, and that without further process, had not certain men there counselled the cardinal to read again the articles, and to hear his answers thereupon, that the people might not complain of his wrongful condemnation.

The words of the people against the governor

And shortly to declare, these were the articles following, with his answers, as far as they would give him leave to speak: for when he intended to mitigate their leasings, and to show the manner of his doctrine, by and by they stopped his mouth with another article.

First Article. 'Thou false heretic, runnagate, traitor, and thief, deceiver of the people! thou despisest the holy church's cursings, and in like case contemnest my lord governor's authority. And this we know for surety, that when thou preachedst in Dundee, and wast charged by my lord governor's authority to desist, nevertheless thou wouldst not obey, but perseveredst in the same; and therefore the bishop of Brechin cursed thee, and delivered thee into the devil's hands, and gave thee in commandment that thou shouldst preach no more. That notwithstanding thou didst continue obstinately.'

Article. See Addenda.

Wisehart: 'My lords! I have read in the Acts of the Apostles, that it is not lawful to desist from the preaching of the gospel for the threats and menaces of men. Therefore it is written, We shall rather obey God than man.<sup>3</sup> I have also read in Malachi, I shall curse your blessings, and bless your cursings, saith the Lord:<sup>4</sup> believing firmly, that he will turn your cursings into blessings.'

II. 'Thou, false heretic! didst say, that the priest, standing at the altar, saying mass, was like a fox wagging his tail in July.'

Wisehart: 'My lords! I said not so. These were my sayings: The moving of the body outward, without the inward moving of the heart, is nought else but the playing of an ape, and not the true serving of God. For God is a secret searcher of men's hearts; therefore, who will truly adorne and honour God, he must in spirit and verity honour him.'

Then the accuser stopped his mouth with another article.

Article.

III. 'Thou, false heretic! preachedst against the sacraments, saying, that there were not seven sacraments.'

Answer.

Wisehart: 'My lords! and if it be your pleasures, I never taught of the number of the sacraments, whether they were seven or eleven. So many as are instituted by Christ, and are showed to us by the evangel, I profess openly. Except it be the word of God, I dare affirm nothing.'

Of the seven sacraments.

Article.

IV. 'Thou, false heretic! hast openly taught that, auricular confession is not a sacrament. And thou sayest, that we should only confess us to God, and to no priest.'

Answer.
Confession, what it is, and

Wisehart: 'My lords! I say, that auricular confession, seeing that it hath no promise of the evangel, therefore it cannot be a sacrament. Of the confession to be made to God there are many testimonies in Scripture, as when David saith, I thought I would knowledge mine iniquity against myself unto the Lord, and he forgave the punishment of my sin.<sup>1</sup> Here confession signifieth the secret knowledging of our sins before God. When I exhorted the people in this manner, I reprov'd no manner of confession. And further St. James saith, Knowledge your faults one to another, and pray one for another, that you may be healed.'<sup>2</sup>

When that he had said these words, the bishops and their complices cried, and girmed with their teeth, saying, "See ye not what colours he hath in his speaking, that he may beguile us and seduce us to his opinion?"

V. 'Thou heretic didst say openly, that it was necessary to every man to know and understand his baptism, and what it was; contrary to general councils, and the states of holy church.'

So likewise I would that we understood what thing we promise in the name of the infant unto God in baptism. For this cause I believe ye have confirmation.'

Then said Master Bleiter, chaplain, that he had the devil within him, and the spirit of error. Then answered him a child,<sup>3</sup> saying, "The devil cannot speak such words as yonder man doth speak."

VI. 'Thou heretic, traitor, and thief! thou saidst, that the sacrament of the altar was but a piece of bread baken upon the ashes, and no other thing else; and all that is there done, is but a superstitious rite, against the commandment of God.'

'The lawful use of this sacrament is most acceptable unto God; but the great abuse of it is very detestable unto him. But what occasion they have to say such words of me, I shall shortly show your lordships. I once chanced to meet with a Jew, when I was sailing upon the water of Rhine. I did inquire of him what was the cause of his pertinacy, that he did not believe that the true Messias was come, considering that they had seen all the prophecies which were spoken of him to be fulfilled. Moreover, by the prophecies taken away, and the sceptre of Judah, and by many other testimonies of the Scripture, I vanquish him, that Messias was come, the which they called Jesus of Nazareth. This Jew answered again unto me,

'When Messias cometh, he shall restore things; and he shall not abrogate the law, which was given to our forefathers, as ye do. For why? we see the poor almost perish through hunger amongst you; yet you are not moved with pity toward them: but, amongst us Jews, though we be poor, there are no beggars found.'

'Thirdly, a piece of bread baked upon the ashes ye adorne and worship, and say, that it is your God.—I have rehearsed here but the sayings of the Jew, which I never affirmed to be true.'

Then the bishops shook their heads, and spitted into the earth, and what he meant in this matter further they would not hear.

VII. 'Thou, false heretic! didst say, that extreme unction was not a sacrament.'

Article.

Wisehart: 'My lords! forsooth, I never taught any thing of extreme unction in my doctrine, whether it were a sacrament or no.'

Answer.

VIII. 'Thou, false heretic! saidst, that holy water is not so good as wash, and such like. Thou contemnest conjuring, and sayst, holy church's cursings avail not.'

Article.

Wisehart: 'My lords! as for holy water what strength it is of, I taught never in my doctrine. Conjurings, and exorcisms, if they were conformable to the word of God, I would commend them; but, in so farre as they are not conformable to the commandment and word of God, I prove them.'

Answer.

IX. 'Thou, false heretic and runnagate! hast said, that every layman is a priest, and such like. Thou saidst, that the pope hath no more power, than any other man.'

Article.

Wisehart: 'My lords! I taught nothing but the word of God. I remember that I have read in some places in St. John and St. Peter, of the which one saith, He hath made us kings and priests; the other saith, He hath made us the kingly priesthood.<sup>1</sup> Wherefore I have affirmed, that any man, being cunning in the word of God, and the true faith of Jesu Christ, hath his power given him from God, and not by the power or violence of men, but by the virtue of the word of God, which word is called, the power of God, as witnesseth St. Paul evidently enough.<sup>2</sup> And again I say, that any unlearned man, and not exercised in the word of God, nor yet constant in his faith, whatsoever estate or order he be of, I say, he hath no power to bind or loose, seeing he wanteth the instrument, by which he bindeth or looseth; that is to say, the word of God.'

Answer.

The instrument to bind and loose

After he had said these words, all the bishops laughed, and mocked him. When that he beheld their laughing, "Laugh ye," saith he, "my lords? Though that these sayings appear scornful, and worthy of derision to your lordships, nevertheless they are very weighty to me, and of a great value, because that they stand not only upon my life, but also the honour and glory of God." In the mean time many godly men, beholding the woodness and great crudelitie of the bishops, and the invincible, patience of Master George, did greatly mourn and lament.

X. 'Thou, false heretic! saidst, that a man hath no free will, but is like to the Stoics, which say, that it is not in man's will to do any thing, but that all concupiscence and desire cometh of God, whatsoever kind it be of.'

I say, that as many as believe in Christ firmly, unto them is given liberty, conformably to the saying of St. John, If the Son make you free, then shall ye verily be free.'<sup>1</sup> On the contrary, as many as believe not in Christ Jesus, they are bondservants of sin; He that sinneth, is bound to sin.'

Article. XI. 'Thou, false heretic! saidst, it is as lawful to eat flesh upon the Friday, as on Sunday.'

Answer. Wischart: 'Pleaseth it your lordships, I have read in the epistles of St. Paul, that who is clean, unto them all things are clean. Of the contrary, to the filthy man all things are unclean. A faithful man, clean and holy, sanctifieth by the word the creature of God: but the creature maketh no man acceptable unto God. So that a creature may not sanctify any impure and unfaithful man: but to the faithful man all things are sanctified by the word of God and prayer.'<sup>2</sup>

After these sayings of Master George, then said all the bishops with their complices, "What needeth us any witness against him? hath he not here openly spoken blasphemy?"

Article. XII. 'Thou, false heretic! didst say, that we should not pray to saints, but to God only. Say whether thou hast said this, or no; say shortly!'

Answer. To honour our God is certain. Wischart: 'For the weakness and infirmity of the hearers,' he said, 'without doubt plainly—saints should not be honoured. My lords,' said he, 'there are two things worthy of note. The one is certain, the other uncertain. It is found plain and certain in Scripture, that we should worship and honour our God, according to the saying of the first commandment, Thou shalt only worship and honour thy Lord God, with all thy heart.'<sup>3</sup> But, as for praying to and honouring of saints, there is great doubt among many, whether they hear, or not, invocation made unto them: therefore I exhorted all men equally in my doctrine, that they should leave the unsure way, and follow that way which was taught us by our master Christ. He is our only mediator, and maketh intercession for us to God his Father. He is the door by which we must enter in. He that entereth not in by this door, but climbeth another way, is a thief and a murderer. He [Christ] is the verity and life. He that goeth out of this way, there is no doubt but he shall fall into the mire; yea verily, he is fallen into it already. This is the fashion of my doctrine, the which I have ever followed. Verily, that which I have heard and read in the word of God, I taught openly, and in no corners. And now ye shall witness the same, if your lordships will hear me. But it be by the word of God, I dare not be so bold to affirm any thing.'

These sayings he rehearsed divers times.

Article. XIII. 'Thou, false heretic! hast preached plainly, saying that there is no purgatory, and that it is a feigned thing, for any man after this life to be punished in purgatory.'

Answer. Purgatory not once named in Scripture. Wischart: 'My lords! as I have oftentimes said heretofore, without express witness and testimony of the Scripture I dare affirm nothing. I have oft and divers times read over the Bible, and yet such a term found I never, nor yet any place of Scripture applicable thereunto. Therefore I was ashamed ever to teach of that thing which I could not find in the Scripture.'

Then said he to Master John Lauder his accuser, "If you have any testimony of the Scripture, by which you may prove any such place, show it now before this auditory." But this dolt had not a word to say for himself, but was as dumb as a beetle in that matter.

Article. XIV. 'Thou, false heretic! hast taught plainly against the vows of monks, friars, nuns, and priests; saying, that whosoever was bound to such like vows, they vowed themselves to the estate of damnation. Moreover, that it was lawful for priests to marry wives, and not to live sole.'

But as many as have not the gift of chastity, nor yet for the evangely have overcome the concupiscence of the flesh, and have vowed chastity; ye have experience, although I should hold my peace, to what inconvenience they have vowed themselves.'

XV. 'Thou, false heretic and runnagate! sayest, thou wilt not obey our general nor provincial councils.' Article.

Read here your general councils, or else give me a book wherein they are contained, that I may read them. If they agree with the word of God, I will not disagree.'

Answer.

Then the ravening wolves turned unto woodness, and said, "Whereunto let we him speak any further? Read forth the rest of the articles, and stay not upon them." Among these cruel tigers there was one false hypocrite, a seducer of the people, called John Grayfynd Scot, standing behind John Lander's back, hasting him to read the rest of the articles, and not to tarry upon his witty and godly answers: "For we may not abide them," quoth he, "no more than the devil may abide the sign of the cross, when it is named."

Wisehart: 'My lords! Solomon saith, If that the heaven of heavens cannot comprehend thee, how much less this house that I have builded?<sup>2</sup> And Job consenteth to the same sentence: Seeing that he is higher than the heavens, therefore what canst thou build unto him? He is deeper than hell, then how shalt thou know him? He is longer than the earth, and broader than the sea.<sup>3</sup> So that God cannot be comprehended into one place, because that he is infinite. These sayings notwithstanding, I never said that churches should be destroyed, but, on the contrary, I affirm ever, that churches should be sustained and upholden; that the people should be congregated into them, there to hear of God. And moreover, wheresoever is true preaching of the word of God, and the lawful use of the sacraments, undoubtedly there is God himself; so that both these sayings are true together: God cannot be comprehended in any place; and, Wheresoever two or three are gathered together in his name, there is he present in the midst of them.'

XVIII. 'Thou, false heretic! hast preached openly, saying, that the soul of man shall sleep till the latter day of judgment, and shall not obtain life immortal until that day.'

Wisehart: 'God, full of mercy and goodness, forgive them that say such things of me! I wot and know surely by the word of God, that he who hath begun to have the faith of Jesus Christ, and believeth firmly in him, I know surely that the soul of that man shall never sleep, but ever shall live an immortal life: which life from day to day is renewed in grace and augmented: nor yet shall ever perish or have an end, but shall live ever immortal with Christ. To the which life all that believe in him shall come, and rest in eternal glory. Amen.'

When that the bishops with their complices had accused this innocent man in manner and form aforesaid, incontinently they condemned him to be burned as a heretic, not having respect to his godly answers and true reasons which he alleged, nor yet to their own consciences, thinking verily that they should do to God good sacrifice, conformably to the saying of Christ, "They shall excommunicate you: yea, and the time shall come, that he which killeth you, shall think that he hath done to God good service."<sup>1</sup>

The Prayer of Master George Wischart, for the Congregation of God.

'O Immortal God! how long shalt thou suffer the woodness and great crudelity of the ungodly to exercise their fury upon thy servants which do further thy word in this world, seeing they desire to be the contrary, that is, to choke and destroy thy true doctrine and verity, by the which thou hast showed thyself unto the world, which was all drowned in blindness and misknowledge of thy name. O Lord! we know surely that thy true servants must needs suffer, for thy name's sake, persecution, affliction and troubles in this present life, which is but a shadow, as thou hast showed to us by thy prophets and apostles. But yet we desire thee heartily, that thou conserve, defend, and help thy congregation, which thou hast chosen before the beginning of the world, and give them thy grace to hear thy word, and to be thy true servants in this present life.'

Then, by and by, they caused the common people to void away, whose desire was always to hear that innocent man to speak. Then the sons of darkness pronounced their sentence definitive, not having respect to the judgment of God. And when all this was done and said, the cardinal caused his tormentours to pass again with the meek lamb into the castle, until such time as the fire was made ready. When he was come unto the castle, then there came two grey fiends, friar Scot and his mate, saying, "Sir, ye must make your confession unto us." He answered and said, "I will make no confession unto you. Go fetch me yonder man that preached this day, and I will make my confession unto him." Then they sent for the sub-prior of the abbey, who came to him with all diligence. But what he said in this confession, I cannot show.

When the fire was made ready, and the gallows, at the west part of the castle near to the priory, the lord cardinal dreading that Master George should have been taken away by his friends, therefore he commanded to bend all the ordnance of the castle for-right against that part, and commanded all his gunners to be ready and stand beside their guns, unto such time as he were burned. All this being done, they bound Master George's hands behind his back, and led him forth with their soldiers from the castle, to the place of their wicked execution. As he came forth of the castle gate, there met him certain beggars, asking of his alms for God's sake. To whom he answered, "I want my hands, wherewith I should give you alms; but the merciful Lord, of his benignity and abundance of grace, that feedeth all men, vouchsafe to give you necessaries, both unto your bodies and souls." Then afterwards met him two false fiends, I should say friars, saying, "Master George, pray to our Lady, that she may be mediatrix for you to her Son." To whom he answered meekly, "Cease, tempt me not, my brethren!" After this he was led to the fire with a rope about his neck, and a chain of iron about his middle.

Wisehart prayeth for the poor, and answereth the friars.

When he came to the fire, he sat down upon his knees, and rose again, and thrice he said these words, "O thou Saviour of the world! have mercy on me. Father of heaven! I commend my spirit into thy holy hands." When he had made this prayer, he turned him to the people, and said these words:

The Exhortation of Wisehart to the People, at his Death.

'I beseech you, christian brethren and sisters! that ye be not offended in the word of God, for the afflictions and torments, which ye see already prepared for me: but I exhort you, that you love the word of God, and suffer patiently, and with a comfortable heart, for the word's sake, which is your undoubted salvation, and everlasting comfort.

'Moreover, I pray you, show my brethren and sisters, which have heard me oft before, that they cease not, nor leave off the word of God which I taught unto them after the grace given unto me, for no persecutions or troubles in this world, which lasteth not; and show unto them, that my doctrine was no wives' fables, after the constitutions made by men. And if I had taught men's doctrine, I had gotten great thanks by men: but, for the word's sake and true evangel, which was given to me by the grace of God, I suffer this day by men, not sorrowfully, but with a glad heart and mind. For this cause I was sent, that I should suffer this fire, for Christ's sake. Consider and behold my visage, ye shall not see me change my colour. This grim fire I fear not. And so I pray you for to do, if that any persecution come unto you for the word's sake; and not to fear them that slay the body, and afterwards have no power to slay the soul. Some have said of me, that I taught, that the soul of man should sleep until the last day. But I know surely, and my faith is such, that my soul shall sup with my Saviour Christ this night (or it be six hours), for whom I suffer this.'

The constant patience of this good man.

Then he prayed for them that accused him, saying:

'I beseech thee, Father of heaven! to forgive them that have of any ignorance, or else of any evil mind, forged any lies upon me: I forgive them with all my heart. I beseech Christ to forgive them that have condemned me to death this day ignorantly.'

Wisehart prayeth for his enemies.

And last of all he said to the people on this manner:

'I beseech you, brethren and sisters, to exhort your prelates to the learning of the word of God, that they at the last may be ashamed to do evil, and learn to do good. And if they will not convert themselves from their wicked error, there shall hastily come upon them the wrath of God, which they shall not eschew.'

Wisehart propheseth of the death of Beaton.

Many faithful words said he in the mean time, taking no heed or care of the cruel torments, which were then prepared for him. And, at last of all, the hangman, that was his tormentor, sat down upon his knees, and said, "Sir, I pray you forgive me, for I am not guilty of your death." To whom he answered, "Come hither to me." When that he was come to him, he kissed his cheek, and said, "Lo! here is a token that I forgive thee. My heart, do thine office." And then by and by he was put upon the gibbet and hanged, and there burned to powder. When that the people beheld the great tormenting, they might not withhold from piteous mourning and complaining of this innocent lamb's slaughter.<sup>1</sup>

A NOTE OF THE JUST PUNISHMENT OF GOD UPON THE CRUEL
CARDINAL ARCHBISHOP OF ST. ANDREWS, NAMED DAVID BEATON.

It was not long after the martyrdom of the blessed man of God, Master George Wischart aforesaid, who was put to death by David Beaton, the bloody archbishop and cardinal of Scotland, as is above specified, A. D. 1546, the first day of March, but the said David Beaton, archbishop of St. Andrews, by the just revenge of God's mighty judgment, was slain within his own castle of St. Andrew's, by the hands of one Leslie and other gentlemen, who, by the Lord stirred up, brake in suddenly into his castle upon him, and in his bed murdered him the said year, the last day of May, crying out, "Alas! alas! slay me not! I am a priest!" And so, like a butcher he lived, and like a butcher he died, and lay seven months and more unburied, and at last like a carrion was buried in a dunghill, A. D. 1546, the last day of May.

After this David Beaton succeeded John Hamilton, archbishop of St. Andrews, A. D. 1549, who, to the intent that he might in no ways appear inferior to his predecessor, in augmenting the number of the holy martyrs of God, in the next year following called a certain poor man to judgment, whose name was Adam Wallace. The order and manner of whose story here followeth.

The Story and Martyrdom of Adam Wallace in Scotland.

There was set, upon a scaffold made hard to the chancelary wall of the Black-friars' church in Edinburgh, on seats made thereupon, the lord governor. Above him, at his back, sat Master Gavin Hamilton, dean of Glasgow, representing the metropolitan pastor thereof. Upon a seat on his right hand sat the archbishop of St. Andrews. At his back, and aside somewhat, stood the official of Lothian. Next to the bishop of St. Andrews, the bishop of Dunblane, the bishop of Moray, the abbot of Dunfermline, the abbot of Glenluce, with other churchmen of lower estimation, as the official of St. Andrews,

(1) 'Ex Historia Impressa.' [This alludes to a small pamphlet published about the time of cardinal Beaton's death, the general title of which is 'The tragical death of David Beato Bishoppe of Sainct Andrewes in Scotland: wherunto is joyned the martyrdom of Maister Wyseharte, &c.; imprinted at London, by John Day, and William Seres.' The book is in eights, and the tragedy of Beaton is printed in small, and Wishart's trial in large black letter. The date of printing is not mentioned, but it is probable that it was printed soon after Beaton's death. Foxe has embodied the whole in his Acts and Monuments. It is remarkable that this pamphlet had become so scarce in Scotland, even in the time of John Knox, a contemporary of Foxe, that the former, in his history of the Reformation, speaks of it, as accessible to the public in Foxe's work alone; and prefaces his own reprint of the trial with these words: 'The manner of his (Wisbart's) accusation, proofs, and answers following, as we have received the same from The Book of Martyrs, which, word by word, we have here inserted; and that, because the said book, for the price thereof, is rare to be had.' Maitland, also, in his 'Antiquities of Scotland,' (fol. Edimb. 1757), quotes largely from 'The Book of Martyrs,' for his account of this trial. and other doctors of that nest and city; and, at the other end of the seat sat Master Uchiltry. On his left hand sat the earl of Argyle, justice, with his deputy sir John Campbell of Lundie under his feet. Next him the earl of Huntley. Then the earl of Angus, the bishop of Galloway, the prior of St. Andrews, the bishop of Orkney, the lord Forbes, Dane John Winryme sub-prior of St. Andrews; and behind the seats stood the whole senate, the clerk of the register,<sup>1</sup> &c.

At the further end of the chancelary wall, in the pulpit, was placed Master John Lauder, parson of Marbotle, accuser, clad in a surplice and red hood, and a great congregation of the whole people, in the body of the church, standing on the ground.

After that, sir John Ker, prebendary of St. Giles's church, was accused, convicted, and condemned, for the false making and giving forth of a sentence of divorce (whereby he falsely divorced and parted a man and his lawful wife), in the name of the dean of Restalrig, and certain other judges appointed by the holy father the pope. He granted the falsehood, and that never any such thing was done indeed, nor yet meant or moved by the aforesaid judges, and was agreed to be banished the realms of Scotland and England for his lifetime, and to lose his right hand, if he were found or apprehended therein after, and in the mean time to leave his benefices for ever, and they to be vacant.

After that was brought in Adam Wallace, a simple poor man in appearance, conveyed by John of Cumnock, servant to the bishop of St. Andrews, and set in the midst of the scaffold, who was commanded to look to the accuser, who asked him what was his name. He answered, "Adam Wallace." The accuser said, he had another name, which he granted, and said he was commonly called Fean. Then asked he where he was born? "Within two miles of Fyale," said he, "in Kyle."<sup>2</sup> Then said the accuser, "I repent that ever such a poor man as you should put these noble lords to so great incumbrance this day by your vain speaking." "And I must speak," said he, "as God giveth me grace, and I believe I have said no evil to hurt any body." "Would God," said the accuser, "ye had never spoken; but you are brought forth for such horrible crimes of heresy, as never were imagined in this country before, and that shall be sufficiently proved, that ye cannot deny it; and I forethink that it should be heard for hurting of weak consciences. Now I will yea thee no more, and thou shalt hear the points that thou art accused of."

pharisees.

Accuser: 'Adam Wallace, alias Fean: thou art openly delated and accused for preaching, saying, and teaching of the blasphemies and abominable heresies under written. In the first, thou hast said and taught that the bread and wine on the altar, after the words of consecration, are not the body and blood of Jesus Christ.'

First article.

He turned to the lord governor, and lords aforesaid, saying thus:

Wallace: 'I never said, nor taught any thing but that I found in this book, and writ (having there a Bible at his belt in French, Dutch, and English), which is the word of God: and if you will be content that the Lord God and his word be judge to me, and this his holy writ, here it is; and where I have said wrong, I shall take that punishment you shall put to me: for I never said any thing concerning this that I am accused of, but that which I found in this writ.'

"What didst thou say?" said the accuser:

Wallace: 'I said that after our Lord Jesus Christ had eaten the paschal lamb in his latter supper with his apostles, and fulfilled the ceremonies of the old law, he instituted a new sacrament in remembrance of his death then to come. He took bread, he blessed, and brake it, and gave it to his disciples, and said, Take ye, eat ye: this is my body which shall be broken and given for you. And likewise the cup he blessed, and bade them drink all thereof, for that was the cup of the New Testament which should be shed for the forgiving of many. How oft ye do this, do it in my remembrance.'

Then said the bishop of St. Andrews and the official of Lothian, with the dean of Glasgow, and many other prelates, "We know this well enough." The earl of Huntley said, "Thou answerest not to that which is laid to thee; say either nay or yea thereto."

Wallace: 'If ye will admit God and his word spoken by the mouth of his blessed Son Jesus Christ, our Lord and Saviour, ye will admit that which I have said: for I have said and taught nothing but what the word, which is the trial and touchstone, saith; which ought to be judge to me, and to all the world.'

"Why," quoth the earl of Huntley, "hast thou not a judge good enough? and trowest thou that we know not God and his word? Answer to that is spoken to thee." And then they made the accuser speak the same thing over again. "Thou sayest," quoth the accuser, "and hast taught, that the bread and the wine in the sacrament of the altar, after the words of the consecration, are not the body and blood of our Saviour Jesus Christ."

Wallace: 'I never said more than the writ saith, nor yet more than I have said before. For I know well by St. Paul, when he saith, Whosoever eateth this bread, and drinketh of this cup unworthily, receiveth to himself damnation. And therefore, when I taught (which was but seldom, and to them only who required and desired me), I said, that if the sacrament of the altar were truly ministered, and used as the Son of the living God did institute it, where that was done, there was God himself by his divine power, by the which he is over all.'

The bishop of Orkney asked him, "Believest thou not," said he, "that the bread and wine in the sacrament of the altar, after the words of the consecration, is the very body of God? flesh, blood, and bone?"

Wallace
answereth by his creed.

Wallace: 'I wot not what that word consecration meaneth. I have not much Latin, but I believe that the Son of God was conceived of the Holy Ghost, and born of the Virgin Mary, and hath a natural body, with hands, feet, and other members; and in the same body he walked up and down in the world, preached and taught, he suffered death under Pontius Pilate; was crucified, dead, and buried; and that by his godly power he raised that same body again the third day: and the same body ascended into heaven, and sitteth at the right hand of the Father, which shall come again to judge both the quick and the dead.'

And that this body is a natural body with hands and feet, and cannot be in two places at once, he showeth well himself; for which everlasting thanks be to him that maketh this matter clear. When the woman brake that ointment on him, answering to some of his disciples who grudged thereat, he said, The poor shall you always have with you, but me ye shall not have always: <sup>1</sup> meaning of his natural body. And likewise at his ascension, said he to the same disciples that were fleshly, and would ever have had him remaining with them corporally, It is needful for you that I pass away, for if I pass not away, the Comforter the Holy Ghost shall not come to you <sup>2</sup> (meaning that his natural body behoved to be taken away from them): but be stout and be of good cheer, for I am with you unto the world's end. <sup>3</sup>

Scottish History.

'And that the eating of his very flesh profiteth not, may well be known by his words which he spake in John vi., where, after he had said, Except ye eat my flesh and drink my blood, ye shall not have life in you; <sup>4</sup> they murmuring thereat, he reproved them for their gross and fleshly taking of his words, and said, What will ye think when ye see the Son of man ascend to the place that he came from? It is the Spirit that quickeneth, the flesh profiteth nothing (to be caten as they took it, and even so take ye it).'

The eating of the very flesh of Christ profiteth nothiag.

"It is a horrible heresy," said the bishop of Orkney. When Wallace began to speak again, and bade the lord governor judge if he had right by the writ, the accuser cried, "Ad secundam." "Nunc ad secundam," answered the archbishop of St. Andrews.

Then was he bidden to hear the accuser, who propounded the second article, and said, "Thou saidst likewise, and openly didst teach, that the mass is very idolatry, and abominable in the sight of God."

The second article.

Wallace: 'I have read the Bible and word of God in three tongues, and have understood them so far as God gave me grace, and yet never read I that word mass in it all: but I found,' said he, 'that the thing that was highest and most in estimation amongst men, and not in the word of God, was idolatry, and abominable in the sight of God. And I say, the mass is holden greatly in estimation, and high amongst men, and is not founded in the word; therefore, I said, it was idolatry, and abominable in the sight of God. But if any man will find it in the Scripture, and prove it by God's word, I will grant mine error, and that I have failed: otherwise not. And in that case I will submit me to all lawful correction and punishment.'

Answer.

The mass not found in Scripture argument.

"Ad tertiam," said the archbishop. Then said the accuser, "Thou hast said and openly taught, that the God which we worship, is but bread sown of corn, growing of the earth, baked of men's hands, and nothing else."

The third article.

Wallace: 'I worship the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost, three persons in one Godhead, who made and fashioned the heaven and earth, and all that is therein of nought: but I know not which God you worship; and if you will show me whom you worship, I will show you what he is, as I can, by my judgment.'

Answer.

The pope's God.

"Believest thou not," said the accuser, "that the sacrament of the altar, after the words of the consecration, betwixt the priest's hands, is the very body and blood of the Son of God, and God himself?"

Wallace: 'What the body of God is, and what kind of body he hath, I have showed you, so far as I have found in the Scripture.'

Then said the accuser, "Thou hast preached, said, and openly taught, divers and sundry other great errors and abominable heresies against all the seven sacraments, which, for shortness of time, I permit and overpass. Whether dost thou grant thy aforesaid articles that thou art accused of, or no? and thou shalt hear them shortly." And then repeated the accuser the three articles aforesaid shortly over, and asked him whether he granted or denied them?

Wallace answered that which before he had said of his answers, and that he said nothing but agreeing to the holy word as he understood; so God judge him, and his own conscience accuse him: and thereby would he abide unto the time he were better instructed by Scripture, and the contrary proved, even to the death. And he said thus to the lord governor and other lords:

The words of Wallace to the lord governor and the lords.

Wallace: 'If you condemn me for holding by God's word, my innocent blood shall be required at your hands, when ye shall be brought before the judgment-seat of Christ, who is mighty to defend my innocent cause; before whom ye shall not deny it, nor yet be able to resist his wrath; to whom I refer the vengeance as it is written, Vengeance is mine and I will reward.'<sup>1</sup>

Sentence of condemnation given against Wallace.

Then gave they forth sentence, and condemned him by the laws, and so left him to the secular power, in the hands of sir John Campbell, justice-deputy, who delivered him to the provost of Edinburgh to be burned on the Castle Hill, who incontinent made him to be put in the uppermost house in the town, with irons about his legs and neck, and gave charge to sir Hugh Terry, to keep the key of the said house, an ignorant minister and imp of Satan and of the bishops, who, by direction, sent to the poor man two grey friars to instruct him, with whom he would enter into no communing. Soon after that were sent in two black friars, an English friar, and another subtle sophister, called Arbuthnot, with the which English friar he would have reasoned and declared his faith by the Scriptures; who answered, he had no commission to enter into disputation with him: and so departed and left him.

Sir Hugh Terry an imp of Satan. Friars sent to instruct Wallace.

The dean of Restalrig sent to Wallace.

Then was sent to him a worldly wise man, and not ungodly in the understanding of the truth, the dean of Restalrig, who gave him christian consolation, among the which he exhorted him to believe the reality of the sacrament after the consecration. But he would consent to nothing that had not evidence in the holy Scripture, and so passed over that night in singing, and lauding God, to the ears of divers hearers, having learned the Psalter of David without book, to his consolation: for they had before spoiled him of his Bible, which always, till after he was condemned, was with him wherever he went. After sir Hugh Terry knew that he had certain books to read and comfort his spirit, he came in a rage, and took the same from him, leaving him desolate (to his power) of all consolation, and gave divers ungodly and injurious provocations by his devilish venom, to have perverted him, a poor innocent, from the patience and hope he had in Christ his Saviour: but God suffered him not to be moved therewith, as plainly appeared to the hearers and seers for the time.

The books of the good man taken from him.

So all the next morning abode this poor man in irons, and provision was commanded to be made for his burning against the next day; which day the lord governor, and all the principal both spiritual and temporal lords, departed from Edinburgh to their other business.

Scottish History.

After they were departed, came the dean of Restalrig to him again, and reasoned with him after his wit; who answered as before, He would say nothing concerning his faith, but as the Scripture testifieth, yea, though an angel came from heaven to persuade him to the same; saving that he confessed himself to have received good consolation of the said dean in other behalf, as becometh a Christian.

Then after came in sir Hugh Terry again, and examined him after his old manner, and said he would gar devils to come forth of him ere even. To whom he answered, "You should rather be a godly man to give me consolation in my case. When I knew you were come, I prayed God I might resist your temptations; which, I thank him, he hath made me able to do: therefore I pray you, let me alone in peace." Then he asked of one of the officers that stood by, "Is your fire making ready?" Who told him, it was. He answered, "As it pleaseth God; I am ready soon or late, as it shall please him." And then he spake to one faithful in that company, and bade him commend him to all the faithful, being sure to meet together with them in heaven. From that time, to his forthcoming to the fire, spake no man with him.

At his forthcoming, the provost, with great menacing words, forbade him to speak to any man, or any to him; as belike he had commandment of his superiors. Coming from the town to the Castle Hill, the common people said, "God have mercy upon him." "And on you too," said he. Being beside the fire, he lifted up his eyes to heaven twice or thrice, and said to the people, "Let it not offend you that I suffer death this day for the truth's sake; for the disciple is not greater than his master." Then was the provost angry that he spake. Then looked he to heaven again, and said, "They will not let me speak." The cord being about his neck, the fire was lighted, and so departed he to God constantly, and with good countenance, to our sights.<sup>1</sup>

The Schism that arose in Scotland for the Pater-Noster.

After that Richard Marshall, doctor of divinity, and prior of the Black Friars at Newcastle in England, had declared in his preaching at St. Andrews in Scotland, that the Lord's Prayer (commonly called the Pater-noster) should be done only to God, and not to saints, neither to any other creature; the doctors of the university of St. Andrews, together with the grey friars, who had long ago taught the people to pray the Pater-noster to saints, had great indignation that their old doctrine should be repugned, and stirred up a grey friar, called friar Tottis, to preach again to the people, that they should and might pray the Pater-noster to saints; who, finding no part of the Scripture to found his purpose upon, yet came to the pulpit the 1st of November, being the feast of All-hallows, A. D. 1551, and took the text of the gospel for that day read in their mass, written in Matthew v., containing these words; "Blessed are the poor in spirit, for to them pertaineth the kingdom of heaven."

A schism in Scotland by a black-friar, preaching that the Pater-noster should not be said to saints

The doctrine of the papists holdeth, that the Pater-noster may be said to saints, and why.

Blasphemous doctrine against the glory of God.

A friarly glossing upon the Pater-noster. The friar's sophistry here faileth him.

This feeble foundation being laid, the friar began to reason most impertinently, that the Lord's Prayer might be offered to saints, because every petition thereof appertaineth to them. "For if we meet an old man in the street," said he, "we will say to him, 'Good-day, father!' and therefore much more may we call the saints our fathers; and because we grant also that they be in heaven, we may say to every one of them, 'Our Father which art in heaven:' farther, God hath made their names holy, and therefore ought we, as followers of God, to hold their names holy; and so we may say to any of the saints, 'Our Father which art in heaven, hallowed be thy name.' And for the same cause," said the friar, "as they are in the kingdom of heaven, so that kingdom is theirs by possession; and so, praying for the kingdom of heaven, we may say to them, and every one of them, 'Thy kingdom come.' And except their will had been the very will of God, they had never come to that kingdom. And therefore, seeing their will is God's will, we may say with every one of them, 'Thy will be done.'"

But when the friar came to the fourth petition, touching our daily bread, he began to be astonished and ashamed, so that he did sweat abundantly, partly because his sophistry began to fail him (not finding such a colour for that part, as for the other which went before), and partly because he spake against his own knowledge and conscience; and so he was compelled to confess that it was not in the saints' power to give us our daily bread, but that they should pray to God for us, "that we," said he, "may obtain our daily bread by their intercession:" and so glossed he the rest to the end. Not standing yet content with this detestable doctrine, he affirmed, most blasphemously, that St. Paul's napkin, and St. Peter's shadow, did miracles, and that the virtue of Elijah's cloak divided the waters; attributing nothing to the power of God: with many other errors of the papists, horrible to be heard.

Upon this followed, incontinent, a dangerous schism in the church of Scotland: for not only the clergy, but the whole people were divided among themselves, one defending the truth, and another the papistry; in such sort that there rose a proverb, "To whom say you your Pater-noster?" And although the papists had the upper hand as then, whose words were almost holden for law (so great was the blindness of that age), yet God so inspired the hearts of the common people, that so many as could get the understanding of the bare words of the Lord's Prayer in English (which was then said in Latin), utterly detested that opinion, holding that it should in no wise be said to saints: so that the craftsmen and their servants in their booths, when the friar came, exploded him with shame enough, crying, "Friar Pater-Noster!" "Friar Pater-Noster!" who at the last being convicted in his own conscience, and ashamed of his former sermon, was compelled to leave the town of St. Andrews.

In the mean time of this bruit, there were two pasquils set on the Abbey Church, the one in Latin, bearing these words:

‘ Doctores nostri de collegio
Concludunt idem cum Lucifero,
Quod sancti sunt similes altissimo;
Et se tuentur gravatorio

‘ Doctors of Theology, of fourscore of years,
And old jolly Lupoys, the bald Grey-friars ;
They would be called Rabbi and Magister noster !
And wot not to whom they say their Pater noster !’

Shortly, the Christians were so hotly offended, and the Papists on the other side so proud and wilful, that necessary it was, to eschew greater inconveniences, that the clergy, at least, should be assembled to dispute and conclude the whole matter, that the lay people might be put out of doubt. This being done, and the university agreed, whosoever had been present might have heard much subtle sophistry; for some of the popish doctors affirmed that it should be said to God “formaliter,” and to saints “materialiter.” Others, “ultimatè, et non ultimatè.” Others said it should be said to God “principaliter,” and to saints “minus principaliter.” Others that it should be said to God “primariè,” and to saints “secundariè.” Others that it should be said to God “capiendo strictè,” and to saints “capiendo largè.”<sup>2</sup> These vain distinctions being heard and considered by the people, they that were simple remained in greater doubtfulness than they were in before; so that a well aged man, and a servant to the sub-prior of St. Andrews, called the sub-prior’s Thome, being demanded to whom he said his Pater-noster, answered, “To God only.” Then they asked again, “What should be said to the saints?” He answered, “Give them aves and creeds enough in the devil’s name, for that may suffice them well enough, albeit they do spoil God of his right.” Others, making their vaunts of the doctors, said, that because Christ (who made the Pater-noster) never came into the isle of Britain, and so understood not the English tongue, therefore it was that the doctors concluded it should be said in Latin.

Disputation in Scotland to whom they should say their Pater-noster.

The answer of an old man.

A doctorly reason why the Pater-noster should be said in Latin.

This perturbation and open slander yet depending, it was thought good to call a provincial council to decide the matter; which being assembled at Edinburgh, the papists, being destitute of reason, defended their parts with lies, alleging that the university of Paris had concluded, that the Lord’s Prayer should be said to saints. But, because that could not be proved, and that they could not prevail by reason, they used their will in place of reason, and sometimes spiteful, and injurious talk: as friar Scot, being asked of one to whom he should say the Pater-noster, he answered, saying, “Say it to the devil, knave.” So the council, perceiving they could profit nothing by reasoning, were compelled to pass to voting.<sup>3</sup>

The council of Edinburgh could not agree to whom they should say their Pater-noster.

But then, incontinent, they that were called churchmen were found divided and repugnant among themselves: for some bishops, with the doctors and friars, consented that the Pater-noster should be said to saints; but the bishops of St. Andrews, Caithness and Athens, with other learned men, refused utterly to subscribe to the same. Finally, with consent of both the parties, commission was given by the holy church to Dane John Winryme,<sup>1</sup> then sub-prior of St. Andrews, to declare to the people how, and after what manner, they should pray the Lord's Prayer: who, accepting of the commission, declared that it should be said to God; with some other restrictions, which are not necessary to be put in memory. And so, by little and little, the bruit and tumult ceased.<sup>2</sup>

The Martyrdom of the blessed Servant of God, Walter Mille.

A. D. 1558.

Among the rest of the martyrs of Scotland, the marvellous constancy of Walter Mille is not to be passed over with silence; out of whose ashes sprang thousands of his opinion and religion in Scotland, who altogether chose rather to die, than to be any longer overtrodden by the tyranny of the aforesaid cruel, ignorant, and brutal bishops, abbots, monks, and friars. And so began the congregation of Scotland to debate the true religion of Christ against the Frenchmen and papists, who sought always to depress and keep down the same; for it began soon after the martyrdom of Walter Mille, of which the form hereafter followeth.

In the year of our Lord, 1558, in the time of Mary duchess of Longueville, queen regent of Scotland, and the said John Hamilton being bishop of St. Andrews, and primate of Scotland, this Walter Mille (who in his youth had been a papist), after he had been in Almain, and had heard the doctrine of the gospel, returned again into Scotland; and, setting aside all papistry and compelled chastity, married a wife; which thing made him unto the bishops of Scotland to be suspected of heresy: and, after long watching of him he was taken by two popish priests, one called sir George Strachen, and the other sir Hugh Terry, servants to the said bishop for the time, within the town of Dysart in Fife, and brought to St. Andrews and imprisoned in the castle thereof. He, being in prison, the papists earnestly travailed and laboured to have seduced him, and threatened him with death and corporal torments, to the intent they might cause him to recant and forsake the truth. But seeing they could profit nothing thereby, and that he remained still firm and constant, they laboured to persuade him by fair promises, and offered unto him a monk's portion, for all the days of his life, in the abbey of Dunfermling, so that he would deny the things he had taught, and grant that they were heresy; but he, continuing in the truth even unto the end, despised their threatenings and fair promises.

Then assembled together the bishops of St. Andrews, Moray, Brechin, Caithness, and Athens,<sup>3</sup> the abbots of Dunfermling, Lindores, Balindrinot,<sup>4</sup> and Cowpers,<sup>5</sup> with doctors of theology of St.

The pope had conferred on Alexander Gordon the empty title of archbishop of Athens, accompanied by a promise of the next vacant see, in consequence of Gordon's nomination to the see of Glasgow having been over-ruled by the court of Rome, about the year 1547. Gordon was made bishop of the Isles in 1553, and translated from thence to Galloway about the year 1558; but 'he always retained the title of archbishop of Athens.'—See Keith's Scottish Bishops (4to Edin. 1755), p. 175; also p. 166.—ED.

Andrews; as John Grison, black friar, and Dane John Winryme, sub-prior of St. Andrews, William Cranston, provost of the old college, with divers others, as sundry friars black and grey. These being assembled, and having consulted together, he was taken out of prison, and brought to the metropolitan church, where he was put in a pulpit before the bishops to be accused, April the 20th. Being brought into the church, and climbing up into the pulpit, they, seeing him so weak and feeble of person, partly by age and travail, and partly by evil entreatment, that without help he could not climb up, they were out of hope to have heard him, for weakness of voice. But when he began to speak, he made the church to ring and sound again with so great courage and stoutness, that the Christians who were present were no less rejoiced, than the adversaries were confounded and ashamed. He, being in the pulpit, and on his knees at prayer, sir Andrew Oliphant, one of the archbishop's priests, commanded him to arise, and to answer to his articles, saying on this manner, "Sir Walter Mille, arise, and answer to the articles; for you hold my lord here over-long." To whom Walter, after he had finished his prayer, answered, saying, "We ought to obey God more than men: I serve one more mighty, even the Omnipotent Lord. And whereas ye call me sir Walter, call me Walter, and not sir Walter; I have been over-long one of the pope's knights. Now say what thou hast to say."

The Articles whereof Walter Mille was accused, with his Answers.

Oliphant :—'What think you of priest's marriage?'

Mille :—'I hold it a blessed band; for Christ himself maintained it, and approved the same, and also made it free to all men. But you think it not free to you; ye abhor it, and in the mean time take other men's wives and daughters; and will not keep the band that God hath made. Ye vow chastity, and break the same. St. Paul had rather marry than burn; the which I have done, for God never forbade marriage to any man, of what state or degree soever he were.'

Oliphant :—'Thou sayest there be not seven sacraments.'

Mille :—'Give me the Lord's supper and baptism, and take you the rest, and part them among you. For if there be seven, why have you omitted one of them, to wit, marriage, and give yourselves to slanderous and ungodly whoredom?'

Oliphant :—'Thou art against the blessed sacrament of the altar, and sayest, that the mass is wrong, and is idolatry.'

Mille :—'A lord or a king sendeth and calleth many to a dinner; and when the dinner is in readiness, he causeth to ring the bell, and the men come to the hall, and sit down to be partakers of the dinner; but the Lord, turning his back unto them, eateth all himself, and mocketh them:—so do ye.'

A similitude aptly applied.

Oliphant :—'Thou deniest the sacrament of the altar to be the very body of Christ really in flesh and blood.'

Mille :—'The Scripture of God is not to be taken carnally, but spiritually, and standeth in faith only. And as for the mass, it is wrong, for Christ was once offered on the cross for man's trespass, and will never be offered again, for then he ended all sacrifice.'

The sacrifice of the mass.

Oliphant :—'Thou deniest the office of a bishop.'

Mille :—'I affirm that they whom ye call bishops, do no bishop's works, nor use the office of bishops, as Paul biddeth, writing to Timothy, but live after their own sensual pleasure, and take no care of the flock; nor yet regard they the word of God, but desire to be honoured, and called 'my lords.'

Bishops, no bishops.

Oliphant :—'Thou speakest against pilgrimage, and callest it a pilgrimage to whoredom.'

Mille :—'I affirm and say, that it is not commanded in the Scripture; and

Oliphant :—'Thou preachedst secretly and privately in houses, and openly in the fields.'

Mille :—'Yea man, and on the sea also, sailing in a ship.'

Oliphant :—'Wilt thou not recant thy erroneous opinions? And if thou wilt not, I will pronounce sentence against thee.'

Mille :—'I am accused of my life; I know I must die once, and therefore, as Christ said to Judas, Quod facis, fac citius. Ye shall know that I will not recant the truth, for I am corn, I am no chaff: I will not be blown away with the wind, nor burst with the flail; but I will abide both.'

These things rehearsed they of purpose, with other light trifles, to augment their final accusation; and then sir Andrew Oliphant pronounced sentence against him, that he should be delivered to the temporal judge, and punished as a heretic; which was, to be burned. Notwithstanding, his boldness and constancy moved so the hearts of many, that the bishop's steward of his regality, provost of the town, called Patrick Lermond, refused to be his temporal judge; to whom it appertained, if the cause had been just: also the bishop's chamberlain, being therewith charged, would in no wise take upon him so ungodly an office. Yea, the whole town was so offended with his unjust condemnation, that the bishop's servants could not get for their money so much as one cord to tie him to the stake, or a tar-barrel to burn him; but were constrained to cut the cords of their master's own pavilion, to serve their turn.

Nevertheless, one servant of the bishop's, more ignorant and cruel than the rest, called Alexander Somervaille, enterprising the office of a temporal judge in that part, conveyed him to the fire, where, against all natural reason of man, his boldness and hardness did more and more increase, so that the Spirit of God, working miraculously in him, made it manifest to the people, that his cause and articles were most just, and he innocently put down.

Now when all things were ready for his death, and he conveyed with armed men to the fire, Oliphant bade him pass to the stake. And he said, "Nay! wilt thou put me up with thy hand, and take part of my death, thou shalt see me pass up gladly: for by the law of God I am forbidden to put hands upon myself." Then Oliphant put him up with his hand, and he ascended gladly, saying, "Introibo ad altare Dei;" and desired that he might have space to speak to the people, which Oliphant and other of the burners denied, saying, that he had spoken over much; for the bishops were altogether offended that the matter was so long continued. Then some of the young men committed both the burners, and the bishops their masters, to the devil, saying, that they believed they should lament that day; and desired the said Walter to speak what he pleased.

And so after he made his humble supplication to God on his knees, he arose, and standing upon the coals, said on this wise:

'Dear friends! the cause why I suffer this day is not for any crime laid to my charge (albeit I be a miserable sinner before God), but only for the defence of the faith of Jesus Christ, set forth in the New and Old Testament unto us; for which as the faithful martyrs have offered themselves gladly before, being assured, after the death of their bodies, of eternal felicity, so this day I praise God, that he hath called me of his mercy, among the rest of his servants, to seal up his truth with my life: which, as I have received it of him, so willingly I offer it to his glory. Therefore, as you will escape the eternal death, be no more seduced with the lies of priests, monks, friars, priors, abbots, bishops, and the rest of the sect of Antichrist; but depend only upon Jesus Christ and his mercy, that ye may be delivered from condemnation.'

Henry VIII.

A. D. 1558.

All that while there was great mourning and lamentation of the multitude; for they, perceiving his patience, stoutness and boldness, constancy and hardiness, were not only moved and stirred up, but their hearts also were so inflamed, that he was the last martyr that died in Scotland for the religion. After his prayer, he was hoisted up upon the stake, and being in the fire, he said, "Lord, have mercy on me! Pray, people, while there is time!" and so he constantly departed.

After this, by the just judgment of God, in the same place where Walter Mille was burnt, the images of the great church of the abbey, which passed both in number and costliness, were burned in the time of reformation.<sup>1</sup>

And thus much concerning such matters as happened, and such martyrs as suffered, in the realm of Scotland, for the faith of Jesus Christ, and testimony of his truth.

In revolving the registers of William Warham, archbishop of Canterbury, I find, moreover, besides these above comprehended, in the time and reign of king Henry; the names of divers others, whereof some suffered martyrdom for the like testimony of God's word, and some recanted; who, albeit here they do come a little out of order, and should have been placed before, in the beginning of king Henry's reign, yet rather than they should utterly be omitted, I thought here to give them a place, though somewhat out of time, yet not altogether, I trust, without fruit unto the reader; being no less worthy to be registered and preserved from oblivion, than others of their fellows before them.

Articles.

First, For holding that the sacrament of the altar was not the true and very body of Christ, but only material bread in substance.

See Appendix.

II. That auricular confession was not to be made to a priest.

III. That no power is given of God to priests, of ministering sacraments, saying mass, or other divine service, more than to laymen.<sup>3</sup>

IV. That the solemnization of matrimony is not necessary to salvation of soul, neither was instituted of God.<sup>4</sup>

V. That the sacrament of extreme unction is not available, nor necessary to soul's health.

VI. That the images of the cross, of the crucifix, of the blessed Virgin, and other saints, are not to be worshipped; and that those who worship them do commit idolatry.

VII. That pilgrimages to holy places, and holy relics, be not necessary, nor meritorious to soul's health.

VIII. That invocation is not to be made to saints, but only to God, and that he only heareth their prayers.

IX. That holy bread and holy water have no more virtue after their consecration, than before.

X. That they have believed, taught, and holden all and every of the same damnable opinions before; as they did at that present.

XI. That whereas they now have confessed their errors, they would not have so done, but only for fear of manifest proofs brought against them; or else but for fear to be convicted by them, they would never have confessed the same of their own accord.

XII. That they have communed and talked of the said damnable errors heretofore with divers other persons, and have had books concerning the same.

Wells, Clement, Brown, with others more, the notaries being William Potking, and David Cooper, the articles and interrogatories above specified were laid unto him. Which articles he there and then denied, affirming that he never did nor doth hold any such opinions, otherwise than becometh that every christian man should do, ready to conform himself in all points to their doctrine; and therefore, to clear himself the better against those interrogatories objected against him, he stood in denial of the same. The like also did every of the other four martyrs after him.

All which notwithstanding, the uncharitable archbishop, seeking all advantages against him that he might, and more than right law would give, brought in against him such witnesses as before were abjured, who, he knew, for fear of relapse, durst do none other but disclose whatsoever they knew; to wit, Christopher Grebil, William Rich, Agnes Ive, John Grebil, Robert Hills, and Stephen Castelin: whose depositions being taken, and the said Carder being asked what he could say for himself, he had nothing, he said, to produce against their attestations, but submitted him unto their mercy: saying, moreover, that if he had ever any misbelief of the sacraments of the church, contrary to the common holding of the catholics, he now was sorry and repented him thereof. This being done, the archbishop, this his submission notwithstanding, and notwithstanding that the register maketh no mention of any relapse, contrary to good law, at least contrary to all christian charity, proceeded to the reading of his blind sentence; and so condemned him, who neither stood stubbornly to that which he did hold, neither yet did hold any thing contrary to the mind of holy Scripture, to the execution of burning.

Then after him was called forth Agnes Grebil, and examined of the said twelve articles above recited, which she, in like manner, denied, as the other had done before, putting her adversaries to their proof. Then the archbishop, calling for John Grebil her husband, and Christopher and John Grebil her two sons. (who before had been abjured), caused them, upon their oath, to depose against their own natural mother; and so they did.

First John Grebil the elder, her husband, examined, by virtue of his oath, to say how Agnes, his wife, hath and doth believe of the sacrament of the altar, of going in pilgrimage, offerings and worshipping of saints, images, &c., and how long she hath thus holden, deposed thus:

‘That first, about the end of king Edward the Fourth’s days, in his house, by the teaching of John Ive, she [Agnes, his wife] was brought to that belief; and so forth from thence daily, until the time of detection, she hath continued.’

‘And besides that,’ said he, ‘when my children Christopher and John, being about seven years of age, were then taught of me in my house the said error of the sacrament of the altar, and by the said Agnes my wife divers times, she was always of one mind in the said misbelief against the sacrament of the altar, that it was not Christ’s body, flesh and blood, but only bread.’ Furthermore, being examined how he knew that she was steadfast in the said error, he said, ‘that she always without contradiction affirmed this teaching, and said, the said opinion was good, and was well contented that her children aforesaid were of the same opinions against the sacrament of the altar,’ etc.<sup>1</sup>

The bishop with his catholic doctors, not yet contented with this, to set the husband against the wife, proceeding further in their catholic zeal, caused her two children, Christopher and John, to be produced, one of the age of two-and-twenty, the other of nineteen, against their own natural mother; who likewise, being pressed with their oath, witnessed and said:

Christopher and John Grebil witness against their mother.

‘That the aforesaid Agnes, their mother, held, believed, taught, and defended, that the sacrament of the altar was but bread, and not the very body of Christ’s flesh and blood: that baptism was no better in the font, than out of the font: that confirmation was of no effect: that the solemnization of matrimony was no sacrament: that confession to God alone was sufficient: also that going in pilgrimage and worshipping of saints and images was of none effect, etc.

‘Item, That their father and the said Agnes their mother, held, taught, and communed of the said errors within their house divers times, by the space of those three years past, as well on holy-days, as working days, affirming and teaching that the said opinions were good and lawful, and to be holden and maintained; and agreement was made amongst them, that none of them should discover or bewray either of these beliefs in any wise.

‘Finally, That they never heard their said father and mother holding or teaching any other opinions, than be the said errors against the sacrament of the altar, and pilgrimages, offerings, worshipping of saints and images, as far as they could remember,’ etc.<sup>1</sup>

Example of an unnatural husband and of unnatural children. Great impiety of the husband toward the wife. Greater impiety in the children against the mother. Greatest impiety of all in the clergymen, the authors hereof.

Here hast thou, christian reader, before thine eyes a horrible spectacle of a singular, yea of a double impiety; first of an unnatural husband, witnessing against his own wife; and of as unnatural children, accusing and witnessing against their own natural mother: which although they had so done, the cause being of itself just and true (as it was not), yet had they done more than nature would have led them to do. Now the case being such as which, by God’s word, standeth firm, sound, and perfect, what impiety were it for men to accuse a poor innocent in case of heresy, which is no heresy? Now, besides all this, the husband to come in against his own wife, and the children to bring the knife wherewith to cut the throat of their own natural mother that bare them, that nourished them, that brought them up, what is this, but impiety upon impiety, prodigious and horrible for all christian ears to hear? And yet the greatest impiety of all resteth in these pretended catholics and clergymen, who were the authors and causers of all this mischief.

The cause why this good woman so stood, as she did, in the denial of these aforesaid articles objected, was this; for that she never thought that her husband and her own children, who only were privy to her religion, would testify against her. Whom notwithstanding after she perceived to come in, and to depose thus against her, denying still (as she did, before) that she did ever hold such manner of errors, and being now destitute of all friends and comfort, burst out in these words openly (as the register reporteth),<sup>2</sup> “that she repented the time that ever she bare those children of her body.”

And thus the archbishop with his doctors having now the thing that they sought for, albeit she was ready to deny all errors, and to conform herself to their religion, yet notwithstanding, they, refusing her readiness and conformity, proceeded to their sentence, and so condemned her to death.

Agnes Grebil condemned by the sentence of the archbishop

(1) Ex verbis Registri.

(2) Ex Regist. W. Warham, fol. 177.

After whose condemnation, next was brought to examination Robert Harrison, whom, in like manner, because he stood in his denial, contrary witnesses against him were produced, to wit, Christopher Grebil, William Rich, William Olbert, Agnes Ive, who, a little before, had been abjured, and therefore were so much the more apt and applicable to serve the bishop's humour, for danger of relapse. After the deposition and conviction of which witnesses, although he submitted himself to repentance and conformity, yet, notwithstanding, it would not be received, but sentence was read, and he condemned with the other two aforesaid to the fire.

And thus these three were condemned and burned, and certificate given up of them together to the king, from Warham the archbishop, upon the same, A.D. 1511, May 2.<sup>1</sup>

Over and besides these three godly martyrs above recited, I find in the aforesaid registers of William Warham, two other like godly martyrs also in the same year, and for the same twelve articles above specified, to be condemned upon the depositions of certain witnesses brought in against them, to wit, Thomas Harwood, Philip Harwood, Stephen Castelin, William Baker, Robert Reynold, John Bampton, Robert Bright, William Rich, etc.; whereupon they were adjudged likewise for heretics to be burned, the year aforesaid, 1511. The names of these two martyrs were John Brown and Edward Walker.<sup>2</sup>

Now, as you have heard the names of these blessed martyrs, with their articles recited, let us also hear the tenor of the bishop's sentence, by which they were condemned one after another. Their sentence containeth one uniform manner of words, in form as hereunder may be seen.<sup>3</sup>

Moreover, besides these five blessed saints of God, whom they so cruelly by their sentence did condemn to death, we find also, in the same registers of William Warham, a great number of others whom they, for the same doctrine and like articles, caused to be apprehended

A. D. 1511.—John Grebil the elder; also Christopher Grebil and John Grebil, sons of John Grebil the elder; all of Benenden. William Rich of Benenden. W. Olbert the elder, of Godmersham. Agnes Ive, and Agnes Chyten-den, both of Canterbury. Thomas Manning of Benenden. Joan Colin; Robert Hills; and Alice Hills his wife; all of Tenterden. Thomas Harwood, Joan Harwood his wife, and Philip Harwood, all of Rolvenden. Stephen Castelin of Tenterden. W. Baker of Cranbrook; Margaret Baker his wife. William Olbert the younger, and Robert Reynold; both of Godmersham. Agnes Reynold of Cranbrook. Thomas Field of Bexley. Joan Olbert, wife to W. Olbert the elder, of Godmersham. Elizabeth White of Canterbury. Thomas Church of Great Chart. Vincent Lyneh of Halden. John Rich of Wittersham. Joan Lynch of Tenterden. Thomas Browne of Cranbrook. John Frank of Tenterden. Joyce Bampton, wife of John Bampton, of Berstead. Richard Bampton of Bexley. Robert Bright of Maidstone. William Lorkin of East Farleigh.

A. D. 1512.—John Bannes of Bexley. John Buckherst of Staplehurst. Joan Dod, wife of John Dod. John Benet of Staplehurst; Rebecca Benet his wife. Joan Lowes, wife of Thomas Lowes of Cranbrook. Julian Hills, wife of Robert Hills of Tenterden. Robert Franke of Tenterden.

The articles laid to these abjurers appear in the registers to be the same which before were objected to the other five martyrs aforesaid. The charges were for believing and defending,

Articles.

First, That the sacrament of the altar was not the very body of Christ, but material bread.

II. That confession of sins ought not to be made to a priest.

III. That there is no more power given of God to a priest, than to a layman.

IV. That the solemnization of matrimony is not necessary for the weal of man's soul.

V. That the sacrament of extreme unction, called anointing, is not profitable nor necessary for man's soul.

VI. That pilgrimages to holy and devout places, be not necessary nor meritorious for man's soul.

VII. That images of saints, or of the crucifix, or of our Lady, are not to be worshipped.

VIII. That a man should pray to no saint, but only to God.

IX. That holy water, and holy bread, are not better after the benediction made by the priest.<sup>1</sup>

By these articles and abjurations of the before-named persons, thou hast to understand, christian reader, what doctrine of religion was here stirring in this our realm of England, before the time that the name of Martin Luther was ever heard of here amongst us.

THREE DIVERS SORTS OF JUDGMENTS AMONGST THE PAPISTS, AGAINST HERETICS AS THEY CALL THEM.

As touching the penance and penalty enjoined to these aforesaid, as also to all other such like, first here is to be noted, that the catholic fathers, in their processes of heretical pravity, have three divers and distinct kinds of judgments and proceedings. For some they judge to be burned, to the intent that others being brought into terror by them, they might therefore more quietly hold up their kingdom, and reign as they list. And thus condemned they these five aforesaid; and notwithstanding they were willing to submit themselves to the bosom of the mother church, yet could they not be received; as by the words of the register, and by the tenor of their sentence above specified, may well appear.

And this sort of persons, thus by them condemned, consisteth either of such as have been before abjured, and have fallen again into relapse; or else such as stand constantly in their doctrine, and refuse to abjure; or else such as they intend to make a terror and example to all others, notwithstanding that they be willing and ready to submit themselves, and yet cannot be received: and of this last sort were these five martyrs last named. So was also John Lambert, who, submitting himself to the king, could not be accepted. So was likewise Richard Mekins the silly lad, and the three women of Guernsey, whose submission would not serve to save their lives; with many others in like case. Against this sort of persons, the process which the papists use is this. First, after they begin once to be suspected by some promoter, they are denounced and cited; then, by virtue of inquisition they are taken and clapped fast in irons in prison; from thence they are brought forth at last to examination, if they be not before killed by famine, cold, or straitness of the prison. Then be articles drawn, or rather wrested out of their writings or preachings, and they put to their oath, to answer truly to every point and circumstance articulated against them: which articles if they seem to deny, or to salve by true expounding, then are witnesses called in and admitted, what witnesses soever they are, be they never so much infamous; usurers, ribalds, women, yea, and common harlots. Or, if no other witnesses can be found, then is the husband brought in, and forced to swear against the wife, or the wife against the husband, or the children against the natural mother, as in this example of Agnes Grebil. Or, if no such witness at all can be found, then are they strained upon the rack, or by other bitter torments forced to confess their knowledge, and to impeach others. Neither must any be suffered to come to them, what need soever they have; neither must any public or quiet audience be given them to speak for themselves, till at last sentence be read against them, to give them up to the secular arm, or to degrade them, if they be priests, and so to burn them.<sup>1</sup>

And yet the malignity of these adversaries doth not here cease; for after the fire hath consumed their bodies, then they fall upon their books, and condemn them, in like manner, to be burned; and no man must be so hardy as to read them, or keep them, under pain of heresy. But before they have abolished these books, first they gather articles out of them, such as they list themselves, and so perversely wrest and wring them after their own purpose, falsely, and contrary to the right meaning of the author; as may seem, after their putting down, to be most heretical and execrable. This being done, and the books then abolished, that no man may confer them with their articles, to espy their falsehood; then they divulge and set abroad those articles, in such sort as princes and people may see what heretics they were. And this is the rigour of their process and proceeding against these persons whom thus they purpose to condemn and burn.

The punishment of those whom the papists condemn to perpetual prison after their submission.

To the second order belong that sort of heretics whom these papists do not condemn to death, but assign them unto monasteries, there to continue, and to fast all their life, "in pane doloris, et aqua angustiae;" that is, with bread of sorrow, and water of affliction: and that they should not remove one mile out of the precinct of the said monastery so long as they live, without they were otherwise, by the archbishop himself or his successors, dispensed withal. Albeit many times the said persons were so dispensed withal, that their penance of bread and water was turned for them to [go] woolward<sup>1</sup> Wednesdays and Fridays every week, or some other like punishment, &c.

The punishment of those which be enjoined penance after their recantation.

The third kind of heretics were those whom these prelates did not judge to perpetual prison, but only enjoined them penance, either to stand before the preacher, or else to bear a faggot about the market, or in procession, or else to wear the picture of a faggot brodered on their left sleeves, without any cloak or gown upon the same; or else to kneel at the saying of certain masses; or to say so many pater-nosters, aves, and creeds, to such or such a saint; or to go in pilgrimage to such or such a place; or else to bear a faggot to the burning of some heretic; or else to fast certain Fridays bread and water; or, if it were a woman, to wear no smock on Fridays, but to go woolward,<sup>1</sup> etc., as appeareth in the register.<sup>2</sup>

And thus much by the way out of the register of William Warham aforesaid; like as also out of other bishops' registers many more such like matters and examples might be collected, if either leisure would serve me to search, or if the largeness of these volumes would suffer all to be inserted that might be found. Howbeit, amongst many other things omitted, the story and martyrdom of Launcelot and his fellows is not to be forgotten; the story of whom (with their names) is this:

The Martyrdom of Launcelot one of the King's Guard, John a Painter, and Giles Germane.

About the year of our Lord 1539, one John a painter, and Giles Germane were accused of heresy; and while they were in examination at London before the bishop and other judges, by chance there came in one of the king's servants named Launcelot, a very tall man, and of no less godly mind and disposition, than strong and tall of body.

This man, standing by, seemed by his countenance and gesture to favour both the cause, and the poor men his friends; whereupon he, being apprehended, was examined and condemned together with them. And the next day, at five o'clock in the morning, was carried with them into St. Giles in the fields, and there burned; there being but a small concourse or company of people at their death.

*Henry VIII.The Story of one Stile, a Martyr, burned in Smithfield, with the Apocalypse.A. D.

In the company and fellowship of these blessed saints and martyrs of Christ, who innocently suffered within the time of king Henry's reign for the testimony of God's word and truth, another good man also cometh to my mind, not to be excluded out of this number, who was with like cruelty oppressed, and was burned in Smithfield about the latter end of the time of Cuthbert Tonstall, bishop of London. His name was called Stile, as is credibly reported unto us by a worthy and ancient knight, named sir Robert Outred, who was the same time present himself at his burning, and witness of the same. With him there was burned also a book of the Apocalypse, which belike he was wont to read upon. This book when he saw fastened unto the stake, to be burned with him, lifting up his voice, "O blessed Apocalypse," said he, "how happy am I, that shall be burned with thee!" And so this good man, and the blessed Apocalypse, were both together in the fire consumed.<sup>1</sup>

And thus, through the gracious supportation of Christ our Lord, A.D. 1547. we have run over these seven-and-thirty laborious years of king Henry's reign; under whose time and governance, such acts and records, troubles, persecutions, recantations, practices, alterations, and reformations as then happened in the church, we have here discoursed, with such statutes, injunctions, and proclamations, as by him were set forth in causes and matters to the said church appertaining: albeit not comprehending all things so fully as might be, yet pretermittting so few things as we could, of such matters as came to our hands; save only that certain instruments, with a few other occurments somewhat pertaining to the course of this king's history, have past our hands, as the false lying bull of pope Leo X., against Martin Luther, with the form also of the said Martin Luther's appeal from the pope unto a general council. All which, with other matters more besides omitted, we have deferred by themselves hereafter to be exhibited and declared in the sequel of this present story, as in his due place shall appear.

In the mean season, amongst other omissions here overpast, forasmuch as a certain instrument of the pope's sentence definitive against king Henry's first divorce with lady Katharine dowager, hath of late come to our hands, containing matter neither impertinent nor unmeet to be committed to history, I thought here presently to place the same, to the intent that the reader, seeing the arrogant and impudent presumption of the pope in the said sentence, going about by force and authority so to constrain and compel kings and princes against their wills, and against right and Scripture, to apply to his imperious purpose, may the better understand thereby, what was the true cause and ground why the king first began to take stomach against the pope, and to send him clean packing out of this realm. But before I shall produce this aforesaid sentence definitive of the poppe, to make the matter more plain to the reader, it shall not be amiss, first, to decipher and rip up the original of such occasions as shall induce the reader to the better understanding of this falling out between the king and the pope.

For so I find by the letters of Dr. Stephen Gardiner,<sup>1</sup> written to cardinal Wolsey from Rome (at what time he and Foxe were sent ambassadors by the king to pope Clement VII., about the expedition of the king's divorce, A. D. 1528), that the said pope Clement, with the counsel of the cardinal Sanctorum Quatuor and other cardinals, at first was well willing, and very inclinable, to the accomplishment and satisfaction of the king's desire in that behalf, and that for divers respects.

The causes moving the pope at the first to favour the cause of the king's divorce.

As first, for the great benefits received, and the singular devotion of the king toward the see apostolic, in taking war for the church's cause; in surceasing war at the pope's desire; and, especially, in procuring the pope's deliverance, whereby the pope then thought himself with his whole see much obliged to the king, in all respects, to pass by his authority whatsoever reasonably might be granted in gratifying the king's so ample merits and deserts.

Secondly, for the evident reasons and substantial arguments in the king's book contained,<sup>2</sup> which seemed well to satisfy the pope's liking, and to remove away all scruples.

Thirdly, for the good opinion and confidence that the pope had in the excellent wisdom, profound learning, and mature judgment of the king, which the pope (as he said in formal words) would sooner lean unto, than unto any other learned man's mind or sentence, so that the king's reasons, he said, must needs be of great efficacy and strength of themselves to order and direct this matter.

The fourth cause moving the pope to favour the king's request, was, for the quiet and tranquillity of his conscience, which, otherwise, in that unlawful marriage with his brother's wife, could not be settled.

The fifth cause was, for the consideration of the perils and dangers, which otherwise might happen to the realm, by the pretended titles of the king of Scots, and others, without any heir male to establish the king's succession: for the avoiding of which perils, and also for the other causes above rehearsed, the pope showed himself at that time propense and forward to promote and set forward the king's desired purpose in that behalf.

Double dealing of the pope with king Henry. The pope false, double, and contrary to himself.

And thus much touching this by-matter I thought here to suggest and repeat to the reader, albeit the same is also sufficiently expressed before: to the end that the studious reader, pondering these first proceedings of the pope, and comparing them with this sentence definitive which under followeth, may the better understand what inconstant levity, what false dealing, what crafty packing, and what contrariety in itself, are in this pope's holy see of Rome, as by this case of the pope may well appear; who, in short time after all this, was so clean altered from what he was, that whereas before, he pretended to esteem so gratefully the king's travail, and benefits exhibited to the see apostolic, in his defence against the emperor and the Spaniards, now he joineth utterly with the Cæsarians against the king. And whereas before, he so greatly magnified the king's profound learning and mature judgment, esteeming his mind and sentence above all other learned men, to be as a judge sufficient in the direction of this case; now, turning head to the tail, he utterly refuseth to bring the matter "in judicium orbis," but will needs detain it at home.

Ecclesiastical Affairs.

Again, whereas before he pretended a tender provision for the state of this realm, now he setteth all other realms against it; and finally, whereas he before seemed to respect the quiet and tranquillity of the king's conscience, now he goeth about to command and compel the king, against his will and conscience, to do clean contrary to that which he himself before in his judgment had allowed, thinking to have the king at his beck, and to do and undo what he listed and commanded; as by the tenor and true copy of this his sentence definitive ye may understand; which, as it came newly to our hands, I thought here to exhibit unto the world, that all men might see what just cause the king had (being so presumptuously provoked by the pope) to shake off his proud authority, and utterly to exile him out of his realm. Mark, I pray thee, the manner of the pope's proud sentence, how presumptuously it proceedeth.

How presumptuously the pope commandeth kings and princes.

The Effect in English of Pope Clement's Sentence definitive, against the Divorce of Queen Katherine.

The effect of this sentence is as much as to mean in English, 'that pope Clement VII., with the consent of his other brethren, the cardinals assembled together in this consistory, sitting there in the throne of justice,<sup>2</sup> calling upon the name of Christ,<sup>3</sup> and having God only before his eyes,<sup>4</sup> doth pronounce, define, and declare—in the cause and causes between his dear daughter Katherine queen of England, appealing to the see apostolic, and his beloved son Henry the Eighth, king of England,<sup>5</sup> concerning the validity and invalidity of the matrimony heretofore contracted between them, and yet depending in the consistory court of the said pope Clement—that the said matrimony always hath stood, and still doth stand, firm and canonical;<sup>6</sup> and that the issue proceeding, or which shall proceed, of the same, standeth, and shall stand, lawful and legitimate; and that the aforesaid Henry king of England is and shall be bound and obstruct to the matrimonial society and cohabitation with the said lady Katherine his lawful wife and queen, to hold and maintain her with such love and princely honour, as becometh a loving husband, and his kingly honour, to do.'

Also, 'that the said Henry king of England, if he shall refuse so to perform and accomplish all and singular the premises, in all effectual manner, is to be condemned and compelled thereunto by all remedies of the law,<sup>7</sup> and enforced, according as we do condemn, compel, and enforce him so to do; providing, all molestations and refusals whatsoever, made by the said king Henry against the said queen Katherine, upon the invalidity of the said marriage, to have been and be judged unlawful and unjust; and the said king, from henceforth for ever, to hold his peace, and not to be heard in any court hereafter to speak,<sup>8</sup> touching the invalidity of the said matrimony: like as we also do here will and charge him to hold his peace, and do put him to perpetual silence herein; willing, moreover, and adjudging the said king Henry to be condemned, and presently here do condemn him, in the expenses, on the said queen Katherine's behalf, here in our court expended and employed in traversing the aforesaid cause, the valuation of which expenses we reserve to ourselves to be limited and taxed, as we shall judge meet hereafter.

We do so pronounce, †.

At Rome, in our apostolical Palace, publicly in our Consistory, the 23d of March, 1534. Blosius.<sup>1</sup>

(1) Ex Archetypo Rom. Pontificis ad Catherinam misso.

(2) The pope sitteth in the throne of justice, with the like humility and same fashion, as Lucifer did sit in the seat of the Highest, and Antichrist sitteth in the temple of God.

(3) And said never a word.

(4) Id est, having no bribe of money in his hands, nor any fear of the emperor in his heart.

(5) Is not this a glorious father, that will have no beggars to his sons and daughters, but emperors, kings, and queens?

(6) And why then did you send Campeius to England to dissolve the same matrimony before, as appeareth above?

(7) By his own canon law, he meaneth, and not by the law of God.

(8) Here thou mayest see, good reader, how the pope may and doth err like a false prophet. For where he thought to put the king to silence, the same silence lighted upon himself, whereby the pope is driven himself to stand mute in England; and God grant he may so stand for ever. Amen.

Now, as you have heard the presumptuous and arrogant sentence of pope Clement, wherein he taketh upon him, contrary to the ordinance of God in his Levitical law (as is before showed), and contrary to the best learned judgments of Christendom, to command and compel the king, against his conscience, to retain in matrimony his brother's wife; here followeth in like order to be inferred, according to my promise, another like wicked, blasphemous, and slanderous bull of pope Leo against Martin Luther, with the just appellation also of the said Martin Luther from the pope to a general council: wherein may appear to all men, the lying spirit of the pope, both in teaching most heretical doctrine, derogating from the blood of Christ, and also falsely depraving and perverting the sound doctrine of Luther, falsely and untruly charging him with heresy, when he is the greater heretic himself. For what heretic would ever say that the church of Rome was consecrated and sanctified by the blood of Peter, but only the pope? or who would call this heresy, to refer all our salvation and sanctification only and totally to the blood of the Son of God, unless he were a heretic of all heretics himself?

Pope Leo's bull against Luther, and the appellation of Luther from the pope, by way of appendix.

See Appendix.

After the like dealing we read<sup>1</sup> of wicked king Ahab, who, being only the disturber of Israel himself, crieth out upon Elias for troubling Israel. So here, in semblable wise, pope Leo, with what heaps of tragical words and exclamations doth he fume and rage against the true servant of God, poor Luther, for disturbing the church of God, when it is the pope only and his father's house that troubleth, and long hath troubled, the true church of the Lord; as by his doings all the world may see enough and too much. In the mean time read, I beseech thee, with judgment, this impudent and false slanderous bull of the pope,<sup>2</sup> with the appeal also of Luther again from the said pope; a copy whereof, because it be rare to be gotten, and hath not been hitherto commonly seen, being before omitted, I thought to commit here to history, as I had it out of certain registers; the manner and tenor whereof is this as followeth.<sup>3</sup>

The pope playeth with Luther, as Ahab played with Elias.

Inclina aurem tuam ad preces nostras, quoniam surrexerunt vulpes quærentes demoliri vineam, cujus tu torcular calcasti solus, et ascensus ad Patrem ejus curam regiminis et administrationem Petro, tanquam capiti et tuo vicario, ejusque successoribus instar triumphantis ecclesie commisit. Exterminare eam nititur aper de sylva, et singularis ferus depascitur eam. Exurge Petre, et pro pastoralis cura præfata, tibi (ut præfertur) divinitus demandata, intende in causam sanctæ Romanæ ecclesie matris omnium ecclesiarum ac fidei magistræ, quam tu (jubente Deo) tuo sanguine consecrasti; contra quam (sicut tu præmonere dignatus es) insurgunt magistri mendaces introducentes sectas perditionis, sibi celerem interitum superducentes, quorum lingua ignis est, inquietum malum, plena veneno mortifero, qui, zelum anarum habentes et contentiones in cordibus suis, gloriantur et mendaces sunt adversus veritatem.

Exurge tu quoque quæsumus Paule, qui eam tua doctrina ac pari martyrio illuminasti atque illustrasti. Jam enim surgit novus Porphyrius, qui sicut ille olim sanctos apostolos injuste momordit, ita hic sanctos pontifices, prædecessores nostros, (contra tuam doctriam eos non obsecrando sed increpando) mordere, lacerare, ac, ubi causæ suæ diffidit, ad convitia accedere non veretur; more hereticorum, quorum (ut inquit Hieronymus) ultimum præsidium est, ut cum conspiciant causas suas damnatum iri incipiunt virus serpentis linguâ diffundere, et eum se victos conspiciant ad contumelias proslillire. Nam licet hæreses esse ad exercitationem fidelium tu dixeris oportere, eas tamen, ne incrementum accipiant neve vulpeculæ coalescant, in ipso ortu (te intercedente et adjuvante) extingui necesse est.

(b) Obsecravit Lutherus in initio pontificem, et audiri non potuit. Nunc increpat Lutherus pontificem et ferri non potest. Et quid hic Lutherus fecit nisi juxta doctriam apostolicam quæ ait, Argue, insta, increpa, &c. [2 Tim. iv.]

Exurgat denique omnis sanctorum ac reliqua universalis ecclesia, cujus vera sacramentorum literarum interpretatione post-habita quidam, quorum mentem pater mendacii excæcavit, ex veteri hæreticorum instituto apud semetipsos sapientes, Scripturas easdem aliter quam Spiritus Sanctus flagrat, proprio duntaxat sensu, ambitionis auroque popularis causâ, teste Apostolo, interpretantur—imo vero torquent et adulterant: ita ut, juxta Hieronymum, jam non sit Evangelium Christi sed hominis, aut (quod pejus est) diaboli. (In Epist. ad Galatas cap. 1.)

Exurgat, inquam, præfata ecclesia sancta Dei, et una cum beatissimis apostolis præfatis apud Deum omnipotentem intercedat, ut purgatis omnium schismaticorum erroribus, eliminatisque a fidelium finibus hæresibus universis, ecclesiæ suæ sanctæ pacem et unitatem conservare dignetur.

Dudum siquidem (quod præ animi angustia et mærore exprimere vix possumus) fide dignorum relatu, ac fama publica referente, ad nostrum pervenit auditum, imo vero (proh dolor) oculis nostris vidimus ac legimus, multos et varios errores (quosdam videlicet jam per concilia ac prædecessorum nostrorum constitutiones damnatos, hæresim etiam Græcorum et Bohemicam expresse continentes, alios vero respectu vel hæreticos, vel falsos, vel scandalosos, vel piarum aurium offensivos, vel simplicium mentium seductivos) a falsis fidei cultoribus—qui per superbam curiositatem mundi gloriam cupientes contra Apostoli doctrinam plus sapere volunt quam oporteat, quorum garritus (ut inquit Hieronymus) sine Scripturarum auctoritate non haberet fidem, nisi viderentur perversam doctrinam etiam divinis testimoniis, male tamen interpretatis, roborare (à quorum oculis Dei timor recessit)—humani generis hoste suggerente noviter suscitatos, et nuper apud quosdam leviores in inelyta natione Germanica seminatos. Quod eo magis doleamus ibi evenisse, quod eandem nationem et nos et prædecessores nostri in visceribus semper gesserimus charitatis. Nam post translatum ex Græciæ a Romana ecclesia in eosdem Germanos imperium, iidem prædecessores nostri et nos ejusdem ecclesiæ advocatos defensoresque ex eis semper accepimus. Quos quidem Germanos, catholicæ veritatis vere Germanos, constat hæresim acerrimos oppugnatos semper fuisse. Cujus rei testes sunt laudabiles illæ constitutiones Germanorum imperatorum pro libertate ecclesiæ proque expellendis exterminandisque ex omni Germania hæreticis, sub gravissimis pœnis, etiam amissionis terrarum et dominiorum, contra receptatores vel non expellentes olim editæ et a nostris prædecessoribus confirmatæ: quæ si hodie sarentur, et nos et ipsi utique hæc molestia careremus.

Testis est in concilio Constantensi Hussitarum ac Wicklevistarum nec non Hieronymi Prænsis damnata ac punita perfidia. Testis est totiens contra Bohemos Germanorum sanguis effusus. Testis denique est prædictorum errorum, seu multorum ex eis, per Coloniensem et Lovaniensem universitates, utpote agri Dominicæ piissimas religiosissimasque cultrices, non minus docta quam vera ac sancta confutatio reprobatio et damnatio. Multa quoque alia allegare possemus, quæ ne historiam texere videamur, præmittenda censuimus.

Pro pastoralis igitur officii, divinæ gratiæ nobis injuncti, curâ quam gerimus, prædictorum errorum vestiferum ulterius tolerare seu dissimulare, sine Christianæ religioni: nota atque orthodoxæ fidei injuria, nullo modo possumus. Eorum autem errorum aliquos præsentibus duximus inferendos, quorum tenor sequitur et est talis.

Hæretica sententia est sed usitata, sacramenta novæ legis justificantem gratiam illis dare, qui non ponunt obicem.

In puero post baptismum negare remanens peccatum, est Paulum et Christum simul conculare.

Fomes peccati, etiamsi nullum adsit actuale peccatum, moratur exeuntem a corpore animam ab ingressu eoli.

Imperfecta charitas morituri fert secum necessariò magnum timorem, qui ex se solo satis est facere pœnam Purgatorii et impedit introitum regni.

Tres esse partes penitentia, contritionem confessionem et satisfactionem, non est fundatum in sacra Scriptura, nec in antiquis sanctis Christianis doctoribus.

Contritio quæ paratur per discussionem collectionem et detestationem peccatorum, quâ quis recogitat annos suos in amaritudine animæ suæ, ponderando peccatorum gravitatem, multitudinem, facilitatem, amissionem æternæ beatitudinis, ac æternæ damnationis acquisitionem—hæc contritio facit hypocritam imò magis peccatorem.

Verissimum est proverbium et omnium doctrina de contritionibus hæc usque data præstantius, De cætero non facere. Summa penitentia, optima penitentia—nova vita.

Nullo modo præsumas confiteri peccata venialia, sed nec omnia mortalia quia impossibile est ut omnia mortalia cognoscas: unde in primitiva ecclesia solum manifesta mortalia confitebantur.

Dum volumus omnia purè confiteri, nihil aliud facimus quam quòd misericordie Dei nihil volumus relinquere ignoscendum.

Peccata non sunt ulli remissa nisi, remittente sacerdote, credat sibi remitti: imò peccatum maneret nisi remissum crederet. Non enim sufficit remissio peccati et gratiæ donatio, sed oportet etiam credere esse remissum.

Nullo modo confidas absolvi propter tuam contritionem, sed propter verbum Christi: Quodcumque solveris, &c. Huic inquam confide, si sacerdotis obtinueris absolutionem, et crede fortiter te absolutum, et absolutus verè eris, quicquid sit de contritione.

Si (per impossibile) confessus non esset contritus, aut confessor non serio sed joco absolveret, si tamen credat se absolutum, verissime est absolutus.

In sacramento penitentia: ac remissione culpe non plus facit Papa Episcopus, quam infimus sacerdos: imò ubi non est sacerdos, æque tantum facit quilibet Christianus, etiam si mulier aut puer esset.

Nullus debet sacerdoti respondere se esse contritum, nec sacerdos requirere.

Magnus est error eorum qui ad sacramentum eucharistiæ accedunt huic innisi, quòd sint confessi, quòd non sunt sibi conscii alieujus peccati mortalis, quòd præmiserint orationes suas et præparatoria: omnes illi ad Judicium sibi manducant et bibunt: sed si credant et confidant se gratiam ibi consecuturos, hæc sola fides facit eos puros et dignos.

Consultum videtur, quòd ecclesia in communi concilio statueret laicos sub utraque specie communicandos; nec Bohemi communicandos sub utraque specie sunt hæretici seu schismatici.

Thesauri ecclesie unde papa dat indulgentias, non sunt merita Christi et sanctorum. Indulgentiæ sunt pie fraudes fidelium, et remissiones bonorum operum, et sunt de numero eorum quæ licent, et non de numero eorum quæ expediunt.

Indulgentiæ his, qui veraciter eas consequuntur, non valent ad remissionem pænæ pro peccatis actualibus debitæ apud divinam justitiam.

Se dulcentur credentes indulgentias esse salutare et ad fructum Spiritus utiles.

Indulgentiæ necessariæ sunt solum publicis criminibus, et propriè conceduntur duris solummodo et impatientibus.

Sex generibus hominum indulgentiæ nec sunt necessariæ nec utiles, videlicet mortuis seu morituris, infirmis, legitime impeditis, his qui non commiserunt crimina, his qui crimina commiserunt sed non publica, his qui meliora operantur.

Excommunicationes sunt tantum externæ pænæ, nec privant hominem communibus spiritualibus ecclesie orationibus.

Docendi sunt Christiani plus diligere excommunicationem quam timere.

Romanus Pontifex, Petri successor, non est Christi Vicarius super omnes totius mundi ecclesias ab ipso Christo in beato Petro institutus.

Verbum Christi ad Petrum: Quocumque solveris, &c. extenditur dumtaxat ad ligata ab ipso Petro.

Certum est, in manu ecclesie aut papæ prorsus non esse, statuere articulos fidei, imo nec leges morum seu bonorum operum.

Si papa cum magna parte ecclesie sic vel sic sentiret, nec etiam erraret, adhuc non est peccatum aut hæresis contrarium sentire, præsertim in re non necessaria ad salutem, donec fuerit per concilium universale—alterum reprobatum, alterum approbatum.

Via nobis facta est enervandi auctoritatem conciliorum, et libere contradicendi eorum gestis, et iudicandi eorum decreta, et confidenter confitendi quicquid verum videtur, sive probatum fuerit sive reprobatum à quocumque concilio.

Aliqui articuli Johannis Hussi, condemnati in concilio Constantiensi, sunt christianissimi verissimi et evangelici, quos nec universalis ecclesia posset damnare.

Purgatorium non potest probari ex Sacra Scriptura quæ sit in canone.

Animæ in purgatorio non sunt securæ de earum salute, saltem omnes; nec probatum est ullis aut rationibus aut scripturis ipsas esse extra statum merendi aut auzenda charitatis.

Animæ in purgatorio peccant sine intermissione, quamdiu quaerunt requiem, et horrent pœnas.

Animæ ex purgatorio liberatæ suffragiis viventium minus beantur quam si per se satisfecissent.

Prælati ecclesiastici et principes seculares non malefacerent, si omnes saccos mendicitatis delerent.

Qui quidem errores respective quam sint pestiferi, quam perniciosi, quam scandalosi, quam piarum et simplicium mentium seductivi, quam denique sint contra omnem charitatem ac sanctæ Romanæ ecclesie, matris omnium fidelium et magistræ fidei, reverentiam, atque nervum ecclesiasticæ disciplinæ, obedientiam scilicet, quæ fons est et origo omnium virtutum, sine qua facile unusquisque infidelis esse convincitur, nemo sanæ mentis ignorat. Nost igitur in præmissis, utpote gravissimis, propensius (ut deceat) procedere, necnon hujusmodi pesti morboque canceroso, ne in agro dominico tanquam verpris nociva ulterius serpat, viam præcludere cupientes, habita super prædictis erroribus et eorum singulis diligenti trutinazione, discussione, ac districto examine, maturaque deliberatione, omnibusque rite pensatis ac sæpius ventilatis, cum venerabilibus fratribus nostris S. R. E. Nam ex eisdem erroribus vel eorum aliquo vel aliquibus palam sequitur, eandem ecclesiam, quæ Spiritu Sancto regitur, errare et semper errasse. Quod est utique contra illud, quod Christus discipulis suis in ascensione sua (ut in sancto evangelio Matthæi legitur) promisit, dicens: Ego vobiscum sum usque ad consummationem sæculi. Necnon contra sanctorum patrum determinationes, conciliorum quoque et summorum Pontificum expressas ordinationes seu canones; quibus non obtemperasse, omnium hæresium et schismatum (teste Cyrillio) fomes et causa semper fuit.

De eorundem itaque venerabilium fratrum nostrorum consilio et assensu, ac omnium et singulorum prædictorum matura deliberatione prædicta, auctoritate omnipotentis Dei et beatorum apostolorum Petri et Pauli et nostra, præfatos omnes et singulos articulos seu errores tanquam (ut præmittitur) respectivè hæreticos, aut scandalosos, aut falsos, aut piarum aurium offensivos, vel simplicium mentium seductivos, et veritati catholice obviantes, et veritati catholice obnoxiosos, ac omnino rejicimus, ac pro damnatis reprobatis et rejectis ab omnibus utriusque sexus Christianis fidelibus haberi debere harum serie decernimus et declaramus: Inhibentes—in virtute sanctæ obedientiæ, ac sub majoris excommunicationis pœna latæ sententiæ, necnon quoad ecclesiasticas et regulares personas episcopaliū omnium, etiam patriarchalium, metropolitānarum et aliarum cathedralium ecclesiarum, monasteriorum quoque, et prioratuum etiam conventualium et quarumcumque dignitatum, aut beneficiorum ecclesiasticorum, secularium, aut quorumvis ordinum regularium, privationis, et inhabilitatis ad illa et alia in posterum obtinenda: Quo vero ad conventus capitula seu domos Insuper quia errores præfati et plures alii continentur in libellis seu scriptis ejusdem Martini Luther, dictos libellos et omnia dicti Martini scripta seu prædicationes, quæ in Latino vel quæcumque idiomate reperiantur, in quibus dicti errores seu eorum aliqui continentur, similiter damnandos, reprobamos, atque omnino rejicimus, et pro omnino damnatis, reprobatis, ac rejectis (ut præfertur) haberi volumus: mandantes—in virtute sanctæ obedientiæ et sub pœnis prædictis eo ipso incurrendis—omnibus et singulis utriusque sexus Christifidelibus superioribus nominatis—ne hujusmodi scripta, libellos, prædicationes, seu schedulas, vel in eis contenta capitula, errores aut articulos supradictos continentia, legere asserere prædicare laudare imprimere publicare sive defendere, per se vel alium seu alios, directe vel indirecte, tacitè vel expresse, publicè vel occulte, aut in domibus suis sive aliis publicis vel privatis locis, tenere quomodolibet præsumant: quinimo illa statim post harum publicationem per ordinarios et alios supradictos diligenter quæsitã publicè et solemniter in præsentia cleri et populi—sub omnibus et singulis supradictis pœnis—comburant.

Quod vero ad ipsum Martinum attinet, bone Deus, quid prætermisimus? quid non fecimus? quid paternæ charitatis omisimus ut eum ab hujusmodi erroribus revocarem? Postquam enim ipsum citavimus, mitius cum eo procedere volentes, illum invitavimus, atque tam per diversos tractatus cum legato nostro habitos, quam per literas nostras hortati fuimus, ut à prædictis erroribus discederet, aut ad nos (oblato etiam salvo conductu et pecunia ad iter necessaria) sine metu seu timore aliquo (quem perfecta charitas foras mittere debuit) veniret, ac Salvatoris nostri apostolice Pauli exemplo, non in occulto, sed palam et in facie, loqueretur.

Quod si fecisset, pro certo (ut arbitramur) ad eor reversus errores suos eognovisset, nec in Romanâ curiâ, quam tantopere (vanis maleolorum rumoribus plusquam oportuit tribuendo) vituperat, tot reperisset errata: docuissimèque cum luce clarius, sanctos Romanos pontifices prædecessores nostros (quos præter omnem modestiam injuriose lacerat) in suis canonibus seu constitutionibus (quas mordere nititur) nunquam errasse; quia, juxta prophetam, nec in Galaad resina, nec medicus deest. Sed obaudivit semper, et prædictâ citatione omnibusque et singulis supradictis spretis, venire contempsit, ac usque in præsentem diem contumax atque animo indurato censuras ultra annum sustinuit, et (quod deterius est) addens mala malis, de citatione hujusmodi notitiam habens in vocem temerariæ appellationis prorupit ad futurum concilium, contra constitutionem Pii 2di et Julii 2di prædecessorum nostrorum, quâ cavetur taliter appellantes hæreticorum pœna plectendos. Frustra etiam concilii auxilium imploravit, qui illi se non credere profiteretur; ita ut contra ipsum tanquam de fide notoriè suspectum, imo vere hæreticum, absque ulteriori citatione vel mora, ad condemnationem et damnationem ejus tanquam hæretici, ac ad omnium et singularum superscriptionum pœnarum et censurarum severitatem, procedere possemus. Nihilominus, de eorundem fratrum nostrorum consilio, omnipotentis Dei imitantes clementiam, qui non vult mortem peccatoris, sed magis ut convertatur et vivat, omnium injuriarum bætenus nobis et sedi apostolicæ illatarum oblitus, omni quæ possumus pietate uti decrevimus; et quantum in nobis est agere ut (proposita mansuetudinis viâ) ad eor revertatur, et a prædictis recedat erroribus, ut ipsum tanquam filium illum prodigum ad gremium ecclesiæ revertentem benigne recipiamus.

Inhibentes nihilominus eidem Martino ex nunc, ut interim ab omni prædicatione seu prædicationis officio omnino desistat. Alioquin—ut ipsum Martinum (si forte iustitiæ et virtutis amor a peccato non retrahat indulgentiæque spes ad penitentiam non reducat) pœnarum terror coercet et disciplinæ—eundem Martinum ejusque adhærentes, complices, fautores et receptatores tenore præsentium requirimus et monemus in virtute sanctæ obedientiæ, et, sub prædictis omnibus et singulis pœnis eo ipso incurrendis, districtè præcipiendum mandamus, quatenus infra 60 dies (quorum 20 pro primo, viginti pro secundo, et reliquos 20 dies pro tertio et peremptorio termino assignamus, ab afflictione præsentium in locis infra scriptis immediatè sequente numerandos) ipse Martinus, complices, fautores, adhærentes, et receptatores prædicti, a præfatis erroribus eorumque prædicatione et publicatione et assertione, defensione quoque, et librorum seu scripturarum editione super iisdem sive eorum aliquo, omnino desistant; librosque et scripturas, omnes et singulos præfatos errores seu eorum aliquos quomodolibet continentes, comburant vel comburi faciant.

Ipsæ etiam Martinus errores et assertiones hujusmodi omnino revocet, ac de revocatione hujusmodi per publica documenta in forma juris valida, manibus duorum prælatorum consignata, ad nos infra alios similes 60 dies transmittenda; vel per ipsummet—si ad nos venire voluerit (quod magis placeret) cum præfato plenissimo salvo conductu, quem ex nunc concedimus—deferenda, nos certiores efficiat; ut de ejus vera obedientia nullus dubitationis scrupulus valeat remanere.

Aliis, si (quod absit) Martinus præfatus, complices, fautores, adhærentes et receptatores prædicti secus egerint, seu præmissa omnia et singula infra terminum prædictum cum effectu non adimpleverint, (apostoli imitantes doctrinam, qui hæreticum hominem post primam et secundam correctionem vitandum docuit) ex nunc prout ex tunc et è converso, eundem Martinum, complices, adhærentes, &c.—tanquam aridos palmites in Christo non manentes, sed doctrinam contrariam, catholicæ fidei inimicam, sive scandalosam, seu damnatam (in non modicum offensam divinæ majestatis ac universalis ecclesiæ et fidei catholicæ detrimentum et scandalum) dogmatizantes et prædicantes, claves quoque ecclesiæ vilipendentes,—notorios et pertinaces hæreticos eadem auctoritate fuisse et esse declarantes, eosdem ut tales harum serie condemnamus, et eos pro talibus haberi ab omnibus utriusque sexus Christianidelibus volumus et mandamus. Eosque omnes et singulos omnibus supradictis et aliis contra tales a jure inflictis pœnis præsentium tenore subijcimus, et eisdem irretitos fuisse et esse decernimus et declaramus.

Inhibemus præterea, sub omnibus et singulis præmissis pœnis eo ipso incurrendis, omnibus et singulis Christianidelibus superius nominatis, ne scripta, etiam præfatos errores non continentia, ab eodem Martino quomodolibet vel condita vel condenda, seu eorum aliqua, (tanquam ab homine orthodoxæ fidei inimico atque ideo vehementer suspecto, et ut ejus memoria omnino deleatur de Christianidelium consorcio) legere, asserere, prædicare, laudare, imprimere, publicare, sive defendere, per se vel alium seu alios, directe vel indirecte, tacite vel expresse, publice vel occulte, quoquo modo presument; quinimo illa comburant ut præfertur.

Monemus insuper omnes et singulos Christianifideles supradictos, sub eadem excommunicationis latæ sententiæ pœnâ, ut hæreticos prædictos declaratos et condemnatos, mandatis nostris non obtemperantes, post lapsum termini supradicti evitent, et (quantum in eis est) evitari faciant, nec cum eisdem, vel eorum aliquo, commercium aut aliquam conversationem, seu communionem habeant, nec eis necessaria ministrent. Ad majorem præterea dieti Martini, suorumque complium, fautorum, ac adhærentium ac receptorum prædictorum (sic post lapsum termini prædicti declaratorum hæreticorum et condemnatorum) confusionem, universis et singulis utriusque sexus Christianidelibus, patriarchis, archiepiscopis, episcopis; patriarchalium, metropolitanarum, &c. prælati, capituli, &c.; necnon singulis principibus quacunque ecclesiastica vel mundana fulgentibus dignitate, reprobis, imperatoris electoribus, ducibus, &c., præsertim in Alemania constitutis, mandamus, quatenus sub prædictis pœnis, ipsi vel eorum quilibet præfatum Martinum, complices, adhærentes, receptantes, et fautores personaliter capiant; et captos ad nostram instantiam retineant et ad nos mittant, reportaturi pro tam bono opere a nobis et sede apostolica remunerationem præminime condignum; vel saltem ut eos et eorum quemlibet de metropolitanis, cathedral. collegiatis, et aliis ecclesiis, domibus, monasteriis, conventibus, civitatibus, &c., omnino expellant. the church of Rome holdeth by the blood of St. Peter, and not by the blood of Christ.

[See Holstenius de Vitâ Porphyri. cap. xi.]

Respectively.

See Appendix.

The Germans in old time most addicted to popery above all other nations.

with thine own blood; against which (as thou wert pleased to forewarn us) teachers of lies have risen up, bringing in sects of perdition, to their own speedy destruction; whose tongue is like fire, full of unquietness, and replenished with deadly poison; who, having a bitter zeal, and nourishing contentions in their hearts, do brag and lie against the truth.

Rise up, Paul! also, we pray thee, who hast illuminated the same church with thy doctrine and like martyrdom. For now is sprung up a new Porphyry, who, as the said Porphyry formerly did unjustly slander the holy apostles, so, semblably, doth this man now slander, revile, rebuke, bite, and bark against the holy bishops our predecessors, not entreating them, but rebuking them. And where he distrusteth his cause, there he falleth to opprobrious checks and rebukes, after the wonted use of heretics, whose uttermost refuge is this (as Jerome saith), that when they see their cause going to wreck, then, like serpents, they cast out the venom with their tongue; and when they see themselves near to be overcome, they fall to railing. For though heresies (as thou sayest) must needs be, for the exercise of the faithful, yet, lest these heresies should further increase, and these foxes gather strength against us, it is needful that, by thy means and help, they be suppressed and extinguished at the beginning.

Finally, let all the whole universal church of God's saints and doctors rise up, whose true expounding of holy Scripture being rejected, certain persons whose hearts the father of lies hath blinded, and wise in their own conceits (as the manner of heretics is), do expound the Scriptures otherwise than the Holy Ghost doth require, following only their own sense, out of ambition and vain glory; yea rather do wrest and adulterate the Scriptures. So that, as Jerome saith, now it is no longer the gospel of Christ, but of man, or, which is worse, of the devil. Let all the holy church, I say, rise up, and with the blessed apostles together make intercession to Almighty God, that his flock being cleansed from error and all heresies banished from the fold of his holy church it may be conserved in peace and unity. For of late (which for sorrow we can hardly express) by credible information and also by public report it hath come to our ears, yea we have seen, also, and read with our eyes, that divers and sundry errors, of which some have been condemned by councils and constitutions of our predecessors, containing expressly the heresies of the Greeks and of the Bohemians; some again respectively, either heretical, or false, or slanderous, or offensive to good ears, or such as may seduce simple minds; have been newly raised up by certain false pretended gospellers; who, with proud curiosity, seeking worldly glory, contrary to the doctrine of the apostles would be more wise than becometh them; whose babbling (as St. Jerome calleth it) without authority of the Scriptures would find no credit, unless they did seem to confirm their false doctrine even with testimonies of the Scripture, but yet falsely interpreted; from whose eyes the fear of God hath departed. And—which worketh us so much the more grief—we hear that those heresies be lately sown among some of the more flighty of the noble nation of the Germans, unto which nation we, with our predecessors, have always borne special favour and affection. For after the empire had been translated by the church of Rome from the Greeks unto the Germans, the said our predecessors and we have always had them as special fautors and defenders of this our church, and they, as true Cousins-German to catholic truth, have always showed themselves most earnest suppressors of heresies; as witness whereof remain yet those laudable constitutions of German emperors, set forth and confirmed by our predecessors, for the liberty of the church, and for expelling heretics out of all Germany; and that under grievous penalty, even of the loss of all their goods and lands; which constitutions, if they were observed at this present day, both we and they should now be free from this disturbance.

Furthermore, the heresy of the Hussites, Wicklevists, and of Jerome of Prague, condemned and punished in the council of Constance, doth witness the same: moreover, doth witness the same so much blood of the Germans, spilt fighting against the Bohemians. To conclude, the same also is confirmed and witnessed by the learned and true confutation, reprobation, and condemnation, set forth by the universities of Cologne and Louvain in Germany, those most pious and religious cultivators of the garden of the Lord, against many of the aforesaid errors. Many other witnesses also we might allege, whom here (lest we should seem to be writing a history) we premit.

Wherefore we, in discharge of the pastoral office committed unto us, can no longer forbear or wink at the pestiferous poison of these aforesaid errors, without bringing a blot upon the Christian religion and causing injury to the orthodox faith; of which errors we thought here good to recite certain, the tenor of which is this as followeth.

Ecclesiastical Affairs.

‘It is an old heresy to say, that the sacraments of the new law do give grace to them, qui non ponunt obicem, i. e. who have in themselves no let to the contrary.’ Articles of Luther.

‘To deny that sin remaineth in a child after his baptism, is to tread down both Paul and Christ under foot.’

‘The origin of sin, although no actual sin do follow after, doth stay the soul, leaving the body, from the entrance into heaven.’

‘Unperfect charity of a man departing must needs bring with it great fear, which of itself is enough to deserve the pain of purgatory, and stoppeth the entrance into the kingdom of heaven.’

‘To say that penance standeth of three parts, to wit, contrition, confession, satisfaction, is not founded in holy Scripture, nor in ancient, holy, and christian doctors.’

‘Contrition, which a man stirreth up in himself, by discussing, remembering and detesting his sins, in revolving his former years in bitterness of soul, and in pondering the weight, number, and filthiness of his sins, the losing of eternal bliss, and getting of eternal damnation: this contrition maketh a man a hypocrite, nay, a great sinner.’

‘It is an old proverb, and to be preferred before the doctrine of all that have written hitherto of contrition, From henceforth to transgress no more. The chiefest and the best penance is a new life.’ Best penance is a new life

‘By no means presume to confess thy venial sins, nor yet all thy mortal sins; for it is impossible to be aware of all the mortal sins that thou hast committed, and therefore, in the primitive church, they only confessed the mortal sins which were manifest.’

‘While we seek to number up all our sins sincerely unto the priest, we do nothing else herein, but shew that we will leave nothing to the mercy of God to be forgiven.’

‘In confession no man hath his sins forgiven, except he believe, when the priest forgiveth, the same to be remitted: yea, otherwise, his sin remaineth unforgiven, unless he believe the same to be forgiven. For else remission of the priest, and giving of grace doth not suffice, except belief come on his part that is remitted.’

‘Think not thy sin to be absolved for the worthiness of thy contrition, but for the word of Christ, Whatsoever thou loosest, &c. When thou art absolved of the priest, trust confidently upon this word, and believe firmly thyself to be absolved, and then art thou truly remitted, whatever the case may be as to thy contrition.’

‘Admit the party that is confessed were not contrite (which is impossible),<sup>1</sup> or that the priest pronounced the words of loosing not in earnest, but in jest; yet, if the party believe that he is absolved, he is truly absolved indeed.’

‘In the sacrament of penance and absolution, a pope or a bishop doth no more than any inferior priest can do: yea, and where a priest is not to be had, there every christian man, yea or christian woman, standeth in as good stead.’

‘None ought to say to the priest, that he is contrite;<sup>2</sup> neither ought the priest to ask for any such declaration.’

‘It is a great error of them who come to the holy house trusting upon this, that they are confessed, that their conscience grudgeth them of no deadly sin, that they have said their prayers, and done such other preparatives before; all those do eat and drink to their own judgment: but, if they believe there to obtain God’s grace, this faith alone maketh them pure and worthy.’

‘It were good that the church should determine in a general council, laymen to communicate under both kinds; and the Bohemians so doing be therein neither heretics nor schismatics.’

‘The treasures out of which the pope doth grant his indulgences, are not the merits of Christ, nor of his saints.’

‘Indulgences and pardons be pious frauds upon the faithful, and a

(1) Impossible, because it cannot be that the faith of the true confessor can be without contrition.

hindrance to good works, and are in the number of them which be things lawful,<sup>1</sup> but not expedient.'

'Pardons and indulgences, to them that truly obtain them, avail not to remission of the punishment due before God for actual sins committed.'

'They that think that indulgences are wholesome and conducive to the fruit of the Spirit, are deceived.'

'Indulgences are only necessary for public transgressions, and are only granted to them that are obstinate and impatient.'

'Indulgences and pardons are unprofitable to six sorts of persons: first, to them that be dead, or lie in dying: secondly, to them that be weak and infirm: thirdly, to such as have lawful impediments: fourthly, to them that have not offended: fifthly, to such as have offended, but not publicly: sixthly, to those that amend and do well.'

'Excommunications be only outward punishments, and do not deprive a man of the public spiritual prayers of the church.'

'Christians are to be taught rather to love excommunication, than to dread it.'

'The bishop of Rome, successor of Peter, is not the vicar of Christ, ordained by Christ in St. Peter, to have authority over all the churches in the world.'

'The words of Christ to Peter, Whatsoever thou loosest, &c.,<sup>2</sup> extend no further but only to those things which be bound of Peter himself.'

'It is certain, that it is not competent to the church or to the pope, to make articles of faith, yea, or laws either of manners or good works.'

'Albeit the pope, with a great part of the church, teaching so or so, did not err therein, yet is it no sin nor heresy for a man to hold contrary to them; namely, in such things which are not necessary to salvation, so long as it is not otherwise condemned or approved by a general council.'

'We have a way made plain unto us to infringe the authority of councils, and freely to gainstand their doings, and to judge upon their decrees and boldly to speak our knowledge, whatsoever we judge to be true, whether the same has been approved or not by any general council.'

'Some of the articles of John Huss, condemned in the council of Constance, are truly christian and evangelical, and such as the universal church itself cannot condemn.'

'In every good work, the just man sinneth.'

'Every good work of ours, when it is best done, it is a venial sin.'<sup>3</sup>

'To burn heretics, is against the will of the Spirit.'

'To fight against the Turks, is to repugn against God, visiting our iniquities by them.'<sup>4</sup>

'No one is assured that he is not always committing deadly sin, owing to the most latent vice of pride.'

'Freewill, after sin, is a title and name only of a thing; and while man doth that which lieth in him, he sinneth deadly.'

'Purgatory cannot be proved out of holy Scripture which is canonical.'

'Souls in purgatory be not certain of their safety, at least not all; neither has it been proved by reasons or by Scriptures, that they be utterly out of a state of meriting or of increasing charity.'

'Souls in purgatory do sin without intermission, so long as they seek rest, and dread punishment.'

'Souls delivered out of purgatory by the prayers of the living, be less blessed than if they had satisfied for themselves.'<sup>5</sup>

'Ecclesiastical prelates, and secular princes, should not do amiss, if they would scare away all the bags of begging friars.'

All which errors there is no man in his right wits but he knoweth the same, in their several respects, how pestilent they be, how pernicious, how much they seduce godly and simple minds; and finally, how much they be against all charity, and against the reverence of the holy church of Rome, the mother of all the faithful and mistress of the faith itself, and against the sinews and strength of ecclesiastical discipline, which is obedience, the fountain and well-

(3) This article is true, if the work should be brought to be tried by God's judgment. And here also he correcteth himself in this word 'venial,' because all sins are damnable.

spring of all virtues, and without which every man is to be convicted easily to be an infidel. Ecclesiastical Affairs.

We, therefore, desiring to proceed in the premises more earnestly, as behoveth in things of such importance, and desiring to cut off the course of this pestiferous and cankered disease, lest it should spread itself further in the Lord's field, like hurtful brambles or briars; and using upon the said errors, and every of them, diligent trial, debating, strait examination, ripe deliberation; and further, weighing and thoroughly sifting all and every of the same together, with our reverend brethren the cardinals of the church of Rome, the priors of the orders regular, or ministers general; also with divers other professors and masters of divinity, and of both laws, and those the best learned: do find the aforesaid errors or articles respectively, as is aforesaid, to be not catholic nor fit to be taught as catholic, but to be against the doctrine or tradition of the catholic church, and against the true interpretation of holy Scripture, received by the same; to whose authority Augustine thought we ought so much to lean, that he would not (as he said) have believed the gospel, if the authority of the church had not thereunto moved him. Concilium Inaliquantium

For by these errors, or at least by some of them, it followeth consequently, that the same church, which is guided by the Holy Ghost, now doth, and ever hath erred: which is utterly against that which Christ at the time of his ascension (as we read in the holy gospel of Matthew), promised to his disciples, saying, 'I am with you until the end of the world,' etc., and also against the determination of the holy fathers, against the express ordinances or canons of councils and head bishops, whom not to obey, hath always been the cause and nurse of all heresies and schisms, as Cyprian doth witness.

Wherefore, by the counsel and assent of the said our reverend brethren, upon due consideration of all and singular the premises, by the authority of Almighty God, and of the blessed apostles Peter and Paul, and our own, we do condemn, reprove, and utterly reject, all and singular the articles or errors aforesaid respectively, as some to be heretic, some to be slanderous, some to be offensive to godly ears, or else seducing simple minds, and repugnant to the catholic truth; and, by the tenor hereof, we here decree and declare, that they ought of all christian people, both men and women, to be taken as damned, reprov'd, and rejected. And therefore, forbidding here, under pain of the greater curse and excommunication, losing of their dignities, whether they be ecclesiastical or temporal, and to be deprived and made incapable of all regular orders and privileges, given and granted by the see apostolic, of what condition soever they be; also of losing their liberties to hold general schools, to read and profess any science and faculty; of losing also their tenures and feoffments, and of inability for ever to recover the same again, or any other; moreover, under pain of secluding from christian burial, yea and of treason also, and incurring such pains and punishments expressed in the law, as are due for all heretics and fautors of the same: we charge and command all and singular christian people, both men and women, as well of the laity as of the clergy, both secular and also regular, of what order soever they be; and, briefly, all other persons, of what degree or condition soever they be, or in what dignity soever they are placed, either ecclesiastical or temporal: as first, the cardinals of the holy church of Rome, patriarchs, primates, archbishops, bishops, with the prelates and heads of the churches patriarchal, metropolitan, or other cathedral, collegiate, and other small and inferior churches; also all clerks and other persons ecclesiastical, as abbots, priors, or ministers, general or particular, brethren or religious men, exempt and not exempt: also universities of schools, and all others, as well secular priests, as regular and religious persons of all orders, yea of the begging friars also: Item, kings,<sup>1</sup> electors of the imperial crown, princes, dukes, marquises, barons, captains, landlords and servitors, and all officers, judges, notaries, whether they be ecclesiastical, or secular; commonalties, universities, dominions, cities, castles, lordships, and places, with the inhabitants of the same: and, finally, all other persons whatsoever, ecclesiastical or regular, dispersed in whatsoever places through the whole universal world,<sup>2</sup> or who shall be hereafter dispersed, but especially in high Almany,

(1) Behold how kings come after bags and wallets, and begging friars.

(2) Here may be a doubt, whether the man in the moon be exempted, with his bush of thorns on his neck, out of this bull or not.

*Ecclesiastical

The books of Luther

that they shall not presume, publicly or privately, under any manner of pretence or colour, colourably or expressly, or how else soever, to hold, maintain, defend, preach, or favour, the aforesaid errors or any of them, or any such perverse doctrine.

Over and besides, forsomuch as the aforesaid errors and many others are contained in the books or writings of the aforesaid Martin Luther, therefore we condemn, reprove, and utterly reject, and hold for utterly condemned, reprov'd, and rejected, the aforesaid books, and all the writings of the said Martin, with his preachings, in what tongue soever they are found, wherein the said errors, or any of them, are contained; willing and commanding, under the virtue of holy obedience and incurring the penalties aforesaid, to all and singular christian people, both men and women above rehearsed, that they presume not by any manner of ways, directly or indirectly, colourably or expressly, privily or apertly, either in their houses, or in other public or private places, to read, hold, preach, print, publish, or defend, either by themselves or by others, any such writings, &c.; but, straightways after the publishing hereof, they do burn them, being by their ordinaries diligently searched out, publicly and solemnly in the presence of the whole clergy and the people, under all and singular the penalties aforesaid.

Now, as touching the said Martin, O good Lord, what have we left undone? <sup>1</sup> what have we left unattempted? what fatherly charity have we not showed, whereby to have reduced him from these errors? For, after that we did cite him, thinking to proceed with him more favourably, we invited and exhorted him as well by divers conferences had with our legate, as by our own letters, that he would relinquish the aforesaid errors, or else, having safe-conduct offered to him, with money necessary for his journey, to come to us without any fear or dread, which perfect charity ought to have cast out; and so, after the example of our Saviour and his apostle St. Paul, he should speak, not in corners and in secret, but openly to our face. Which if he had done, of truth we think no less but that, reforming himself, he would have recognised his errors, neither should have found so many faults in the court of Rome, which he, being seduced with the rumours of malicious people more than he ought, doth so much reprehend: where we would have taught him to see more clearly than the light of day, that the holy fathers of Rome our predecessors (whom he, without all modesty, most injuriously doth rail upon) did never err in their canons and constitutions, which he so laboureth to assail. For, as saith the prophet, 'Neither is there resin nor physician lacking in Gilead.'<sup>2</sup> But he hath always showed himself disobedient, and refused at our citation to appear; and yet to this present day, continuing still in his stubborn mind and heart indurate, hath remained now more than a year under our curse; yea, and moreover, adding mischief to mischief (which is worst of all), he, hearing of this our citation, burst out into a presumptuous appellation from us unto the next general council,<sup>3</sup> against the constitution both of pope Pius II., and pope Julius II., our predecessors, which provideth, that all they that so did appeal, should be punished as heretics.

In vain, also, he seeketh refuge to the general council, who professeth himself not greatly to regard such councils. So that now we might lawfully proceed against him, as against one notoriously suspected of his faith, yea a very heretic indeed, without any further citation or delay, to the condemnation of him, as of a heretic, and to the severity of all and singular pains and censures afore written. Yet we, notwithstanding, by the counsel of our brethren aforesaid, imitating the clemency of Almighty God, who willet not the death of a sinner, but rather that he should convert and live, and forgetting all injuries heretofore done unto us and to the see apostolic, have thought good to use all favourable means towards him that we might; and so to work (as much as in us lieth) that he, by this way of mansuetude, may be brought to reformation; so that he, forsaking his former errors, may be received as the prodigal son, and return again into the bosom of the church.

(1) Let us see here what ye have not done: first Luther gently submitted himself; but you rejected him. He then referred him to the judgment of four universities in Germany: it would not be taken. He then appealed from the cardinal to the pope: the pope refused him. Then he appealed from the pope to the council: neither did the pope admit that. He required, to be convinced by the Scriptures: the pope neither would, nor could, so do. And yet the pope saith, he left nothing undone.

(2) Jer. viii.

(3) Here note, good reader, that Luther appealed from the pope to the council two years before this bull, which was A. D. 1518.

Wherefore, in most hearty wise we exhort and beseech the said Martin and all his adherents, receivers, and fautors, by the bowels of the mercy of our God, and by the sprinkling of the blood of our Lord Jesus Christ, in whom and by whom the redemption of mankind hath been accomplished and the edification of holy mother church, that they will cease to disturb the peace, unity, and verity of the said church, for which our Saviour so instantly prayed to his Father; and that they will renounce such pernicious errors aforesaid; who, in so doing, shall find with us (if they shall obey, and shall certify us by lawful witnesses to have obeyed effectually herein) the affection of fatherly charity, and a full fountain opened of all mercy and clemency: willing and charging the said Martin, notwithstanding, from henceforth, that he utterly desist in the mean time from all preaching and office of preaching. Or else, if the love of justice and virtue shall not restrain the said Martin from sin, neither the hope of our pardon shall reduce and bring him to repentance, to the intent that the terror of punishment and of discipline may bridle him, we require and admonish the said Martin and his adherents, abettors, fautors, and receivers, by the tenor hereof, in the virtue of holy obedience, and under incurring all the penalties aforesaid we strictly charge and command them, that within sixty days (whereof twenty we assign for the first, twenty for the second, and the other twenty for the third and peremptory term) immediately following after the setting up of these present letters, the said Martin, his abettors, fautors, adherents, and receivers aforesaid, do surcease from the aforesaid errors, and from the preaching, publishing, maintaining, and defending of the same; also from setting out of books or writings upon the said errors, or any of them; and, furthermore, that they burn or cause to be burned, all and singular such books and writings as contain the aforesaid errors, or any of them, by any manner of way. Also, that the said Martin do utterly revoke those errors and assertions, and so certify us of the revoking thereof by public documents, in due form of law, signed by the hands of two prelates, to be sent unto us within the term of other like sixty days, or else to be brought by him unto us, if he himself will come (which would please us much rather), with a full safe-conduct above mentioned, which from henceforth we are content to offer unto him: to the intent that no scruple of doubt, touching his true obedience, should hereafter remain.

The pope's exhortation to Luther.

He threateneth Luther with punishment.

The pope's safe-conduct to Luther offered.

Contrariwise, if the said Martin (which God defend), his abettors, fautors, adherents, and maintainers aforesaid, shall otherwise do, or shall not fulfil, to every effect and purpose, all and singular the premises within the term aforesaid, we then, following the doctrine of the apostles, which teacheth us to avoid an heretical person after the first and second correction, as well now as before, and as well before as now—declaring, by our authority, the said Martin, his abettors, fautors, adherents, maintainers, and receivers, as withered branches not remaining in Christ, but teaching and preaching contrary doctrine, repugnant to the catholic faith, slanderous and damnable, to the great offence of God's majesty, to the detriment and slander of the universal church and catholic faith, and despising the keys of the church, to be and to have been notorious and obstinate heretics—do condemn the same for such by the tenor hereof, willing and commanding them to be holden and taken for such by all christian people aforesaid, &c.

Over and besides, we forbid, under the incurring of all and singular the penalties afore expressed in so doing, that any man presume by any manner of way, directly or indirectly, secretly or expressly, privily or apertly, at home or abroad, to read, hold, preach, praise, print, publish or defend, either by themselves or by any other, the said books and writings; not only those wherein the errors aforesaid are contained, but also all others, whatsoever have been or shall be set forth, written, or made by the said Martin, as proceeding from one vehemently suspected as a pernicious enemy of the catholic faith, and to the intent that his memory may utterly be rooted out from the fellowship of all christian people; yea, rather, with fire to consume them, as is before declared.

All the books of Luther, both good and bad, condemned.

We admonish, moreover, all and singular Christ's faithful people, under the said pain of the great curse, to avoid or cause to be avoided, so much as in them doth lie, the aforesaid heretics not obedient to our commandments, and to have no fellowship nor any conversation or communion with them, or with any of them, neither to minister to them things necessary.

And moreover, to the more confusion of the said Martin, with his abettors,

adherents, and retainers aforesaid, thus being declared and condemned as heretics after the expiring of the term aforesaid, we command to all and singular Christ's faithful people both men and women,<sup>1</sup> as patriarchs, archbishops, prelates of churches (either patriarchal, metropolitan, and other cathedral, collegiate, and other inferior churches); to deans and chapters, and other ecclesiastical persons secular, and of all other orders, even of the begging friars also (especially of that congregation, where the said Martin is professed, or hath his abode); also to regulars exempt, and not exempt: Item, to all and singular princes (what dignity or calling soever, either ecclesiastical or temporal they be of), to kings, princes, electors, dukes, marquises, earls, barons, captains, landlords, servitors, corporations, universities, dominions, cities, lands, castles, and places, or the citizens and inhabitants thereof: and briefly, to all and singular others aforesaid, through the universal world dispersed,<sup>2</sup> especially in Almany, that they, and every of them, under all and singular penalties aforesaid, do personally apprehend the said Martin, his abettors, adherents, receivers, and fautors, and retain them being apprehended, at our instance, and send them unto us (who, in so doing, for their good work shall receive of us and the see apostolic condign reward and recompence); or, at least that they, as well the clergymen, as the regulars and laymen, all and singular aforesaid, utterly drive them, and every one of them, out of their metropolitan, cathedral, collegiate, and other churches, houses, monasteries, convents, cities, dominions, universities, corporations, castles, lands, and places respectively.

These cities, dominions, lands, castles, villages, corporations, holds, towns, and places, wheresoever they be situate respectively; metropolitan, cathedral, collegiate, and other churches; monasteries also, priories, convents, and religious and devout places, of what order soever (as is aforesaid), unto which it shall chance the said Martin to come; so long as he or they shall there remain, and three days after their departing from thence, we here give over to the ecclesiastical interdiction.

And that the premises may be known to all men, we command moreover to all patriarchs, archbishops, bishops, prelates of the patriarchal, metropolitan, and other cathedral and collegiate churches; to deans and chapters, and other persons ecclesiastical, and of what order else soever aforesaid; to regular brethren, religious monks, exempt and not exempt as aforesaid, wheresoever they dwell, and especially within Almany, that they and every of them, under like censures and pains, do publicly denounce, and cause and command to be denounced by others, the said Martin, with all and singular his aforesaid adherents, who shall not obey our commandments and monitions, within the term aforesaid, upon Sundays, and other festival days, in their churches, when the greatest concourse of people shall resort to divine service, to be declared and condemned for heretics; and that all Christ's faithful people shall avoid them under the said censures and penalties as be afore expressed; and that they do set up, or cause to be set up, these presents, or a transcript of them made under the form hereafter ensuing, in their churches, monasteries, houses, convents, and other places, there openly to be seen and read.

Item, We do excommunicate and curse all and singular persons, of whatsoever state, degree, condition, pre-eminence, dignity, or excellency they be, who shall hinder, or cause to be hindered, by themselves or others, privily or apertly, directly or indirectly, secretly or expressly, these presents or transcripts or copies of them from being read, set up, and published in their lands and dominions, etc.

Let no man therefore be so bold as to dare to infringe, or with rash presumption to contrary, this writing of our condemnation, reprobation, rejection, decree, declaration, inhibition, will, commandment, exhortation, beseeching, request, admonition, assignation, grant, condemnation, subjection, excommunication, and curse. And if any person dare presume to attempt the same, let him know and be sure, that he shall incur the indignation of Almighty God, and his blessed apostles Peter and Paul.<sup>3</sup>

Although it was somewhat long before this bull aforesaid of pope Leo, being sent and dispersed through all other places abroad, could come to the hands of Luther, yet as soon as he, by means of his friends, might get a sight thereof, he shaped an answer again to the same, in such sort as, I am sure, the pope himself will say that this bull was never so baited, and so well-favouredly shaken in all his days; as by the handling of the matter, and reading of his answer, may evidently appear. The contents and copy of which answer I thought here, next under the said bull, immediately to exhibit to the christian reader, that whoso is disposed to confer the one with the other, having them both at hand, may judge the better of the whole matter and cause, and also may see the true image of the pope, out of his painted vizard, appear in his own perfect colours. The answer now to the bull here followeth:¹

Fama pervenit ad me, christiane lector, exisse Bullam quandam adversum me penè in omnem terram, priusquam ad me, in quem unice fieret et cui maximè esset inferenda, veniret. Forte quod noctis et tenebrarum scilicet filia timuit lucem vultus mei. Ilanc tamen ipsam noctuam, vix tandem multum adjuvantibus amicis, in imagine sua datum esse videre. Quæ causa est, ut adhuc incertus esse cogar, ludantne in me papistæ mei, libello quodam famoso et anonymo, an serio et verè sic Romæ insaniant. Neque enim hic stylus (ut dicitur) neque processus Romanæ curiæ servatus est; tum (quod maxime urget) articulos et imponit et damnat planè ac manifestè christiaunissimos; ut mihi omnium verisimillimum sit hæc prolem esse monstri illius Johannis Ecclii, hominis ex mendaciis, simulationibus, erroribus, hæresibusque confusi et consuti.

Auget suspitionem, quod idem Ecclius talis Bullæ apostolus fuisse dicitur à Romanis. Neque enim tali apostolatu dignior ullus apostolus. Atque superioribus diebus audieram, parturiri in Urbe contra me Bullam quandam diram et sævam eodem coartifice Ecclio (id quod stylus et saliva indicant), sed quæ illis bonis et eruditis quibusque viris summe displiceret, eoque differretur, imò opprimeretur.

Verum quicquid sit, mihi incredibile non est, ubi apostolus Ecclius auditur et valet, ibi Antichristi regnum esse, et nihil non insaniarum homines audere. Interim tamen agere, ne credam Leonem Decimum Romanum episcopum, cum suis eruditissimis cardinalibus, esse harum insaniarum auctores: quod non tam facio ut Romani nominis honorem custodiam, quàm ne superbiâ nimis infler et dignus mihi videar talia, tam pulchra, tam gloriosa pati pro veritate Dei. Si enim verè Romanus episcopus in me sic insaniret, quis Luthero coram Deo felicior esset, qui ob tam manifestam veritatem a tanto veritæ damnaretur? Quid enim hic optandum mihi foret, quam ut nunquam absolverer, reconciliarer, communicarer Antichristo isti indoctissimo, impiissimo, furiosissimo? Felix illa dies, felix illa mors, cum gaudio et summa gratitudine Deo referenda, si quando fiat, ut in ista causa me apprehendat et perdat. Sed aliis des hujus nominis honorem, et dignum quærat ista causa martyrem: ego peccatis meis alia meritum sum.

Existimationem igitur suam quisque habeat de Romanis: ego, quisquis fuerit hujus Bullæ autor, eum pro Antichristo habeo, et contra Antichristum hæc seribo, redempturus veritatem Christi (quod in me fuerit) quam ille extinguere conatur. Atque primum (ut nihil in me obtineat ex omnibus quæ voluit) protestor coram Deo et Domino nostro Jesu Christo, et sanctis angelis ejus, et toto mundo, me dissentire toto corde damnationi hujus Bullæ, quam et maledico et execror, velut hostem sacrilegam et blasphemiam Christi filii Dei, et Domini nostri, Amen. Deinde assero et amplector fiducia tota spiritus mei articulos per eam damnatos, asserendosque pronuncio omnibus Christianis sub pœna æternæ maledictionis, et Antichristos habendos quicunque Bullæ consenserint, quos et his Scriptis conjuncto mihi omnium spiritu qui pure Christiani cognoscunt et cohunt) pro Ethnicis habeo et devito, secundum præceptum ejusdem Domini nostri Jesu Christi, Amen. Hac mea revocatio esto, O Bulla, vere Bullarum filia.

Hæc mea confessione seu protestatione facta (cujus testes esse volo omnes qui hæc legerint), antequam ad defendendos declarandosque articulos procedam, aliquot argumentis in ipsam Bullam confutandam præcludere libuit: quorum primum ab inscitia Antichristi hujus sumam. Apostolus enim Petrus mandat, ut de ea quæ in nobis est fide et spe rationem reddere parati simus. [1 Pet. iii.] Et Paulus episcopum jubet esse potentem exhortari in doctrina sana et contradicentes redarguere. [Tit. i.] Atque hæc ipsa sunt quæ jam in tertium annum efflagitavi et expectavi e Roma, aut his qui Romam sapiunt. Quæ et observata legitimus in antiquis patribus diligentissime, quoties hæreses damnarent. Sed nec apostoli quidquam in suis conciliis statuerunt, nisi allegata primum Scriptura sancta. Ita et ego cum expectarem ut faceret uvas, Scripturæ testimonium me erudituri, ecce! fecerunt labruscas [Esai. v.]; suis verbis nudis me condemnantes, cum ego tot Scripturis mea munierim.

Rogo te, Antichriste indoctissime, addeone conjunxisti cum summa inscitia summam temeritatem, ut præsumeres omnes homines esse in stuporem versos et te nudis tuis verbis contra armatis-imam Scripturam triumphare credituros? An didicisti hunc morem dannandi a magistratibus Coloniensibus et Lovaniensibus?

Si hoc est ecclesiasticè damnare errores, tantum dicere, 'Non placet,' 'Nego,' 'Non volo,' quis morio, quis asinus, quæ talpa, quis stipes, non queat damnare? Non pudescit frons tua meretricia, ut sic in publica ecclesia audeas inanibus incernibusque verborum tuorum fumis contradicere cælestium verborum fulminibus? Planè dedecorosa et dignam Antichristo condemnationem! quæ tot Scripturis sibi repugnantibus ne iota quidem habet quod opponat, sed unico verbo occurrit, dicens—Ego damno.' Cur Turcæ non credimus, quod Judeos non admittimus, cur hæreticos non honoramus (qui et ipsi nostra damnant), si sufficit damnare? nisi ideo non eis cedimus, quia non sine Scripturis et rationibus nos damnant: ipsi vero more novo sine Scripturis et rationibus damnantur. Quid ego in causa fuisse arbitrer, ut hæc damnatoria Bulla sic inanis et inermis et vere Bulla

The Answer of Martin Luther against the execrable Bull of Pope Leo, translated from the Latin.

Appendix.*

Martin Luther to the Christian reader, wisheth the grace of Christ to eternal salvation. A report reached me, christian reader, that a certain Bull was past incederet, nisi insignem inscitiam, qua (cum mea vera esse vidissent et tamen pati nollent nec confutare possent) tentaverunt vano terribilimento perditæ papyri me tertere? Sed Lutherus bellis assuetus Bullis non terretur; et inter inanem papyrum ac omnipotens verbum Dei distinguere didicit.

Ejusdem inscitie et illud est, quod, vexante conscientia, non sunt ausi articulos nominatim digerere, quoque in ordines suos. Timuerunt enim ne hæreticum assererent, quem nec erroneum forte nec scandalosum possent ostendere. Proinde invenerunt adverbium 'respectivè,' et post enumeratos articulos dicunt, 'alios respectivè hæreticos, alios erroneos, alios scandalosos.' Quod est dicere—'Nos putamus aliquos esse hæreticos, alios erroneos, alios scandalosos: sed nescimus qui, quales, quanti.' O meticulosa ignorantia, quam lubrica et fugitiva es! quam odas lucem! ut verteris ac reverteris in omnia, ne capiaris, sicut Proteus quidam! nec sic tamen evades: immo in astutia tua magis comprehenderis et subverteris. Prodi itaque, indocissime Antichriste: doce nos sapientiam tuam: distribue tua ipsius verba. Dic si nosti tu ipse quod dixeris: ostende quis sit hæreticus, quis vere erroneus, quis scandalosus, et quis sit qualiscunque. Decet enim tam magnificum damnatorem nosse quid damnat: turpissimum autem est damnare articulum hæreticum, et eundem non posse nominare. Nolo tantum 'respectivè,' sed absolutè et certè doceri. Sum enim Oceanicæ factionis, qui respectus contemnunt, omnia autem absoluta habent, ut sic jocer in istam moriam. Vide ergo, mi lector, insignem inscitiam Antichristianam, quam infelicè dolo se occultare præsumpsit sub adverbio 'respectivè.' Non solum enim non docei veritatem et causam damnationis, sed nec errorem monstrare audeo, nec hoc ipsum indicare quod damnat, et tamen damnat. Nonne lautissima damnatio, damnare et nescire quid damnes? Nonne disertissima oratio, loqui et nescire quid loquaris? Quin anticyras integras his Bullatis morionibus optamus? Sic sapere et facere debent omnes veritatis adversarii!

Sed scio quis dolor lenonem istum premat. Nempe Ecceius meus—memor quam Lipsiæ pudefactus sit, dum me ob articulos Hussi (spumantibus labiis, sat plausibiliter, theatro suo) hæreticum tercentis clamaret furiosa voce, et idipsum postea probare non posset, cum Constantiensis damnatio, a me adducta præter spem Ecceii, nullum certum articulum signasset hæreticum, sed et ipsa similis huic nostræ præ sua quoque inscitia alios hæreticos, alios erroneos, alios offensivos dixisset; et Ecceius his auditis, turpissima temeritate in semet confusus, falso et mendaciter me hæreticum a se clamatum sentiret,—voluit Romæ huic vulneri suo mederi, et mendacium temeritatis sue stabilire. Sed non proficet, spero (jubente Christo), mendax sophista: expositulo enim adhuc, ut absolutè non respectivè, distinctè non confuse, certè non simulanter, clarè non obscurè, singulariter non in genere, dicant quis sit et quis non sit hæreticus. Sed quando hæc faciunt? Quando Christus et Belial convenient, aut lux et tenebre sociabuntur.

Quid ergo faciam ego interim? Primum, meticulosissimos et indoctissimos papistas, Antichristique apostolos contemnam, illudamque eis cum Heliæ et dicam: Si Baal deus est, respondeat. Forte ebruis deus in itinere. Clamate voce majori; deus enim est: forte audit. [1 Reg. 18.] Quid enim aliud Bullati isti asini mereantur, qui damnant id, quod nesciunt et nescire se fatentur? Deinde securus ero, nec hæreticus, nec erroneus, nec scandalosus habendus, donec, si non convictum, tamen simpliciter et nudis verbis monstratum fuerit in quo articulo talis sim. Neque enim jam onero papistas meos (stipites istos) ut probent, sed ut monstrent saltem errorem, hoc est, ut ostendant an sciant, quid lallent ipsimet, suamve salvam sentiant. Dom enim nullum articulum designant hæreticum, mihi liberum est quemvis oblatum negare hæreticum, et asserere catholicum.

Sed et hæc ruditatem, fermè asinina rudiorem, quis non rideat in Antichristo impissimo et rudissimo, quod optimi homines discernunt hæreticos ab erroneis, et hos ab offensivis, hos a scandalosis? Qua acutissima acutissimorum hominum distinctione colligimus, errorem non esse hæreticum. Quod autem hæreticum non est, quid ad damnatores ecclesiasticos?—qui solum hæretica damnare debent. Nam quod hæreticum non est, catholicum est, Christo dicente: Qui non est contra nos, pro nobis est. Immo vellem dari mihi ab istis viris magnificis articulum erroneum in ecclesia, qui non sit hæreticus: si enim erroneus est, nihil differt ab hæretico, nisi pertinacia asserentis. Omnia enim equaliter aut vera aut falsa sunt, licet affectus in uno aliquo vero aut falso major et minor esse possit. Vides ergo iterum Bullatos meos non posse articulum mihi monstrare qui erroneus sit et non hæreticus, et iterum lallare sicut furiosus, qui nesciunt quid dicant, damnantes inventum errorem non hæreticum, quod non possit esse in rebus neque verbis: ut quales sunt articuli, talis sit et damnatio.

Par sapientia est, scandalosum esse qui nec sit hæreticus, nec erroneus. Detur obscuro ille, non modo in meis sed in omnium hominum verbis et scriptis ab initio mundi usque in finem. Quid ergo hæc portenta cogitare cogitaret papistas meos, nisi inscitia furiosa? Nisi fortè scandalosus appellat, quo modo veri et catholici sunt scandalosi. Nihil enim est scandalosius veritate, immò sola veritas est scandalosa superbis et insensatis. Sicut de Christo [1 Cor. i.] dicitur: Nos prædicamus Christum crucifixum, Judæis scandalum, Gentibus stultitiam. Et [Lucæ ii.], Positus est hic in ruinam et resurrectionem multorum in Israel. Quare, cum papistæ mei scandalosus scecerant ab hæreticis et erroneis, quod autem hæreticum et erroneum non est, id catholicum et verum esse certum sit: sequitur articulos scandalosos ab eis intelligi et damnari catholicos et veros. O digna damnatio papistis! Vide, mi lector, quorsum sese rotat impietas cæca! quam seipsam irridet et illudit! quam faciliè capitur in suis verbis! quam imprudens et stulta sit in omnibus suis studiis! non solum non probat errorem et scandalum, sed (pro eo ut monstrat solum) impossibilia et sibi turpissimè pugnancia loquitur. Ubi nunc tuum infelix 'respectivè,' infelicissima Bulla? quo respexisti? in barathrum impietatis scilicet et ruditatis tuæ.

Idem dicendum erit de offensivis; nam hos neque scandalosos, neque erroneos, neque hæreticos esse oportet, cum a tantis papistis discernantur. Quis ergo non miretur tanta ingenia papistarum, qui invenire poterunt offensivum esse in ecclesia, quod tamen nec falsum, nec hæreticum, nec scandalosum, sed verum, catholicum, ædificatorium sit, et tamen hoc ipsum damnant? Quis vero non ambiat etiam ab iis insanis damnari, qui suâ propriâ damnatione ostendunt se damnata probare et probata damnare; hoc est, truncis et cautibus sese insensatores esse palam, cum summa sua ignominia, commonstrant? Itaque, vos impii et insensati papistæ, et sobrii scribite si quid scribere vultis: nam hæc Bullam apparet, vel inter putanas nocturno convivio esse egestam, aut in canicularibus furiis confusam: neque enim ulli moriones sic insani erant.

Retorqueamus autem imprudentiam istam Antichristi in os ejus, et ex sermonibus ipsiusmet out against me, and sent almost over all the world before it came to me, against whom it was specially directed, and to whom it most chiefly appertained. For judicemus et condemnemus eum, ut deinceps discat astutius et meliori memoria mentiri. Oportet enim mendacem esse memorem, juxta proverbium. Sialii sunt articuli offensivi et alii hæretici, et tu eum damnas, qui non est hæreticus, ac per hoc est verus et catholicus (etiamsi sit sexcentis offensivus): nonne impudens os tuum damnat seipsum, non modo hæreseos, sed extremæ impietatis et blasphemiam læsæque majestatis in veritatem divinam, estendique vere te eum esse hominem qui adversatur, et extollitur super omne quod dicitur aut quod colitur Deus? Nonne tu es homo ille peccati et filius perditionis, qui negat Deum emptorem suum, et charitatem veritatis tollit, ut operationem erroris sui statuatur, quo credamus iniquitati, ut Paulus prædixit. Si enim articulus hæreticus non est, non potest esse offensivus aut scandalosus nisi hæreticis Antichristis et Satanis pietatis. Vide ergo quam pulchrè bulla ista omnium impudentissima imprudentissimaque, dum in me aliud hæreticum, aliud offensivum damnat, auctores suos veros hæreticos et adversarios Dei palam declarat: adeo non est scientia, non est consilium contra Dominum, adeo impietas cæca capitur verbis oris sui: adeo verum est, qui jacit lapidem in altum, recidet super caput ejus.

Et (quod omnium pulcherrimum est,) hæc impia contradictione sua revelantur cogitationes cordium eorum, et nequitiam suam, quam volunt maxime celatam, maxime produnt incredibili imprudentia, esse scilicet eos paratos semel universam veritatem damnare. Cum enim hæreticos asserunt quos hæreticos ostendere aut nominare non possunt, nec sciunt, nec audent, quid hinc intelligimus, nisi esse eos toto corde adversarios Christi, et paratos damnare omnem veritatem? et tamen infelici hypoecrisi fingunt se damnare hæreseos. En vobis O Bullares asini, discite tandem quid sit—Christum esse signum contradictionis et petram scandali. Quam subito et facili negotio denudata est omnis interior impietas et ignominia vestra eis ipsis verborum operculis, quibus eam contegere frustra studuistis! Habemus itaque hoc primo et evidente argumento. bullam hanc non esse nisi Antichristi, summi adversarii Dei et pietatis. Agnosceat nunc eam, si audet, sive Ecceus sive papa, et sciet quo nomine et qua opinione sit nobis observandus. In unum enim cumulum hic omnia pessima nomina convenerunt. impietas, blasphemia, inscitia, imprudentia, hypoecrisis, mendacium, breviter Satanas ipse cum suo Antichristo.

Nec minus revelat impietas ista seipsum et eo quod nunc dicam: Decernit enim bulla ista eximia apertis impudentissimisque verbis, esse exurendos etiam eos libellos meos, in quibus errores non sunt, ut memoria mei penitus tollatur. Potes nunc, christiane lector, dubitare infemalem draconem sonare per bullam istam? Vulgò dicitur asinum ideo malè cantare, quia altius brditur: et ista quoque bulla felicius cecinisset, si non blasphemum os suum in cælum posuisset, impudenti et plusquam diabolica impietate veritatem etiam confessam et probatam damnatura. Hactenus enim Satanas veritatem sub specie veritatis oppressit, quoties oppressit. At hic homo peccati, adversarius et elevatus supra Deum, posita specie apertaque fronte, idque in ecclesia Dei, absque timore, veritatem Christianam, et cognitam et probatam a seipso et omnibus, damnat et exuri mandat. Quid si hæc in Turcia ferent? Quo loco hæc vox, rogo, digna, nisi imo Tartaro? Et non timetis, Bullati vos Antichristi, ne saxa et ligna sanguinem sudent, præ horrendissimo hoc spectro impietatis vestræ et blasphemiam?

Ubi es nunc, optime Carole Imperator? Ubi estis reges et principes Christiani? Christo dedistis nomen in baptismo, et has Tartareas voces Antichristi potestis ferre? Ubi episcopi? ubi doctores? ubi quicumque Christum confitemini? ad hæc horribilia papistarum portenta tacere potestis? Miseram ecclesiam Dei, factam Satanæ tantum ludibrium! Miseros omnes qui his temporibus vivunt! Venit, venit, ira Dei in finem super papistas, inimicos crucis Christi et veritatis Dei, ut resistent et ipsi omnibus hominibus, prohibentes prædicari et doceri veritatem, sicut de Judæis dicit Paulus.

Finge quæso, me esse talem qualem illa maledica et maledicta Bulla videri cupit, hæreticum, erroneum, schismaticum, offensivum, scandalosum, in aliquot libellis. Quid meruerit libelli catholici, Christiani, veri, edificatorii, pacifici? Ubi didicistis hanc religionem, papistæ perdidit, ut propter hominem malum damnatis et exuratis sanctam castamque Dei veritatem? Non potestis homines perdere, nisi et veritatem perdati? Vos triticum evelletis cum zizania? Vos grana dispergetis cum palea? Cur Origenem suscipitis in libellis catholicis, et non in totum aboletis? Immo, cur impiissimum Aristotelem, in quo non nisi errores docentur, non saltem in parte damnatis? Cur impias, barbaras, inductas, hæreticasque Decretales Papæ non exurit? Cur inquam hæc non facitis, nisi quod non estis alia causa positi in locum istum sanctum, quam ut sitis abominatio a Daniele prædicta, quæ damnet veritatem, statuatur verè mendacium et operationem erroris: non enim alia decet sedem Antichristi.

Te igitur Leo X., vos domini cardinales Romæ, et quicumque Romæ aliquid estis, compello et in faciem vobis libere dico,—si vestro nomine vestraque scientia hæc Bulla exivit, eamque vestram agnoscit, utare et ego potestatem mea, qua in baptismo per Dei misericordiam factus sum filius Dei et coheres Christi, fundatus supra firmam petram, quæ nec portas inferi, nec cælum, nec terram fornicat: et dico, moneo, hortor vos in Domino, ut ad cor redeatis et istis diabolicis blasphemis et plus valde nimio audacibus impietatibus modum ponatis, atque id cito. Quod nisi feceritis, scitote me, cum omnibus qui Christum colunt, vestram sedem, a Satana ipso possessam et oppressam, pro sede damnata Antichristi habere, cui non modo non obediamus, aut subditi et concorporati esse velimus, sed detestamur et execramur, sicut principem et summum hostem Christi: parati pro hæc eententia nostra stultas vestras censuras non modo cum gaudio ferre, sed etiam rogare ne unquam nos absolvatis, aut inter vestros numeretis, quin, ut cruentam vestram tyrannidem expleatis, ad mortem nos ultro offerimus. Quod (si quid Spiritus Christi et impetus fidei nostræ valet) hi scriptis, si perseveraveritis in furore isto, vos damnamus, et, una cum Bulla ista omnibusque D-cretalibus Satanæ tradimus in interitum carnis, ut spiritus vester in die Domini nobiscum liberetur, in nomine (quem vos persequimini) Jesu Christi Domini nostri. Amen.

Vivit enim adhuc et regnat adhuc (in quo non dubito) Dominus noster Jesus Christus; quem et speramus propediem adventurum et interfectorum spiritu oris sui, et destructurum illustratione adventus sui, hunc hominem peccati et filium perditionis: quandoquidem negare non possumus, si Papa istorum portentorum auctor est, ipsum esse verum illum finalem, pessimum, famosumque Antichristum, subvertentem orbem totum operationibus erroris sui: id quod impletum ubique videmus.

Sed quo me rapit ardor fidei? nondum tot's persuasus sum, Papæ esse hanc Bullam, sed apostoli illius impietatis Ecclæ, qui cum suis fratribus furentem hiatu me absorbere festinat, cantans: Deglutiamus eum sicut infernum viventem et integrum, quasi descendentem in lacum. Huius enim furiosus homini parvum (immo lucrum) videtur, si veritatem Dei extinguat; modo vota impietatis et fratricidii impleat. O sortem ecclesie hodiernam, sanguineis lachrymis dignam! Sed quis gemitus nostros audit? quis plorantes solatur? Inexorabilis est furor Domini super nos.

Addunt iidem homines (ut sunt admodum faceti et suaves) quoddam ridiculum, quo pro sua

what cause I cannot tell, except, peradventure, it was for that the said Bull, like unto a night-crow, and as a bird of darkness hatched in the night, durst not fly in prudētia temperant seria ludo, scribentes, mihi (super omnia quæ in me contulerunt immensa studia) etiā sumptum et pecuniā ad iter Romanum obtulisse. Scilicet nova charitas Romæ, quæ orbem exhausit pecuniis et vastavit tyrannide sua intolerabili, mihi unī pecuniā offert. Verum, hoc ineluctum mendacium scio cuius fabri sit. Cajetanus cardinalis ad mendacia componenda natus et formatus, functus legatione sua felicissima, nunc Romæ securus, tingit mihi per se promissam esse pecuniā, cum Augustæ tam sordida infamique ageret penuria, ut crederetur familiam suam fame occisurum. Sed Bullam decet esse Bullam, et veritate et sapientia inanem. Et damnatoribus istis jus est nobis mandare, ut esse veraces eos credamus dum mentiuntur, et catholicos dum hæretica docent, et Christianos dum Antichristum statuunt per illud distributivum universale: 'Et quodcumque ligaveris.' Ubi cum nihil exceptum sit, omnia per omnia eis licent: si non potius ex diabolo conceperint, qui non solum mentiuntur manifestè, sed (quod omnem impudentiam superat) mendacio eodem sese ad plausum popularem in mei invidiam ornant, et charitatem sese mihi exhibuisse altero mendacio jam fingunt: cum, si quid veritatis, pietatis, gravitatis, Romanis istis tyrannis exisset reliquum, omni studio cavere deberint, omnia ita in luce clara ab eis dici et geri, ut nec adversarius suspicionem haurire mali cuiusquam possit: at nunc si nihil esset aliorum quæ Bullam istam elevarent, hoc crassum et ineptum mendacium eam levem vanam et falsam arguit. Roma quæso mihi pecunias exhiberet? Et unde illud, quod compertum habeo—esse videlicet per trapezitas istos (quod bancum vocant) definitos in Germania aliquot centenarios aureorum sicariis, qui Lutherum conficerent? His enim rationibus et scripturis hodie pugnat, regnat, triumphat sancta illa apostolica sedes, magistra fidei et mater ecclesiarum, jamdudum Antichristiana et his septies hæretica convicta, si gladio Spiritūs quod est verbum Dei pugnasset:—id quod non ignorat. Ideo (ne quando ad id cogatur periculi) sic furit in orbe Christiano, bellis, cædibus, quoribus, mortibus, vastationibus, omnia involvens et perdens: adhuc tamen sunt sanctissimi in Domino patres, et ovium Christi vicarii pastores.

Sed age (ut et ipse colludam) adhuc mittant pecuniā; fidem enim seu conductum salvum, (ne nimium eos gravem) libens resigno, cum non sit opus eo, modo propitia sit pecuniā. Tantam autem expecto quanta satis fuerit ut quinquaginta millibus peditum, et decem millibus equitum instructus, Romam tutus ire queam, qua arte mihi satis fidei parabo: et hoc propter Romam quæ devorat habitatores suos, nulla nec servata nec servante fide, ubi sanctissimi patres occidunt dilectos filios suos in charitate Dei, fratresque perdunt fratres in obsequium Christi, sicut est moris Romani atque styli. Interim liber ero ab istius venerabilissima Bullæ citatione. O vos infelices nebulones, qui veritate et conscientia sic estis confusi, ut nec mentiri prudenter possitis, nec verum dicere audeatis, et tamen, summa ignominia vestra, quiescere non valetis!

Afert quoque Bulla novam Latinitatem. Cum enim Augustinus dixisset se Evangelio non crediturum fuisse nisi autoritate Ecclesiæ fuisset commotus, mox Bulla ista inelucta hæc ecclesiam catholicam facit quosdam fratres reverendissimos cardinales, priores ordinum regularium, magistris theologiæ, et doctores juris, quorum consilio se natam gloriantur, scilicet novam prolem universalis ecclesiæ. Felix certè partus novæ illius et hætenus inaudite ecclesiæ catholicæ, et quam Augustinus acerrimus sectarum insectator si videret, non dubitaret synagogam Satanæ appellare. Vide ergo insaniam papistarum: Ecclesia universalis est quidam pauci cardinales, priores, et doctores, forte vix viginti homines, cum possibile sit nullum eorum esse membrum unius capellæ vel altaris. Atque cum ecclesia sit communio sanctorum, (ut in symbolo oramus,) sanctorum communio, id est, ecclesiæ universali exclusio esse oportet, quicumque non fuerit in numero istorum viginti hominum. Unde quicquid ii senserint sancti viri, id mox universalis ecclesiæ sentit, etiam si mendaces, hæretici, et Antichristi sint, non nisi abominabilia sentientis.

Adeone Romæ insanire ullus credere potuisset? Estne cerebri aut cordis eis reliquum quicquam? Augustinus de ecclesiâ per orbem diffusa loquitur, Evangelium concorditer confitente. Neque enim ullum alium librum Deus voluit tanta concordia orbis approbari, quanta sacram Scripturam (ut idem in Confessionibus suis dicit), ne schismatibus occasio fieret, aliis subinde receptis: id quod impia sedes Romana suis decretis quæsitit multis jam seculis; et heu magna ex parte confecti! Sed universalis ecclesiæ nondum ei consensit. Sunt enim in oriente aquilone et austro Christiani Evangelio contenti, nihil curantes quòd Roma ex seipsa particulari universalem ecclesiam facere conatur, et cæteras schismaticas criminatur, cum ipsa sit prima que se a tota separavit et ad se totam rapere frustra molita est, princeps et fons omnium schismatum hæc tyrannide facta.

Nemo ergo speret unquam fore, ut ecclesiæ catholicæ sapiat quæ Bulla ista impia blaterat; cum nec ea quæ vere est Romana sic sapiat, nec continuo catholicum habeat quicquid Romanum esse constiterit: nullus (ut dixi) liber catholicus ultra futurus est, sicut neque fuit, præter Scripturam sanctam. Romanæ ecclesiæ abundè satis est gloriæ, partem esse parvam universalis ecclesiæ, suis statutis se ipsam vexantem. Curæ potius Romanæ ista Bulla est: hæc enim Satanæ sedem decet talis sapientia et religio. Ipsa est que nititur universalis ecclesiæ haberi, et suas ultimas et impias bullas pro catholicis dogmatibus toti orbi arrogantissimè sed vanissimè obtrudit. Cujus superbia et temeritas eo crevit, ut de sola potestate præsumat, citra omnem doctrinam et sanctimoniam vitæ, de omnibus statuere hominibus eorumque dictis et factis; quasi ob solam potestatem ad sublimitatem spiritus habitaculum et ecclesiæ Christi sit, cum hæc ratione et Satanæ (cum sit princeps mundi), aut Turcæ, ecclesiæ Christi dici possit. Sed neque gentium imperia potentes citra sapientiam et bonitatem ferunt. Tum in ecclesiâ, solum spiritalis omnia iudicat et a nemine iudicatur [ut I Cor. ii. dicitur], non utique solus Papa, aut curia Romana, nisi spiritalis sint.

Verum universæ eorum temeritati oppono constanter invictum Paulum: [I Cor. xiv.] 'Si alteri sedenti aliquid revelatum fuerit, prior taceat.' Illic clare habes, Papam et quemvis alium majorem debere tacere, si alteri inferiori in ecclesiâ revelatum aliquid fuerit. Hæc ego auctoritate nixus, contempna Bullæ temeritate, cum fiducia articulos defendendos suscipio, nullius nudam damnationem tanti facturus (etiamsi Papa sit cum tota sua ecclesiâ), nisi Scripturis me erudierit: quorum est

Articulus primus.

Hæretica est sententiâ sed usitata, sacramenta novæ legis gratiam dare illis qui non ponunt obicem.'

Agnosco articulum meum, et quero ex vobis, egregii domini respectiviste, qui alios respectivè hæreticos, alios erroneos, alios scandalosos decrevistis, quo respicit hic articulus? Ad hæresim? ad errorem? ad scandalum? Aut quo vos respexistis cum damnantes? Ad Scripturam sanctam? ad sanctos patres? ad fidem? ad ecclesiam? Quin dicitis? Nec dum enim vos probandi negotio molesto, sed iudicandi solum debitum expostulo, ut sciam quid desit mihi. Vultis, infantes, pueri, ut ego dicam? Dico ergo illic articulus respectus duos habet. Altero respicit ad papistas damnatores siles, inter quos vultis, alios respectivè mulos, alios equos, quibus non est intellectus, ut qui prorsus nihil intelligunt et tamen omnia damnant. Altero respicit ad sacram Scripturam, quæ docet Rom. xiv : Omne quod non est ex fide peccatum esse. Ex quo sequitur sacramenta novæ legis non dare gratiam incredulis, (cum incredulitatis sit maximum peccatum, et obex crassissimus,) sed solum credentibus. Sola enim fides non ponit obicem ; cætera omnia sunt obex, etiamsi obicem illum non ponant, quem sophistæ somniant de actuali tantum proposito externi peccati. Confiteor ergo articulum non esse meum solum, sed veritatis catholicæ et Christianæ. Bullam vero damnatricem ejus, esse bis hæreticam, impiam et blasphemam, cum omnibus qui eam sequuntur ; qui, neglecto peccato incredulitatis, insaniant obicem tolli si homo peccare desinat, etiamsi nihil incredulus boni cogitet. Verum hæc latius et in libellis meis probavi, et probabo si Romani isti lallatores sua ausint aliquando probare, me confutaturi.

Articulus Secundus.

'In puero post baptismum negare remanens esse peccatum, est Paulum et Christum simul conculcare.'

Et hunc exigerem ut probarent recte damnari, si domini mei præ respectibus suis non essent, exæcati ut nec hoc perspicerent, quo nomine cum velint damnatum haberi. Nescio enim hæreticæ sit an erroneus. Et quid mirum, cum nec id damnatores ejus sciunt? Assero ergo et hunc articulum, per apostolum, Rom. vii. : 'Ego ipse mente servio legi Dei, et carne legi peccati.' Hic apertè apostolus ipsemet de se confitetur se peccare in carne, seu peccato servire. Et I Cor. i. 'Christus factus est nobis a Deo justitia, sapientia, sanctificatio, et redemptio.' Quomodo autem sanctificat sanctificatos, nisi quod [juxta Apocalyp.] Qui sanctus est, sanctificetur adhuc? At sanctificari est a peccatis mundari. Verum quid respectivists Bullatis cum Paulo apostolo? Ipsi sunt tota ecclesia universalis, quorum autoritate Paulus aut stat aut cadit, cum sit membrum et pars ecclesiæ. Increpet Dominus in te, Satan, et in satanicos istos tuos papistas.

Articulus Tertius.

'Fomes peccati, etiamsi nullum adis actuale peccatum, moratur exeuntem a corpore animam ab ingressu cæli.'

De hac quidem re nihil bæctemus definivi, sed copiosè satis et probabiliter disputavi, nec hodie certum sum quid cum tali anima agatur. At talpæ nostræ papales, cum necdum videant quo nomine hic articulus eis sit dignus damnatu visus, audent etiam asserere, quod tota ecclesia universalis ignorat. (Sap. vii.) Ego tamen adhuc, ista futili et stulta damnatione contenta; teneo articulum probabiliter esse verum. Cum enim fomes sit peccatum verè, (ut ex Rom. vii. et Gal. v. probavi), et peccatum non sinat intrare cælum (sicut scriptum est: Nihil iniquatum intrabit), arbitrari fomitem peccati remorari ingressum cæli. Neque enim hic pili foci somnia eorum qui peccatum fomitis extenuantes, pœnam peccati et defectum vocant, contra Scripturas apertas quæ peccatum appellant, et per gratiam (quæ peccati veri non ficti medicina est) sanari docent.

Articulus Quartus.

'Imperfecta charitas morituri fert secum necessariò magnum timorem, qui in se solo satis est facere pœnam purgatorii, et impedit introitum regni.'

Iste ex præcedenti sequitur, quem æque non asserui, licet probabiliter verum adhuc asseram, prius petita dispensatione arbitrio meo proprio, etiam invita Bulla, quæ aliam non afferre probationem potest, nisi hæc: Nos sumus sublimiores in ecclesia tyranni, immo ipsa ecclesia; ergo, sumus doctissimi et sanctissimi, pleni Spiritu Sancto, non potentes errare, etiamsi omni spurcicia omnium criminum, omni incitãtia, per orbem fœtæam cœu Lerna quædam. Sed istis rationibus apud me nihil promovetur: promovetur autem coram illis qui metunt, ne, si mea sententia obtineat, purgatorium e manu Papæ dilabatur, ac tum defunctorum vexandorum (redimendorum volui dicere) officia quæstuosissima (tanto damno accepto) sacerdotes et religiosos ad famem adigant. Oportuit ergo avaritiam hic vigilare, nec sinere suas frivolas opiniones sed turpilocosissimas, veritate superante, occidi.

Articulus Quintus.

'Tres esse partes pœnitentiæ, contritionem, confessionem, satisfactionem, non est fundatam in Scriptura Sacra, nec in antiquis sanctis christianis doctoribus.'

Hic articulus quo respectu damnetur, satis intelligo, respectivus enim est ad avaritiam. Quare et probatorem eorum respectivam scio, quæ est talis: Si articulus esset verus, tunc homines nihil darent pro satisfactione et indulgentiis; nec haberemus eos amplius vexare confessionibus, casibus reservatis, restrictis, ampliatis, pro nostro lucro; et sic pauperes fieremus, et cultus Dei minueretur in vigiliis et massis. Sed cultum Dei minus est impium: quare Lutherus est hæreticus.—Valet consequentia a respectu Bullæ ad papistas, et e contra.

Te per dominum Jesum oro, si quis gravis et eruditus lector hæc legeris, mihi indulgeas levitatem et (ut sic dixerim) puerilitatem istam. Vides enim, cum iis hominibus mihi rem esse, qui bis pueri sunt, et tamen omnium virorum heroas sese jactant. Dispeream si non compertissimum habeo, maximos et antesignanos duces populorum hæc (quam recitavi) plusquam septies stulta et ridicula ratiuncula motos ad meorum libellorum damnationem. Ego, nisi iram Dei super nos severientem flens intelligerem, quæ effeminatis pueris et fœci illi hominum ultimæ ex omni terra nos subiecit, præ indignitate rei dirumperem.

Mea sententia fuit et est hæc: satisfactionem eam quam claud queant tollere, non esse juris divini: Sin esset, non posse eam tolli per claves. Si quid aliud mihi hoc articulo isti Bullatores imponunt, suo more faciunt. Quid enim refert si Antichristus mentiatur?

Articulus Sextus.

'Contritio quæ paratur per discussionem, collectionem, et detestationem peccatorum, qua quis recogitat annos suos in amaritudine animæ suæ, ponderando peccatorum gravitatem, multitudinem, fœditatem, amissionem æternæ beatitudinis, ac æternæ damnationis acquisitionem; hæc contritio facit hypocritam, immo magis peccatorem.'

Proh incredibile cæcitatem et incitiam Bullarum istarum! Meus certè est articulus et Christianissimus, quod nihil innumerabilibus papis et papistis non patiar extorqueri. Hoc enim eâ doctrinâ egi, pœnitentiam nullius esse momenti nisi in fide et charitate fieret: quod ipsimet docent quoque, nisi quod, nec quid fides nec quid charitas sit, aut sciunt aut docent. Ideo dum mea in his own likeness to behold. Which causeth me yet to be uncertain what to think, whether my papists do dally and jest with me, in setting out such famous libels without any name, against me; or whether in truth and earnest they play the mad men so against me at Rome, or no. For first, neither do I see here the style (as it is called), nor the process of the court of Rome observed. And again (which maketh me more to doubt), herein be brought and condemned such articles, which it is plain and manifest to be most christian: whereby it seemeth to me most like, that the said monster was hatched by John Eckius, a man wholly compacted, and framed altogether, of lies, dissimulations, errors, and heresies.

false apostle.
See
Appendix.

The said suspicion this also partly confirmeth, that the said Eckius is said by the Romanists themselves to have been the apostle of such a goodly bull. And not unlike, when none could be more meet apostle for such an apostleship than he. And indeed I heard no less long since, than that a bull was in working against me at Rome, partly by the workmanship of Eckius (as the style and spirit thereof declareth); which, because it displeased the good and learned men there, was therefore deferred, yea and was also suppressed.

But whatsoever the case may be, it seemeth to me not unlike, wheresoever this apostle Eckius beareth rule, there to be the kingdom of Antichrist, and all kind of madness there to reign. In the mean time I will so deal, that I will not seem to believe pope Leo X., with his learned cardinals, to be the authors of this furious madness; which I do, not so much for the honour of the see of Rome, as because I will not be puffed up too much with pride, and seem to myself as one worthy to suffer such, so great, and so glorious things for the verity of God. For if it were so indeed, that the bishop of Rome did so furiously rage against me, who were then so happy before God as Luther, to be condemned for so manifest truth of such a prelate? wherein what were more to be wished for by me, than that I should never be absolved, reconciled, nor have any part with that so doltish and unlearned, wicked and damnant, sua ipsorum imprudenti contradictione damnant. Dico ergo, qui pœnitentiam sic docet ut promissæ misericordiæ Dei, et fidei in eandem, non majorem habeat curam quam carnificinæ istius, hic pœnitentiam Judæ Iscariotis docet, pestilens est diabolus animarum, et carnific conscientiarum. Lege autem libros illorum sophistarum de pœnitentia, et videbis eos non promissionis nec fidei ullam mentionem facere. Has enim partes pœnitentiæ vivas omittunt, et solis mortuis contritionibus homines exagitant. Sed latius aliâs.

Sed quid denuo articulos omnes probem, cum extent libelli ubi omnium rationem reddidi abunde, plura daturus si adversarii sua quoque in lucem dedissent? Quæ est enim stultitia, ut hoc uno mihi responsum velint, quod dicunt sibi damnata videri omnia mea, cum ego in hoc ipsum scripserim, ut suos errores ipsi agnoscerent quibus populum Dei hactenus dementaverunt? Non hoc expectavi ut damnarer, qui sciens et prudens damnata jam olim ab eis, adductis scripturis et rationibus, justificavi. Nec volui ut dicerent, quod ipsi saperent (sciebam enim omnia); sed an recte saperent, id quesitum est a me. Ille volui erudiri, et ecce nemo audet prodire! Quare videu asinos istos, non modo mea et sua non intelligere, sed præ insigni hebetudine nec hoc percipere, quid meis libellis quaerierim. Arbitrantur enim se tales in opinione mea esse, apud quos sit veritas; cum nihil minus de eis suspicatus sim. Cum enim olim ab eis omnia ista scriptum damnata esse, non damnandus sed velut jam damnatus ab eis prodii, damnationem eorum tracturum impiam, hæreticam, et blasphemam, eosque (nisi ratione reddita rectè sese sapere docuissent) erroris et hæreseos crimine publicè reos acturus: ipsi (velut ridiculus citharædus chorda semper eadem oberrans) petito principio aliud non reddunt, nisi 'damnatus quæ damnavimus,' nova dialectica probantes idem per seipsum, damnationem pro damnationem. O ineptissimos et insulsißimos damnatores! Ubi manet illud Petri: 'Semper parati ad reddendam rationem de ea quæ in vobis est fide et spe?'

Quod cum Papistæ et Bullistæ isti ignorantissimi ante veritatis manifestæ faciem sic sunt confusi metuque percursi ut pro se suaque sententia ne hiscere quidem audeant, et meticuloussimam hanc Bullam agrè emutrint: ego, inimicorum fuga erectus, hanc meticulousam damnationem vice approbationis robustissimæ accipio, et suam in eos ipsos retorqueo damnationem. Qua enim ratione seipsos possent magis damnare, quàm, dum metuunt erroris et hæreseos rei inveniri si rationem reddere cogerentur, ad hoc extremum et frustraneum miserorum elugium labuntur, ut clausis et oculis et auribus, dicant: Nolo, Damno, Non audio, Non admitto? Si ego sic insanißimam, obsecro, quanta gloria in me triumphant! "Degeneres animos timor arguit."

Ego itaque, ne prolixo lectorem gravem sermone si singulos articulos prosequar, his scriptis testor me omnia damnata per Bullam istam execrabilem confiteri pro catholicis dogmatibus, de quibus rationem reddidi editis libellis. Deinde adhuc volo libellos meos in orbem vagantes vice publicæ accusationis haberi adversus impios istos sophistas populi Dei seductores; ita ut, nisi ratione reddita me convincerit et sua stauerint, reos erroris, hæreseos, sacrilegii (quantum in me fuerit) merito eos censeam; monens, rogans, hortansque in Domino omnes qui Christum verè confitentur, ab eorum perveris et impiis doctrinis sibi caveant, et verum illum Antichristum per eos in orbem regnare non dubitent. Quod si quis fratrem hoc monitorium meum contempserit, sciat me esse mundum a sanguine suo, et in extremo judicio Christi excusatum. Nihil enim omni quod charitati Christianæ debui. Porro, si alia via non quo damnatoribus verbosis et inanibus resistere, ultimum quod habeo exponam, nempe hanc animam et hunc sanguinem. Melius est enim me milies occidi, quàm unam syllabam damnatorum articulorum revocare. Et sicut ipsi me excommunicant pro sacrilega hæresi sua, ita eos rursus ego excommunico pro sancta veritate Dei. Christus iudex viderit utra excommunicatio apud cum valeat. Amen.

furious Antichrist? Happy were that day, happy were that death, and to be received with all joy and thankfulness to God, if it might be my hap at any time—in such a cause as this is, to be apprehended and to suffer death. But give the honour of this cause unto others, and let this matter find its martyr worthy for the same: I, for my sins, am not worthy to come to that honour.

Ecclesiastical Affairs.

Let other men, therefore, think of these Romanists what they list; thus I think, that whosoever was the author of this bull, he is a very Antichrist; and against Antichrist these things I write, to redeem the verity of Christ, so much as in me lieth, which he laboureth to extinguish. And first, that he shall obtain no part of his will in any thing against me, here I protest before God and our Lord Jesus Christ, and his holy angels, and all the world, that I dissent with all my heart from the condemnation of this bull, which bull I also do curse and execrate, as a sacrilegious and blasphemous enemy of Christ the Son of God, our Lord, Amen!

Luther thinketh himself not worthy to suffer in so good a cause.

Luther's protestation.

Furthermore, I hold, defend, and embrace with the full trust of my spirit, those articles in the said bull condemned; and I affirm, that the same ought to be holden by all faithful Christians, under pain of eternal malediction; and that they are to be counted for Antichrists, whosoever have consented to the said bull; whom I also, together with the spirit of all them that purely know the truth, do utterly detest, and shun them, according to the precept of our Lord Jesu Christ, Amen. And let this stand for my revocation, 'O bulla, vere bullarum filia;' that is, 'O thou bull, which art the very daughter of all vain bubbles.'

Mark here how Luther recanteth.

This my confession and protestation made (for witness whereof I take all them that shall read these presents), before I proceed to defend and declare these aforesaid articles, I will first begin with certain arguments for the confutation of the said bull; whereof the first I will take of the ignorance of this Antichrist. For the Apostle Peter so commandeth, that we should be ready to render a reason of that faith and hope which is in us; and the apostle Paul willet a bishop to be mighty to exhort in sound doctrine, and to refute the gainsayers.<sup>2</sup> And these things be they, which, now three years ago, I have desired and looked for out of Rome, or from them that take part with Rome: which things, also, we do read to be observed most diligently amongst the ancient fathers, whensoever they condemned heresy: neither do we read that the apostles did ever decree any thing in their councils, but they first alleged the holy Scripture. So I also, when I waited that they would answer me with grapes, and inform me with true testimonies of the Scripture, behold they bring to me sour and wild grapes, condemning me with nothing else but bare words; whereas I have fortified my matter with plain scriptures.

The papists will not abide the trial of the Scripture.

I say unto thee, O thou most unlearned Antichrist, hast thou joined such brain-sick rashness together with such barbarous ignorance, that thou wilt presume to think all men to be turned into stocks and blocks, and to think that thou, with thy bare words only, canst triumph against the well-armed force and power of God's holy word? hast thou learned this manner of condemning from the magistralties of Cologne and of Louvain?

If this be the church's manner of damning errors, only to say, 'I like it not,' 'I deny it,' 'I will not,' what fool, what patch, what ass, what block, cannot condemn after this manner? Is not thy whorish face ashamed, to dare once in the public sight of the church to set the trifling vanities of thy naked and bare words only against the thunderbolts of God's eternal word? O impudent condemnation and right seemly for Antichrist! who hath not one jot or tittle to bring against such evident scriptures inferred against him, but only with one word cometh and saith, 'I condemn thee.' And why then do we not believe the Turk? why do we not admit the Jews? why do we not honour the heretics<sup>2</sup> (who also condemn our writings as well as he), if it be enough only to condemn? unless peradventure for that very reason we are not to give place unto them, because they condemn us not utterly without some scriptures and reasons; whereas we, after a new found fashion of our own, do condemn utterly without all scriptures and reasons. What then shall I think to be the cause, why they proceeded against me with their bull condemnatory, so vain, so ridiculous, so trifling, but only their mere blockishness, whereby they, seeing my allegations to be true, and not able to abide, nor yet to confute the same, thought to terrify me with their vain rattling of their rotten parchment. But Luther, being accustomed to wars [bellis], is not to be terrified with bulls [bullis], and hath learned to put a difference between a piece of paper, and the omnipotent word of God.

The pope's vain terrors cannot make Luther afraid

Respectively.

Of the like ignorance proceedeth this also, that they, against their own conscience, durst not particularly digest all and singular the articles in their order; for they feared lest they should note that for heretical, which they were not able perhaps to convict either to be erroneous or offensive, and therefore they have found out this adverb 'respectively' and after the numbering of the articles, then come they, and say that some be 'respectively' heretical, some erroneous, and some offensive; which is as much to say, that we suppose them to be heretical, some erroneous, and some slanderous: but we cannot tell 'qui, quales, quanti,' that is, which is which, nor in what degree they are so. O dastardly ignorance, how slippery and cowardly art thou! how art thou afraid of the light! how dost thou turn and return into all things, lest thou shouldst be taken, like a Proteus!<sup>1</sup> And yet, for all that, thou shalt not so escape; yea in thy wiliness thou shalt the rather be overtaken and subverted.

Come out therefore, O thou ass-headed Antichrist! show forth thy wisdom, and set forth thine own in order. Tell us, if thou canst, what sayest thou or meanest thou, when thou sayest this article is heretical, this is erroneous, this is offensive. For it becometh such a worshipful condemner to know what he is condemning; and too shameful it is to condemn an article for heretical, and yet cannot name the same; neither will I be answered here with 'respectively,' but I look to be taught simply and plainly; for (to indulge a joke at such folly) I am one of Ocham's faction, which condemn respectives, and love to have all things laid down simply and absolutely.

The dotage of Antichrist.

Thou seest therefore, good reader, the ignorant dotage of this Antichrist; how craftily, and yet grossly, he thinketh to walk in a net under his adverb 'respectively,' who not only doth not point out what the truth is, and the cause of his condemning, but neither also dare prove any error, nor show forth what it is that he condemneth; and yet must he needs condemn. Is not this, trow you, a pretty kind of damning, to damn, and cannot tell what he damneth? Is not this a fine manner of elocution, passing all rhetoric, to speak, and yet not to know what he is speaking about? What purgations might we wish, sufficient to purge the brains of these bull-bragging bedlamites? with such blindness and doltishness are all these adversaries of God's truth worthy to be plagued.

Eckius.

But I know whereupon all this grief riseth. The origin thereof is this: Eckius, mine old adversary, remembering how he was put to shame enough at Leipsic when he, rousing himself upon his stage, and frothing at the mouth, with a furious voice called me three hundred times 'heretic,' for the articles of Huss, and yet afterwards was not able to prove the same, whereas the condemnatory sentence of the council of Constance alleged of me, otherwise than Eckius looked for, had noted no certain article for heretical; nay more, the same condemnation, much like to this of ours, with the like foolishness had called some of Huss's articles heretical, some erroneous, and some offensive; and Eckius, hearing this, being confounded in himself for his impudent rashness, perceiving that he had called me heretic falsely and untruly, has thought now to heal this wound of his at Rome, and there to establish his false and impudent lie. But the lying sophister shall not prevail, by the help, I trust, of Christ; for I ask and require you still, that they absolutely and not respectively, distinctly and not confusedly, simply and not dissemblingly, plainly and not obscurely, particularly and not in general, do show what is and what is not heretical. But when will they so do? When Christ and Belial, or when light and darkness, shall agree together.

Eckius taken with a lie.

And what shall I do then in the mean time? First, I will condemn these dastardly dotipoles<sup>2</sup> and unlearned papists and apostles of Antichrist. And I will scorn them as Elias did, and say, 'If Baal be God, let him answer. Peradventure he is drunk, or busy journeying: cry out higher, for he is a god, and peradventure heareth.'<sup>3</sup> For what other thing do these bull-bragging asses deserve else, that condemn that they know not, and confess all their own ignorance?

(1) 'Proteus,' is a certain monster among the poets, which turneth himself into all shapes.

(2) See the Appendix.—Ed.

(3) 1 Kings xvii.

Secondly, I will not be troubled nor disquiet myself for the matter, being not to be counted heretic, erroneous, or offensive, so long as I shall not be proved and plainly convicted with simple and manifest words in what article I am so judged. Neither do I here charge my papists, these blockheads, that I will put them to their proofs, but only that they will show me at least my error; that is, that they will show me, if they know what it is that they themselves do prattle of, or have any feeling of their own doings. For so long as they assign me no heretical article, I am at free liberty to deny what article soever they lay unto me to be heretical, and say it is catholic.

Ecclesiastical Affairs.

Again, what stupidity is it in this wicked and doltish Antichrist, worthy to be laughed at, whereas these most worthy souls do distinguish heretical articles from those that be erroneous, and the erroneous from offensive, and those again from scandalous! By the which subtle distinction of those most acute gentry this we do gather, that that article which is erroneous is not heretical; and if it be not heretical, what doth it then appertain to these ecclesiastical condemners, who ought to condemn those things only which be heretical? For that which is not heretical, is catholic; as Christ himself saith, 'He that is not against us is with us.'<sup>1</sup> Yea, I would wish that these jolly sophisters would show me in all the church an article that is erroneous and not heretical: for if it be erroneous, it differeth nothing from heretical, but only in stiffness of him who defendeth it. For all things be equally either true or false, although affection, in some one thing which is true or false, may be greater or less. Ye see therefore again, how these my gentlemen with their bulls are not able to produce me one article which is erroneous and not heretical; and yet, like wise brain-sick men, they will needs babble they know not themselves what, condemning that which they find erroneous and not heretical, which cannot stand either in matter or in words; so that such as are the articles, such is the condemnation.

The brutish distinction of the papists between articles heretical, erroneous, scandalous, and offensive. Erroneous.

The like wisdom also they show in affirming that to be scandalous, which is neither heretical nor erroneous. That article I would fain see either in my books, or in the words and works of any writer else from the beginning of the world to the latter end. What made my papists then to excogitate these so prodigious monsters, but only their ignorance and fury? unless, peradventure, they call those articles scandalous in the same way that true and catholic articles are wont to be. For what is more scandalous than the truth? Yea, only the truth is scandalous to all proud and senseless persons, as it is said of Christ: 'We preach,' saith St. Paul, 'Christ crucified; a stumbling-stone to the Jews, and to the Gentiles foolishness;'<sup>2</sup> and, 'He is set to be the fall and rising up of many in Israel.'<sup>3</sup> Wherefore, whereas my papists do distinguish scandalous articles from heretical and erroneous, and forasmuch as that which is not heretical or erroneous must needs be catholic and true; it followeth thereof, that articles be understood by them as scandalous and are condemned by them for such which be very catholic and sound. O worthy condemnation, and meet for the papists!

Scandalous.

Mark here, good reader, whither this blind impiety transporteth itself; how it derideth and mocketh itself; how easily it is taken in its own words; how fond and foolish it is in its pursuits, not only not proving any error or slander in these articles, but also, in stead thereof, casting out things impossible and most foolishly repugnant to themselves! Where is then, thou most luckless Bull, thy unlucky 'respectivè' now become? whither lookest thou? Verily into the bottomless pit of thine own impiety and stolidity.

The like, also, is to be said touching the articles offensive, which must be neither scandalous, nor erroneous, nor heretical, seeing they are made distinct by such great rabbins. Who will not now marvel at the deep and profound wisdom of these papists, who could find out that to be offensive in the church, which is neither false, nor heretical, nor scandalous, but true, sound, catholic and edifying? and yet must that also be condemned! And who would not now desire and covet to be condemned, also, by such hair-brained folks? who, by their own condemning, do utter themselves to approve things damnable, and to condemn things justifiable; that is, who openly show themselves, to their own great ignominy and shame, to be more senseless than stocks and stones! Go ye now, therefore, O ye impious and brainless papists, and if ye will needs write, show yourselves more sober: for this bull, it appeareth, was either spewed out in your night feasts among drabs, or else huddled up in the rage of the canicular days : for never were there any dizards<sup>1</sup> that would show themselves so mad.

Let us now turn this folly of Antichrist on himself, and cast it in his own teeth, and of his own words let us judge him and condemn him, that hereafter he may learn to take better heed, and to be better advised in his lying. For, as the proverb saith, 'A liar hath need to have a good memory.' If some articles be offensive, and others heretical, and thou condemnest him who is no heretic, and consequently a true catholic, although he be six hundred times offensive, doth not thy shameless mouth then condemn thyself, not only of heresy, but of extreme impiety, blasphemy, and treason against God's holy truth, showing thyself to be the man indeed who is the adversary, and is extolled above all that is called God, or is worshipped? Art not thou, then, the man of sin, the son of perdition, that denieth God his Redeemer, and taketh away the love of truth, to establish the setting forth of his error, for men to believe iniquity; as Paul foretold?<sup>2</sup> for if the article be not heretical, it cannot be offensive or slanderous, but only to such heretics as Antichrist is, and enemies to all piety. See therefore how excellently his shameless and most foolish Bull, while it condemneth in me one thing to be heretical, and another offensive, doth manifestly declare the authors thereof to be true heretics, and the enemies of God indeed. So that now it may appear that there is no knowledge nor counsel against the Lord, seeing blind impiety is thus caught in the words of his own mouth: so truly it is said, that he that casteth up a stone on high, it falleth down again upon his own pate.<sup>3</sup>

The pope uttereth his own wickedness.

And (what crowneth all) by this their wicked contradiction it cometh to pass, that the cogitations of their own hearts be revealed, and that they (such is their impudence) themselves chiefly do utter and disclose their own wickedness which they covet most to conceal, that all men may see how ready they are to condemn all verity even at once. For when they affirm such articles to be heretical, which neither they can, nor know, nor yet dare show or name to be heretical, what have we thereby to understand, but that they are adversaries of Christ from the bottom of their hearts, and ready to impugn all truth? and yet, notwithstanding, with their damnable hypocrisy, they pretend that they are condemning heresies! Learn, learn, ye asses with your blustering bulls, learn, I say, what it is for Christ to be a sign of contradiction, and a stone of offence.<sup>4</sup> How soon and easily are all your inward impiety and your ignominy disclosed with the same covert of words, wherewith in vain you went about to cloak the same?<sup>5</sup> Thus then have we here proved by this first and manifest argument, that the aforesaid bull proceedeth from none other than very Antichrist himself, the chiefest adversary of God and of all godliness. And now let either Eckius, or the pope, acknowledge if he dare, and then consider what opinion we ought to have of him, or what name to give him; in whom all cursed names, as in one heap, do concur together and agree, as impiety, blasphemy, ignorance, foolishness, hypocrisy, lying, yea, briefly, Satan himself with his own Antichrist.

The bull condemneth books that have no error.

Neither doth this impiety any thing less appear in that also which I will now say. For this worshipful bull decreeth in plain and most impudent words, that those books also of mine ought to be burned, in which are no errors contained, to the end that the memory of me may be utterly rooted out.

The papists pretend to know and maintain the verity of Christ, and yet cannot abide it.

Canst thou, O christian reader, now doubt that the great dragon of hell himself speaketh in this Bull? It is an old proverb, 'that the ass singeth therefore evil-favouredly, because he taketh his note too high.' So this bull, in like manner, should have piped more tuneably, if he had not set out his blasphemous throat so open against heaven, so impudently and devilishly condemning also the manifest and evident truth. For hitherto Satan, whensoever he oppressed the truth, did it under the colour of truth. But this man of sin, the adversary that is extolled above God, without all colour, not privily but apertly, and that in the open church of God, without all shame taketh upon him to condemn, and commandeth to be burned, the sincere verity of Christ, known and allowed both of him and all others. What more could be done amongst the Turks? What place is this worthy of, I pray thee, but the deepest dungeon of hell? And are ye not afraid, ye Antichrists! with your bulls, lest stones and trees should sweat with blood, at the most horrible sight of this your execrable impiety and blasphemy?

Where art thou now, good emperor Charles? Where are ye, christian kings and princes? Ye have given your names to Christ in baptism, and can ye now abide these infernal voices of such an Antichrist? Where be ye bishops? where be ye doctors? where be all ye that confess Christ? Can ye hold your peace at these horrible and monstrous doings of the papists? O miserable church of God! which art made now so great a scorn, and a very mocking stock of Satan! O miserable all that live in these times! The wrath of God is finally come upon the papists, enemies to the cross of Christ and verity of God, resisting all men, and forbidding the truth of Christ to be taught and preached; as St. Paul said of the Jews. Admit, I pray you, that I were such a one indeed, as that cursed and malicious Bull doth make me to be, a heretic, erroneous, schismatical, offensive, scandalous, in certain of my books; yet why should the other books of mine be condemned that are catholic, christian, true, edifying and peaceable? Where have ye, O wretched papists, learned this religion, that, because the person is evil, ye should damn and burn the holy and sound verity of God? Can ye not destroy men, but you must also destroy the truth? Will ye pluck up the good wheat also with the cockle? Will ye also scatter the corn away together with the chaff? And why then receive ye Origen in his catholic books, and do not utterly reject him altogether? Yea, why suffer ye wicked Aristotle (in whom is nothing taught but errors), and do not at least in some part condemn him? Why burn ye not and set on fire the wicked, barbarous, unlearned, and heretical decretals of the pope? Why do ye not all this, I say? but only for that ye are set in this holy place for no other cause, but only to be the abomination spoken of in Daniel, which should put down truth and set up lies, and the operation of error: <sup>1</sup> for this thing, and no other, becometh the seat of Antichrist.

The pope condemneth as well the good books of Luther as the others, without all respect of truth, or of the cause.

Wherefore this I say to thee, pope Leo X., and to you lords cardinals, and all others whosoever, in any part or doing in that court of Rome, and this I speak boldly unto your faces, if this Bull hath come out in your name, and by your knowledge, and if ye will so acknowledge it for your own, then will I likewise use my power, by which I am through the mercy of God made in my baptism a son of God, and coheir with Christ, being founded upon a sure rock, which neither fear the gates of hell, nor heaven, nor earth—and say, admonish, and exhort you in the Lord, that you will reform yourselves, and take a better way, and refrain hereafter from those diabolical blasphemies, and too much exceeding presumptuous impieties; and that too quickly, for unless ye so do, know for certain that I, with all them that worship Christ, do account your seat, possessed and oppressed of Satan himself, to be the damned seat of Antichrist, which we not only do not obey, and will not be subject nor conconcorate unto, but also do detest and abhor the same, as the principal and chiefest enemy of Christ; being ready, in defence of this our sentence and profession, not only to suffer gladly your fond foolish censures, but also do pray you heartily, that you will never assoil us again, nor ever number us in your fellowship: and moreover, to fulfil your bloody tyranny, we do willingly offer ourselves to die for the same. And, if the Spirit of Christ and the efficacy of our faith shall effect any thing, by these our writings, if ye shall still so persist in your fury, we condemn you; and, together with this bull, and all the decretals, we give you over to Satan, to the destruction of the flesh, that your spirit in the day of our Lord may be delivered, in the name which you persecute, of Jesus Christ our Lord, Amen!

Luther's warning to the pope.

For our Lord Jesus Christ yet liveth and reigneth (in whom I do nothing doubt), who, I firmly trust, will shortly come and slay with the spirit of his mouth, and destroy with the brightness of his coming, this man of sin, and son of perdition; forasmuch as I cannot deny, if the pope be the author and doer of these monstrous doings, but he is the true, final, most wicked, and famous Antichrist, that subverteth the whole world by the operation of his delusions; as we see it in all places fulfilled and accomplished.

The pope the true Antichrist.

But whither is the zeal of faith carrying me? for I am not as yet fully persuaded this to be the pope's bull, but to proceed from his wicked apostle Eckius, who, with his fathers, furiously gaping at me like a gulf, would draw me clean in, singing with the wicked thus, 'Let us swallow him up quick and whole like hell, and like one descending down into the pit.'<sup>1</sup> For little careth this furious madbrain how the verity of God be extinguished (yea, he would count that for a lucre), so he might fill his malicious desire with the blood of his brother. Oh miserable state of the church at this time, worthy to be bewailed with tears of blood! But who heareth our groanings? or who comforteth our weepings? The fury of the Lord seemeth to be inexorable against us.

Over and besides, as they are mighty facetious and pleasant, in order belike to sport themselves with some merry matter amongst their earnest business, they have written, that besides other amazing friendship which they have showed unto me, they have also offered to support me with money, and to bear my charges with their liberality, in my journey to Rome. A new charity forsooth is come upon the city of Rome, which, after it hath pilled and polled the whole world of their money, and hath consumed and wasted the same by intolerable tyranny, now cometh, and to me only offereth money. But this impudent lie, I know with whose hammer it was coined: Cajetan the cardinal, a man born and formed to lie for the whetstone, after his mighty successful legation dispatched in Germany, coming safe to Rome, there pretendeth that he promised me money; whereas he, being at Augsburg, was there in such miserable penury, and so pinching in his house, that it was thought he would have famished his family. But thus it becometh the Bull to be 'verè Bulla;' that is, a thing of nought, void of all truth and wit.

And so these great judges and condemnners, after all this, have yet authority to command us to believe them to say truth, when they do nothing but lie; and that they are good catholics, when they be stark heretics; and that they are true Christians, when they play the very Antichrist: and all by the virtue of this distributive 'Quodcunque ligaveris,' etc., that is, 'Whatsoever thing thou bindest,' etc., so that where nothing is excepted, they think they may do all things. Who are rather instigated by Satan, seeing that they not only do lie most loudly and manifestly, but also (which passeth all impudency), do vaunt and commend their liberality before the people, to bring me more in hatred, making men falsely to believe that they offered friendship and money unto me: whereas these tyrants of Rome, if they had had any truth, goodness, or godliness in them, should have taken some better heed in their doing and speaking, so that an adversary might not entertain even a suspicion of evil against them. But now, if there were no other matter else to bring this Bull out of credit, only this gross and foolish lie were sufficient to declare, how light, vain, and false this Bull is. What! would Rome, think ye, offer money to me? And how then coineth this, which I know to be most certain, that through the money-changers (the bank, as they call it) two or three hundred crowns were assigned in Germany to be paid over to any assassin who would murder Luther? For these be the reasons and arguments whereby now fighteth, reigneth, and triumpheth the holy apostolic see, the mistress of faith, and mother of all churches, which long since should have been proved to be the very seat of Antichrist, and manifold ways heretical, if she had fought with the sword of the Spirit, which is the word of God; whereof she herself is nothing ignorant. And therefore, because she would not be brought to that issue, thus she fareth, and taketh on like as she were mad, in the church of Christ; confounding and consuming all things with wars, murders, bloodshed, death, and destruction; and yet, for all this, they must needs be counted most holy fathers in God, vicars of Christ, and pastors of his flock!

But go to (that I may also dally with them a while); let them yet send me the money they spake of—for as touching their promise and safe-conduct (because I will not overcharge them), that I gladly resign to them again, seeing I have no great need thereof, so that the money may come to my hands. But here I must require so much as may suffice me, to wit, that I may be furnished with fifty thousand footmen, and ten thousand horsemen, to conduct me safe to Rome; and so, for any other promise of safe-conduct I will not trouble them. And this I require because of the danger that is in Rome, that devoureth up her inhabitants; neither keepeth, nor ever did keep promise with any; where these most holy fathers do slay their beloved children for the love of God, and brethren destroy their brethren, to do service to Christ, as the manner is and the style at Rome. In the mean time I will keep myself free and safe from the citation of the most reverend Bull. O ye miserable varlets! who are so confounded with the truth, and with your own conscience, that neither ye can lie handsomely, neither dare ye speak the truth; and yet neither can ye keep yourselves quiet, though to your perpetual ignominy and confusion.

Furthermore, here in this bull is brought in a strange fashion of style not heard of before. For whereas Augustine hath said, that he would not believe the gospel except he had been moved by the authority of the church, now cometh in this goodly Bull, and maketh this catholic church to be a few reverend cardinals his brethren, and priors of regular orders, masters of divinity, and doctors of the law, out of whose counsel the said Bull boasteth herself to be born and brought forth; new-born offspring, forsooth, of the universal church! O happy travail, no doubt, of this catholic church, never seen nor heard of before, and such as Augustine, the valiant impugner of sects, if he did see it, would not doubt to call it the synagogue of the devil! See, therefore, the madness of these papists: The universal church is a few cardinals, priors, and doctors, scarcely perhaps twenty persons in all; when, also, it is possible enough, that never a one of them all is the member of a single chapel or altar. And whereas the church is the communion of saints, as we say in the creed, out of this communion of saints, that is, out of this universal church, all they then must needs be excluded, whosoever be not in the number of these twenty persons: and so, whatsoever these holy men decide to be received, by and by the universal church must needs hold and believe the same, albeit they be liars, heretics, and Antichrists, determining nothing but that which is abominable.

Would there ever any man think such doltishness and madness to be in Rome? Are there any brains in these men's heads, think ye, or hearts in their bodies? Augustine speaketh of the church dispersed through the whole world, confessing the gospel with one consent; neither would God, that any book else should be received with such consent of the whole world as the holy Scripture (as the said Augustine, in his Confessions, affirmeth), lest, by the receiving of other books, schisms may take occasion to rise; according as the wicked see of Rome hath long sought by her decrees, and hath, for a great part, alas! brought the same to pass. But yet the universal church did never agree thereto; for in the east, west, and south there have been Christians, who, being content only with the gospel, have not regarded how Rome hath gone about of a particular church to make herself a universal church, and accuseth other churches as schismatical; whereas she is the first that hath cut off herself from the universal church, and striveth in vain to draw the whole universal church to her, being the mother and fountain of all schisms, and all by the means of this tyranny.

Let no man, therefore, ever think that this true catholic church aforesaid will believe or maintain those things which this detestable Bull here prattleth, when neither that which is the very true church of Rome indeed doth herself so think, nor taketh that by and by to be catholic, whatsoever is known to proceed from the church of Rome: for, as I said, there is no book which shall be called catholic hereafter, as neither it hath been heretofore, besides only the holy Scripture. For the church of Rome, it may suffice to glory herself to be a little piece of the universal church, vexing herself only with her own decrees. This bull, forsooth, is rather the production of the court of Rome; for such wisdom and religion may well be seem that seat of Satan, which seeketh to be counted for the whole universal church, and obtrudeth her foolish and wicked Bulls most arrogantly and vainly on the whole world, as if it were catholic doctrine. Whose pride and presumption hath grown so far, that she, trusting upon her own power, without all learning and holiness of life, taketh upon her to prescribe laws to all men, for all their doings and sayings; as though, for dominion only and loftiness of spirit, she were to be counted the house and church of Christ;<sup>1</sup> whereas, by this means, Satan also (the prince of the world), or the Turk, might be counted the church of Christ. For neither do the monarchies of the gentiles abide mighty princes to reign over them without wisdom and goodness. Furthermore, in the church the spiritual man only

But against all this their rash presumption I boldly set the invincible champion of the church, St. Paul, who saith, 'If any thing be revealed to another that sitteth by, let the first man hold his peace.'<sup>1</sup> Here have ye plainly, that the pope, or any other elder, whatsoever he be, ought to keep silence, if any thing be revealed to another that is inferior in the church. I, therefore, upon his authority, contemning the presumptuous proceeding of this Bull, do confidently take upon me to defend the articles, caring nothing for the bare condemnation of any person, yea of the pope himself, with his whole church, unless he shall inform me by the Scriptures. Whereof the first article is this:

Article. I. 'It is an heretical opinion, and also common, that the sacraments of the new law do give grace to them that have no obstacle in themselves to the contrary.'

Luther's answer to the first article.

Answer:—I acknowledge this article to be mine, and I ask of you, good masters respectivists, who have decided these articles respectively, some to be heretical, some erroneous, some slanderous, etc., to which belongeth this article, I pray you? to heresy, to error, to slander, or offence? Or by what rule did you go in condemning the same? The holy Scripture? the holy fathers? faith? the church? By which of these, I beseech you, tell me? Nor do I here put you to the labour of proving, but only require you to show your judgment, what you think, that I may know wherein I say amiss. Will you that I should tell you, you babish infants and noddies, to what this article referreth? I will. This article hath two points in view; whereof the one respecteth the papists, the condemnners hereof, amongst whom it seeth some to be mules, some to be horses, which have no understanding, and to be void of all sense; and yet, notwithstanding, they will needs condemn all things. Another respect it hath to the holy Scripture, which saith, 'Whatsoever is not of faith, is sin.'<sup>2</sup> Whereupon consequently it followeth, that the sacraments of the new law can give no grace to the unbelievers (forasmuch as the sin of infidelity is the greatest obstacle), but only to the believers: for only faith putteth no obstacle. All other things be obstacles, although they put not the same obstacles which the sophisters understand, meaning only of the actual purpose of external sin. I confess therefore this article not only to be mine, but also to be an article of the catholic and christian verity; and the Bull which condemneth the same, to be twice heretical, impious and blasphemous, with all them which follow the same,<sup>3</sup> who, little regarding the sin of infidelity, do foolishly hold, that the obstacle is taken away, if a man cease from sinning, although the unbeliever can think no good thing. But these things I have made good more at large in my books, and will further establish, if those prating Romanists dare at any time prove their opinion, and confute mine.

Two respects noted in this article.

Article. II. 'To deny that sin remaineth in a child after his baptism, is as much as to tread down Christ and Paul together under foot.'

Luther's answer to the second article.

Answer:—I would also require of them to show the cause why this article is condemned, if they were not so blinded in their fantastical respects that they are not able to perceive why they would have this article condemned: and yet I cannot tell whether it be heretical or erroneous; and no marvel when the condemnners themselves cannot tell me. I maintain, therefore, this article also, by the apostle's words, 'I myself in my mind do serve the law of God, and in my flesh the law of sin.'<sup>4</sup> Here the apostle confesseth plainly of himself, that in his flesh he serveth sin. And also, 'Christ is made to us of God our righteousness, our wisdom, sanctification, and redemption.'<sup>5</sup> But then, how doth he sanctify them that be sanctified already? unless it be as the Apocalypse saith; 'He that is holy let him be holy still.'<sup>6</sup> 'To be sanctified, is as much as to be nurged from sin: but what have these our respectivists and their Bull to do with the apostle Paul, seeing they are the whole universal church, by whose authority Paul either standeth or falleth, being but a member only, and a part of the church? The Lord rebuke thee Satan, and these thy satanical papists!

III. 'The original root of sin, although no actual sin do follow, stoppeth the soul departing out of the body from entrance into heaven.'

Answer:—As touching this matter, I never defined any thing hitherto, but largely and probably I have disputed hereof; neither yet to this day am I fully certain what is accomplished with such a soul. But our papists, more blind than moles, when they are nothing able to perceive for what cause this article is worthy to be condemned, yet dare they take upon them to pronounce that, which the whole universal church is ignorant of: I yet, notwithstanding, contemning this foolish and fond condemnation aforesaid, do hold this article probably to be true. For, seeing this original root, which I spake of, is truly sin, as I have proved from Rom. vii. and Gal. v., and seeing that sin letteth a man from entering into heaven, as it is written, 'No polluted thing shall enter;' I suppose, therefore, that original sin withholdeth a man from entering into heaven: for I do not any thing at all esteem the fantastical dreams of them, which, extenuating original sin, do call it the penalty of sin, and imperfection; plain against the manifest Scriptures, which call it sin, and teach the same to be cured by grace, which is the medicine of true, and not of feigned sin.

Article.

Luther's answer to the third article.

IV. 'The imperfect charity of a man departing, necessarily carrieth with it great fear, which of itself is enough to make the pain of purgatory, and letteth the entrance into the kingdom of heaven.'

Answer:—This followeth of the other going before: which, in like manner, I did not determinately affirm, although I do yet hold the same probably true, asking first a dispensation for mine own arbitrement, even in defiance of the Bull, which is not able to bring forth any other probation but this: 'We are the highest powers in the church, yea we are the church itself: ergo, we are the best learned, most holiest, full of the Holy Ghost, which cannot err, although we stink like a filthy puddle to the whole world, polluted with all kind of sins, and drowned in ignorance.' But all these reasons prevail nothing with me: peradventure they may with them that fear lest, if my opinion should prevail, then purgatory should escape out of the pope's hands; and then priests and religious men, having lost their most gainful offices of vexing (of releasing, I would have said) the dead, should be pinched by the bellies and brought to penury. It was time, therefore, for their greedy avarice here to awake and look about, and not to suffer their frivolous opinions, but yet very gainful, to be overcome with truth, and so to be overthrown.

Luther's answer to the fourth article.

The pope's doctrine gainful, to the purse.

V. 'That repentance consisteth of three parts, to wit contrition, confession, and satisfaction, is not founded in holy Scripture, nor in ancient, holy, and christian doctors.'

Answer:—This article, in what respect it is condemned, I do right well perceive; for the respect thereof is to greedy covetousness, and therefore I know that the probation thereof hath the like respect, which is this: 'If this article were true, then men would give nothing for satisfaction and indulgences, neither should we have any more pretence to vex them with confessions, cases reserved, restricted, or amplified, for our gain: and so should we become beggars, and God's service should be diminished in vigils and masses: but it is wicked that God's service should be diminished; therefore, Luther is a heretic.' This consequence holds 'a respectu Bullæ ad papistas,' that is, from the bull to the papists, and contrariwise.

Article.

Luther's answer to the fifth article.

I beseech thee, by the Lord Jesus, whatsoever grave and learned reader shalt read these things, that thou wilt pardon this my levity, and, as it may seem my childishness. For thou seest how I have to do with such men as be twice children, and yet do brag themselves to be peers and principal pillars of all men. I assure you, I know it most certainly to be true, that there be the Ecclesiastical Affairs. greatest leaders and governors of the people, which this so utterly ridiculous and foolish reason above recited ha'h moved to the condemnation of my books. And did I not perceive (with tears I speak it) the anger of God sharp and fierce against us, in bringing us under subjection of such effeminate children, and such dregs of the earth, and vile refuse of all other people of the whole world, it would make me to burst for mere disgust at the matter.

My opinion is and hath been this: That satisfaction, which the keys are able to dispense withal, standeth not by the law of God; for if it did, then could it not be dispensed withal by the keys. If these bull-founders do charge me with any other thing besides in this article, they do nothing else but as they are wont to do: for what matter or marvel is it, if Antichrist do lie?

Article. VI. 'Contrition which is produced by examining, remembering, and detesting our sins, whereby a man calleth to mind his years past in the bitterness of his soul, in pondering the greatness, the multitude, and filthiness of his sins, the losing of eternal bliss, and the purchasing of eternal damnation: this contrition maketh a man a hypocrite, yea rather to be more a sinner.'

Luther's answer to the sixth article.

Answer:—O the incredible blindness and brutishness of these Romish bulls! This article is truly mine, and very christian; which I will not suffer to be wrested from me, for all the popes and papists in the world. For this I meant by that doctrine, that repentance is of no force, unless it be done in faith and charity; which thing they also would teach themselves, but that they do neither know nor teach, either what faith or charity is. And therefore, in condemning my doctrine, they condemn also their own, foolishly repugning against themselves by their unwise contradiction. I say, therefore, that he that teacheth repentance in such wise and manner that he hath not a greater regard to the promised mercy of God and faith in the same, than to this afflicting and vexing of the mind, he teacheth the repentance of Judas Iscariot; he is pestilent, a devil to men's souls, and tormentor of consciences. Read the books of these sophisters, where they write of repentance, and thou shalt see there no mention made either of promise or faith: for these lively parts of repentance they clean omit, and only do vex men with these dead contritions. But hereof we will hereafter treat more at large.

The purpose of Luther in setting forth his articles.

But what should I here stand upon every article, seeing my books be abroad, wherein I have given a reason of all sufficiently, and more would have done, if mine adversaries also had brought to light theirs? For what foolishness is this, that they think to answer me with this one saying, That they count all my sayings as damned? whereas I did write to this end only, that they should acknowledge their errors wherewith they have so long bewitched the people of God. Neither did I look that I should be condemned, who, understanding and knowing the same right well, have justified those things, which they have condemned before, with sufficient authority both of Scripture and reason: neither looked I that they should tell me what they thought (for I knew all that well enough); but that which I sought of them, was, to know whether they thought right therein or not. Here looked I to be taught; and, behold, none of them all durst once put forth his head. Wherefore I see these asses nothing to understand either the things that I say, or yet themselves; but they be such blind buzzards, that they perceive not what it is that I seek in my books: for they dream that I have such an opinion of them, as though they had the truth of their side, when there is nothing that I less think to be true. For I, foreknowing that they had condemned all these things before, came forth, not as one in expectation of being condemned, but as already condemned by them, to accuse their condemnation to be wicked, heretical, and blasphemous; and so openly to denounce them as heretics and erroneous, unless they showed some better reason and ground of their doings and doctrine; whereas they, on the other side, like foolish minstrels harping all on one string, assuming the point in question proved, have nothing else in their mouths, but 'we condemn that we have condemned;' proving, after a new kind of logic, the same thing by itself. O most idiot huddipeaks,<sup>1</sup> and blockish condemners! Where is the saying of Peter, 'Be always ready to render an account of that faith and hope which is in you?'<sup>2</sup>

Wherefore, seeing these ignorant papists, being thus confounded, do so flee

(1) See the Appendix. =E.D.

(2) 1 Pet. iii.

away from the face of the manifest verity, that they dare not once open their mouths in defence of themselves or of their cause, and have blasted out with much reluctance this timorous bull of theirs; I, being comforted with the flight of these mine adversaries, do account this their dastardly damnation in the stead of a full justification of my cause; and so rebound again their own damnation upon their own heads. For how could they more condemn themselves, than while they (fearing to be found themselves culpable of heresy, if they should be driven to give account of their doctrine) do flee to this last and desperate refuge of the miserable, willingly to shut their eyes, and stop their ears, and to say 'I will not, I damn thee, I hear thee not, I allow thee not'? If I should have played any such mad part, how would they (I pray you) have triumphed against me! 'Degeneres animos timor arguit,' i. e. fear declareth what dastards they are.

Wherefore, not to burden the reader with any tedious prolixity of matter in prosecuting every article, I here protest by these presents, that I confess all these things here condemned by this miserable Bull, for pure, clear, and catholic doctrine, whereof I have sufficiently given account in my books which be extant abroad.<sup>1</sup>

Furthermore, I will also that the said my books, being extant abroad, shall be taken as a public accusation against these wicked sophisters and seducers of the people of God; so that unless they shall give an account of their doctrine, and shall convict me with good ground of Scripture, I do here, as much as in me lieth, denounce them as guilty of errors, heresy, and sacrilege; admonishing, desiring, and in the Lord exhorting, all them that truly confess Christ, that they will beware and take heed of their pestiferous doctrine; and not to doubt, but that the true Antichrist reigneth by them in the world amongst us.

And if any shall contemn this my brotherly admonition, let him know that I am pure and clean from his blood, and excused from the last judgment of Christ: for I have left nothing undone, which christian charity did bind me to do.

Finally, if there be no other way whereby I may resist these babbling and trifling condemnners, the uttermost and last which I have I will give and bestow in the quarrel; that is, this life and blood of mine. For better it were for me a thousand times to be slain, than to revoke one syllable of these articles, which they have condemned. And now, as they do curse and excommunicate me for their damnable heresy so I again likewise do curse and excommunicate them for the holy verity of God. Christ, who is only the judge of all, judge and determine this matter between us, whether of these two excommunications, his or mine, shall stand and prevail before him! Amen.

In storying the life of Luther, it was declared before, how the said Luther in the beginning, being rejected first by the cardinal Cajetan, appealed from the cardinal unto the pope. When that would not serve, neither could any tolerable submission of Luther to the pope be received, but that the pope with his cardinals, contrary to all equity and conscience, would needs proceed against him, and against the express truth of God's word, thinking by mere authority to bear down the verity as he had used before to do: Luther, following the justness of his cause, was then compelled to appeal from the pope to the next general council, and so did, as before you may read; which was two years before the pope's bull against Luther came out. The tenor of this appellation, before omitted, I thought here to exhibit; whereby the reader, considering the great change of religion and state of the church which since hath ensued, may also perceive the true original cause and occasion how it first began; by what order and degrees it after increased; what humility and submission, first on

(1) Note here good reader that amongst these articles certain there be, which, because they seemed somewhat to bear with the pope and his pardons, Luther, coming after to a more knowledge that the pope was Antichrist, confesseth himself in his assertions, that he utterly calleth back the same; not revoking them as the pope would have had him, but rather aggravating them against the pope.

Affairs.*

Luther's part were showed; and, again, what insolency, wrong, and violence, of the pope's part, were declared. And further, whereas pope Leo, in his bull above prefixed, seemeth to pretend certain conditions of favour, charity, and money offered to Luther in the beginning, how false and vain that is, by this present appeal may appear.<sup>1</sup>

THE TENOR AND FORM OF THE APPEAL OF MARTIN LUTHER FROM POPE LEO TO THE NEXT GENERAL COUNCIL.

Appendix.*

That forasmuch as the liberty of appealing is provided for a remedy to relieve the oppressed from injury and violence of the superior, it was therefore lawful for Martin Luther so to do; especially being manifold ways injured and molested by the see of Rome, and other the pope's confederates, as he, in the said appeal declareth. For at first, whereas he, modestly disputing of the errors and abuses of the pope's pardons, did somewhat withstand the impudent raving and blasphemies of them that came about with the pope's pardons, to poll and rob the people, he was therefore openly railed upon and defamed by them in their public sermons to be a heretic, and, consequently upon the same, accused to pope Leo for a heretic, by Marius de Perusis the pope's proctor and others.

Then was obtained of the pope a commission to cite up the said Luther to appear at Rome before the cardinals, by Jerom Ghinucci, and Sylvester de Prierio, his mortal enemies, whereas he could by no means appear without manifest danger of his life, both by the way, and also in the city of Rome.

For the consideration whereof, duke John Frederic, prince elector, and the landgrave, entreated for him to have his cause indifferently to be heard, and to be committed to two parties that were equal, and not partial: yet, notwithstanding the earnest suit of these princes, the contrary labour of the cardinals, who were his capital adversaries, so prevailed at Rome, that the cause of Luther was still detained in their own hands; and, contrary to all indifferency, was committed to the hearing of the pope's legate then in Germany, called 'Cardinalis Sancti Sixti;' who, being no less enemy against Luther than the others, and notwithstanding that Luther obediently appeared at his call, and with humble protestation submitted himself to be answered by the Scriptures; and referred himself to the judgment of the see of Rome, and of four universities, to wit, Basil, Friburg, Louvain, and Paris; yet, contrary to all equity, showing forth no Scripture nor reason, rejecting his gentle protestation, submission, and honest offer, with all other his requests and suits, he would needs forthwith have him to revoke his errors, threatening and menacing him most cruelly, and commanded him no more to come in his sight.

Whereupon Luther, being thus proudly rejected of the cardinal, made his appeal from the said cardinal to pope Leo, being better informed.

This appellation also being contemned of the pope, who would neither come to any agreement, nor take any reasonable condition, nor show Luther his errors by the Scripture, nor yet refer the matter by learning to be decided, but would needs per force proceed against him by mere authority and oppression at Rome, Luther then, seeing there was no other refuge or remedy for his own defence, and seeing, moreover, the truth of God's word to lie underfoot, by might and authority oppressed, so that none durst almost confess the same, and that the poor flock was so nursled in errors and vain opinions, to the seduction of their souls: for these, and other such causes, he, being necessarily thereunto compelled, commenced this appeal from the pope misinformed, to the next general council that should be, calling for the help of the public notary, and testimony also of sufficient witnesses, requisite in that behalf accordingly.

The Death of King Henry the Eighth, with the manner thereof.Henry VIII.*

A. D. 1547.

And thus closing up this eighth book with the death of king Henry the eighth, I will now (the Lord Christ assisting me with his grace) proceed next to the time and reign of king Edward his son, after that first I shall intermit a few words touching the death of the said king Henry his father, and the manner of the same; who, after long languishing, infirmity growing more and more upon him, lay from St. Stephen's day (as is above mentioned) to the latter end of January. His physicians at length, perceiving that he would away, and yet not daring to discourage him with death, for fear of the act passed before in parliament, that none should speak any thing of the king's death (the act being made only for soothsayers, and talkers of prophecies,) moved them that were about the king to put him in remembrance of his mortal state and fatal infirmity; which when the rest were in dread to do, Master Denny, who was specially attendant upon him, boldly coming to the king, told him what case he was in, to man's judgment not like to live; and therefore exhorted him to prepare himself to death, calling himself to remembrance of his former life, and to call upon God in Christ betimes for grace and mercy, as becometh every good christian man to do.

Although the king was loth to hear any mention of death, yet perceiving the same to rise upon the judgment of his physicians, and feeling his own weakness, he disposed himself more quietly to hearken to the words of his exhortation, and to consider his life past; which although he much accused, "yet," said he, "is the mercy of Christ able to pardon me all my sins, though they were greater than they be." Master Denny, being glad to hear him thus to speak, required to know his pleasure, whether he would have any learned man sent for to confer withal, and to open his mind unto. To whom the king answered again, that if he had any, he would have Dr. Cranmer, who was then lying at Croydon. And therefore Master Denny, asking the king whether he would have him sent for, "I will first," said the king, "take a little sleep; and then, as I feel myself, I will advise upon the matter."

The king at his death chooseth to talk with Cranmer.

After an hour or two the king, awaking, and feeling feebleness to increase upon him, commanded Dr. Cranmer to be sent for; but before he could come, the king was speechless, and almost senseless. Notwithstanding, perceiving Dr. Cranmer to be come, he, reaching his hand to Dr. Cranmer, did hold him fast, but could utter no word unto him, and scarce was able to make any sign. Then the archbishop, exhorting him to put his trust in Christ, and to call upon his mercy, desired him, though he could not speak, yet to give some token with his eyes or with his hand, that he trusted in the Lord. Then the king, holding him with his hand, did wring his hand in his as hard as he could; and so, shortly after, departed, after he had reigned in this land the term of thirty-seven years and nine months, leaving behind him three children, Edward, Mary, and Elizabeth.

Cranmer cometh to the king.

The king's children.

Moreover, forasmuch as mention is inserted in this place of the good inclination of king Henry, in his latter days, to the reformation of religion, by the occasion hereof it cometh also to mind, somewhat Talk between Cranmer and the duke of Suffolk about Winchester.

likewise to add, by way of appendix, touching the talk between the archbishop of Canterbury, Thomas Cranmer, and the duke of Suffolk, Charles Brandon, as concerning the king's purpose and intent conceived against the bishop of Winchester, Stephen Gardiner, in that he could never allow any reformation in religion in this realm, and especially being offended with this, that men should use in their talk, "the Lord," as well as "our Lord." The said duke said unto the said archbishop, "We of the council had him once at a good lift, and should well have dispatched him from his authority, if the king's majesty our master had stayed himself from admitting him to his presence; as then his highness was content that we should thoroughly have sifted and tried him. "It was, my lord," quoth the duke to the archbishop, "at that time when Gardiner's secretary was attached and suffered for defending the pope's authority. For then I, and certain of the council, having conference with the king's majesty for that matter, his highness was fully persuaded, that the bishop's secretary, being in such special favour with his master, would never stand so stiff in defence of the bishop of Rome's usurped power and authority without his said master's both advice, knowledge, and persuasion. For already (quoth the king), he played but a homely part with me, when he was ambassador to the pope concerning my cause of divorce. And therefore (quoth the king to me), send for him, my lord, incontinently; and, by assistance of two or three more of the council, whom you think good, let him be committed to the Tower, to answer to such things as may be objected against him."

Winchester by the king sent to the Tower.

"This communication was in the evening, so that we purposed to have executed the king's pleasure and commandment the next morning. Howbeit our talk was not so secret, but that some of his friends of the privy chamber (where he had many friends then), suspecting the matter, sent him word thereof; who incontinently repaired to the king's presence, and finding some matter to minister unto the king, his highness said to the bishop, 'We do marvel that your secretary hath thus notoriously offended against us and our laws. It is surely thought that you are not all clear in this offence, but that you are of the same opinion with him; and, therefore, my lord, be plain with me, and let me know if you be that way infected or no. If you will tell me the truth, I will rather pardon the fault; but if you halt or dissemble with me, look for no favour at my hand.'

Privily cometh to the king. The king layeth to Winchester's charge.

"With this monition Winchester fell down upon his knees, and besought his majesty for mercy and pardon, manifestly confessing that he had long time been of that opinion with his said secretary; and there bewailing himself, promised from that day forward to reform his opinion, and become a new man. 'Well (quoth the king) this way you have of me, that which otherwise you should never have obtained. I am content to remit all things past, and pardon you upon your amendment.'

Winchester confesseth his popery.

King Henry's nature to pardon them that confess their fault.

"The next morning I had word how the matter was handled; whereupon I came to his highness and said, 'Your majesty hath prevented our commission, which I and others had from your grace, concerning my lord of Winchester's committing to the Tower.' 'Wot you what (quoth the king)? he hath confessed himself as guilty in this matter as his man, and hath, with much sorrow and pensive-ness, sued for my pardon; and you know what my nature and custom hath been in such matters, evermore to pardon them that will not dissemble, but confess their fault.

Henry VIII.

1547.

“Thus wilyly and politici Gardiner got himself out of our hands. But, if I had suspected this, I would have had him in the Tower over night, and have stopped his journey to the court.”

“Well,” said my lord of Canterbury, “he was evermore too good for you all.”

Moreover, as touching this aforesaid bishop of Winchester, forasmuch as he, in king Edward’s time, bragged so much of his old master of famous memory, king Henry VIII., to the intent that the glorious vanity of this bishop, and of all others like unto him, may appear more notoriously to all men, here is to be noted by the testimony as well of Master Denny, as also of sir Henry Nevil, who were there present witnesses of the matter, whose record was this: that king Henry, before the time of his sickness, taking his horse upon the terrace at Windsor to ride out on hawking, saw standing before him the lord Wriothesley, lord chancellor, with divers other councillors; and, amongst them, the bishop of Winchester. Whereupon he called the lord chancellor, and said, “Did not I command you he should come no more amongst you?” (meaning the bishop.) Whereupon the lord chancellor answered, that his coming was to bring his majesty word of a benevolence given unto him by the clergy: wherewith the king said, “Ah! let him come hither;” and so he did his message, and the king went straight away.

Winchester commanded to come no more in the king’s sight.

Item, another time the king, immediately after his repair to London, fell sick, and caused divers times his whole council to come unto him about his will, and other his grave affairs. At that time the bishop also would come up with them into the outer privy chamber, and there remain until the council came from the king, and then go down with them again, to the end (as then was thought) to blind the world withal.

Though he were excluded, he would seem still to be of the king’s council.

Furthermore, as the king grew more in sickness, he, considering upon his will and testament made before,<sup>1</sup> at his going over to Boulogne, willed the same to be drawn out again, with leaving out and excluding the bishop of Winchester by name from amongst his executors: which being to him no small corsey,<sup>2</sup> and a cutting off all their purposes, a way was found, that sir Anthony Brown, a principal pillar of Winchester’s side, pretending unto the king, as though by the negligence of the writer the bishop’s name had been left out of the king’s will, kneeled down to the king’s majesty, lying in his bed, and said, “My lord of Winchester, I think, by negligence is left out of your majesty’s will; who hath done your highness most painful, long, and notable service, and one without whom the rest shall not be able to overcome your great and weighty affairs committed unto them.”

Excluded out of the king’s will.

Sir Anthony Brown a great friend to Winchester.

“Hold your peace,” quoth the king, “I remembered him well enough, and of good purpose have left him out: for surely, if he were in my testament, and one of you, he would cumber you all, and you should never rule him, he is of so troublesome a nature. Marry,”

The king’s opinion of Winchester.

quoth the king, "I myself could use him, and rule him to all manner of purposes, as seemed good unto me; but so shall you never do; and therefore talk no more of him to me in this behalf." Sir Anthony Brown, perceiving the king somewhat stiff herein, gave place to the king's words at that time: howbeit, seeking further occasion upon more persuasions put into his head, he took in hand once again to move the king to have the bishop one of his executors. When the king perceived that this instant suit would not cease, "Have you not yet done," quoth the king, "to molest me in this matter?" If you will not yet cease to trouble me, by the faith I owe unto God, I will surely dispatch thee out of my will also; and therefore let us hear no more of this matter." All this sir Anthony Denny was heard to report to the archbishop of Canterbury, Thomas Cranmer, by the said archbishop's secretary, who is yet alive, and witness unto the same.

Witness.

The purpose of the king was to make a perfect reformation of religion.

Credit of this narration.

The king's answer to the duke of Saxony's ambassador, a little before his death.

And thus much touching the end of king Henry, who, if he had continued a few months longer (all those obits and masses, which appear in his will made before he went to Boulogne, notwithstanding), most certain it is, and to be signified to all posterity, that his full purpose was to have repurged the estate of the church, and to have gone through with the same, so that he would not have left one mass in all England. For the more certain intelligence whereof, two things I have to lead me: the one is the assured report and testimony of Thomas Cranmer, archbishop of Canterbury, hearing the king declare the same out of his own mouth, both to himself and to Monsieur d'Annebault, lord admiral of the French, ambassador, in the month of August, a little before his death, as above may appear more at large. The other cause which leadeth me thereunto is also of equal credit, grounded upon the declaration of the king's own mouth after that time, more near unto his death, unto Bruno, ambassador of John Frederic, duke of Saxony: unto the which ambassador of Saxony the king gave this answer openly, that if the quarrel of the duke of Saxony were nothing else against the emperor, but for religion, he should stand to it strongly, and he would take his part, willing him not to doubt or fear. And so with this answer he dismissed the ambassador unto the duke, openly in the hearing of these four sufficient witnesses, as the lord Seymour earl of Hertford, lord Lisle then admiral, the earl of Bedford lord privy seal, the lord Paget. But the secret working of God's holy providence, who disposeth all things after his own wisdom and purpose, thought it good rather, by taking the king away, to reserve the accomplishment of this reformation of his church to the peaceable time of his son Edward and Elizabeth his daughter, whose hands were yet undefiled with any blood, and life unspotted with any violence or cruelty.

And thus, to finish this book, I thought here to close up king Henry's reign: but because a little vacant space of empty paper remaineth behind needful to be filled up, to employ therefore and to replenish the same with some matter or other, I thought to annex hereunto one story which happened in this king Henry's reign; which albeit it serveth not to the purpose of this our matter now in hand, yet, nevertheless, to supply the room it may stand in some place, either to refresh the travailed mind of the reader, wearied with other stories, or else, to disclose the detestable impiety of these counterfeit sects of monks and friars, who, under the hypocritical visor of pretended religion, have so long seduced and deceived the world. Although the deceitful parts and practices of these fantastical orders be so many, and in all places so notorious, that they are not able to be expressed; yet, amongst many, one you shall hear that chanced in this king's days, in the city of Orleans in France, by the Grey Friars, about A.D. 1534. The story is this:—

Henry VIII.

A. D. 1547.

A Tragical History of certain Friars in France, in the City of Orleans, A. D. 1534.

The mayor's wife of the city of Orleans provided in her will, to be buried without any pomp or solemnity. For when any departeth there, in some places the bellmen are hired to go about the city, and in places most frequented to assemble the people with the sound of the bell, and there to declare the names and the titles of those parties deceased; also where and when they shall be buried; exhorting the people to pray for them. And when the corpse is carried forth, the most part of the begging friars go withal to the church, with many torches and tapers carried before them; and the more pomp and solemnity is used, the more is the concourse of people. But this woman, as I said, would have none of all this gear done for her: wherefore her husband, who loved her well, followed her mind herein, and gave unto these greedy cormorants the friars, who waited for their prey (in whose church she was buried besides her father and her grandfather), six crowns for a reward, whereas they gaped for a great deal more. And afterwards, when he cut down a wood, and sold it, the friars, craving to have part thereof freely and without money, he denied them. This took they wonderful grievously, and whereas they loved him not before, they devised now a way to be revenged, saying, that his wife was damned everlastingly.

The workers of this tragedy were Colyman and Stephen of Arras, both doctors of divinity; and the first indeed was a conjurer, and had all his trinkets and his furniture concerning such matters in readiness; and they used the matter thus.

They set a young man who was a novice, above, over the vault of the church, and when they came to mumble up their matins at midnight, after their accustomed manner, he made a wonderful noise and shrieking aloft. Then went this Colyman to crossing and conjuring, but the other above would not speak. Being charged to make a sign to declare if he were a dumb spirit, he rustled and made a noise again, and that was the sign and token.

When they had laid this foundation, they went to certain of the chiefest in all the city, and such as favoured them most, and told them what a heavy case was chanced; yet did they not utter what it was, but entreated them to take the pains to come to their service at night. When they were come, and the service was begun, he that was aloft made a great noise. Being demanded what he would, and what he was, he signified that he might not speak. Then was he commanded to answer to their interrogatories by signs and tokens. Now there was a hole made for the purpose, whereby, laying to his ear, he might hear and understand what the conjurer said unto them. There was also a table at hand, and when any question was asked, he struck and beat upon the table, so that he might be heard beneath. Then first the conjurer demanded whether he were any of them that had been buried there. After that, reckoning up many of their names in order, whose bodies had been buried there, at the last he named the mayor's wife. Here he made a sign that he was the spirit of that woman. Then he asked whether she were damned, and for what desert or offence: whether it were for covetousness, pride, or lechery, or not doing the works of charity, or else for this new sprung up heresy and Lutheranism. Moreover, what was the cause that he made such a noise, and was so unquiet: whether it were that the body being buried within holy ground should be digged up again, and carried to some other place. To all these things he answered by signs in like case as he was commanded; whereby he affirmed, or denied every thing, striking twice or thrice upon the table.

The conjurer what he demanded of the Spirit.

Luther's heresy a great bug among the friars.

When he had thus signified that Luther's heresy was the cause of her damnation, and that her body must be taken up, the friars desired the citizens that were there present, to bear witness of such things as they had seen and heard, and set their hands to it in writing. But they, taking advisement lest they should both offend the mayor, and bring themselves into trouble, refused to subscribe. Notwithstanding, the friars took the pix with the host and the Lord's body (as they call it), and all their saints' relics, and carried them to another place; and there they said their masses, which they are wont to do by the pope's law, when a church is suspended and must be hallowed again. And when the bishop's official heard of this, he came thither to understand the matter better, and associating to him certain honest men, he commanded the friar to conjure in his presence; and would have appointed certain to go up to the vault, to see if any spirit did there appear. But Stephen of Arras was sore against it, and exhorted them earnestly that they should not so do, saying, that the spirit ought not to be molested. And albeit the official did earnestly urge them to conjure before him, yet could he not bring them to it. In the mean time the mayor, making his friends privy what he would do, went to the king, and informed him of the whole matter. And because the friars, trusting to their immunities and privileges, refused to come in judgment, the king chose certain out of the court of parliament at Paris to examine the matter, and gave them full authority so to do: whereupon they were carried to Paris, and constrained to make answer; but they would confess nothing.

Then they were sent again to prison, and kept apart one from another; and the novice was kept in the house of Fumée, a senator; and being oftentimes examined, he would confess nothing, fearing lest he should afterwards be murdered of them, for slandering their order. But, when the judges promised him that he should have no harm, and should come no more in the friars' hands, he declared to them the whole matter in order; and being brought before the others, he avouched the same. But they, albeit they were convicted, and in manner taken in the deed, yet refused they their judges, and bragged of their privileges: but it was altogether in vain, for they were condemned in open judgment, that they should be carried again to Orleans, and committed to prison, and afterwards brought openly to the cathedral church, and so to the place of punishment where malefactors are executed; and there should make open confession of their wickedness.

But even at the same time chanced a persecution against the Lutherans, which was the cause that this sentence, albeit it was too gentle for so great offence, was not put in execution. For because the name of the Lutherans was most odious, they feared lest the punishment of these men should not have been so much thought to be due for their offence, as done in reproach of the order; and many thought that whatsoever should be done to them, it would be to the Lutherans a pleasant spectacle, and cause them much to rejoice.

This order of the Franciscans was esteemed of the common people very holy; so that what time they were carried out of Paris, certain women, moved with pity, followed them unto the gate of the university, with many tears and sighs.

After they came to Orleans, and were bestowed in several prisons, they began to boast again of their liberties and privileges; and at length, after long imprisonment, they were discharged and set at liberty without any further punishment. Had not these persecutions before mentioned letted the matter, the king had determined, as it was certainly reported, to pluck down their house, and make it even with the ground.<sup>1</sup>

But to leave the memory of this idolatrous generation, not worthy any further to be named, let us occupy the time with some better matter.<sup>2</sup>

(2) In the four editions of the Acts and Monuments from 1570 to 1596 (as also in some of the later editions) this paragraph thus continues: "in remembering the story of a good and constant martyr of the Lord before overpast, which suffered in Kent for the word of God before Luther's time about the second year of this king's reign, as here in story followeth." Then follows 'The Story of John Irowne, a blessed martyr of Christ Jesus, burned at Ashford,' &c., as given in a note in the Appendix to vol. iv. on p. 181, to which note the reader is referred for a full account of the various forms under which this story appears in Foxe.—Ed.

Amongst other injunctions and letters of king Henry VIII., written and set forth for reformation of religion, he wrote one letter to Thomas Cranmer, for abolishing of images, pilgrimages, shrines, and other monuments of idolatry; which letter being before expressed,<sup>1</sup> we should also have annexed to the same the letter or mandate of Bonner, directed in Latin to Richard Cloney his sumner, appertaining to the due execution thereof: which letter because we have omitted before, the defect thereof I thought here, in this vacant space, to supply. The letter written to Cloney<sup>2</sup> is this:

Bonner's Letter to Cloney, Keeper of the Coal-House; for the abolishing of Images.

Forasmuch as the thirteenth day of this present month, we have received the letters of our sovereign lord, by the grace of God king of England, &c., to us directed, and containing in them the commandment of his majesty, by us to be executed in tenor of words which here I send unto you. We therefore, will and desire, according as our duty bindeth us, to put the same in execution with all diligence possible, according to the effect and tenor hereof, in the king's behalf, and for the fidelity which we have in you assuredly approved, that you, incontinent upon the receipt hereof, do effectually warn all and singular parsons and vicars of this city of London, and of all our diocese, that they, immediately upon the sight and intimation of these present articles and interrogatories hereunder written, do cause diligent and effectual inquisition thereof to be made: to wit,

Had Bonner none to do these weighty things but Cloney, keeper of the coal-house?

Whether there be used and continued any superstition, hypocrisy, or abuse within any their parishes or cures, contrary to any ordinance, injunction, or commandment given and set forth by the king's majesty, or by his authority.

Item, Whether they have in their churches, or within their parishes, any shrines, coverings of shrines, tables of feigned miracles, pilgrimages, images, and bones, resorted and offered unto, and other monuments and things wherewith the people have been illuded, or any offering or setting up of lights or candles, other than be permitted by the king's majesty's injunctions; or whether the said injunctions be duly observed and kept in their parishes or cures, or else transgressed and broken; and in what part.

And further, after the said inquisition thus by them and every of them respectively being made, that you do certify us, or our vicar general, what is done in the premises, upon the eve of Simon and Jude, or thereabouts, under the peril thereof following.

Dated the 14th day of October, A. D. 1541, and the second of our translation.

THE CONCLUSION.

* The<sup>3</sup> death of this king, as it took away a valiant and martial prince out of this life, so it brought no little tranquillity and liberty to the church of England; forsomuch as many men's names were gathered and enrolled together in a catalogue, and at that time accused unto the king, by the bishop of Winchester and other prelates, the execution of whom should shortly have followed, if their crafty and cruel purposes had not been prevented by the hand of God, and turned otherwise than they looked for. Unto the same Eternal Almighty King of all kings, Prince of all princes, our Lord Christ Jesus, which never dieth, but ever reigneth, the perpetual only preserver and defender of his church, be praise, honour, and

A. D. 1517. And thus much concerning the reign of king Henry the eighth, a prince of worthy fame and memory. Under whose time and governance such acts and records, troubles, persecutions, recantations, practices, alterations, as then happened in the church, we have here discoursed, with such statutes, injunctions, and proclamations, as by him were set forth, in causes and matters to the same church pertaining; comprehending, although not all things so fully as might be, yet premitting as few things as we could in such matters as came to our hands, save that only in the catalogue and number of them which recanted in king Henry's time certain we have overpassed; whose names albeit I might seem partial, peradventure, in this story for not reciting with the other which, in the like cause, recanted with them; yet, because they continued not in their recantation with them, but recovered and reverted again to the truth forsaken, therefore I thought it cause sufficient to dissever them from the other, especially seeing they so converted unto the Lord, that they were ready to yield their lives afterward for the truth; as divers, indeed, so did, whom it pleased the Lord to call thereunto. Yea, in all king Henry's time, how few were they that burned, which did not revoke before! So did Bilney, Garret, Barnes, Jerome, Arthur, with divers mo. M. Latimer who suffered in queen Mary's time, though he bare no faggot, yet he subscribed to their articles.

What should we say to Maister Beacon, who, although he recanted with other in king Henry's time, yet, in queen Mary's days, how hardly escaped he with his life out of the Tower, had not God's providence blinded Winchester's eyes, in mistaking his name! The like is to be said of M[aster] Wisdome, D[ector] Crome, Alexander Seton, Tolwing, Singleton, with the rest; which all recanted in king Henry's time, and yet good soldiers after in the church of Christ. And thus closing up this third section with the term of king Henry's life, we will now proceed (God willing) to the flourishing reign of king Edward his son, next after him succeeding, requesting by the way and desiring thee, gentle reader, that if any thing besides that which is or hath been by us collected hitherto, do come to thy hands, knowledge, or memory, that thou wilt gently impart the same unto us, whereby it may be published hereafter to further profit of many.*

(1) The history of this extraordinary man may well be concluded by the following observation: "Morte sic regnum finit Henricus Rex, propter prima administrationis tempora illustre, propter victorias crebras et res in bello feliciter gestas gloriosum, propter magnas sub eo mutationes factas memorabile, propter ecclesie sub eo ceptam reformationem laudabile: attamen verò (veritatem non occultare) propter uxoriam rem infelicissimum; denique, propter crebra tributa reipublice nonnihil damnosum, civibusque grave ac onerosum." *AMONG<sup>2</sup> other rough storms and bloisterous persecutions which we have passed through since the beginning of this history, wading also through dangerous tempests of king Henry's time (as being come out from the rocks and waves of a terrible sea), now we have brought the course of this story, through the goodness and supportation of Christ our Lord, to the mild and halcyon days of king Edward the Sixth; as into a haven of fairer and calmer weather. For like as the seas, so also the land, hath oftentimes his rages and also tranquillity.

Although it cannot be denied but king Henry, the noble father of this worthy prince, deserved also praise and renown for his valiant and virtuous beginning, yet, if he had proceeded so hardily, according as happily he began; and, like as he only cracked the pope's crown, and rased his name, so, if he had clean dispossessed him of all:—or, as he had once got the victory over him, so, if he had pursued his victory got, and (as it was preached before him at Greenwich), “like as he had once unhorsed the pope, and put him out of the saddle, so, if he had also taken away his trappers and stirrups, whereby the prelates went about to set him on his horse again:” then had his acts, joining a perfect end to his godly beginning, deserved a firm memory of much commendation, with the saving of many a poor man's life. But that which the father, either could not, or durst not bring to perfection, that the son most worthily did accomplish, or rather the grace of Christ by him; who, succeeding after his father, reigned over the kingdom of England the space of six years in much tranquillity: of whose worthy virtues and prudent sentences, with other ornaments of his singular towardness, hereafter shall follow (Christ so permitting), more to be expressed at large, when we come to his death, according as the order of history requireth, and as we may be informed thereof by the relation of them that were about him.

After or about the death, therefore, of king Henry, the duke of Norfolk the same time being committed unto the Tower, and his son, the earl of Surrey, shortly after beheaded; for what offence, because as yet it is unknown to me, I commit it unto the Lord, who, as [He] knoweth all things perfectly, so shall judge all things righteously. God grant that the doings of all men may be such, that, either they may stand in his judgment through uprightness, or else may obtain mercy through repentance!*

Next after the death of king Henry, succeeded king Edward his son, being of the age of nine years. He began his reign the 28th day of January A.D. 1547; and reigned six years, five months, and nine days; and deceased A.D. 1553, the 6th day of July.

Of the excellent virtues and singular graces of king Edward, wrought in him by the gift of God, although nothing can be said enough to his commendation, yet, because the renowned fame of such a worthy prince shall not utterly pass our story without some grateful remembrance, I thought, in few words, to touch some little portion of his praise, taken out of the great heaps of matter, which might be inferred. For, to stand upon all that might be said of him, it would be too long; and yet to say nothing, it were too much unkind. If kings and princes, who have wisely and virtuously governed, have found in all ages writers to solemnize and celebrate their acts and memory, such as never knew them, nor were subject unto them, how much then are we Englishmen bound not to forget our duty to king Edward: a prince, although but tender in years, yet for his sage and mature ripeness in wit and all princely ornaments, as I see but few to whom he may not be equal, so, again, I see not many, to whom he may not justly be preferred.

dation of
ward.

And here, to use the example of Plutarch, in comparing kings and rulers, the Latins with the Greeks together, if I should seek with whom to match this noble Edward, I find not with whom to make my match more aptly, than with good Josias: for, as the one began his reign at eight years of his age, so the other began at nine. Neither were their acts and zealous proceedings in God's cause much discrepant: for as mild Josias plucked down the hill altars, cut down the groves, and destroyed all monuments of idolatry in the temple, the like corruptions, dross, and deformities of popish idolatry (crept into the church of Christ of long time), this evangelical Josias, king Edward, removed and purged out of the true temple of the Lord. Josias restored the true worship and service of God in Jerusalem, and destroyed the idolatrous priests! King Edward likewise, in England, abolishing idolatrous masses and false invocation, reduced again religion to a right sincerity; and more would have brought to perfection, if life and time had answered to his godly purpose. And though he killed not, as Josias did, the idolatrous sacrificers, yet he put them to silence, and removed them out of their places.

son between king Jo-sias and
ward.

Moreover, in king Josias's days the holy Scripture and book of God's Word was utterly neglected and cast aside, which he most graciously repaired and restored again. And did not king Edward the like, with the selfsame book of God's blessed word, and with other wholesome books of christian doctrine, which before were decayed and extinguished in his father's days, by sharp laws and severe punishments, here in England? Briefly, in all points and respects, between him and this our godly king no odds are to be found, but only in length of time and reign; who, if he might have reached (by the sufferance of God) to the continuance of Josias's reign; proceeding in those beginnings which in his youth appeared, no doubt but of his acts and doings some great perfection would have ensued to this church and realm. But the manifold iniquities of Englishmen deserved another plague, as after fell amongst us; as in sequel of the story hereafter (God willing) shall be declared.

In the mean time, to proceed in the excellent virtues of this christian young Josias (as we have begun), although neither do we know, nor will leisure serve us to stand upon a full description of, all his acts; yet will we (God willing) give a little taste of the noble nature and princely qualities of this king, whereby the reader may esteem with himself, what is to be thought of the rest of his doings, though they be not here all expressed.

And first, to begin with that which is the chiefest property of all other extern things in a prince to be considered, that is, to be loved of his subjects: such were the hearts of all English people toward this king inclined, and so toward him still continued, as never came prince in this realm more highly esteemed, more amply magnified, or more dearly and tenderly beloved of all his subjects; but especially of the good and the learned sort: and yet not so much beloved, as also admirable, by reason of his rare towardness and hope both of virtue and learning, which in him appeared above the capacity of his years. And as he was entirely of his subjects beloved, so with no less goodwill he loved them again; of nature and disposition meek, and much inclined to clemency. He always spared and favoured the life of man; as once appeared in a certain dissertation of his had with Master Check, in favouring the life of heretics; insomuch that when Joan Butcher<sup>1</sup> should be burned, all the council could not move him to put to his hand, but were fain to get Dr. Cranmer<sup>2</sup> to persuade with him, and yet neither could he, with much labour, induce the king so to do; saying, "What, my lord? will ye have me to send her quick to the devil in her error?" So that Dr. Cranmer himself confessed, that he had never so much to do in all his life, as to cause the king to put to his hand, saying, that he would lay all the charge thereof upon Cranmer before God. There wanted in him no promptness of wit, gravity of sentence, ripeness of judgment. Favour and love of religion was in him from his childhood. Such an organ, given of God to the church of England, he was, as England had never better. Over and besides these notable excellencies and other great virtues in him, add, moreover, skill and knowledge of tongues, and other sciences, whereunto he seemed rather born, than brought up.

Readiness of King Edward to his book.

Dr. Cox, King Edward's school-master.

Moreover, there wanted not in him, to this felicity of wit and dexterity of nature, like happiness of institution of good instructors; neither did there lack again in him any diligence to receive that which they would teach him; insomuch that in the midst of all his play and recreation, he would always observe and keep his hour appointed to his study, using the same with much attention, till time called him again from his book to pastime. In this his study and keeping of his hours, he did so profit, that Dr. Cranmer, the archbishop then of Canterbury, beholding his towardness, his readiness in both tongues, in translating from Greek to Latin, from Latin to Greek again; in declaiming with his school-fellows without help of his teachers, and that ex tempore; would weep for joy, declaring to Dr. Cox, his schoolmaster, that he would never have thought that to have been in him, except he had seen it himself.

To recite here his witty sentences, his grave reasons, which many times did proceed from him, and how he would sometimes, in a matter discoursed by his council, add thereunto, of his own, more reasons and causes, touching the said matter, than they themselves had or could devise, it was almost incredible in that age to see, and tedious here to prosecute.

This in him may seem notorious and admirable, that he, in these immature years, could tell and recite all the ports, havens, and creeks, not within his own realm only, but also in Scotland, and likewise in France; what coming in there was; how the tide served in every haven or creek; moreover, what burden, and what wind, served the coming into the haven.

King Edward knew the names and religion of all his magistrates.

Also, of all his justices, magistrates, gentlemen that bare any authority within his realm, he knew their names, their housekeeping, their religion, and conversation, what it was. Few sermons, or none, in his court, especially in the lord protector's time, but he would be at them. Again, never was he present at any commonly, but he would excerpt them, or note them with his own hand.

Besides and above all other notes and examples of his commendation, as touching the chiefest point which ought most to touch all men, for the maintaining, promoting, preferring, embracing, zealing, and defending the true cause and quarrel of Christ's holy gospel, what was his study, his zealous fervency, his admirable constancy therein, by this one example following, amongst many others, may notably appear.

Singular constancy of King Edward in maintaining true religion.

In the days of this king Edward VI., Charles the emperor made request to the said king and his council, to permit lady Mary (who after succeeded in the crown) to have mass in her house without prejudice of the law. And the council, on a time, sitting upon matters of policy, having that in question, sent Cranmer, then archbishop of Canterbury, and Ridley, then bishop of London, to entreat the king for the same; who, coming to his grace, alleged their reasons, and persuasions for the accomplishing thereof. So the king, hearing what they could say, replied his answer again out of the Scriptures so groundedly, gravely, and fully, that they were enforced to give place to his replication, and grant the same to be true. Then they, after long debating in this manner with his majesty, laboured politically in another sort, and alleged what dangers the denying thereof might bring to his grace; what breach of amity on the emperor's part; what troubles, what unkindness, and what occasions sundry ways it would enforce, &c. Unto whom the king answered, willing them to content themselves; for he would (he said) spend his life, and all he had, rather than agree and grant to what he knew certainly to be against the truth: which when the bishops heard, notwithstanding, they urged him still to grant, and would by no means have his nay. Then the good king, seeing their importunate suit, that needs they would have his majesty to consent thereto, in the end, his tender heart bursting out into bitter weeping and sobbing, he desired them to be content; whereat the bishops themselves, seeing the king's zeal and constancy, wept as fast as he, and took their leave of his grace. And coming from him, the archbishop took Master Check, his schoolmaster, by the hand, and said, "Ah! Master Check, you may be glad all the days of your life, that you have such a scholar, for he hath more divinity in his little finger, than all we have in all our bodies." Thus the lady Mary's mass, for that time, was stayed.

Edward VI.

A. D. 1547.

His zealous heart.

The lady Mary's mass stayed by the tears of king Edward.

Over and besides these heavenly graces and virtues, most chiefly to be required in all faithful and christian magistrates who have governance of Christ's flock, neither was he also unprovided with such outward gifts and knowledge, as appertain to the governance of his realm politic; insomuch that he was neither inexpert nor ignorant of the exchange, and all the circumstances of the same touching doings beyond the sea: but was as skilful in the practices, and could say as much thereof, as the chiefest doers in his affairs. Likewise, in the entertaining of ambassadors; to whom he would give answer, and that to every part of their oration, to the great wonder of them that heard, doing that in his tender years by himself, which many princes, at their mature age, seldom are wont to do but by others. And as he was a great noter of things that pertained to princely affairs, so had he a chest severally to himself, for every year, for the keeping of such records and matters as passed, and were concluded by the council; of whom also he would require a reason and cause of every thing that should pass their judgments: and of this chest he would evermore keep the key about him. His notes also he ciphered in Greek letters, to the end that those that waited upon him, should not read or know what he had written.<sup>1</sup>

He had, moreover, great respect to justice, and to the dispatch of poor men's suits, and would appoint hours and times with Master Cox, then master of his requests, how, and by what order, they might be sped in their causes without long delays and attendance; and so also debate with him, that their matters might be heard and judged with equity accordingly.

What Jerome Cardan saith of him, concerning his knowledge in liberal sciences, I thought here to express in his own words, both in Latin<sup>2</sup> and English, so much the rather, because he speaketh of his

The Words of Cardanus in commendation of King Edward.

There was in him a towardly disposition and pregnancy, apt to all human literature; as who, being yet a child, had the knowledge of divers tongues, first of the English, his own natural tongue, of the Latin also, and of the French; neither was he ignorant (as I hear) of the Greek, Italian, and Spanish tongues, and of other languages, peradventure, more: in his own, in the French, and in the Latin tongue, singularly perfect, and with the like facility apt to receive all others. Neither was he ignorant in logic, in the principles of natural philosophy, or in music. There was in him lacking neither humanity (the image of our mortality), a princely gravity and majesty, nor any kind of towardness becoming a noble king. Briefly, it might seem a miracle of nature, to behold the excellent wit and forwardness that appeared in him, being yet but a child. This I speak not rhetorically, to amplify things, or to make them more than truth is; yea, the truth is more than I do utter.

comets.

Being yet but fifteen years of age, he asked of me, in Latin (in which tongue he uttered his mind no less readily and eloquently than I could do myself), what my books which I had dedicated unto him, 'De Varietate Rerum,' did contain. I said, that in the first chapter was showed the cause of comets, or blazing stars, which hath been long sought for, and yet hitherto scarce fully found. 'What cause,' said he, 'is that?' 'The concourse or meeting,' said I, 'of the light of the wandering planets and stars.' To this the king thus replied again: 'Forasmuch,' said he, 'as the motion of the stars keepeth not one course, but is divers and variable, by continued alteration, how is it, then, that the cause of these comets either doth not quickly vade and vanish, or that the comet doth not keep one certain and uniform course and motion with the said stars and planets?' Whereunto I answered, that the comet hath his course and moving, but much more swift than they, because of the diversity of aspect; as we see in crystal, and in the sun, when the form of the rainbow reboundeth on the wall: for a little mutation maketh a great difference of place. Then said the king, 'And how can that be, having no subject: for of the rainbow the wall is the subject?' 'Like,' said I, 'as in lactea via,<sup>1</sup> or in reflection of lights; as, where many candles be lighted and set near together, in the middle they cause a certain bright and white lightsomeness to appear,' &c.

And so, by this little trial, a great guess may be given, what was in this king; in whom, no doubt, was a great hope and expectation amongst all good and learned men, both for the ingenious forwardness, and amiable sweetness, which in his conditions appeared. First, he began to love and favour liberal arts and non naturalis philosophiæ principia, non musica. Humanitas mortalitatis nostræ imago, gravitas regie majestatis, indoles tanto principiæ digna. In universum, magno miraculo humanarum rerum, tanti ingenii, et tantæ expectatiōis puer educabatur! Non hæc rhetoricè exornata veritatem excedunt, sed sunt minima.

At Rex: Quomodo, cum diversis motibus astra moveantur, non statim dissipatur aut movetur eorum motu? At ego: Movetur equidem, sed longe celerius illis ob diversitatem aspectus, velut in chrysallo et sole cum iris in pariete relect. Parva enim mutatio magnam facit loci differentiam. At Rex: Et quonam pacto absque subjecto illud fieri potest, iridi enim paries subjectum est? Tum ego: Velut in lactea via, et luminum reflectione, cum plures candelæ propè æcenste medium quoddam lucidum et candidum efficiunt. Itaque ex ungue leonem, ut dici solet. sciences before he knew them, and to know them before he could use them; whose mortal condition, and sudden decease and decay, in those tender and unripe years, not only England, but all the world hath cause to lament. O how truly is it said of the poet,

Edward
VI.A. D.
1547.

Be not commonly long permanent.’

A show or sight only of excellency he could give us: example he could not give. Where a kingly majesty required gravity, there you should have seen him a sage and an old man; and yet gentle and pleasant also, according as the condition of his age then required. He played well upon the lute; he had, also, to do in handling of weighty affairs of the realm. He was liberal and bountiful in heart; and therein he imitated his father, &c.

Carmen Epitaphium Cardani, in obitum Regis Edwardi.

‘ Flere nefas magnum; sed toto flebitis orbe,
Mortales; vester corruiit omnis honor.
Nam regum decus, et juvenum flos, spesque; bonorum,
Deliciæ secli, et gloria gentis erat.
Dignus Apollineis lachrymis, doctæque Minervæ
Flosculus, heu miserè! concidis ante diem.
Te tumulo dabimus Musæ, supremaque flentes Munera, Melpomene tristia fata canet.’<sup>1</sup>

Thus, after the godly disposition and properties of this king briefly in this wise declared, now, God willing, we will intermeddle something to describe the order and proceedings which he followed in his administration and government of both the states, as well politic, as especially ecclesiastic; who, after the decease of his father coming unto the crown, because he was of young and tender age, he was committed to sixteen governors. Amongst them, especially the lord Edward Seymour, duke of Somerset, his uncle, was assigned and joined to him, as protector and overseer of him and of the commonwealth; a man not so highly advanced for his consanguinity, as also for his noble virtues; and, especially for his favour to God’s word, worthy of his vocation and calling. Through the endeavour and industry of this man, first that monstrous hydra with six heads (the Six Articles, I mean), which devoured up so many men before, was abolished and taken away: by reason whereof the counsels and proceedings of Winchester began to decay, who, storming at the same matter, wrote to the lord protector in the cause thereof, as by his letters is to be seen.

Lord

The holy Scriptures he restored to the mother tongue. Masses he extinguished and abolished. Furthermore, after softer beginnings, by little and little, greater things followed in the reformation of the churches. Then such as before were in banishment for the danger of the truth, were again received to their country. To be short, a new face of things began now to appear, as it were in a stage, new players coming in, the old being thrust out; for the most part the bishops of churches and dioceses were changed: such as had been dumb prelates before, were then compelled to give place to others then, that would preach and take pains.

Peter Martyr, Martin Bucer, Paulus Phagius. Bishop Bonner committed to the Marshalsea; Gardiner and Tonstal, to the Tower. See Adiudica.

Besides others also, out of foreign countries, men of learning and notable knowledge were sent for and received, among whom was Peter Martyr,<sup>1</sup> Martin Bucer,<sup>2</sup> and Paulus Phagius;<sup>3</sup> of whom the first taught at Oxford, the other two professed at Cambridge, and that with no small commendation of the whole university. Of the old bishops some were committed to one ward, some to another. Bonner, bishop of London, was committed to the Marshalsea, and afterwards, for his contempt and misdemeanour, deposed from his bishopric, as in further process followeth to be seen. Gardiner, bishop of Winchester, with Tonstal, bishop of Durham, was cast into the Tower for his disobedience, where he kept his Christmas five years together; more worthy of some other place without the Tower, if it had not otherwise pleased God to have meant a further plague to this realm, by that man.

But these meek and gentle times of king Edward, under the government of this noble protector, have this one commendation proper unto them, that amongst the whole number of the popish sort, of whom some privily did steal out of the realm, many were crafty dissemblers, some were open and manifest adversaries; yet, of all that multitude, there was not one man that lost his life. In sum, during the whole time of the six years of this king, much tranquillity, and, as it were, a breathing-time, was granted to the whole church of England: so that the rage of persecution ceasing, and the sword taken out of the adversaries' hand, there was now no danger to the godly, unless it were only by wealth and prosperity, which many times bringeth more damage in corrupting men's minds, than any time of persecution or affliction.

Briefly, during all this time, neither in Smithfield nor any other quarter of this realm, were any heard to suffer for any matter of religion, either papist or protestant, either for one opinion or another, except only two, one an Englishwoman, called Joan of Kent, and the other a Dutelman, named George, who died for certain articles not much necessary here to be rehearsed.

Dobbe dies in prison.

Besides these two, there was none else in all king Edward's reign, that died in any manner or cause of religion, but one Thomas Dobbe, who, in the beginning of this king's reign was apprehended and imprisoned for speaking against the idolatry of the mass, and in the same prison died; as in the story here ensueth to be seen.

This Thomas Dobbe, being a student and a master of arts in Cambridge, was brought up in the college called St. John's college, and fellow of the same; where he increased in the study of good letters, among his equals very forward, of nature and disposition simple and modest, of zeal toward God fervent, patient in injuries, injurious to

(1) Peter Martyr was born at Florence in 1500. He studied at Padua and Bononia, and was a monk of the Augustine order in the monastery of Fiezoli. He preached the doctrines of Zuingleus and Bucer, privately, at Rome; being impeached there, he fled to Naples, and thence to Lucca. Having been sent for by king Edward, he was made professor of divinity at Oxford, in 1549, but retired to Strasburgh on the accession of queen Mary, and died in 1562.—Ed.

(2) Martin Bucer was one of the first reformers at Strasburgh; he was born in Alsace in 1491. At seven years old he took the habit of St. Dominic. He read Luther's works, and conferred with him in person at Heidelberg, in 1521; but though he agreed with him in many of his opinions, yet in the following year he gave the preference to those of Zuingleus. He was at the interim at Augsburg in 1548, from whence the news of his piety, and sentiments upon matters of faith reached England; and, at Cranmer's solicitation, he came to England in 1549 and taught divinity at Cambridge, where he died in 1551.—Ed.

(3) Paulus Phagius died at Cambridge, and his bones were burnt, with those of Martin Bucer in 1557, an account of which will be found under that date.—Ed.

no man; of much like sort and condition as in doves, which, without all bitterness of gall, are more apt to receive injury than to work wrong to any. At length this godly man, intending with himself and addicting his mind to the christian state of matrimony, resorted to a certain maiden not far off where he dwelt: for the which cause he was greatly molested, and wickedly abused, by three of that college, whose names were Hutchinson, Pindare, and Tayler, who with their malicious handling, scornful dealing, opprobries, rebukes, and contumelies, so much vexed the virtuous simplicity of the man, that they never left him, till at length they wearied him out of the college: who there having no rest or quietness, by reason of the unreasonable and virulent handling of his adversaries, was compelled to seek some other place, wherein to settle himself. Upon the occasion whereof coming up unto London, it chanced him to pass through Paul's church, where it happened that at the south side of the church, at the same time, there was a priest at mass (more busy than well occupied), being at the elevation as he passed by. The young man replete with godly zeal, pitying the ignorance and idolatry of the people, in honouring that so devoutly which the priest lifted up, was not able to forbear, but, opening his mouth, and turning to the people, he exhorted them not to honour the visible bread as God, which neither was God, nor yet ordained of God to be honoured, &c.; with such other words more of christian information. For this cause, straightway, he was apprehended by the mayor, and afterwards accused to the archbishop of Canterbury, and committed to the Compter, then in Bread-street, where he not long continued, but, falling into a sickness, how or whereupon I cannot tell, shortly upon the same changed this mortal life: whose pardon, notwithstanding, was obtained of the lord protector, and should have been brought him, if he had continued. And thus much concerning Thomas Dobbe and others.

Edward VI.

A. D. 1547.

Doves, as philosophers do write, naturally have no gall.

Over and besides, I find that in the first year of the reign of king Edward, which was A. D. 1547, there was one John Hume, servant to Master Lewnax, of Wressel, apprehended, accused, and sent up to the archbishop of Canterbury, by the said Master Lewnax, his master, and Margaret Lewnax, his mistress, for these articles.

I. First, for denying the sacrament (as it was then called) of the altar, to be the real flesh and blood of Christ.

II. For saying that he would never veil his bonnet unto it, to be burned there-for.

III. For saying that if he should hear mass, he should be damned.

For this was he sent up by his master and mistress aforesaid, with special letters unto the archbishop, requiring him severely to be punished by the law for the same. But, because I find no execution following thereupon, I therefore pass over this story of him.

These things premised, when this virtuous and godly young prince (indued as you have heard with special graces from God) was now peaceably established in his kingdom, and had a council about him, grave, wise, and zealous in God's cause, especially his uncle the duke of Somerset, he then most earnestly likewise desired, as well the advancement of the true honour of Almighty God, and the planting of his sincere religion, as also the utter suppression and extirpation of all idolatry, superstition, hypocrisy, and other enormities and abuses, throughout his realms and dominions: and therefore following, as is before expressed, the good example of king Josias, he determined forthwith to enter into some reformation of religion in the church of England. And, forasmuch as at his first entry (notwithstanding his father's good beginning, in abolishing the usurped power of Antichrist), he yet found most of his laws greatly repugning against this his zealous enterprise, he therefore purposed, by the advice of his said wise and honourable council, and of his own regal power and authority, somewhat to prosecute his godly purpose, until such time as by consent of the whole estate of parliament, he might establish a more free, perfect, and uniform order therein.

Whereupon, intending first a general visitation over all the bishoprics within his realm (thereby as well to understand, as also to redress the abuses in the same), he chose out certain wise, learned, discreet, and worshipful personages, to be his commissioners in that behalf; and so, dividing them into several companies, assigned unto them several dioceses to be visited; appointing, likewise, unto every company, one or two godly learned preachers, who, at every session, should in their preaching both instruct the people in the true doctrine of the gospel of Christ, and in all love and obedience to the same; and, also, earnestly dehort them from their old superstition and wonted idolatry. And that they might be more orderly directed in this their commission, there were delivered unto them certain injunctions and ecclesiastical orders drawn out by the king's learned council, which they should both inquire of, and also command in his majesty's behalf, to be thenceforth observed of every person, to whom they did severally appertain within their sundry circuits.

*Certain<sup>l</sup> Ecclesiastical Laws, or general Injunctions, given by King Edward to the Church of England.

The king's most royal majesty, by the advice of his most dear uncle the duke of Somerset, lord protector of all his realms, dominions, and subjects, and governor of his most royal person, and the residue of his most honourable council (intending the advancement of the true honour of Almighty God, the suppression of idolatry and superstition throughout all his realms and dominions, and to plant true religion, to the extirpation of all hypocrisy, enormities, and abuses, as to his duty appertaineth): doth minister unto his loving subjects these godly injunctions hereafter following, whereof part were given unto them heretofore by the authority of his most dearly beloved father king Henry the eighth, of most famous memory, and part are now ministered and given by his majesty: all which injunctions his highness willeth and commandeth his said loving subjects, by his supreme authority, obediently to receive, and truly to observe and keep, every man in their offices, degrees, and states, as they will avoid his displeasure, and the pains in the same injunctions hereafter expressed.

The first, that all deans, archdeacons, parsons, vicars, and ecclesiastical persons, shall faithfully keep and observe, and, as far as in them may lie, shall cause

(1) For these injunctions, see edition 1563, pp. 684—689. Also 'Injunctions given by the most excellent prince Edward the Sixte,' &c. 8vo. Lond. 1547. To the Injunctions is appended 'The Fourme of bidding the Common Prayers.' In which, three subjects are recommended for prayer; namely, first, the church and the king's majesty; secondly, the lord protector, the council, and clergy; and thirdly, what is somewhat remarkable, 'you shall pray for all them that are departed out of this world, in the faith of Christ, that they, with us, and we with them, at the day of judgment, may rest, both body and soul, with Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, in the kingdom of heaven. See the Appendix.—ED.

to be observed and kept of other, all and singular the laws and statutes made as well for the abolishing and extirpation of the bishop of Rome's pretended and usurped power and jurisdiction, as for the establishment and confirmation of the king's authority, jurisdiction, and supremacy of the church of England and Ireland.

And, furthermore, all ecclesiastical persons having cure of souls, shall, to the uttermost of their wit, knowledge, and learning, purely, sincerely, and without any colour or dissimulation, declare, manifest, and open, four times every year at the least, in their sermons and other collations, that the bishop of Rome's usurped power and jurisdiction, having no establishment or ground by the law of God, was of most just causes taken away and abolished: and that, therefore, no manner of obedience or subjection within his realms or dominions is due unto him: and that the king's power, within his realms and dominions, is the highest power under God, to whom all men within the same realms and dominions, by God's laws, owe most loyalty and obedience, afore and above all other powers and potentates in earth. Besides this, to the intent that all superstition and hypocrisy, crept into divers men's hearts, may vanish away, they shall not set forth or extol any images, relics, or miracles, for any superstition or lucre; nor allure the people, by any enticements, to the pilgrimage of any saint or image; but, reproving the same, they shall teach, that all goodness, health, and grace, ought to be both asked and looked for only of God, as of the very author and giver of the same, and of none other.

Item, That they, the persons above rehearsed, shall make, or cause to be made, in their churches and every other cure they have, one sermon every quarter of the year at the least, wherein they shall purely and sincerely declare the word of God, and in the same exhort the hearers to the works of faith, mercy, and charity, specially prescribed and commanded in Scripture; and that works devised by man's fantasies, beside Scripture: as wandering to pilgrimages, offering of money, candles, or tapers to relics or images, or kissing and licking of the same, praying upon beads, and such like superstition, have not only no promise of reward in Scripture for doing of them: but, contrariwise, great threats and maledictions of God, for that they be things tending to idolatry and superstition, which, of all other offences, God Almighty doth most detest and abhor; for that the same diminisheth most his honour and glory.

Item, That such images as they know, in any of their cures, to be, or to have been, so abused with pilgrimage or offerings of any thing made thereunto, or that shall be hereafter incensed unto, they, and none other private persons, shall, for the avoiding of that most detestable offence of idolatry, forthwith take down and destroy the same; and shall suffer from henceforth no torches, nor candles, tapers, nor images of wax, to be set afore any image or picture, but only two lights upon the high altar before the sacrament, which, for the signification that Christ is the very true light of the world, they shall suffer to remain still; admonishing their parishioners, that images serve for no other purpose but to be a remembrance, whereby men may be admonished of the holy lives and conversation of them that the said images do represent; which images, if they do abuse for any other intent, they commit idolatry in the same, to the great danger of their souls.

Item, That every holy-day throughout the year, where they have no sermon, they shall, immediately after the gospel, plainly recite to their parishioners in the pulpit the pater-noster, the creed, and the ten commandments in English, to the intent the people may learn the same by heart: exhorting all parents and householders to teach their children and servants the same, as they are bound by the law of God, and in consequence, to do.

Item, That they shall charge fathers and mothers, masters and governors, to bestow their children and servants, even from their childhood, either in learning, or to some honest exercise, occupation, or husbandry, exhorting and counselling, and by all their ways and means they may, as well in their sermons and collations as others, persuading their said fathers and mothers, masters, and other governors, diligently to provide and foresee, that the youth be in no manner of wise brought up in idleness, lest at any time afterward, for lack of some craft, occupation, or other honest mean to live by, they be driven to begging, stealing, or some other unthriftiness: forasmuch as we may daily see, through sloth and idleness, divers valiant men fall some to begging, and some to theft and murder, which after, brought to calamity and misery, do blame their parents, friends, and governors, which suffered them to be brought up so idly in their youth: whereas, if they had been well brought up in good learning, some occupation, or craft, they should, being rulers of their own household, have profited as well themselves, as divers other persons, to the great commodity and ornament of the commonwealth.

Also, That the said parsons, vicars, and other curates, shall diligently provide, that the sacraments be reverently and duly ministered in their parishes. And if at any time it happen them, in any of the cases expressed in the statutes of this realm, or of special license given by the king's majesty, to be absent from their benefices, they shall leave their cure not to a rude and unlearned person, but to an honest, well learned, and expert curate, that can, by his ability, teach the rude and unlearned of their cure, wholesome doctrine, and reduce them to the right way that do err; and which will also execute their injunctions, and do their duty otherwise, as they are bound to do in every behalf; and accordingly may and will profit their cure no less with good example of living, than with the declaration of the word of God; or else their lack and default shall be imputed unto them, who shall straitly answer for the same, if they do otherwise. And always let them see, that neither they, nor their curates, do seek more their own profit, promotion, or advantage, than the profit of the souls that they have under their cure, or the glory of God.

The Bible in English to be provided for public use.

Also, That they shall provide, within three months next after this visitation, one book of the whole Bible of the largest volume in English, and within one twelvemonth next after the said visitation, the paraphrase of Erasmus, also in English, upon the Gospels, and the same set up in some convenient place within the said church that they have cure of, where their parishioners may most commodiously resort unto, and read the same; the charges of which books shall be rateably well borne, between the person or proprietary, and the parishes aforesaid; that is to say, the one half by the person or proprietary, and the other half by the parishioners. And they shall discourage no man, authorized and licensed thereunto, from the reading of any part of the Bible either in Latin or English, but shall rather conform and exhort every person to read the same as the very lively Word of God, and the special food of man's soul, that all christian persons are bound to embrace, believe and follow, if they look to be saved, whereby they may the better know their duties to God; ever gently and charitably exhorting them, and in his majesty's name straitly charging and commanding them, that, in the reading thereof, no man to reason or contend, but quietly to hear the reader.

The clergy not to haunt taverns.

Also, the said ecclesiastical persons shall in no wise, at any unlawful time, nor for any other cause than for their honest necessity, haunt or resort to any taverns or ale-houses; and after their dinner or supper they shall not give themselves to drinking or riot, spending their time idly, by day or by night, at dice, cards, tables-playing, or any other unlawful game: but, at all times as they shall have leisure, they shall hear or read somewhat of Holy Scripture, or shall occupy themselves with some honest exercise; and that they always do the things which appertain to honesty with endeavour to profit the common weal, having always in mind, that they ought to excel others in purity of life, and should be examples to the people to live well and christianly.

Questions to be put at confession.

Item, That they shall, in confessions every Lent, examine every person that cometh to confession, whether they can recite the Articles of their Faith, the Pater-Noster, and the Ten Commandments in English; and hear them say the same particularly: wherein if they be not perfect, they shall declare, then, that every christian person ought to know the said things before they should receive the blessed sacrament of the altar; and monish them to learn the said necessary things more perfectly; or else they ought not presume to come to God's board without perfect knowledge and will to observe the same; and if they do, it is at the great peril of their souls, and also to the worldly rebuke that they might incur hereafter by the same.

Preachers to be licensed.

Also, that they shall admit no man to preach within any their cures, but such as shall appear unto them to be sufficiently licensed thereunto by the king's majesty, his grace the lord protector, the archbishop of Canterbury, the archbishop of York in his province, or the bishop in his diocese: and such as shall be so licensed they shall gladly receive, to declare the Word of God without any resistance or contradiction.

Also, if they have heretofore declared to their parishioners any thing to the extolling or setting forth of pilgrimages, relics, or images, or lighting of candles, kissing, kneeling, decking of the same images, or any such superstition, they shall now, openly, before the same, recant and reprove the same; showing them, as the truth is, that they did the same upon no ground of Scripture, but were led and seduced by a common error or abuse, crept into the church through the sufferance and avarice of such as felt profit by the same.

Also, if they do or shall know any man, within their parish or elsewhere, that is a letter of the Word of God to be read in English, or sincerely preached, or of the execution of these the king's majesty's injunctions, or a favourer of the bishop of Rome's pretended power, now by the laws of this realm justly rejected, extirped, and taken away, utterly they shall detect and present the same to the king, or his council, or to the justice of the peace next adjoining.

Also, that the parson, vicar, or curate, and parishioners of every parish within this realm, shall, in their churches and chapels, keep one book or register, wherein they shall write the day and year of every wedding, christening, and burial, made within their parish for their time; and so every man succeeding them likewise; and also therein shall write every person's name, that shall be so wedded, christened, or buried; and, for the safe keeping of the same book, the parish shall be bound to provide, of their common charges, one big coffer, with two locks and keys, whereof the one to remain with the parson, vicar, or curate, and the other with the wardens of every parish, church, or chapel, wherein the said book shall be laid up: which book they shall every Sunday take forth, and, in the presence of the said wardens or one of them, write and record in the same all the weddings, christenings, and burials, made the whole week before; and, that done, to lay up the book in the said coffer, as before: and, for every time that the same shall be omitted, the party that shall be in the fault thereof shall be forfeit to the said church 3s. 4d., to be employed to the poor men's box of that parish.

Furthermore, because the goods of the church are called the goods of the poor, and, at these days, nothing is less seen, than the poor to be sustained with the same, all parsons, vicars, pensioners, prebendaries, and other beneficed men within this deanery, not being resident upon their benefices, who may dispend yearly 20l. and above, either within this deanery or elsewhere, shall distribute hereafter among their poor parishioners, or other inhabitants there, in the presence of the churchwardens or some other honest men of the parish, the fortieth part of the fruits and revenues of their said benefices, lest they be men worthily noted of ingratitude, who, reserving so many parts to themselves, cannot vouchsafe to impart the fortieth portion thereof among the poor people of that parish, that is so fruitful and profitable to them.

And, to the intent that learned men may hereafter spring the more for the execution of the premises, every parson, vicar, clerk, or beneficed man within this deanery, having yearly to dispend, in benefices and other promotions of the church, a 100l., shall give competent exhibition to one scholar; and for as many hundred pounds more as he may dispend, to so many scholars more, shall give like exhibition in the university of Oxford or Cambridge, or some grammar school; which, after they have profited in good learning, may be pertainers of their patron's cure and charge, as well in preaching, as otherwise in the execution of their offices; or may, when need shall be, otherwise profit the common weal, with their counsel and wisdom.

Also, that all proprietaries, parsons, vicars, and clerks, having churches, chapels or mansions within this deanery, shall bestow yearly, hereafter, upon the same mansions or chancels of their churches being in decay, the fifth part of their benefices, till they be fully repaired; and the same, so repaired, shall always keep and maintain in good estate.

Also, that the said parsons, vicars, and clerks, shall, once every quarter of the year, read these injunctions given unto them, openly and deliberately, before all their parishioners; to the intent that both they may be the better admonished of their duty, and their said parishioners the more moved to follow the same for their part.

Also, forasmuch as, by a law established, every man is bound to pay his tithes, no man shall, by colour of duty omitted by the curates, detain their tithes, and so redouble and requite one wrong with another, or be his own judge; but shall truly pay the same as he hath been accustomed, to the parsons, vicars, and curates, without any restraint or diminution. And such lack and default as they can justly find in their parsons and curates, to call for the reformation thereof, at their ordinary's, and other superior's hands; who, upon complaint and due proof thereof, shall reform the same accordingly.

Also, that no parson, from henceforth, alter or change the order and manner of any fasting-day that is so commanded, nor of Common Prayer, or divine service, otherwise than is specified in these Injunctions, until such time as the same shall be otherwise ordered and transposed by the king's authority.

Also, that the parson, vicar, curate, chantry-priest, and stipendiary, being under the degree of a bachelor of divinity, shall provide and have of his own, within three months after this visitation, the New Testament, both in Latin and English, with paraphrase upon the same of Erasmus; and diligently study the same, conferring the one with the other. And the bishops and ordinaries, by themselves or their officers, in their synods and visitations, shall examine the said ecclesiastical persons, how they have profited in the study of Scripture. Also, in the time of high mass, within every church, he that sayeth or singeth the same, shall read, or cause to be read, the epistle and gospel of that mass, in English, and not in Latin, in the pulpit, or in such convenient place as the people may hear the same. And also every Sunday and holy-day, they shall plainly and distinctly read, or cause to be read, one chapter of the New Testament in English, in the said place at matins, immediately after the lessons; and at evensong, after Magnificat, one chapter of the Old Testament. And, to the intent the premises may be more conveniently done, the king's majesty's pleasure is, that when nine lessons should be read in the church, three of them should be omitted and left out, with their responds; and at evensong-time, the responds, with all the memories, shall be left out, for that purpose.

Also, because those persons which be sick and in peril of death, be oftentimes put in despair by the craft and subtlety of the devil, who is then most busy, and specially with them that lack the knowledge, sure persuasion, and stedfast belief, that they may be made partakers of the great and infinite mercy which Almighty God, of his bountiful goodness and mere liberality, without our deserving, hath offered freely to all persons that put their full trust and confidence in him: therefore, that this damnable vice of despair may be clearly taken away, and firm belief and steadfast hope surely conceived by all their parishioners being in any danger, they shall learn, and have always in a readiness, such comfortable places and sentences of Scripture, as do set forth the mercy, benefits, and goodness of Almighty God towards all penitent and believing persons; that they may, at all times when necessity shall require, comfort promptly their flock with the lively Word of God, which is the only stay of man's conscience.

Also, to avoid all contention and strife, which heretofore hath risen amongst the king's majesty's subjects in sundry places of his realms and dominions, by reason of fond courtesy, and challenging of places in procession, and also that they may the more quietly hear that which is said or sung, to their edifying, they shall not from henceforth, in any parish church, at any time use any procession about the church or church-yard, or other place; but immediately before high mass, the priests, with others of the choir, shall kneel in the midst of the church, and sing or say plainly or distinctly the Litany which is set forth in English, adding nothing thereto, but as the king's grace shall hereafter appoint; and, in cathedral or collegiate churches, the same shall be done in such places as our commissaries in our visitation shall appoint. And in the time of the litany, of the high mass, of the sermon, and when the priest readeth the Scripture to the parishioners, no manner of persons, without a just and urgent cause, shall depart out of the church; and all ringing and knolling of bells shall be utterly foreborne for that time, except one bell, in convenient time, to be rung and knolled before the sermon.

Also, like as the people be commonly occupied on the work-day with bodily labour, for their bodily sustenance, so was the holy-day, at the first beginning, godly instituted and ordained, that the people should that day give themselves wholly to God: and whereas, in our time, God is more offended than pleased, more dishonoured upon the holy-day, because of idleness, pride, drunkenness, quarrelling, and brawling, which are most used on such days (people, nevertheless, persuading themselves sufficiently to honour God on that day, if they hear Mass and Service, though they understand nothing to their edifying); therefore, all the king's faithful and loving subjects shall, from henceforth, celebrate and keep their holy-day according to God's holy will and pleasure; that is, in hearing the Word of God read and taught; in private and public prayers; in acknowledging their offences to God; in amendment of the same; in reconciling themselves charitably to their neighbours, where displeasure hath been; in oftentimes receiving the communion of the very body and blood of Christ; in visiting the poor and sick; in using all soberness and godly conversation. Yet, notwithstanding, all parsons, vicars, and curates, shall teach and declare unto their parishioners, that they may, with a safe and quiet conscience, in the time of harvest, labour upon the holy and festival days, and save the thing which God hath sent. And if, for any scrupulosity, or grudge of conscience, men should superstitiously abstain from working upon those days, that then they should grievously offend and displease God.

Edward VI.

Harvest-time.

Also, forasmuch as variance and contention is a thing which most displeaseth God, and is most contrary to the blessed communion of the body and blood of our Saviour Christ, curates shall in no case admit to the receiving thereof, any of their cure and flock, who hath maliciously and openly contended with his neighbour, unless the same do first charitably and openly reconcile himself again, remitting all rancour and malice, whatsoever controversy hath been between them. And, nevertheless, their just titles and rights they may charitably prosecute before such as have authority to hear the same.

Diligent preparations to be had before the coming to the communion.

Also, that every dean, archdeacon, master of collegiate church, master of hospital, and prebendary, being priest, shall preach by himself personally, twice every year at the least, either in the place where he is entitled, or in some church where he hath jurisdiction, or else which is to the said place appropriate or united.

A godly charge to every beneficed minister.

Also, that they shall instruct and teach in their cures, that no man ought obstinately and maliciously to break and violate the laudable ceremonies of the church, by the king commanded to be observed, as yet not abrogated. And, on the other side, that whosoever doth superstitiously abuse them, doth the same to the great peril of his soul's health; as in casting holy water upon his bed, upon images and other dead things; or bearing about him holy bread, or St. John's Gospel; or making crosses of wood upon Palm Sunday, in time of reading of the passion; or keeping of private holy-days, as bakers, brewers, smiths, shoemakers, and such others do; or ringing of the holy bells, or blessing with the holy candle, to the intent thereby to be discharged of the burden of sin, or drive away devils, or to put away dreams and phantasies; or in putting trust and confidence of health and salvation in the same ceremonies, when they be only ordained to put us in remembrance of the benefits which we have received by Christ. And if any use them for any other purpose, he grievously offendeth God.

Distinctions as to ceremonies.

Also, that they shall take away, utterly extinct and destroy, all shrines, coverings of shrines, tables, candlesticks, trindles, or rolls of wax, pictures, paintings, and all other monuments of feigned miracles, pilgrimages, idolatry, and superstition, so that there remain no memory of the same on walls, glasses, windows, or elsewhere, within their churches or houses; and they shall exhort all their parishioners to do the like within their several houses.

All monuments of idolatry to be extinguished.

Also, that the churchwardens, at the common charge of the parishioners, in every church shall provide a comely and honest pulpit, to be set in a convenient place within the same, for the preaching of God's Word.

Also, they shall provide and have, within three months after this visitation, a strong chest, with a hole in the upper part thereof, to be provided at the cost and charge of the parish, having three keys, whereof one shall remain in the custody of the parson, vicar, or curate, and the other two, in the custody of the churchwardens, or any other two honest men, to be appointed by the parish from year to year; which chest you shall set and fasten near unto the high altar, to the intent the parishioners should put into it their oblations and alms for their poor neighbours. And the parson, vicar, or curate, shall diligently from time to time, and especially when men make their testaments, call upon, exhort, and move their neighbours, to confer and give, as they may well spare, to the said chest; declaring unto them that whereas, heretofore, they have been diligent to bestow much substance otherwise than God commanded upon pardons, pilgrimages, trentals, decking of images, offering of candles, giving to the friars, and upon other like blind devotions, they ought, at this time, to be much more ready to help the poor and needy, knowing that to relieve the poor is a true worshipping of God, required earnestly upon pain of everlasting damnation; and that also whatsoever is given for their comfort, is given to Christ himself, and so is accepted of him; that he will mercifully reward the same with everlasting life, the which alms and devotion of the people, the keepers of the keys shall, at all times convenient, take out of the church, and distribute the same in the presence of the whole parish, or six of them, to be truly and faithfully delivered to their most needy neighbours; and if they be provided for, then to the reparations of the highways next adjoining. And also, the money which riseth of fraternities, guilds, and other stocks of the church, except by the king's majesty's authority it be otherwise appointed, shall be put into the said chest, and converted to the said use; and also the rents of lands, the profit of cattle, and money given and bequeathed to the finding of torches, lights, tapers, and lamps, shall be converted to the said use; saving that it shall be lawful for them to bestow part of the said profits upon the reparations of the church, if great need require, and whereas the parish is very poor, and not able otherwise to repair the same.

Corpses not to be fetched of the priest before they come to the church-yard.

And forasmuch as priests be public ministers of the church, and upon the holy-days ought to apply themselves to the common ministration of the whole parish, they shall not be bound to go to women lying in childbed, except in time of dangerous sickness; and not to fetch any corpse before it be brought to the church-yard: and if the woman be sick, or the corpse brought to the church, the priest shall do his duty accordingly in visiting the woman, and burying the dead person.

Simony forbidden in buying and selling of benefices.

Also, to avoid the detestable sin of simony, because the buying and selling of benefices is execrable before God, therefore all such persons as buy any benefices, or come to them by fraud or deceit, shall be deprived of such benefices, and be made unable at any time after to receive any other spiritual promotions: and such as do sell them, or by any colour do bestow them for their own gain and profit, shall lose the right and title of patronage and presentment for that time; and the gift thereof for that vacation shall appertain to the king's majesty.

Homilies to be set forth and read every Sunday, when no sermon.

Also because, through lack of preachers, in many places of the king's realms and dominions, the people continued in ignorance and blindness, all parsons, vicars, and curates, shall read in their churches every Sunday, one of the homilies which are and shall be set forth, for the same purpose, by the king's authority, in such sort as they shall be appointed to do, in the preface of the same.<sup>1</sup>

Ministers such as be unlearned, yet if they be well willing, not to be condemned.

Also, whereas many indiscreet persons do at this day uncharitably contemn and abuse priests and ministers of the church, because some of them (having small learning), have of long time favoured phantasies, rather than God's truth; yet, forasmuch as their office and function is appointed of God, the king's majesty willeth and chargeth all his loving subjects, that, from henceforth, they shall use them charitably and reverently, for their office and ministration's sake; and, especially, all such as labour in the setting-forth of God's holy Word.

An order what primer to pray on.

Also, that all manner of persons, who understand not the Latin tongue, shall pray on no other Primer but upon that which was lately set forth in English by the authority of King Henry the eighth, of most famous memory; and that no teachers of youth shall teach any other than the said Primer.<sup>2</sup> And all those who have knowledge of the Latin tongue, shall pray upon none other Latin Primer, but upon that which is likewise set forth by the said authority. And that all graces to be said at dinner and supper, shall be always said in the

These Homilies are twelve in number, set forth, as the preface states, in consequence of 'the manifold enormities which heretofore have crept into his grace's realm, through the false usurped power of the bishop of Rome, and the ungodly doctrine of his adherents, not only unto the great decay of christian religion, but also (if God's mercy were not) unto the utter destruction of innumerable souls, which, through hypocrisy and pernicious doctrine, were seduced and brought from honouring the alone, true, living, and eternal God, unto the worshipping of creatures, yea of stocks and stones; from doing the commandment of God, unto voluntary works and phantasies invented of men; from true religion unto popish superstition.' — F. Item, that all chantry priests shall exercise themselves in teaching youth to read and write, and bring them up in good manners, and other virtuous exercises.

Item, when any sermon or homily shall be had, the prime and hours shall be omitted.*

Besides these general injunctions *and<sup>1</sup> laws ecclesiastical, set out by the godly prince, king Edward, with the consent of his uncle,* for the whole estate of the realm, there were also certain others particularly appointed for the bishops only, which, being delivered unto the commissioners, were likewise at their visitations committed unto the said bishops, with charge to be inviolably observed and kept, upon pain of the king's majesty's displeasure; the copies whereof here ensue in tenor and effect following:—

*Injunctions<sup>2</sup> given by the most excellent Prince, Edward the Sixth, to the Reverend Father in God, Thomas Bishop of Westminster, in his highness's visitation.

See
Appendix.

First, you shall, to your uttermost wit and understanding, see, and cause all, every, and singular the king's injunctions heretofore given, or hereafter to be given from time to time, in and through your diocese duly, truly, and faithfully, to be kept, observed, and accomplished.

Item, you shall personally preach in your diocese, every quarter of a year, once, at the least; that is to say, once in your cathedral church, and thrice in three other several places of your diocese, whereas to you shall seem most convenient and necessary, except you have a reasonable excuse to the contrary.

Item, you shall not retain into your service or household, any chaplain or chaplains but such as be learned and able to preach the word of God; and those you shall cause to exercise the same.

Item, you shall not give orders to any person or persons, not being learned in holy Scripture, neither deny them that be learned in the same, and of honest conversation and living.

Item, you shall not, at any time or place, preach or set forth unto the people, any doctrine contrary or repugnant to the effect and intent contained and set forth in the king's highness's homilies; neither yet admit, or give license to preach to any other within your diocese, but to such as you shall know, or, at the least, assuredly trust will do the same. And if, at any time, by hearing or by report proved, you shall perceive the contrary, you shall, incontinent, inhibit that person so offending, and punish him, and revoke your license. All which and singular injunctions you shall inviolably observe and keep, upon pain of the king's majesty's displeasure, and as you will answer for the contrary.

Given, the 29th day of August, in the chapter-house of the cathedral church of St. Peter's of Westminster, the first year of the reign of our said sovereign lord king Edward the Sixth.

to God, their sovereign lord the king, and one to another, you shall cause, every Sunday, divine service to be doone and ended in every parish-church within this city of Westminster before nine of the clock the same days; to the intent that the priests and the laity of this city may resort to the sermon to be made in your cathedral church, except they have a sermon made and preached in their own parish churches.

Item, Whereas by the ignorance of the clergy, not only God's glory is greatly obscured, but, also, the same clergy much disdained and evil spoken of by some of the laity, you shall cause that every parson, vicar, chantry-priest, and other stipendary within this city of Westminster, be present at every lecture of divinity to be made within the college of St. Stephen, except they or any of them have some reasonable let, to be allowed and admitted by you, your chancellor, commissary, or other officer for that purpose, or the reader of the said lecture.

Also you, your chancellor, commissary, and other, exercising jurisdiction ecclesiastical under you, shall proceed in all kinds of causes 'summarie et de plano, sine figura et strepitu iudicii;' and shall give sentence in every cause within four assignations after the term 'ad audiendum sententiam finalem.' All which and singular injunctions you shall inviolably observe and keep, upon pain of the king's majesty's displeasure, and as you will answer for the contrary.

Given at Westminster the third day of September, in the first year of the reign of our sovereign lord Edward the Sixth, by the grace of God king of England, France, and Ireland, defender of the faith; and, in earth, of the church of England and also of Ireland the supreme head.

Now, during the time that the commissioners were occupied abroad in their circuits about the speedy and diligent execution of these godly and zealous orders and decrees of the king and his council, his majesty (with the advice of the same), yet still desiring a further reformation as well in this case of religion, as also in some others of his civil government, appointed a parliament of the three estates of his realm to be summoned against the 4th day of November, in the first year of his reign, A. D. 1547, which continued unto the 24th day of December then next following; in which session, forasmuch as his highness minded the governance and order of his people to be in perfect unity and concord in all things, and especially in the true faith and religion of God, and therewithal also duly weighed the great danger that his loving subjects were in, for professing the gospel of Christ, through many and divers cruel statutes made by sundry his predecessors against the same (which being still left in force, might both cause the obstinate to contemn his grace's godly proceedings, and also the weak to be fearful of their christianlike profession), he therefore caused it among other things, by the authority of the same parliament, to be enacted, "that all acts of parliament and statutes, touching, mentioning, or in any wise concerning, religion or opinions; that is to say, as well the statute made in the first year of the reign of king Richard II., and the statute made in the second year of the reign of king Henry V., and the statute made in the 25th year of the reign of king Henry VIII., concerning punishment and reformation of heretics and Lollards, and every provision therein contained; and the statutes made for the abolishment of diversity of opinions in certain articles concerning christian religion, commonly called the Six Articles, made in the 31st year of the reign of king Henry VIII., and also the statute made in the parliament begun the 16th day of January, in the 33d year of the reign of the said king Henry VIII., and, after, prorogued unto the 22d day of January, in the 34th year of his said reign, touching, mentioning, or in any wise concerning, books of the Old and New Testament in English, and the printing, uttering, selling, giving, or delivering of books or writings, and retaining of English books or writings, and reading, preaching, teaching, or expounding the Scriptures, or in any wise touching, mentioning, or concerning, any of the said matters; and also one other statute, made in the 35th year of the reign of the said king Henry VIII., concerning the qualification of the statute of the Six Articles, and all and every other act or acts of parliament,<sup>1</sup> concerning doctrine or matters of religion; and all and every branch, article, sentence, matter, pains, or forfeitures contained, mentioned, or in any wise declared, in any of the same acts and statutes, should from thenceforth be utterly repealed, made void, and of none effect."

Edward VI.

By occasion hereof, as well all such his godly subjects as were then still abiding within this realm, had free liberty publicly to profess the gospel; as also many learned and zealous preachers, before banished, were now both licensed freely to return home again, and also encouraged boldly and faithfully to travail in their function and calling, so that God was much glorified, and the people, in many places, greatly edified.

Moreover, in the same session his majesty, with the lords spiritual and temporal, and the commons in the same parliament assembled, thoroughly understanding by the judgment of the best learned, that it was more agreeable unto the first institution of the sacrament of the most precious body and blood of our Saviour Christ, and also more conformable to the common use and practice both of the apostles, and of the primitive church, by the space of five hundred years and more after Christ's ascension, that the said holy sacrament should be ministered unto all christian people under both the kinds of bread and wine, than under the form of bread only; and also that it was more agreeable unto the said first institution of Christ, and the usage of the apostles and primitive church, that the people, being present, should receive the same with the priest, than that the priest should receive it alone: did, by their authority moreover enact in manner following:

'That the said holy sacrament should be from thenceforth commonly delivered and ministered unto the people, throughout the churches of England and Ireland, and other the king's dominions, under both the kinds of bread and wine, except necessity otherwise required; and, also, that the priest that should minister the same, should, at least one day before, exhort all persons who should be present, likewise to resort and prepare themselves to receive the same. And at the day prefixed, after some godly exhortation made by the minister, wherein should be further expressed the benefit and comfort promised to them that worthily receive this holy sacrament, and the danger and indignation of God, threatened to them that presume to receive the same unworthily, to the end that every man might try and examine his own conscience before he should come thereto; the said minister should not, without a lawful cause, deny the same to any person that would devoutly and humbly desire it: any law, statute, ordinance, or custom contrary thereunto in any wise notwithstanding.

After which most godly consent of the parliament, the king, being no less desirous to have the form of administration of the sacrament truly reduced to the right rule of the Scriptures and first use of the primitive church, than he was to establish the same by the authority of his own regal laws, appointed certain of the most grave and best learned bishops, and others of his realm, to assemble together at his castle of Windsor, there to argue and treat upon this matter, and to conclude upon, and set forth, one perfect and uniform order, according to the rule and use aforesaid.

And, in the mean time, while the learned were thus occupied about their conferences, the lord protector and the rest of the king's council, further remembering that that time of the year did then approach, wherein were practised many superstitious abuses and blasphemous ceremonies against the glory of God and truth of his word (determining the utter abolishing thereof), directed their letters unto the godly and reverend father Thomas Cranmer, then archbishop of Canterbury and metropolitan of England, requiring him that, upon the receipt thereof, he should will every bishop within his province, forthwith to give in charge unto all the curates of their dioceses, that neither candles should be any more borne upon Candlemas-day, nor yet ashes used in Lent, nor palms upon Palm-Sunday.

Candles and ashes forbidden to be borne.

Wherupon the archbishop, zealously favouring the good and christianlike purpose of the king and his council, did immediately, in that behalf, write unto all the rest of the bishops of that province, and, amongst them, unto Edmund Bonner, then bishop of London; of whose rebellious and obstinate contumacy for that we have hereafter more to say, I thought not to stand now long thereupon, but only by the way somewhat to note his former dissimulation and cloked hypocrisy, in that he outwardly, at first, consented as well unto this, as also unto all other the king's proceedings; but whether for fear or for any other subtle fetch I know not; howbeit most like it is rather for one of them, or both, than for any true love. And therefore, receiving the archbishop's letters, as one of them seeming to allow the contents thereof, he did presently write unto the bishop of Westminster, and to others to whom he was appointed, requiring them to give such knowledge thereof in their dioceses, as thereunto appertained; as more plainly appeareth by these his own letters here inserted, which here do follow.

Edmund Bonner's contumacy.

See Appendix.

A Letter missive of Edmund Bonner, sent to the Bishop of Westminster, with the tenor of the Archbishop's Letter for abolishing of Candles, Ashes, Palms, and other Ceremonies.

My very good lord, after most hearty commendations, these be to advertise your good lordship, that my lord of Canterbury's grace, this present 28th day of January, sent unto me his letters missive, containing this, in effect: that my lord protector's grace, with the advice of other the king's majesty's most honourable council, for certain considerations them moving, are fully resolved that no candles shall be borne upon Candlemas-day, nor also from henceforth ashes or palms used any longer: requiring me thereupon, by his said letters, to cause admonition and knowledge thereof to be given unto your lordship, and other bishops, with celerity accordingly. In consideration whereof, I do send at this present these letters unto your said lordship, that you thereupon may give knowledge and advertisement thereof within your diocese, as appertaineth.<sup>1</sup> Thus I commit your good lordship to Almighty God, as well to fare as your good heart can best desire.

Edward VI.

A. D. 1548.

Written in haste, at my house in London, the said twenty-eighth day of January, 1547. [1548.]

Your good lordship's to command,
Edmund London.

Now, about that present time, credible and certain report was made unto the lords of the council, that great contention and strife did daily arise among the common people, in divers parts of this realm, for the pulling down and taking away of such images out of the churches, as had been idolatrously abused by pilgrimage, offerings, or otherwise (according to the tenor of one of the injunctions given by the king in his late visitation), some affirming that that image was abused, others that this, and, most, that neither of them both; so that, if speedy remedy were not had therein, it might turn to further inconvenience. Wherefore they, by one advice, thinking it best (of good experience), for avoiding of all discord and tumult, that all manner of images should be clean taken out of all churches, and none suffered to remain, did thereupon again write their letters unto the archbishop of Canterbury, requiring his ready aid therein, in manner following.

Contending amongst the people for images.

Another Letter of the Council, sent to the Archbishop of Canterbury for the abolishing of Images.<sup>2</sup>

See Appendix.

After our right hearty commendations to your good lordship: whereas now of late, in the king's majesty's visitations, among other godly injunctions commanded to be generally observed through all parts of this his highness's realm, one was set forth for the taking down of all such images as had at any time been abused with pilgrimages, offerings, or censings, albeit that this said injunction hath in many parts of this realm been quietly obeyed and executed, yet, in many other places, much strife and contention hath risen and daily riseth, and more and more increaseth, about the execution of the same (some men being so superstitious, or rather wilful, as they would, by their good will, retain all such images still, although they have been most manifestly abused); and in some places also the images, which by the said injunctions were taken down, be now restored and set up again; and almost in every place is contention for images, whether they have been abused or not: and while these men go on both sides contentiously to obtain their minds, contending whether this or that image hath been offered unto, kissed, censured, or otherwise abused, parts have, in some places, been taken in such sort, as further inconveniences be like to ensue, if remedy be not found in time. Considering therefore, that almost in no place of this realm is any sure quietness, but where all images be clean taken away and pulled down already, to the intent that all contention in every part of the realm, for this matter, may be clearly taken away, and that the lively image of Christ should not contend for the dead images, which be things not necessary, and without which the churches of Christ continued most godly many years; we have thought good to signify unto you, that his highness's pleasure, with the advice and consent of us the lord protector and the rest of the council, is, that immediately upon the sight hereof, with as convenient diligence as you may, you shall not only give order, that all the images remaining in any church or chapel within your diocese be removed and taken away, but also, by your letters, signify unto the rest of the bishops within your province, his highness's pleasure, for the like order to be given by them and every of them, within their several dioceses. And in the execution hereof, we require both you and the rest of the said bishops, to use such foresight that the same may be quietly done, with as good satisfaction of the people as may be. Appendix.*

When the archbishop had received these letters, he forthwith directed his precept unto Bonner, bishop of London, requiring, and in the king's majesty's name commanding him, that, with all speed, he should as well give in charge unto the rest of the bishops within the province of Canterbury, to look immediately, without delay, unto the diligent and careful execution of the contents of the said letter through all places of their dioceses; as also, that he himself should do the like within his own city and diocese of London. Whereupon he, seeming then, with like outward consent as before, to allow these doings, presently (by virtue of the said precept) did send out his 'mandatum' as well unto the rest of the bishops, as also again unto the bishop of Westminster, as is hereunder to be seen.<sup>1</sup>

Now, by the time that these things were thus determined, the learned men whom the king had appointed (as ye have heard before) to assemble together for the true and right manner of administering the sacrament of the body and blood of Christ, according to the rule of the Scriptures of God, and first usage of the primitive church, after their long, learned, wise, and deliberate advices, did finally conclude and agree upon one godly and uniform order of receiving the same, not much differing from the manner at this present used and authorized within this realm and church of England, commonly called, "The Communion." This agreement, being by them exhibited unto the king, and of him most gladly accepted, was thereupon publicly imprinted, and, by his majesty's council, particularly divided and sent unto every bishop of the realm, requiring and commanding them, by their letters on the king's majesty's behalf, that both they, in their own persons, should forthwith have diligent and careful respect to the due execution thereof, and also should, with all diligence, cause the books which they then sent them to be delivered unto every parson, vicar, and curate within their diocese; that they, likewise, might well and sufficiently advise themselves for the better distribution of the same communion (according to the tenor of the said book), against the feast of Easter then next ensuing, as more fully appeareth by these their letters here following.

After our most hearty commendations unto your lordship: Whereas in the parliament late holden at Westminster, it was, amongst other things, most godly established, that, according to the first institution and use of the primitive church, the most holy sacrament of the body and blood of our Saviour Jesus Christ should be distributed to the people under the kinds of bread and wine: according to the effect whereof, the king's majesty, minding, with the advice and consent of the lord proteector's grace, and the rest of the council, to have the said statute well executed in such sort, or like as is agreeable with the word of God (so the same may be also faithfully and reverently received of his most loving subjects, to their comforts and wealth), hath caused sundry of his majesty's most grave and well-learned prelates, and other learned men in the Scriptures, to assemble themselves for this matter; who, after long conference together, have, with deliberate advice, finally agreed upon such an order to be used in all places of the king's majesty's dominions, in the distribution of the said most holy sacrament, as may appear to you by the book thereof, which we send herewith unto you. Albeit, knowing your lordship's knowledge in the Scriptures, and earnest good will and zeal to the setting forth of all things according to the truth thereof, we be well assured, you will, of your own good will, and upon respect to your duty, diligently set forth this most godly order here agreed upon, and commanded to be used by the authority of the king's majesty: yet, remembering the crafty practice of the devil, who ceases not, by his members, to work by all ways and means the hinderance of all godliness; and considering furthermore, that a great number of the curates of the realm, either for lack of knowledge cannot, or for want of good mind will not, be so ready to set forth the same, as we would wish, and as the importance of the matter and their own bounden duties require—we have thought good to pray and require your lordship, and nevertheless, in the king's majesty's, our most dread sovereign lord's name, to command you, to have an earnest diligence and careful respect, both in your own person, and by all your officers and ministers also, to cause these books to be delivered to every parson, vicar, and curate within your diocese, with such diligence as they may have sufficient time well to instruct and advise themselves, for the distribution of the most holy communion, according to the order of this book, before this Easter time; and that they may, by your good means, be well directed to use such good, gentle, and charitable instruction of their simple and unlearned parishioners, as may be to all their good satisfactions as much as may be; praying you to consider, that this order is set forth, to the intent there should be, in all parts of the realm, and among all men, one uniform manner quietly used. The execution whereof, like as it shall stand very much in the diligence of you and others of your vocation, so do we eftsoons require you to have a diligent respect thereunto, as ye tender the king's majesty's pleasure, and will answer for the contrary. And thus we bid your lordship right heartily farewell.

By means as well of this letter and the godly order of the learned, as also of the statute and act of parliament before mentioned, made for the establishing thereof, all private blasphemous masses were now, by just authority, fully abolished throughout this realm of England, and the right use of the sacrament of the most precious body and blood of our Saviour Jesus Christ truly restored instead of the same. But nevertheless, as at no time any thing can be so well done by the godly, but that the wicked will find some means subtly to deface the same, so likewise, at this present, through the perverse obstinacy and dissembling frowardness of many of the inferior priests and ministers of the cathedrals, and other churches of this realm, there did arise a marvellous schism, and variety of fashions, in celebrating the common service and administration of the sacraments, and other rites and ceremonies of the church. For some, zealously allowing the king's proceedings, did gladly follow the order thereof; and others, though not so willingly admitting them, did yet dissemblingly and patchingly use some part of them; but many, carelessly contemning all, would still exercise their old wonted popery.

Hereof the king and his council having good intelligence, and fearing the great inconveniences and dangers that might happen through this division, and being therewithal loth, at first, to use any great severity towards his subjects, but rather desirous, by some quiet and godly order, to bring them to some conformity, did, by their prudent advices, again appoint the archbishop of Canterbury, with certain of the best learned and discreet bishops and other learned men, diligently to consider and ponder the premises; and thereupon, having as well an eye and respect unto the most sincere and pure christian religion taught by the holy Scriptures, as also to the usages of the primitive church, to draw and make one convenient and meet order, rite, and fashion of Common Prayer, and administration of the sacraments, to be had and used within this his realm of England, and the dominions of the same; who, after most godly and learned conferences, through the aid of the Holy Ghost, with one uniform agreement did conclude, set forth, and deliver unto the king's highness, a book in English, entitled, "A Book of the Common Prayer and Administration of the Sacraments, and other rites and ceremonies of the church, after the use of the church of England." Which his highness receiving, with great comfort and quietness of mind, did forthwith exhibit unto the lords and commons of the parliament then assembled at Westminster, about the 4th of November, in the second year of his reign, and in the year of our Lord 1548, and continuing unto the 14th day of March, then next ensuing.

Edward VI.
A. D. 1549.

Whereupon the lords spiritual and temporal, and the commons of the said parliament assembled, well and thoroughly considering, as well the most godly travail of the king's highness, of the lord protector, and others of his majesty's council, in gathering together the said archbishop, bishops, and other learned men, as the godly prayers, orders, rites, and ceremonies in the said book mentioned,<sup>1</sup> with the consideration of altering those things which were altered, and retaining those things which were retained in the same book; as also the honour of God, and great quietness, which, by the grace of God, should ensue upon that one and uniform rite and order in such common prayer, rites, and extern ceremonies, to be used throughout England, Wales, Calais, and the marches of the same, did first give unto his highness most lowly and hearty thanks for the same, and then most humbly prayed him that it might be ordained and enacted by his majesty, with the assent of the lords and commons in that parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, as followeth:

One uniform order of Common Prayer.

Substance of the Petition of the Lords and Commons, in Parliament assembled, to the King.

That not only all and singular person and persons that had hitherto offended concerning the premises (other than such as were then remaining in ward in the Tower of London, or in the Fleet) might be pardoned thereof; but also, that all and singular ministers in any cathedral or parish churches, or other places, within the realm of England, Wales, Calais, and the marches of the same, or other the king's dominions, should, from and after the feast of Pentecost next coming, be bound to say and use the matins, evensong, celebration of the Lord's supper, and administration of each of the sacraments, and all other common and open prayer, in such order and form as were mentioned in the said book, and none other or otherwise.

And, albeit that they were so godly and good that they gave occasion unto every honest and conformable man most willingly to embrace them, yet, lest any obstinate persons, who willingly would disturb so godly an order and quiet in this realm, should go unpunished, they further requested, that it might be ordained and enacted, by the authority aforesaid, that if any manner of parson, vicar, or whatsoever other minister that ought or should say or sing Common Prayer (mentioned in the said book), or minister the sacraments, should, after the said feast of Pentecost then next coming, refuse to use the said Common Prayer, or to minister the sacraments in such cathedral or parish churches, or other places, as he should use or minister the same, in such order and form as they were mentioned and set forth in the said book; or should use wilfully, and obstinately standing in the same, any other rite, ceremony, form, or manner of mass, openly or privily, or matins, evensong, administration of the sacraments, or other open prayer than was mentioned and set forth in the said book; or should preach, declare, or speak, any thing in derogation or depraving of the said book, or any thing therein contained, or of any part thereof, and should be thereof lawfully convicted according to the laws of this realm by verdict of twelve men, or by his own confession, or by the notorious evidence of the fact, should lose and forfeit unto the king's highness, his heirs and successors, for his first offence, one whole year's profit of such one of his benefices or spiritual promotions, as it should please the king's highness to assign and appoint; and also, for the same offence, should suffer imprisonment by the space of six months, without bail or mainprize. But, if any such person, after his first conviction, should afterwards offend again, and be thereof, in form aforesaid, lawfully convicted, then he should, for his second offence, suffer imprisonment by the space of one whole year; and should also be deprived, 'ipso facto,' of all his spiritual promotions for ever, so that it should be lawful for the patrons and donors thereof to give the same again unto any other learned man, in like manner as if the said party so offending were dead. And if any the said person or persons should again the third time offend, and be thereof, in form aforesaid, lawfully convicted, then he should, for the same third offence, suffer imprisonment during his life. If any such person or persons aforesaid, so offending, had not any benefice or spiritual promotion, that then he should, for his first offence, suffer imprisonment by the space of six months without bail or mainprize, and, for his second offence, imprisonment during his life.

This request, or rather actual agreement, of the lords and commons of the parliament, being once understood by the king, was also soon ratified and confirmed by his regal consent and authority; and thereupon the said book of Common Prayer was presently imprinted, and commanded to be exercised throughout the whole realm and dominions thereof, according to the tenor and effect of the said statute. Moreover, in the same session of the said parliament it was enacted and established by the authority thereof, as followeth:

Laws and constitutions against priests'
debarred.

That forasmuch as great, horrible, and not to be rehearsed inconveniences, had, from time to time, risen amongst the priests, ministers, and other officers of the clergy, through their compelled chastity, and by such laws as prohibited them the godly and lawful use of marriage; that therefore all and every law and laws positive, canons, constitutions, and ordinances theretofore made by the authority of man only, which did prohibit or forbid marriage to any ecclesiastical or spiritual person or persons, of what estate, condition, or degree soever they were, or by what name or names they were called, who, by God's law, may lawfully marry; in all and every article, branch and sentence, concerning only the prohibition of the marriage of the persons aforesaid, should be utterly void and of none effect. And that all manner of forfeitures, pains, penalties, crimes, or actions, which were in the said laws contained, and of the same did follow, concerning the prohibition of the marriage of the said ecclesiastical persons, should also be thenceforth clearly and utterly void, frustrate and of none effect.

Marriage of priests
set free.

By occasion hereof, it was, thence after, right lawful for any ecclesiastical person, not having the gift of chastity, most godly to live in the pure and holy estate of matrimony, according to the laws and word of God.

But, if the first injunctions, statutes, and decrees of the prince were, by many, but slenderly regarded, with much less good affection were these, especially the book of Common Prayer, by divers now received; yea, and that by some of them, who had always before, in outward show, willingly allowed the former doings, as appeareth most plainly, amongst others, by Bonner the bishop of London; who, although, by his former letters and other mandates, he seemed hitherto to favour all the king's proceedings, yet did he, at that present (notwithstanding both the first statute for the establishing of the communion and the abolishing of all private masses, and also this statute of the ratifying and confirming of the book of Common Prayer), still suffer sundry idolatrous private masses of peculiar names, as the Apostles'

Mass, the Lady's Mass, and such like, to be daily solemnly sung within certain peculiar chapels of the cathedral church of Paul's, cloking them with the names of the Apostles' Communion, and Our Lady's Communion; not once finding any fault therewith, until such time as the lords of the council, having intelligence thereof, were fain, by their letters, to command and charge him to look better thereunto. And then, being therewith somewhat pricked forwards (perhaps by fear), he was content to direct his letters unto the dean and chapter of his cathedral church of Paul's, thereby requesting them forthwith to take such order therein, as the tenor of the council's said letters, therewithal sent unto them, did import; both which letters I have, for the more credit, here following inserted.

A Letter directed from the King's Council to Edmund Bonner, Bishop of London, for abrogating of Private Masses; especially the Apostles' Mass, within the Church of St. Paul, used under the name of the Apostles' Communion.<sup>1</sup>

After hearty commendations; having very credible notice that within that your cathedral church there be as yet the Apostles' Mass, and Our Lady's Mass, and other masses of such peculiar names, under the defence and nomination of Our Lady's Communion, and the Apostles' Communion, used in private chapels, and other remote places of the same, and not in the chancel: contrary unto the king's majesty's proceedings, the same being, for the misuse, displeasing to God; for the place, Paul's, in example not tolerable; for the fondness of the name, a scorn to the reverence of the communion of the Lord's body and blood: we, for the augmentation of God's honour and glory, and the consonance of his majesty's laws, and the avoiding of murmur, have thought good to will and command you, that, from henceforth, no such masses in this manner be in your church any longer used; but that the holy blessed communion, according to the act of parliament, be ministered at the high altar of the church, and in no other places of the same; and only at such time as your high masses were wont to be used, except some number of people desire, for their necessary business, to have a communion in the morning; and yet the same to be executed in the chancel, at the high altar, as it is appointed in the book of the public service, without cautel or digression from the common order. And herein you shall not only satisfy our expectation of your conformity in all lawful things, but also avoid the murmur of sundry that be therewith justly offended. And so we bid your lordship heartily farewell.

A Letter of Edmund Bonner to the Dean and Chapter of Paul's, sent with the Order in Council.

To my right worshipful friends, and most loving good brethren, master dean of Paul's, with all the canons, residentiaries, prebendaries, subdeans, and ministers of the same, and every of them, with speed:

Right worshipful, with most hearty commendations. So it is, this Wednesday, the 26th of June, going to dinner, I received letters from the king's council by a poursuivant, and the same I do send now herewith unto you, to the intent you may peruse them well, and proceed accordingly;<sup>2</sup> praying you, in case all be not present, yet those that be now resident, and supplying the places, may, in their absence, call the company together of the church, and make declaration hereof unto them. Thus committing you to God, right well to fare.

Written with speed this 26th of June, at one of the clock.

Your loving brother,

Edmund London.

Over and besides all this, the lord protector, with the residue of the king's privy and learned council assembling together in the Star Chamber, about the same matter; that is, for the advancement and setting forward of the king's so godly proceedings, called before them all the justices of the peace, where was uttered unto them, by the lord Rich, then lord chancellor, an eloquent and learned admonition, the tenor whercof ensueth.

An Admonition addressed by the Lord Chancellor Rich to Justices of the Peace.

It hath been used and accustomed before this time, to call, at certain times, the justices of peace before the king's majesty's council, to give unto them admonition or warning, diligently (as is their duty) to look to the observing of such things as be committed to their charges, according to the trust which the king's majesty hath in them. Howbeit now, at this time, we call you before us, not only of custom, but rather of necessity, for hearing daily, and perceiving of necessity, as we do, the great negligence, and the little heed which is taken and given, to the observing of the good and wholesome laws and orders in this realm; whereupon much disorder doth daily ensue, and, the king's majesty's proclamations and orders taken by the counsell (as we are advertised) not executed, the people are brought to disobedience, and in a manner all his majesty's study and ours, in setting a good and most godly stay to the honour of God and the quiet of the realm, is spent in vain, and come to nothing: which, as we have great hope and trust not to be altogether so, yet, so much as it is, and so much as it lacketh of the keeping of the realm in a most godly order and stay, we must needs impute and lay the fault thereof in you, who are the justices of the peace in every shire; to whom we are wont to direct our writings, and to whose trust and charge the king's majesty hath committed the execution of all his proclamations, of his acts of parliament, and of his laws.

Justices
slack in further-
religion.

We are informed that many of you are so negligent and so slack herein, that it doth appear you do look rather, as it were, through your fingers, than diligently see to the execution of the said laws and proclamations. For, if you would, according to your duties, to your oath, to the trust which the king's majesty hath in you, give your diligence and care toward the execution of the same most godly statutes and injunctions; there should no disobedience, nor disorder, nor evil rule, be begun or arise in any part of the realm, but it should, by and by, be repressed, kept down, and reformed. But it is feared, and the thing itself giveth occasion thereto, that divers of you do not only not set forth, but rather hinder, so much as lieth in you, the king's majesty's proceedings; and are content that there should arise some disobedience, and that men should repine against godly orders, set forth by his majesty (you do so slackly look to the execution of the same); so that in some shires, which be further off, it may appear that the people have never heard of divers of his majesty's proclamations; or, if they have heard, you are content to wink at it, and to neglect it, so that it is all one as though it were never commanded. But if you do consider and remember your duties, first to Almighty God, and then to the king's majesty, the wealth of the whole realm, and the safeguard of your own selves, you must needs see, that except such orders as the king's majesty hath set, and hereafter shall appoint, be kept, neither can the realm be defended, if the enemy should invade, nor can it in peace stand; but, upon the contempt of good and wholesome laws, all disorder and inconveniences will come, the people will be wild and savage, and no man sure of his own.

If, at any time, there was occasion and cause to be circumspect and diligent about the same, there was never more time than now. How we stand in Scotland you know, and that other foreign power maketh great preparation to aid them, and indeed doth come to their aid; whereof we are surely informed and certified. Wherefore, if there should not be good order and obedience kept in the realm, the realm were like utterly to be destroyed. Never foreign power could yet hurt, or in any part prevail in this realm, but by disobedience and disorder within ourselves. That is the way wherewith God will plague us, if he mind to punish us. And so long as we do agree among ourselves, and be obedient to our prince, and to his godly orders and laws, we may be sure that God is with us, and that foreign powers shall not prevail against us, nor hurt us.

Edward VI.

The fruit of obedience in a realm.

Wherefore, once again, and still we must and do lay this charge upon you, that are the better of the shire, and justices of the peace, that with so convenient speed as you can, you do repair down into your countries; and you shall give warning to the gentlemen of the shire, who have not necessary business here, that they repair down each man to his country; and there, both you and they who be reckoned the stay of every shire to see good order and rule kept: you, that your sessions of gaol-delivery and quarter-sessions be well kept, and that therein your meetings be such that justice may be well and truly ministered, the offenders and malefactors punished according to the laws of this realm, without any fear of any man, or that for favour you should suffer those to escape, who, with their evil example, might bring others to the like mishap; and that all vagabonds, and lewd and light tale-tellers, and seditious bearers of false news of the king's majesty, or of his council, or such as will preach without license, be immediately by you repressed and punished.

Orders taken for justices.

And if there should chance any lewd or light fellows to make any routs or riots, or unlawful assemblies, any seditious meetings, uproars, or uprisings, in any place, by the seditious and devilish motion of some private traitors, that you and they appease them at the first, and apprehend the first authors and causers thereof, and certify us with speed. The lightness of the rude and ignorant people must be suppressed and ordered by your gravity and wisdom. And here you may not (if any such thing chance) dissemble with those such lewd men, and hide yourselves; for it shall be required of you, if such disorder be: and surely, without your aid and help, or your dissembling, such disorder cannot be. Nor do we say, that we fear any such thing, or that there is any such thing likely to chance; but we give you warning before, lest it should chance. We have too much experience in this realm, what inconvenience cometh of such matters. And though some light persons, in their rage, do not consider it, yet we do not doubt but you weigh it, and know it well enough. And if it should chance our enemies (who are maintained by other foreign power, and the bishop of Rome) should suddenly arrive in some place in England, either driven by tempest, or of purpose to do hurt, ye should see such order kept by firing of the beacons, as hath already been written unto you by our letters, to repulse the same in as good array as you can; as we do not doubt but you will, for the safeguard of your country, so that the enemy shall have little joy of his coming: and, for that purpose, you shall see diligently that men have horse, harness, and other furniture of weapon ready, according to the statutes and good orders of the realm, and the king's majesty's commandments. And so for this time ye may depart.

Provision against privy conspiracy and rebellion.

Provision against foreign power.

What zealous care was in this young king, and in the lord protector his uncle, concerning reformation of Christ's church, and sincere religion, by these injunctions, letters, precepts, and exhortations, as well to the bishops, as to the justices of the realm above premised, it may right well appear. Whereby we have to note, not so much the careful diligence of the king and his learned council; as the lingering slackness and drawing back, on the other side, of divers of the said justices and lawyers, but especially of bishops, and old popish curates, by whose cloaked contempt, wilful winking, and stubborn disobedience, the book of the Common Prayer was, long after the publishing thereof, either not known at all, or else very irreverently used, throughout many places of the realm. This, when the king, by complaint of divers, perfectly understood, being not a little aggrieved to see the godly agreement of the learned, the willing consent of the parliament, and his grace's own zealous desire, to take so small effect among his subjects, he decreed presently, with the advice of his whole council, again to write unto all the bishops of his realm, for speedy and diligent redress therein; willing and commanding them thereby, that as well they themselves should, thenceforth, have a more special regard to the due execution of the premises, as also that all others, within their several precincts and jurisdictions, should, by their good instructions and willing example, be the more often and with better devotion moved to use and frequent the same: as further appeareth by the contents of this letter here ensuing.

Another Letter, directed by the King and his Council to Bonner Bishop of London, partly rebuking him of negligence, partly charging him to see to the better setting-out of the Service-Book within his Diocese.

Right reverend father in God! right trusty and well-beloved! we greet you well: and whereas, after great and serious debating and long conference of the bishops and other grave and well-learned men in the holy Scriptures, one uniform order for Common Prayers and administration of the Sacraments, hath been, and is, most godly set forth, not only by the common agreement and full assent of the nobility and commons of the late session of our late parliament, but, also, by the like assent of the bishops in the same parliament, and of all other the learned men of this our realm, in their synods and convocations provincial: like as it was much to our comfort, to understand the godly travail then diligently and willingly taken for the true opening of things mentioned in the said book, whereby the true service and honour of Almighty God, and the right ministrations of the sacraments being well and sincerely set forth, according to the Scriptures and use of the primitive church, much idolatry, vain superstition, and great and slanderous abuses be taken away: so it is no small occasion of sorrow unto us, to understand, by the complaints of many, that our said book, so much travailed for, and also sincerely set forth (as is aforesaid), remaineth, in many places of this our realm, either not known at all, or not used; or at least, if it be used, very seldom, and that in such light and irreverent sort that the people, in many places, either have heard nothing, or, if they hear, they neither understand, nor have that spiritual delectation in the same, that to good Christians appertaineth. The fault whereof, like as we must of reason impute to you and other of your vocation, called by God, through our appointment, to have due respect to this and such like matters; so, considering that, by these and such like occasions, our loving subjects remain yet still in their blindness and superstitious errors, and, in some places, in an irreligious forgetfulness of God, whereby his wrath may be provoked upon us and them; and remembering withal, that amongst other cures committed to our princely charge, we think this the greatest, to see the glory and true service of Him maintained and extolled, by whose clemency we acknowledge ourselves to have all that we have; we could not but by advice and consent of our dearest uncle, Edward duke of Somerset, governor of our person, and protector of our realm, dominions, and subjects, and the rest of our privy council, admonish you of the premises. Wherein as it had been your office to have used an earnest diligence, and to have reformed the same in all places within your diocese, as the case required; so have we thought good to pray and require you, and nevertheless straightly to charge and command you, that from henceforth ye have an earnest and special regard to the redub of these things, so as the curates may do their duties more often, and in more reverent sort, and the people be occasioned, by the good advices and examples of yourself, your chancellor, archdeacons, and other inferior ministers, to come with oftener and more devotion to their said Common Prayers, to give thanks to God, and to be partakers of the most holy communion. Wherein showing yourself diligent, and giving good example in your own person, you shall both discharge your duty to the great Pastor, to whom we all have to account, and also do us good service: and, on the other side, if we shall hereafter (these our letters and commandment notwithstanding) have eftsoons complaint, and find the like faults in your diocese, we shall have just cause to impute the fault thereof, and of all that ensueth thereof, unto you; and, consequently, be occasioned thereby to see otherwise to the redress of these things; whereof we would be sorry. And, therefore, we do eftsoons charge and command you, upon your allegiance, to look well upon your duty herein, as ye tender our pleasure.

Given under our signet, at our manor of Richmond, the 23d day July, the third year of our reign, 1549.

The bishop of London, amongst the rest of the bishops, receiving these letters, did (as always before) in outward show willingly accept the same; and, therefore, immediatly with the said letters directed this his precept unto the dean and chapter of his cathedral church of Paul's, commanding them to look to the due accomplishing thereof accordingly.

A Letter of Bonner to the Dean and Chapter of St. Paul's.

See
Appendix.

Edmund by the grace of God, &c.: to my well-beloved brethren the dean and chapter of the cathedral church of St. Paul in London, and to the other ministers there, and every of them, do send greeting. And whereas it is so, that of late I have received the said sovereign lord the king's majesty's letters, of such tenor as is hereunto annexed, and, according to my most bounden duty, am right well willing and desiring,<sup>1</sup> that the said letters should be in all points duly executed and observed, according to the tenor and purport of the same, as appertaineth: these therefore are to require, and also straitly to charge you, and every of you, on his majesty's behalf, &c., that you do admonish and command, or cause to be admonished or commanded, all and singular parsons, vicars and curates of your jurisdiction, to observe and accomplish the same from time to time accordingly: furthermore requiring and likewise charging you, and every of you, to make certificate herein to me, my chancellor, or others, my officers in this behalf, with such convenient celerity as appertaineth, both of your proceedings in the execution hereof, and also the persons and names of all such as, from henceforth, shall be found negligent in doing their duties in the premises, or any of them.

Given at my house at Fulham, the 26th of July, A. D. 1549, and in the third year of our said sovereign lord the king's majesty's reign.

Moreover, forasmuch as the king, at that instant, hearing the muttering of certain rebellion then stirring (whereof more shall be said, the Lord willing, hereafter), and also being credibly informed by divers, that, through the evil example, slackness of preaching and administering the sacraments, and careless contempt of Bonner, bishop of London, not only many of the people within the city of London, and other places of his diocese, were very negligent and forgetful of their duties to God, in frequenting the divine service then established and set forth by the authority of parliament, but also, that divers others, utterly despising the same, did in secret places of his diocese, often frequent the popish mass, and other foreign rites not allowed by the laws of this realm, he thought it

(1) If you were so 'well willing then and desiring' as you say, where is this well willing and desiring mind now? If ye did it then against your conscience, how were ye then so well willing? If ye did it with your conscience, why then burnt ye men in queen Mary's time, for that which, in king Edward's time, ye did yourself? [See Edition 1563, p. 692.—ED.]

therefore good (having thereby just cause to suspect his former dissembling doubleness) to appoint the lord protector and the rest of his privy council to call the said bishop before them, and according to their wise and discreet judgments, to deal with him for the same.

Whereupon, the 10th day of August, A. D. 1549, they sent a messenger for him, and, upon his appearance, made first declaration of such informations and complaints as had been heretofore made against him. And then, after sharp admonitions and reproofs for his evil demeanours in the premises, they delivered unto him from the king (for his better reformation and amendment) certain private injunctions, to be necessarily followed and observed of himself. And whereas, in the first branch of the said injunctions, he was personally assigned to preach at Paul's cross the Sunday three weeks then next ensuing (because both the dangerous and fickle estate of the time, and also partly his own suspicious behaviour so required), they further delivered unto him, in writing, such articles to treat upon in his sermon, as they thought then most meet and necessary for the time and causes aforesaid; *who,<sup>1</sup> for his not satisfying his duty therein, was denounced and raigned before the king's commissioners, at length imprisoned, and also deprived: the process whereof, how he behaved himself before the judges, what his cause was, and his answers therein, with his repeals, recusations, appellations, and other circumstances, and blind shifts concerning the same, here also followeth thereunto annexed: wherein whoso listeth to know Bonner, who never see him before, here, by his doings, may easily understand the nature and disposition of the man. Such stoutness of heart and will, if it had been in a cause true and rightful, might, perchance, be sufferable: but in what cause soever it be, being immoderate, bescemeth no man, much less one of that vocation. If his cause were good, why did he not take the wrong patiently, as the true canon law of the gospel did lead him? If it were (as it was indeed) naught and wrong, whereto served so bold, sturdy stoutness, but to show the impudency of the person, and to make the cause worse, which was bad enough before?

But, belike, he was disposed to declare, if need were, what he was able to do in the law, in shifting of the matter by subtle dilatorics and frivolous cavilling about the law; and, if that would not help, yet with facing and brazing, and railing upon his denouncers, with furious words and irreverent behaviour towards the king's commissioners, he thought to countenance out the matter before the people, that something might seem yet to be in him, whatsoever was in the cause. But, as the common saying goeth, "as good never a whit, as never the better," for all his crafty cautels and tergiversations alleged out of the law, yet neither his cause could so be defended, nor his behaviour so excused, but that he was therefore both justly imprisoned and deprived; as by the process hereof may well appear to the reader.*

All the aforesaid injunctions and articles, for the further manifestation thereof, I have here inserted as followeth:

Certain private Injunctions, Admonitions, and Articles given to Bonner by the Privy Council.

Appendix.*

Forasmuch as we are advertised that, amongst other disorders of our subjects at this present, there be divers of our city of London, and other places within your diocese, which, being very negligent and forgetful of their duty to Almighty God, of whom all good things are to be looked for, do assemble themselves very seldom, and fewer times than they were heretofore accustomed, unto Common Prayer, and to the Holy Communion, being now a time when it were more needful, with heart and mind, to pray to our heavenly Father for his aid and succour; whereof as we be right sorry, so we do understand that, through your evil example, and the slackness of your preaching and instructing of our said people to do their duties, this offence to God is most generally committed. For whereas heretofore, upon all principal feasts, and such as were called 'majus duplex,' you yourself were wont to execute in person, now, since the time that we, by the advice of our whole parliament, have set a most godly and devout order in our church of England and Ireland, ye have very seldom or never executed upon such or other days; to the contempt of our proceedings and evil example of others. And, forasmuch as it is also brought to our knowledge, that divers as well in London, as in other places of your diocese, do frequent and haunt foreign rites and masses, and such as be not allowed by the orders of our realm, and contemn and forbear to praise and laud God, and pray unto his majesty, after such rites and ceremonies as, in this realm, are approved and set out by our authority; and further, that adultery and fornication are maintained and kept openly and commonly in the said city of London and other places of your diocese, whereby the wrath of God is provoked against our people; of the which things you, being heretofore admonished, yet hitherto have made no redress, as to the pastoral office, authority, and cure of a bishop doth appertain: we, therefore, to whom the supreme cure and charge of this church doth appertain, to avoid from us the high indignation of Almighty God, by the advice of our most entirely beloved uncle the lord protector, and the rest of our privy council, have thought it no less than our most bounden duty, now at this present, and eftsoons preceptorily, to admonish, charge, and warn you, that you do most straightly look upon the premises, and see them so reformed that there may appear no negligence on your behalf; upon such pain as, by our laws ecclesiastical and temporal, we may inflict upon you, unto deprivation or otherwise, as shall seem to us, for quality of the offence, reasonable. And to the intent you should the better see to the reformation of the said abuses, we have thought good to give you these injunctions following:

Bonner refraineth to execute all principal feasts, contrary to his wonted manner. Noted of slackness in his duty, and of contempt of public laws.

First, ye shall preach at Paul's Cross in London, in proper person, the Sunday after the date hereof three weeks, and in the same sermon declare and set forth the articles herunto annexed; and ye shall preach hereafter once every quarter of the year there, exhorting, in your sermon, the people to obedience, prayer, and godly living; and ye shall be present at every sermon hereafter made at Paul's Cross, if sickness, or some other reasonable cause, do not let you.

Secondly, You yourself, in person, shall from henceforth every day which heretofore was accounted in this church of England a principal feast, or 'majus duplex,' and at all such times as the bishops of London, your predecessors, were wont to celebrate and sing high mass, now celebrate and execute the communion at the high altar in Paul's, for the better example of all others; except sickness do let.

Thirdly, Ye shall yourself, according to your duty and the office of a bishop, call before you all such as do not come unto and frequent the common prayer and service in the church, or do not come unto God's board, and receive the communion at least once a year; or whosoever do frequent or go unto any other rite or service than is appointed by our book, either of matins, evensong, or mass, in any church, chapel, or other private places within your diocese; and ye shall see all such offenders convented before you, and punished according unto the ecclesiastical laws, with severe and straight punishment therefore. Likewise ye shall see one only order used in your diocese, according to our said book, and none other.

Fourthly, Ye shall, both by yourself and all your officers under you, search out and convent before you more diligently than heretofore ye have done (as appertaineth to your office) all adulterers, and see the same punished according to the ecclesiastical laws, and to the authority given you in that behalf.

Fifthly, We have heard also complaints, that the church of Paul's and other churches of London, are of late more neglected, as well in reparation of the glass, as other buildings and ornaments of the same, than they were heretofore wont; and that divers and many persons in the city of malice deny the payment of their due tithes to their curates, whereby the curates are both injured, and made not so well able, and in manner discouraged, to do their duties: the which thing also, our will and commandment is, ye shall diligently look unto, and see redressed as appertaineth.

Bonner commanded to keep his own house.

Sixthly, And forasmuch as all these complaints be made, as most done and committed in London, to the intent you may look more earnestly, better, and more diligently, to the reformation of them, our pleasure is, that you shall abide and keep residence in your house there, as in the city, see, and principal place, of your diocese, and none elsewhere, for a certain time, until you shall be otherwise licensed by us.

The rebels in and Devonshire.

And thus, having brought bishop Bonner home to his own house, there to leave him awhile, to take his ease in his own lodging till we return to him again, we will, in the mean time, make a little inter-course into Cornwall and Devonshire, to discourse some part of the disordered and disloyal doings of those men against their so meek and excellent a prince, having no cause ministered thereunto; yea, having cause rather to yield praise and thanks to the Lord for such a quiet and peaceable prince in his mercy given unto them. But such is the condition of unquiet natures, that they cannot skill of peace: and where due discretion lacketh, there lewd-disposed persons cannot tell when they be well. Again, some be so crooked and so perversely given, that the more courteously they be treated, the worse they are; and when, by honest diligence, they list not to get their living, by public disturbance of commonwealths they think to thrive. And so seemed it to fare with this seditious people of Cornwall and Devonshire, who, having so good and virtuous a king, that, if they should have sought him as Diogenes, they say, did seek for a man with a candle, a meeker and better sovereign they could not have found, a crueller they well deserved; yet were they not with him contented, but, contrary to all order, reason, nature, and loyalty, advanced themselves in a rebellious conspiracy against him, and against his proceedings, through the pernicious instigation, first (as it seemeth) of certain popish priests, who, grudging and disdainng against the injunctions and godly order of reformation set forward by the king, and especially mourning to see their old popish church of Rome to decay, ceased not, by all sinister and subtle means, first, under God's name and the king's, and under colour of religion, to persuade the people; then, to gather sides, to assemble in companies, and to gather captains; and at last to burst out in rank rebellion.

Neither lacked there among the lay sort some as seditiously disposed as they, to mischief and madness, as well gentlemen as others. Of whom the chief gentlemen captains were, Humfrey Arundel, esquire, governor of the Mount, James Rosogan, John Rosogan, John Pain, Thomas Underhil, John Soleman, William Segar. Of priests who were principal stirrers, and some of them governors of the camps, and afterwards executed, there were to the number of eight, whose names were Robert Bochim, John Tompson, Roger Barret, John Wolcock, William Asa, James Mourton, John Barrow, Richard Benet, besides a multitude of other popish priests, which to the same faction was adjoined. The number of the whole rebellion, speaking with the least, mounted to little less than ten thousand stout traitors.

Edward VI.

A. D. 1549.

These, hearing first of the commotions which began about the same time in other parts to broil, as in Oxfordshire, Yorkshire, and especially in Norfolk and Suffolk, began to take therein some courage, hoping that they should have well fortified the same quarrel. But afterwards, they, perceiving how the mischievous mutterings and enterprises of their conspiracy did suddenly fail, either being prevented by time, or repressed by power; or that their cause, being but only about plucking down of inclosures, and enlarging of commons, was divided from theirs, so that either they would not or could not join their aid together, then began they again to quail, and their courage to abate. Notwithstanding, forasmuch as they had gone so far that they thought there was no shrinking back, they fell to new devices and inventions, for the best furtherance of their desperate purposes.

Divers commotions in the king's time suppressed.

Their first intent was, after they had spoiled their own country most miserably, to invade the city of Exeter, and so, consequently, all other parts of the realm. But first, for Exeter they gaped, the gates whereof twice they burned, but gained nothing saving only gunshot, whereof they lacked no plenty. Being put from Exeter, they fell on spoiling and robbing, where or whatsoever they might catch. At length, laying their traitorous heads together, they consulted upon certain articles to be sent up. But herein such diversity of heads and wits was amongst them, that for every kind of brain there was one manner of article; so that there neither appeared any consent in their diversity, nor yet any constancy in their agreement. Some seemed more tolerable: others altogether unreasonable: some would have no justice: some would have no state of gentlemen. The priests ever harped upon one string, to ring in the bishop of Rome into England again, and to halloo home cardinal Pole their countryman.

The city of Exeter invaded.

Diversity of wits amongst the rebels.

After much ado, and little to the purpose, at last a few sorry articles were agreed upon, to be directed unto the king, with the names of certain set thereunto, the copy whereof here ensueth.

The Articles of the Commons of Devonshire and Cornwall, sent to the King.

First, Forasmuch as man, except he be born of water and the Holy Ghost, cannot enter into the kingdom of God, and forasmuch as the gates of heaven be not opened without his blessed sacrament of baptism, therefore we will that our curates shall minister this sacrament at all times of need, as well on the week-days, as on the holy-days.

Sacrament of baptism.

Item, We will have our children confirmed of the bishop, whensoever we shall within the diocese resort unto him.

Confirmation.

Item, Forasmuch as we constantly believe, that after the priest hath spoken the words of consecration, being at mass, there celebrating and consecrating the same, there is very really the body and blood of our Saviour Jesus Christ, God and man, and that no substance of bread and wine remaineth after, but the very selfsame body that was born of the Virgin Mary, and was given upon the cross for our redemption; therefore, we will have mass celebrated as it hath been in times past, without any man communicating with the priests; forasmuch as many, rudely presuming unworthily to receive the same, put no difference between the Lord's body and other kind of meat, some saying that it is bread before and after, some saying that it is profitable to no man except he receive it; with many other abused terms.

Item, We will have in our churches reservation.

Item, We will have holy bread and holy water, in remembrance of Christ's precious body and blood.

Item, We will that our priests shall sing or say, with an audible voice, God's service in the choir of the parish churches, and not God's service to be set forth like a Christmas play.

Item, Forasmuch as priests be men dedicated to God, for ministering and celebrating the blessed sacraments and preaching of God's word, we will that they shall live chaste without marriage, as St. Paul did, being the elect and chosen vessel of God, saying unto all honest priests, 'Be ye followers of me.'

Item, we will that the Six Articles which our sovereign lord, king Henry VIII., set forth in his latter days, shall be used, and so taken as they were at that time.

Item, We pray God save king Edward, for we be his, both body and goods.

A Message or Answer sent by the King's Majesty to certain of his People assembled in Devonshire.

Although knowledge hath been given to us and our dearest uncle Edward duke of Somerset, governor of our person, and protector of all our realms, dominions, and subjects, and to the rest of our privy council, of divers assemblies made by you, which ought of duty to be our loving subjects, against all order, law, and otherwise than ever any loving and kind subjects have attempted against their natural and liege sovereign lord: yet we have thought it meet, at this very first time, not to condemn or reject you, as we might justly do, but to use you as our subjects; thinking that the devil hath not that power in you, to make you, of natural born Englishmen, so suddenly to become enemies to your own native country, or of our subjects to make you traitors, or, under pretence to relieve yourselves, to destroy yourselves, your wives, children, lands, houses, and all other commodities of this your life. This we say: we trust that, although ye be by ignorance seduced, ye will not be upon knowledge obstinate: and though some amongst you (as ever there is some cockle amongst good corn) forget God, neglect their prince, esteem not the state of the realm, but, as careless, desperate men, delight in sedition, tumult, and wars: yet, nevertheless, the greater part of you will hear the voice of us your natural prince, and will, by wisdom and counsel, be warned, and cease your evils in the beginning, whose ends will be, even by Almighty God's order, your own destruction. Wherefore, as to you our subjects, by ignorance seduced, we speak, and be content to use our princely authority like a father to his children, for this time, to admonish you of your faults, not to punish them; to put you in remembrance of your duties, not to avenge your forgetfulness.

Unlawful
blies.

First, your disorder to rise in multitudes, to assemble yourselves against others our loving subjects, to array yourselves to the war: who amongst you all can answer for the same to Almighty God, charging you to obey us in all things? or how can any English good heart answer us, our laws, and the rest of our very loving and faithful subjects, who, indeed, by their obedience, make our honour, estate, and degree?

The
abused.

Ye use our name in your writings, and abuse the same against ourself. What injury herein do you us, to call those which love us to your evil purposes by the authority of our name! God hath made us your king by his ordinance and providence, by our blood and inheritance, by lawful succession and our coronation; but not to this end, as you use our name. We are your most natural sovereign lord and king, Edward the Sixth, to rule you, to preserve you, to save you from all your outward enemies, to see our laws well ministered, every man to have his own, to suppress disordered people, to correct traitors, thieves, pirates, robbers, and such like, yea, to keep our realms from foreign princes, from the malice of the Scots, of Frenchmen, of the bishop of Rome. Thus, good subjects! our name is written; thus it is honoured and obeyed; this majesty it hath by God's ordinance, not by man's. So that of this your offence we cannot write too much; and yet doubt not but this is enough from a prince to all reasonable people, from a king to all kind-hearted and loving subjects, from a puissant king of England to every natural Englishman.

Your pretences which you say move you to do this, and wherewith you seek to excuse this disorder, we assure you, be either all false, or so vain, that we doubt not but, after ye shall hereby understand the truth thereof, ye will all, with one voice, acknowledge yourselves ignorantly led, and by error seduced: and if there be any that will not, assure you the same be rank traitors, enemies of our crown, seditious people, heretics, papists, or such as care not for what cause they seek to provoke an insurrection, so they may do it; nor indeed can wax so rich with their own labours, and with peace, as they can do with spoils, with wars, with robberies, and such like; yea, with the spoil of your own goods, with the living of your labours, the sweat of your bodies, the food of your own households, wives, and children. Such they be, as for a time use pleasant persuasions to you, and, in the end, will cut your throats, for your own goods.

You be borne in hand, that your children, though necessity chance, shall not be christened but upon the holy days. How false this is, learn you of us: our book which we have set forth by the free consent of our whole parliament, in the English tongue, teacheth you the contrary, even in the first leaf, yea, the first side of the first leaf of that part which treateth of baptism. Good subjects! (for to others we speak not) look and be not deceived. They which have put this false opinion into your ears, they mean not the christening of children, but the destruction of you our christened subjects. Be this known unto you, our honour is so much, that we may not be found faulty of our word. Prove it; if by our laws ye may not christen your children, upon necessity, every day or hour in the week, then might you be offended; but, seeing you may do it, how can you believe them which teach you the contrary? What think you they mean in the rest, which move you to break your obedience against us your king and sovereign, upon these so false tales and persuasions in so evident a matter? Therefore you all which will acknowledge us your sovereign lord, and which will hear the voice of us your natural king, may easily perceive how ye be deceived, and how subtilly traitors and papists, with their falsehood, seek to achieve and bring their purpose to pass with your help. Every traitor will be glad to dissemble his treason, and feed it secretly; every papist his popery, and nourish it inwardly; and, in the end, make you, our subjects, partakers of treason and popery, which, in the beginning, was pretended a commonwealth and holiness.

And how are you seduced by them, which put in your heads, That the blessed sacrament of Christ's body should not differ from other common bread! If our laws, proclamations and statutes, be all to the contrary, why shall any private man persuade you against them? We do, ourself in our own heart, our council in all their profession, our laws and statutes in all purposes, our good subjects in all their doings, most highly esteem that sacrament, and use the communion thereof to our most comfort. We make so much difference thereof from other common bread, that we think no profit of other bread, but to maintain our bodies; but of this blessed bread we take the very food of our souls to everlasting life. How think you, good subjects! shall not we, being your prince, your lord, your king by God's appointment, with truth more prevail, than certain evil persons with open falsehood? Shall any seditious person persuade you, that the sacrament is despised, which is by our laws, by ourself, by our council, by all our good subjects, esteemed, used, participated, and daily received? If ever ye were seduced, if ever deceived, if ever traitors were believed, if ever papists poisoned good subjects, it is now. It is not the christening of children, not the reverence of the sacrament, not the health of your souls that they shoot at, good subjects! It is sediton, it is high treason, it is your destruction they seek; how craftily, how piteously, how cunningly soever they do it. With one rule judge ye the end, which of force must come of your purposes. Almighty God forbiddeth, upon pain of everlasting damnation, disobedience to us your king; and in his place we rule in earth. If we should be slow, would God err? If your offence be towards God, think you it pardoned without repentance? Is God's judgment mutable? Your pain is damnation, your judge is incorruptible, your fault is most evident.

Likewise are ye evil informed in divers other articles, as for confirmation of your children, for the mass, for the manner of your service of matins and even-song. Whatsoever is therein ordered, hath been long debated and consulted by many learned bishops, doctors, and other men of great learning in this realm concluded: in nothing were so much labour and time spent of late time, nothing so fully ended.

As for the service in the English tongue, it hath manifest reasons for it. And yet, perchance, it seemeth to you a new service, and indeed is none other but the old. The selfsame words in English, which were in Latin, saving a few things taken out, so fond, that it had been a shame to have heard them in English, as all they can judge which list to report the truth. The difference is, we meant godly that you, our subjects, should understand in English, being our natural country tongue, that which was heretofore spoken in Latin; then, serving only for them which understood Latin, and now, for all you which be born English. How can this with reason offend any reasonable man, that he shall understand what any other saith, and so consent with the speaker? If the service in the church was good in Latin, it remaineth good in English; for nothing is altered, but to speak with knowledge, that which was spoken with ignorance, and to let you understand what is said for you, to the intent you may further it with your own devotion: an alteration to the better, except knowledge be worse than ignorance. So that whosoever hath moved you to dislike this order, can give you no reason, nor answer yours, if ye understood it.

Wherefore, you our subjects! remember, we speak to you, being ordained your prince and king by Almighty God: if anywise we could advance God's honour more than we do, we would do it. And see that ye become subject to God's ordinances, obeying us your prince, and learn of them which have authority to teach you, which have power to rule you, and will execute our justice if we be provoked. Learn not of them whose fruits be nothing but wilfulness, disobedience, obstinacy, dissimulation, and destruction of the realm.

For the mass, we assure you, no small study nor travail hath been spent by all the learned clergy therein; and, to avoid all contention, it is brought even to the very use as Christ left it, as the apostles used it, as holy fathers delivered it: indeed somewhat altered from that the popes of Rome, for their lucre, brought it to. And although ye may hear the contrary of some popish evil men, yet our majesty, which, for our honour, may not be blemished or stained, assureth you, that they deceive you, abuse you, and blow these opinions into your head, to finish their own purposes.

And so, likewise, judge you of confirmation of children; and let them answer you this one question: Think they, that a child christened is damned, because it dieth before bishoping? They be confirmed at the time of discretion, to learn that which they professed, in the lack thereof, by baptism; taught in age, that which they received in infancy: and yet, no doubt but they be saved by baptism, not by confirmation; and made Christ's by christening, and taught how to continue by confirmation. Wherefore, in the whole, mark, good subjects! how our doctrine is founded upon true learning, and theirs upon shameless errors.

To conclude; besides our gentle manner of information to you, whatsoever is contained in our book, either for baptism, sacrament, mass, confirmation, and service in the church, is by our parliament established, by the whole clergy agreed, yea, by the bishops of the realm devised; and, further, by God's word confirmed. And how dare ye trust, yea, how dare ye give ear without trembling, to any singular person to disallow a parliament, a subject to persuade against our majesty, a man of his singular arrogancy against the determination of the bishops and all the clergy, any invented argument against the word of God?

But now you, our subjects! we resort to a greater matter of your blindness, of your unkindness and great unnaturalness; and such an evil, that if we thought it had not begun of ignorance, and continued by persuasion of certain traitors amongst you, which we think few in number, but in their doings busy; we could not be persuaded but to use our sword, and do justice, and as we be ordained by God; that is, to redress your errors by avengement. But love and zeal yet overcome our just anger; but how long that will be, God knoweth, in whose hand our heart is; and rather for your own causes, being our christened subjects, we would ye were rather persuaded than vanquished, informed than forced, taught than overthrown, quietly pacified than rigorously persecuted.

Ye require to have the statute of the Six Articles revived and know ye what ye require? or know ye what ease ye have with the loss of them? They were laws made, but quickly repented; too bloody they were to be borne of our people, and yet at the first, indeed, made of some necessity. O subjects, how are ye trapped by subtle persons! We of pity, because they were bloody, took them away; and you now of ignorance will ask them again. You know full well, that they helped us to extend rigour, and gave us cause to draw our sword very often; they were as a whetstone to our sword, and for your causes we left to use them. And since our mercy moved us to write our laws with milk and equity, how be ye blinded to ask them in blood!

But, leaving this manner of reasoning, and resorting to the truth of our authority, we let you wit, the same hath been annulled by our parliament, with great rejoicing of our subjects, and is not now to be called by subjects in question. Dare then any of you, with the name of a subject, stand against an act of parliament, a law of the whole realm? What is our power, if laws should be thus neglected? Yea, what is your surety, if laws be not kept? Assure yourselves most surely, that we of no earthly thing under the heaven make such a reputation, as we do of this one thing: to have our law obeyed, and this cause of God, which we have taken in hand, to be thoroughly maintained: from the which we will never remove a hair's breadth, nor give place to any creature living, much less to any subject; but therein will spend our own royal person, our crown, treasure, realm, and all our state; whereof we assure you of our high honour. For herein indeed resteth our honour, herein standeth our kingdom, herein do all kings acknowledge us a king. And shall any of you dare breathe or think against our honour, our kingdom, or crown?

In the end of this your request (as we be given to understand) ye would have them stand in force until our full age. To this, we think, if ye knew what ye spake, ye would never have uttered that motion, nor ever have given breath to such a thought. For what think you of our kingdom? Be we of less authority for our age? Be we not your king now, as we shall be? or shall ye be subjects hereafter, and now are ye not? Have not we the right we shall have? If we would suspend and hang our doings in doubt until our full age, ye must first know, that as a king, we have no difference of years or time, but as a natural man and creature of God, we have youth, and, by his sufferance, shall have age. We are your rightful king, your liege lord, your king anointed, your king crowned, the sovereign king of England, not by our age, but by God's ordinance; not only when we shall be of twenty-one years, but when we are of ten years. We possess our crown, not by years, but by the blood and descent from our father king Henry the Eighth. You are our subjects, because we be your king; and rule we will, because God hath willed. It is as great a fault in us not to rule, as in a subject not to obey.

If it be considered, they which move this matter, if they durst utter themselves, would deny our kingdom. But our good subjects know their prince, and will increase, not diminish his honour; enlarge, not abate his power; acknowledge, not defer his kingdom to certain years. All is one, to speak against our crown, and to deny our kingdom, as to require that our laws may be broken unto twenty-one years. Be we not your crowned, anointed, and established king? Wherein, then, be we of less majesty, of less authority, or less state, than were our progenitors, kings of this realm, except your unkindness, your unnaturalness, will diminish our estimation? We have hitherto, since the death of our father, by the good advice and counsel of our dear and entirely beloved uncle, kept our state, maintained our realm, preserved our honour, defended our people from our enemies; we have hitherto been feared and dreaded of our enemies, yea, of princes, kings, and nations; yea, herein we be nothing inferior to any our progenitors (which grace we acknowledge to be given us from God), and how else, but by good obedience of our people, good counsel of our magistrates, due execution of our laws? By authority of our kingdom England hitherto hath gained honour; during our reign, it hath won of the enemy, and not lost.

It hath been marvelled, that we, of so young years, have reigned so nobly, so royally, so quietly. And how chanceth it that you our subjects of that our country of Devonshire, will give the first occasion to slander this our realm of England, to give courage to the enemy, to note our realm of the evil of rebellion? to make it a prey to our old enemies? to diminish our honour, which God hath given, our father left, our good uncle and council preserved unto us? What greater evil could ye commit, than even now, when our foreign enemy in Scotland, and upon the sea, seeketh to invade us, to rise in this manner against our law? to provoke so justly our wrath, to ask our vengeance, and to give us occasion to spend that force upon you, which we meant to bestow upon our enemies? to begin to slay you with that sword which we drew against the Scots and other enemies? to make a conquest of our own people, which otherwise should have been of the whole realm of Scotland?

Thus far, ye see, we have descended from our high majesty for love, to consider you in your base and simple ignorance, and have been content to send you an instruction like a fatherly prince, who, of justice, might have sent you your destruction like a king to rebels. And now we let you know, that as ye see our mercy abundant, so, if ye provoke us further, we swear to you by the living God, by whom we reign, ye shall feel the power of the same God in our sword, which how mighty it is, no subject knoweth; how puissant it is, no private man can judge; how mortal it is, no English heart dare think. But surely, surely, as your lord and prince, your only king and master, we say to you, Repent yourselves, and take our mercy without delay; or else, we will forthwith extend our princely power, and execute our sharp sword against you, as against very infidels and Turks, and rather adventure our own royal person, state, and power, than the same shall not be executed.

And, if ye will prove the example of our mercy, learn of certain which lately did arise, pretending some griefs, and yet, acknowledging their offences, have not only received most humbly their pardon, but feel also, by our order, to whom all public order only pertaineth, redress devised for their griefs. In the end we admonish you of your duties to God, whom ye shall answer in the day of the Lord; and of your duties towards us, whom ye shall answer by our order; and take our mercy whilst God so inclineth us; lest, when ye shall be constrained to ask, we shall be too much hardened in our heart to grant it you; and whereas ye shall now hear of mercy—mercy and life!—ye shall then hear of justice—justice and death!

Given at Richmond, the eighth day of July, the third year of our reign.

Besides the articles of these Devonshire men above mentioned, the said rebels sent up also, not long after, a supplication to the king, whereunto answer again was made by the king's learned council, which here, to make short, leisure serveth not to rehearse.

False rumours by popish priests stirred up against the king.

Over and besides, to behold the malicious working of those popish priests, to kindle more the spark of sedition in the people's hearts, what bruits and rumours did they raise up against the king and his council, making the vulgar multitude to believe that they should be made to pay, first for their sheep, then for their geese and pigs also, and other like things; and whatsoever they had in store, or should put in their mouths, they must fine there-for to the king! of all which matter never a word was either thought or meant. But this seemed matter fit for such priests, whereby to set the prince and his subjects together by the ears.

Sir John Russell.

Against this seditious company of rebels was appointed and sent by the king and his council sir John Russell, knight, lord privy seal, as lieutenant general of the king's army, on whom chiefly depended the charge and achievance of that voyage in the west parts. To him also were adjoined, as in part of ordinary council in those affairs under him, sir William Herbert, sir Johan Pawlet, sir Hugh Pawlet, sir Thomas Speck, with the lord Gray, and others beside.

Thus the said lord privy seal, accompanied with the lord Gray, advancing his power against the rebels, although in number of soldiers not equally furnished like to the others, yet, through the gracious assistance of the Lord's help, fighting in his cause, and giving the adventure against the enemy, about the latter end of July, A. D. 1549, gave them the repulse; who, notwithstanding, recovering themselves again with such stomachs as they had, encountered the second time with the aforesaid lord privy seal, about the beginning of August following, by whom, through the Lord's mighty power, they, with their whole cause of false religion, were utterly vanquished and quite overthrown.

Edward VI.

A. D. 1549.

The rebels discomfited.

In that victory a great work of God's mighty power undoubtedly did appear; for, although the number of the rebels did surmount, in great quantity, the power and strength of the lord privy seal, and their stomachs were so fiercely set upon all desperate adventures; and though the power of sir William Herbert (being the same time at Bristol) was not yet presently come, which should have joined with the lord privy seal; yet, all this notwithstanding, the goodness of the Lord so wrought on the king's behalf, more than any industry of man (which in all respects in handling that matter was very raw, and far behind), that the victory fell to the king's part, under the valiant guiding of the aforesaid lord privy seal; so that the popish rebels not only lost the field, but a great part of them also lost their lives, lying there slain miserably in the chase, to the compass of two miles' space. Where also were taken and apprehended the chieftains and ringleaders of that mischievous dance, whereof the principal were Humfrey Arundel, Berry, Thomas Underhil, John Soleman, William Segar; Tempson and Barret two priests; Henry Bray and Henry Lee, two mayors; with divers others more above specified; all who, accordingly, afterwards were executed.<sup>1</sup>

Great goodness of God in the victory against them.

Laudable service of the lord privy seal.

These rebels, to make their part more sure by the help and presence of their consecrated god and maker, brought with them, into the battle, the pix under his canopy; and instead of an altar, where he was hanging before, set him now riding in a cart. Neither were there lacking masses, crosses, banners, candlesticks, with holy bread also, and holy water plenty, to defend them from devils and all adversary power; who, in the end, neither could help their friends, nor yet could save themselves from the hands of their enemies, but, eftsoons, both the consecrated god, and all the trumpery about him, were taken in the cart, and there lay all in the dust, leaving to them a notable lesson of bitter experience, how to put their confidence hereafter in no such vain idols, but only in the true living God and immortal Maker, to be served according to his prescribed word; and that only in the faith of his Son, and not after their own dreaming fantasies.

False trust of the Devonshire men in their popish idols disappointed. The sacrament in the pix brought to the battle in a cart.

The story whereof putteth me also in remembrance of another like popish field called Musselborough field, fought in Scotland the year before this, where the Scots likewise encamping themselves against the lord protector, and the king's power sent into Scotland, did, in semblable wise, bring with them to the battle, the consecrated gods of their altars, with masses, crosses, banners, and all their popish stuff of idolatry; having great affiance, by virtue thereof, to have a great day against the English army, as indeed, in man's judgment, it might seem not unlike. For the number of the Scots' army so far exceeded ours, and they were so appointed with their pikes in the first front against our horsemen (who gave the first onset), that our men were fain to recule, not without the loss of divers gentlemen. Notwithstanding, the mighty arm of the Lord so turned the victory, that the Scots, in the end, with all their masses, pixes, and idolatrous trinkets, were put to the worse: of whom in that field were slain between thirteen and fourteen thousand, and not passing a hundred Englishmen. The cause of this was the promise of the said Scots, made before to king Henry, for the marriage of the young Scottish queen to king Edward, which promise the said Scots afterwards brake, and paid thereafter.

In that victory this is also to be noted, that the same day and hour when the images were burned openly in London, the Scots were put to flight in Musselborough, as is credibly noted in records.

A stir in Oxfordshire and Buckinghamshire.

During this hurly-burly amongst the popish rebels in Cornwall and Devonshire, the like commotion at the same time, by such like popish priests as Holmes and his fellows, began to gender in the parts of Oxford and Buckingham; but that was soon appeased by the lord Gray, who, coming down that way into Devonshire, chased the rebels to their houses; of whom two hundred were taken, and a dozen of the ringleaders delivered unto him, whereof certain were after executed.

Rebellion in Norfolk.

In Norfolk and parts thereabout, albeit the original of their tumultuous stirring was not for the like cause, yet the obstinate hearts of that unruly multitude seemed no less bent upon mischief, to disturb public peace, which was also in the month of July, the year above-said. For repression of that rebellion, first was sent the lord marquis of Northampton, with special instruction to avoid the fight; and so, by order, was appointed with a number of horse to keep the field and passages, whereby they, being stopped from victual, might the sooner be brought to acknowledge their folly, and to seek their pardon; who then, following other policy than by order was given, came and pinned himself within the city of Norwich, which afterwards they were fain to abandon, the rebels pressing upon the city so on every side, that at length they obtained the same. Nevertheless, in all that conflict there were but a hundred on both sides slain, and otherwise no great loss, but only the loss of the lord Sheffield.

Instructions given to the lord marquis.

The rebels of Norfolk suppressed.

Then was sent down against them the earl of Warwick, with sufficient force and number of soldiers, besides the convoy of two thousand Almains, by whom the rude and confused rabble were there overthrown and slain, to the number, as is supposed, of four thousand at least: and, in fine, both the Kets, chief stirrers and authors of that commotion, were taken and put to execution, and one of them hanged up in chains.

Another rebellion in Yorkshire.

Moreover, besides these inordinate uproars and insurrections above mentioned, about the latter end of the said month of July the same year, which was 1549, another like stir or commotion began at Seamer, in the North Riding of Yorkshire, and continued in the East Riding of the same, and there ended. The principal doers and raisers up of this insurrection were one William Ombler of East Heslerton, yeoman; and Thomas Dale, parish clerk of Seamer; with one Stevenson of Seamer, neighbour to Dale, and nephew to Ombler. This Stevenson was a mean or messenger between the said Ombler and Dale, being before not acquainted together, and dwelling seven miles one from the other; who at last, by the travail of the said Stevenson and their own evil disposition, inclined to ungraciousness and mischief, knowing before one the other's mind by secret conference, were brought to talk together on St. James's day, A.D. 1549.

The causes moving them to raise this rebellion, were these: First and principally, their traitorous hearts, grudging at the king's most honourable proceedings, in advancing and reforming the true honour of God, and his religion. Another cause also was, for trusting to a blind and a fantastical prophecy, wherewith they were seduced, thinking the same prophecy should shortly come to pass, by hearing the rebellions of Norfolk, Devonshire, and other places. The tenor of which prophecy, and purpose together of the traitors was, "That there should no king reign in England; that the noblemen and gentlemen should be destroyed, and the realm should be ruled by four governors, to be elected and appointed by the commons holding a parliament; in a commotion to begin at the south and north seas of England," &c.: supposing that this their rebellion in the North, and the other of the Devonshire men in the West, meeting (as they intended) at one place, should be the mean how to compass this their traitorous devilish device. And therefore, laying their studies together, how they might find out more company to join with them in that detestable purpose, and so set forward this device they framed, as to stir in two places, the one distant seven miles from the other; and, at the first rush, to kill and destroy such gentlemen and men of substance about them, as were favourers of the king's proceedings, or who would resist them. But, first of all, for the more speedy raising of men, they devised to burn beacons, and thereby to bring the people together, as though it were to defend the sea-coasts; and, having the ignorant people assembled, then to pour out their poison; first, beginning with the rudest and poorest sort, such as they thought were pricked with poverty, and were unwilling to labour, and therefore the more ready to follow the spoil of rich men's goods, blowing into their heads that God's service was laid aside, and new inventions, neither good nor godly, put in place; and so, feeding them with fair promises to reduce into the church again their old ignorance and idolatry, they thought, by that means soonest, to allure them to rage and run with them in this commotion. And furthermore, to the intent they might give the more terror to the gentlemen at their first rising, lest they should be resisted, they devised that some should be murdered in churches, some in their houses, some in serving the king in commission, and others as they could be caught; and to pick quarrels with them for alteration of service on the holydays. And thus was the platform cast of their device, according as afterwards, by their confession at their examinations, it was testified, and remaineth in true record.

Thus they being together agreed, Ombler and Dale, and others by their secret appointment, so laboured the matter in the parishes of Seamer and Wintringham, and in the towns about, that they were infected with the poison of this confederacy in such sort, that it was easy to understand whereunto they would incline, if a commotion were begun. The accomplishment thereof did shortly follow; for, although by the words of one drunken fellow of that conspiracy, named Calvered, at the alehouse in Wintringham, some suspicion of that rebellion began to be smelled before by the lord president and gentlemen in those parts, and so prevented in that place where the rebels thought to begin; yet they gave not over so, but drew to another place at Seamer, by the sea-coast; and there, by night, rode to the beacon at Staxton, and set it on fire. And so, gathering together a rude rout of rascals out of the towns near about, being in a stir, Ombler, Thomas Dale, Barton, and Robert Dale, hasted forthwith with the rebels to Master White's house, to take him, who notwithstanding, being on horseback, minding to have escaped their hands, Dale, Ombler, and the rest of the rebels, took him, and Clopton his wife's brother, one Savage a merchant of York, and one Bury servant to sir Walter Mildmay; which four, without cause or quarrel, saving to fulfil their seditious prophecy in some part, and to give a terror to other gentlemen, they cruelly murdered, after they had carried them one mile from Seamer, towards the Wold; and there, after they had stripped them of their clothes and purses, left them naked behind them in the plain field, for crows to feed on, until White's wife and Savage's wife, then at Seamer, caused them to be buried.

Long it were, and tedious, to recite what revel these rebels kept in their raging madness, who, ranging about the country from town to town, to enlarge their ungracious and rebellious band, taking those with force who were not willing to go, and leaving in no town where they came any man above the age of sixteen years, so increased this number, that, in short time, they had gathered three thousand to favour their wicked attempts; and had like to have gathered more, had not the Lord's goodness, through prudent circumspection, interrupted the course of their furious beginning.

For, first, came the king's gracious and free pardon,<sup>1</sup> discharging and pardoning them, and the rest of the rebels, of all treasons, murders, felonies, and other offences done to his majesty, before the 21st of August, A. D. 1549; which pardon, although Ombler contemptuously refused, persisting still in his wilful obstinacy, dissuading also the rest from the humble accepting the king's so loving and liberal pardon, yet, notwithstanding, with some it did good.

To make short, it was not long after this, but Ombler, as he was riding from town to town, twelve miles from Hunmanby, to charge all the constables and inhabitants where he came, in the king's name, to resort to Hunmanby, by the way he was espied, and by the circumspect diligence of John Wood the younger, James Aslabe, Ralph Twinge, and Thomas Constable gentleman, he was had in chase, and at last by them apprehended, and brought in the night in sure custody unto the city of York, to answer to his demerits. After whom, within short time, Thomas Dale and Henry Barton, the first chieftains and ringleaders of the former commotion, with John Dale, Robert Wright, William Peacock, Wetherel, and Edmund Buttry, busy stirrers in this sedition, as they travelled from place to place to draw people to their faction, were likewise apprehended, committed to ward, lawfully convicted, and lastly, executed at York the 21st of September, A. D. 1549.<sup>1</sup>

Edward VI.

A. D. 1549.

The stirring and rising of the French king.

To these pestiferous commotions, raised up against king Edward by his own subjects in this year aforesaid, within the realm, I might also adjoin the busy stirring and raging of the French king, against our young and innocent prince, without the realm: who, hearing of these tumults and violent insurrections of the king's subjects in divers and sundry quarters of the realm, supposing to take the time for his most advantage, thought, likewise, for his part, not to be unoccupied. Who, after he had by his ambassador made open breach with the king, immediately after the revocation of the said ambassador from hence, intending to annoy the king, and make his first invasion against the isles of Jersey and Guernsey, thought to have surprised our ships and the said isles with a certain number of his ships and galleys; in which his assault he was so hotly saluted by the king's ships and the island, that, by the confession of them that saw it, and by the report written unto the lord protector, the Frenchmen lost at least a thousand men. Their ships and galleys were so spoiled, that being forced to return home, they were not able then to set out again.

Furthermore, out of France credible word was brought to the lord protector (which yet in letters appeareth), that into one town, in one vessel, were brought, at least, three score gentlemen to be buried; and also an inhibition specially given out by the king, not to speak of the success in that journey. This was about the beginning of August, 1549. The like also might be noted of the losses of the said French king at Boulogne, the 8th day of August, the same year, as by the lord Clinton's letters may well appear; but for spending of time I pass it over. What the meaning of the French king was in these voyages, or how he intended further to proceed, I have not herein to deal. This is certain and evident, that the mighty arm of God mercifully fought for king Edward his servant, to defend and deliver him from so many hard dangers, so dangerous and sundry commotions, stirred up in so many quarters within this realm, and also without the realm, and all within the compass of one year; and yet the Lord above, fighting for his true servant, dispatched them all, as in story here ye have heard declared, and is no less worthy of all posterity to be noted.

The wonderful protection of the Lord in defending king Edward.

Matter concerning Edmund Bonner, Bishop of London,

See Appendix.

WITH DECLARATION OF THE ACTS AND PROCESS ENTERED AGAINST HIM IN KING EDWARD'S TIME.<sup>2</sup>

And thus much hitherto having discoursed touching the manifold troubles and tumults raised up on every side against king Edward by his unkind and unnatural subjects, and yet, notwithstanding, the gracious goodness of the Lord ever giving him the victory; now let us return again to Bonner, bishop of London, where we left him

1549.

(1) EX actis judicii publici registro receptis et notatis.

(2) The best evidence that can be adduced for the authenticity of Foxe's account of Bishop Bonner, is that it is quoted, very generally, as well by papists as by protestants.—Ed.

Edward VI. before, that is, in his own house, where he was by the council commanded to remain, as is above signified.

A. D. 1547 to 1549. And now, forasmuch as we have to enter into the story of the said Bonner, for the better understanding of the whole order thereof, it shall be requisite to rip up and declare the matter, with the circumstances and occasions thereof, from the first beginning of king sitting of the king's commissioners in Paul's church.

Edward's time. Where is to be understood, that king Edward, in the first year of his reign, A. D. 1547, the first day of September, for the order of his visitation, directed out certain commissioners, as sir Anthony Cook and sir John Godsalve, knights, John Godsalve and Christopher Nevinson, doctors of the law, and John Madew, doctor of divinity; who, sitting in Paul's church upon their commission, the day and year aforesaid, there being present at the same time, Edmund bishop of London, John Royston, Polydore Virgil, Peter Van, and others of the said cathedral church, after the sermon made, and the commission being read, ministered an oath unto the said bishop of London, to renounce and deny the bishop of Rome with his usurped authority, and to swear obedience unto the king, according to the effect and form of the statute made in the 31st year of king Henry VIII.; also, that he should present and redress all and singular such things as were needful within the said church to be reformed.

An oath ministered to Bonner to forswear the pope.

Bonner requireth to see their commission.

Whereupon the said bishop humbly and instantly desired them that he might see their commission, only for this purpose and intent (as he said), that he might the better fulfil and put in execution the things wherein he was charged by them or their commission: unto whom the commissioners, answering, said, they would deliberate more upon the matter. And so they called the other ministers of the said church before them, and ministered the like oath unto them, as they did to the bishop before. To whom moreover, there and then, certain interrogatories and articles of inquisition were read by Peter Lilly the public notary. This done, after their oaths taken, the said commissioners delivered unto the bishop aforesaid, certain injunctions, as well in print as written, and homilies set forth by the king; all which things the said bishop received, under the words of this protestation, as followeth:

Bonner's protestation.

'I do receive these injunctions and homilies with this protestation, that I will observe them, if they be not contrary and repugnant to God's law and the statutes and ordinances of the church.'

And immediately he added, with an oath, that he never read the said homilies and injunctions. This protestation being made in manner and form aforesaid, the said Edmund Bonner bishop of London instantly desired and required Peter Lilly, the registrar aforesaid, there and then to register and enact the same. And so the said commissioners, delivering the injunctions and homilies to Master Bellassere, archdeacon of Colehester, and Gilbert Bourn, archdeacon of London, Essex, and Middlesex; and enjoining them, in most effectuous manner, under pains therein contained, to put the same in speedy execution, and also reserving other new injunctions to be ministered afterwards, as well to the bishop, as to the archdeacons aforesaid, according as they should see cause, &c., did so continue the said visitation till three of the clock the same day in the afternoon.

(1) See Burnet, vol. ii. part 2, quoting 'Ex libro Concilii,' fol. 110.—Ed.

At the which hour and place assigned, the commissioners being set, and the canons and priests of the said church appearing before them, and being examined upon virtue of their oath, for their doctrine and conversation of life, first one John Painter, one of the canons of the said cathedral church, there and then openly confessed, that he, viciously and carnally, had often the company of a certain married man's wife,<sup>1</sup> whose name he denied to declare: in the which crime divers other canons and priests of the aforesaid church confessed in like manner, and could not deny themselves to be culpable.

And after the commissioners aforesaid had delivered to Master Royston prebendary, and to the proctor of the dean and of the chapter of the said cathedral church of St. Paul, the king's injunctions, and the book of homilies, enjoining them to see the execution thereof, under pain therein specified, they prorogued their said visitation until seven of the clock the next day following.

By this visitation, above specified, it appears, gentle reader, first how Bonner made his protestation after the receiving of the king's injunctions, and also how he required the same to be put in public record. Furthermore, thou hast to note the unchaste life and conversation of these popish votaries and priests of Paul's. Now, what followed after this protestation of the bishop made, remaineth further, in the sequel of the story, to be declared; wherein, first thou shalt understand that the said bishop, shortly after his protestation, whether for fear, or for conscience, repenting himself, went unto the king, where he submitted himself, and recanting his former protestation, craved pardon of the king for his inordinate demeanour toward his grace's commissioners, in the former visitation: which pardon, notwithstanding it was granted unto him by the king for the acknowledging of his fault, yet for the evil example of the fact, it was thought good that he should be committed to the Fleet, as by the tenor of the council's letter sent to the commissioners may appear; which, together with the form also of the bishop's protestation and of his recantation, here under followeth.

Things in this visitation to be noted.

The King's Letter to the Commissioners concerning the Recantation and Pardoning of Bonner.

To our very loving friends, sir Anthony Cook, knight, and the rest of the commissioners for the visitation at London, in haste.

After our hearty commendation: This shall be to signify unto you, that we have received your letters, and in the same enclosed the copy of the protestation made by the bishop of London in the time of your visitation at Paul's: your wise proceedings wherein, and advertisements from you, we take in very thankful part towards us. And because the said bishop, who, being here before us, hath acknowledged his indiscreet demeanour, did at that time, at Paul's, require the registrar of your visitation, to make record and entry of his protestation, and now, upon better consideration of his duty, maketh means to have the same revoked, as shall appear unto you by the true copy of his writings enclosed, the original whereof, remaining with us, he hath subscribed; we pray you to cause the registrar to make entry of this his revocation, according to the tenor of this his said writing: further signifying unto you, that in respect of his offence, and the evil ensample that might thereupon ensue, we have thought meet to send him to the prison of the Fleet, whither he hath been conveyed by Master Vice-chamberlain. And whereas sundry things for the king's majesty's service do now occur here, which require the present attendance of you, sir John Godsalve, as well for your office of the signet, as of the prothonotaryship, we pray you that, leaving the execution of the visitation to the rest of your colleagues, you make your repair hither with convenient diligence. Thus fare you right heartily well.

From Hampton Court, the 12th of September, 1547.

Your assured loving friends,

The Form of Bonner's Recantation.

Bonner requireth his recantation to be registered.

Whereas I, Edmund bishop of London, at such time as I received the king's majesty's injunctions and homilies of my most dread sovereign lord, at the hands of his highness's visitors, did unadvisedly make such protestation as now, upon better consideration of my duty of obedience, and of the evil example that might ensue unto others thereof, appeareth to me neither reasonable, nor such as might well stand with the duty of an humble subject: forasmuch as the same protestation, at my request, was then, by the registrar of that visitation, enacted and put in record, I have thought it my duty not only to declare before your lordships, that I do now, upon better consideration of my duty, renounce and revoke my said protestation; but also most humbly beseech your lordships, that this my revocation of the same may be likewise put in the same records, for a perpetual memory of the truth; most humbly beseeching your good lordships, both to take order that it may take effect, and also that my former and unadvised doings may be, by your good mediations, pardoned by the king's majesty.

Edmund London.

The registers of these affairs of Bonner's remain in the hands of Peter Lilly, then being registrar to the aforesaid commissioners.<sup>1</sup>

The order of Bonner's doings in the beginning of this reign.

Thus far thou hast heard, loving reader, first the popish protestation of Bonner; then how he, calling himself home again, solemnly recanted the same, requiring further the said his revocation to be committed to public record, for a perpetual remembrance. Also, how he, upon his humble submission, received his pardon of the king, and yet, for example's sake, was commanded to the Fleet; where he nevertheless did not long continue, but, according to the effect of the king's pardon before granted, was restored both to house and living again; which was in the first year of the king, A. D. 1547.

After this ye have heard also, in the story above, in the second year, and a great part of the third year of the king, how he demeaned himself, although not most forward in advancing the king's proceedings, yet in such sort, as no great advantage by any law could be taken against him, both in swearing his obedience to the king, and in receiving his injunctions; also in confessing his assent and consent touching the state of religion then; and, furthermore, in directing out his letters, according to the archbishop of Canterbury's precepts, to Cloney his sumner, to the bishop of Westminster, and to other bishops, for abolishing of images, for abrogation of the mass, for bibles to be set up, and for ministering in both kinds, with such other like matters of reformation; till at length he, hearing of the death of the lord admiral, the lord protector's brother, and after that of the stirring and rising of the king's subjects in sundry tumults against the king, began somewhat, as he durst, to draw back and slack his pastoral diligence, so that in many places of his diocese, and in London, the people not only were negligent in resorting to divine service, but also did frequent and haunt foreign rites of masses, and other orders than in this realm were appointed; and he also himself, contrary to his wonted manner, upon principal feasts refused in his own person to execute. Whereupon he, being suspected and complained of, and convented before the king's council (as ye heard before), after sharp admonitions and reproofs had certain private injunctions to him enjoined.

(1) Burnet gives two documents of Bonner's respecting the question of the Injunctions: the one, addressed to sir John Godsalve, (copied from MS. col. CC. Cantab.); the other, part of a letter to the protector (Cotton Libr. Vesp. D. 13). See Burnet, Hist. Ref. Lond. 1820. vol. ii. part 2, pp. 157—161.—Ed.

Matters put to Bonner to redress.

*See
Appendix.*

1. That he should personally preach within three weeks after at Paul's Cross.
2. That according as his predecessors were wont to celebrate mass, he at such wonted times should execute and administer the communion.
3. That he should call before him and correct more diligently such transgressors as absented themselves from the order of service, and ministration of the Lord's board, appointed then in churches by the king's ordinance.
4. That he should see more carefully and vigilantly to the punishment of adulterers and fornicators.
5. That he, in the meanwhile, should be resident within his own house during the time while he should make his sermon at Paul's above mentioned, which was A. D. 1549.

In this sermon certain special points were prefixed unto him, whereupon he should treat; which here in order follow, and are these:

Special Points and Articles to be treated of by Bonner, Bishop of London, in his Sermon.

1. That all such as rebel against their prince, get unto them damnation, and those that resist the higher power resist the ordinances of God; and he that dieth therefore in rebellion, by the word of God is utterly damned, and so loseth both body and soul. And therefore those rebels in Devonshire and Cornwall, in Norfolk, or elsewhere, who take upon them to assemble a power and force against their king and prince, against the laws and statutes of the realm, and go about to subvert the state and order of the commonwealth, not only do deserve therefore death as traitors and rebels, but do accumulate to themselves eternal damnation, even to be in the burning fire of hell with Lucifer, the father and first author of pride, disobedience, and rebellion, what pretences soever they have, and what masses or holy water soever they pretend, or go about to make among themselves; as Korah, Dathan, and Abiram, for rebellion against Moses, were swallowed down alive into hell, although they pretended to sacrifice unto God.

2. Likewise, in the order of the church, and extern rites and ceremonies of divine service, forasmuch as God requireth humility of heart, innocency of living, knowledge of him, charity and love towards our neighbours, and obedience to his word and to his ministers and superior powers, these we must bring to all our prayers, to all our service; and this is that sacrifice which Christ requireth, and these be those that make all things pleasant unto God. The extern rites and ceremonies be but exercises of our religion, and appointable by superior powers; in choosing whereof we must obey the magistrates; which things also we do see ever have been and shall be (as the time and place is) diverse, and yet all hath pleased God so long as these before-spoken inward things be there. If any man shall use the old rites, and thereby disobey the superior power, the devotion of his ceremonies is made naught by his disobedience: so that which else (so long as the law did so stand) might be good, by pride and disobedience now is made naught; as Saul's sacrifice, Korah, Dathan, and Abiram, and Aaron's two children were. But whose joineth to devotion obedience, he winneth the garland. For else it is a zeal, 'sed non secundum scientiam;' a will, desire, zeal, and devotion, but not after wisdom; that is, a foolish devotion, which can require no thanks or praise. And yet again, where ye obey, ye must have devotion, for God requireth the heart more than the outward doings; and, therefore, he that taketh the communion, or saith or heareth the service appointed by the king's majesty, must bring devotion and inward prayers with him, or else his prayers are but vain, lacking that which God requireth, that is, the heart and mind to pray to him.

3. Further, ye shall, for example, on Sunday come seventh night, after the aforesaid date, celebrate the communion at Paul's church.

4. Ye shall also set forth in your sermon, that our authority of royal power is (as of truth it is) of no less authority and force in this our young age, than is or was that of any our predecessors, though the same were much older, as may appear by example of Josias, and other young kings, in Scripture; and therefore all our subjects to be no less bound to the obedience of our precepts, laws, and statutes, than if we were of thirty or forty years of age.

Bonner's preaching much looked for of the people.

The delivery of these injunctions and articles unto the bishop (with the time of his appointed preaching) was soon after known abroad among the citizens, and other the commons within the city of London, so that every man expected the time thereof, wishing to hear the same; which time being once come, the bishop, according to the tenor of the injunctions, publicly preached at the cross of Paul's the first day of September. Howbeit, as hypocrisy never lurketh so secretly in the hearts of the wicked, but that at one time or other, God, in his most righteous judgment, maketh it open unto the world; so, at this present, was that long, coloured, perverse obstinacy, and the infestered hatred of this double-faced dissembler against the king's godly proceedings, most plainly manifested by his disobedient demeanour in this his sermon. For, whereas he was commanded to treat only upon such special points as were mentioned in his articles, he yet, both besides the council's commandment, and to the withdrawing of the minds of the common people, as much as in him lay, from the right and true understanding of the holy sacrament, ministered in the holy communion then set forth by the authority of the king's majesty (according to the true sense of the holy Scripture), did spend most part of his sermon about the gross, carnal, and papistical presence of Christ's body and blood in the sacrament of the altar; and also, contrary thereunto, did not only slenderly touch the rest of his articles, but, of a rebellious and wilful carelessness, did utterly leave out unspoken the whole last article, concerning the as effectual and as lawful authority of the king's highness during his young age, as if he were thirty or forty years old; notwithstanding the same (because it was the traitorous opinion of the popish rebels) was, by special commandment, chiefly appointed him to treat upon.

Disobedient stubbornness of Bonner in his sermon.

Latimer and Hooper against Bonner.

This contemptuous and disobedient dealing, as it greatly offended most of the king's faithful and loving subjects there present, so did it much mislike the minds, and was far from the good expectation, as well of that faithful and godly preacher Master John Hooper, afterwards bishop of Worcester and Gloucester, and lastly a most constant martyr for the gospel of Christ, and also of Master William Latimer, bachelor of divinity: and therefore they, well weighing the foulness of the fact, and their bounden allegiances unto their prince, did thereupon exhibit unto the king's highness, under both their names, a bill of complaint or denunciation against the said bishop, in form following:

The Denunciation of John Hooper and William Latimer, against Bonner, to the King's Majesty, for leaving undone the points beforementioned, which Bonner was charged to preach upon.

See Appendix

In most humble wise show unto your majesty William Latimer and John Hooper, that whereas of late, as we be certainly informed from your majesty, by the hand of the right high and noble prince Edward duke of Somerset, governor of your royal person, and protector of all your highness's realms, dominions, and subjects, and the rest of your privy council, there were certain injunctions given to the bishop of London that now is, with articles to be insinuated and preached unto your subjects at a certain day limited, the which injunctions and articles did only tend to the honour of God, and the better instructions of your highness's people to obedience, and hatred of rebellion and mutiny, wherewith of late this your majesty's realm hath been marvellously vexed, to the danger of your highness's person, and the state of the whole realm; and, therefore, a thing at this time most necessary to be taught unto the people, that they might know their duty unto your majesty, and unto Almighty God; and especially to acknowledge your majesty in these years and age to be a perfect high and sovereign lord and king and supreme head, whose laws, proclamations, and commandments we are bound to obey, as well as any prince's subjects are bound to obey the laws, proclamations, and commandments of their natural and sovereign lord, notwithstanding that nature hath not yet given unto your person such age as, we trust, she shall, nor so many years, which we wish to be so many as any prince ever had, the which years do not make you king or prince, but the right of your birth, and lawful succession whatsoever it be, so that we all must as well acknowledge your majesty to be our king and prince, at these years, as if you were at the age of thirty or forty years, and your laws and statutes no less to be feared and obeyed, than if your highness were fifty or a hundred years old (the which thing not only is most certainly true, but also at this time most necessarily to be taught, especially when divers rebels have openly declared, that they would not obey your highness's laws, nor acknowledge the statutes made by your majesty to be available, till you come to the age of twenty years): and this not only being so, but the same thing being commanded by your said majesty, amongst other injunctions and articles given in writing to the said Edmund Bonner, to be preached in his last sermon, as by the same injunctions may appear, of the which the true copy we have, when need is, to be showed: yet all this notwithstanding, the said Bonner, of what zeal or mind we cannot tell, whether favouring the opinion of the said rebels, or contemning your highness's commandment declared unto him, hath not only left out to declare the said article, which we most and chiefly expected and looked for, but also, in all the rest of his sermon, did not so fully and apertly declare the said injunctions and articles, as to our judgment did appear they ought to have been declared, and was of no light ground looked for, entreating of others far distant and diverse from the articles upon the which he was commanded to entreat, and such as most should move and stir up the people to disorder and dissension; willingly leaving out those things which should have made quiet and obedience. Wherefore, not moved of any malice, grudge, envy, or evil will to the person of the bishop, but constrained by the love and zeal which we bear towards your highness, and of our duty and allegiance to your majesty, whose honour and safety, with tranquillity, quietness, and good governance of this your realm, we do most desire, and for the discharge of our most bounden duties, to avoid all the dangers that might ensue of the concealment thereof, we most humbly do denounce and declare the same to your highness, to the intent that your majesty, by the advice aforesaid, may, if it please your highness, at this our humble denunciation, call the said bishop to answer to the promises, the which we are ready to avow and prove; and then your highness may take further order herein, as to your princely wisdom Commission directed by the king against Bonner.

The king's majesty having thus, by the information of these two credible persons, perfect intelligence of the contemptuous and perverse negligence of this bishop, in not accomplishing his highness's commandment given him by injunction, thought it most necessary, with all convenient speed (for the avoiding of further inconveniences), to look more severely unto the due punishment of such dangerous rebellious obstinacy; and, therefore, by the advice of the lord protector, and the rest of his honourable council, immediately he directed forth his commission under his broad seal unto the archbishop of Canterbury, the bishop of Rochester, and to other grave and trusty personages and councillors, appointing and authorizing all them, or certain of them, by virtue of the same, to call before them, as well the bishop of London, as also the aforesaid denouncers, and upon due examination and proof of the premises, or any other matter otherwise to be objected, further to proceed against him summarily "et de plano," according to law and justice, either to suspension, excommunication, committing to prison, or deprivation (if the quality of the offence so required): or otherwise, to use any other censure ecclesiastical, which, for the better hearing and determining of that cause, might to their wisdoms seem more pertinent, as appeareth more amply by the tenor of the commission here ensuing.

See Appendix.

The Copy of the King's Commission sent down upon the Denunciation aforesaid, for the Examination of Bonner, bishop of London.<sup>1</sup>

Edward the Sixth, &c. To the most reverend father in God, Thomas, archbishop of Canterbury, metropolitan and primate of England, the right reverend father in God, Nicholas bishop of Rochester, our trusty and right well-beloved councillors, sir William Peter and sir Thomas Smith, knights, our two principal secretaries, and William May, doctor of the law civil, and dean of Paul's, greeting. It is come to our knowledge, that where we, by the advice of our most entirely beloved uncle Edward, duke of Somerset, governor of our person, and protector of all our realms, dominions, and subjects, and the rest of our privy council, did give to the right reverend father in God Edmund, bishop of London, upon certain complaints before made unto us, and other great considerations, certain injunctions to be followed, done, and executed, and in a sermon appointed to him to preach by us certain articles; and for the more sure knowledge, keeping, and observing, did exhibit the same in writing unto him by the hands of our said uncle, in the fulfilling of our counsel: all this notwithstanding, the said bishop hath, in contempt of us (as it may appear), overslipped and not observed certain of the said things so by us enjoined, and others so perversely and negligently done, that the things minded of us to reformation, and for a good quiet of our subjects and our whole realm, be converted, by the wilful negligence or perversity of him, to a great occasion of slander, tumult, and grudge amongst our people, as it hath been denounced to us in writing by certain honest and discreet persons, and otherwise called. The which things (if they be so) we, tendering the health, quietness, good order, and government of our people, have not thought convenient to be let past unpunished and unreformed, and therefore, by the advice aforesaid, have appointed you five, four, or three, upon whose fidelities, wisdoms, dexterities, and circumspections, we have full confidence, to call before you as well the denouncers of the said faults, as also the said bishop; and, with due examinations and process, according to the law and justice, to hear the said matter, and all other matters, of what kind, nature, or condition soever they shall be, objected against the said bishop, summarily, 'et de plano' or otherwise, as to your discretions shall be thought most meet, with full power and authority to suspend, excommunicate, commit to prison, or deprive the said bishop, if the offence shall so appear to merit, or to use any other censure ecclesiastical, which, for the better hearing and determining of the cause shall be requisite and appertain: any law, statute, or act to the contrary notwithstanding. In witness whereof we have caused these our letters to be made patents.

Witness ourself at Westminster, the eighth of September, in the third year of our reign. [A. D. 1549.]

The commission, being sealed with the king's broad seal, was by his highness's council forthwith delivered at the court unto Thomas Cranmer, archbishop of Canterbury, and the rest of the commissioners mentioned in the same, being there all together present; who, upon the receipt thereof, determined, by virtue of the same, to sit at the archbishop's house at Lambeth, the Tuesday<sup>1</sup> then next ensuing, which was the tenth day of that present month of September, and therefore appointed the bishop of London to be summoned to appear before them, as at that time and place. The manner of whose behaviour at his appearance, because it both declareth the froward nature and stubborn condition of the person, and also what estimation and authority he thought the commissioners to be of, I thought it not unmeet first, before I enter into the process, somewhat to note and describe unto you.

The commission delivered.

At his first entry into the place within the archbishop's house at Lambeth, where the archbishop and others of the commissioners sat, he passed forth directly by them with his cap upon his head (making as though he saw them not), until one plucked him by the sleeve, willing him to do reverence unto the commissioners: whereat he laughingly turned himself, and spake unto the archbishop on this wise: "What, my lord! are you here? by my troth I saw you not." "No," said the archbishop, "you would not see." "Well," quoth he, "you sent for me: have you any thing to say to me?" "Yea," said the commissioners, "we have here authority from the king's highness to call you to account for your sermon you made lately at Paul's Cross, for that you did not there publish to the people the article which you were commanded then to preach upon." At which words the bishop, either for that he did not greatly delight to hear of this matter, or else because he would make his friends believe that he was called to account only for his opinion in religion (as afterwards in the sequel of this process it more plainly appeareth), began to turn his talk unto other matters, and said unto the archbishop, "In good faith, my lord, I would one thing were had in more reverence than it is." "What is it?" said the archbishop. "The blessed mass," quoth he: "you have written very well of the sacrament, I marvel you do no more honour it." The archbishop of Canterbury, therewith perceiving his subtlety, and seeing his gross blindness, to commend that which was utterly contrary to his opinion, said unto him again: "If you think it well, it is because you understand it not." The other then, adding unto his former gross ignorance an obstinate impudency, answered, "I think I understand it better than you that wrote it." Unto which words the archbishop replied, "Truly I will easily make a child that is but ten years old to understand therein as much as you. But what is this to the matter?"

Stubborn behaviour of Bonner before the commissioners.

He speaketh for the mass.

(1) See Appendix.

Edward VI.

A. D. 1549.

He falleth to scorning and taunting his denouncers.

Bonner's judgment of the people.

Full of his pretenses, daws, woodcocks, fools, and such like.

His demeanour not tolerable for his calling, though meet for his birth.

His frivolous shifts.

Moreover, at what time as they began to enter the judicial prosecuting of their commission, and had called forth the denouncers to propound such matter as they had to object against him, he, hearing them speak, fell to scorning and taunting of them, saying to the one, that he spake like a goose: and to the other, that he spake like a woodcock, utterly denying their accusations to be true. Whereupon the archbishop seeing his peevish malice against the denouncers, asked him, if he would not believe them, whether he would credit the people there present? and therewithal (because many of them were also at the bishop's sermon at Paul's) he stood up and read the article of the king's authority during his young age; saying unto them, "How say you, my masters! did my lord of London preach this article?" whereunto they answered, "No, no." At which words the bishop turning himself about, deriding said, "Will you believe this fond people?"

Besides this, at all his appearings he used many irreverend, uncomely, obstinate, and froward words and behaviours towards the commissioners and others (in defacing their authority with the terms of pretended commissioners, pretended witnesses, and unjust, unlawful, and pretended proceedings, with reensation of some, and terming others daws, woodcocks, fools, and such like), which I will here omit, for they do more manifestly appear in the sequel of the story in the time and place as they happened; adding yet this much by the way, that although such stoutness of heart and will, if it had been in a cause true and rightful, might have perchance seemed, in some men's judgment, to be somewhat sufferable, yet, to say the truth, in what case soever it be, being immoderate, as this shall appear, it besmeared no wise man, and therefore much less one of his calling. For, if his cause had been good, why did he not take the wrong patiently and meckly, as the true canon law of the gospel doth teach him? If it were (as it was indeed) naught and wrong, whereto served so bold sturdy stoutness, but to show the impudency of the person, and to make the case worse, which was bad enough before? But belike he was disposed to declare, if need were, what he was able to do in the law, in shifting off the matter by subtle dilatories, and frivolous cavilling about the law. And if that would not help, yet with facing and brasing, and railing upon the denouncers with furious words, and irreverent behaviour toward the king's commissioners, he thought to countenance out the matter before the people, that something might seem yet to be in him, whatsoever was in the cause. For to conclude, for all his crafty cantels and tergiversations alleged out of the law, yet neither his cause could be so defended, nor his behaviour so excused, but that he was therefore both justly imprisoned, and also, in the end, most lawfully deprived; as by the sequel of this process may well appear, the manner whereof is as followeth.

THE FIRST ACTION OR SESSION AGAINST BONNER, BEFORE THE KING'S COMMISSIONERS.

See Appendix.

Upon Tuesday, the 10th day of September, in the year of our Lord 1549, and in the third year of the reign of king Edward VI., Thomas Crammer, archbishop of Canterbury, metropolitan and primate of all England, associated with Nicholas Ridley then bishop of Rochester, sir William Peter, knight, one of the king's two principal secretaries, and Master William May, doctor of the civil law, and dean of Paul's, by virtue of the king's commission, sat judicially upon the examination of Edmund Bonner, bishop of London, within the archbishop's chamber of presence, at his house in Lambeth, before whom there then also personally appeared the said bishop. At which time the commissioners, first showing forth their commission, requested sir William Peter, that he would openly publish and read the same. That done, the archbishop, in the name of the rest, declared unto the bishop, that a grievous complaint had been heretofore made and exhibited against him in writing unto the king's majesty and his most honourable council, and that therefore his highness, with their advice, had committed the examination thereof unto him, and other his colleagues there present; as also, unto sir Thomas Smith, knight, the other of his majesty's two principal secretaries, though then absent: and therewithal showed also forth a bill of complaint, exhibited unto the king by William Latimer and John Hooper, ministers; which they likewise requested sir William Peter to read.

Edward VI.

Sir Thomas Smith absent.

These things ended, the bishop, like a subtle lawyer, having most like some secret intelligence before of these matters (whatsoever he pretended to the contrary), pulled out of his bosom a solemn protestation ready written, which he then exhibited unto the commissioners, requesting that the same might be there openly read; the copy whereof is in tenor and form hereunder to be seen.<sup>1</sup>

This protestation being read, he requested the commissioners that he might have the bill of complaint delivered him; which when he had well perused, he said, that the same was very general, and so general, as that he could not directly answer thereunto. Whereunto the archbishop answered, that the special cause of the complaint against him was, for that he had transgressed the king's commandment, given unto him by his council, in that he, in his late sermon made at Paul's Cross, did not set forth unto the people the king's highness's royal power in his minority, according to the tenor of the article delivered unto him by them for that purpose; and for proof thereof called forth William Latimer and John Hooper, preachers, who before that time had put up the bill of complaint unto the king against him.

Upon whom when the bishop had earnestly looked, and well beheld them, he said, "As for this merchant Latimer, I know him very well, and have borne with him, and winked at his doings a great while, but I have more to say to him hereafter. But as touching this other merchant Hooper, I have not seen him before, howbeit I have heard much of his naughty preaching." And then, turning himself again unto the archbishop (of purpose, most like, to make his friends think that he was not called thither to answer for his contemptuous disobedience, but for matters of religion), said unto him, "Ah, my lord! now I see that the cause of my trouble is not for the matter that you pretend against me, but it is for that I did preach and set forth in my late sermon the true presence of the most blessed body and blood of our Saviour Jesus Christ to be in the sacrament of the altar. For as for these my accusers, as they be evil, infamed, notorious, and criminous persons, so are they manifest and notable heretics and seducers of the people, especially touching the sacrament of the altar; and most of all this Hooper. For whereas, in my late sermon at Paul's cross, I preached, that in the blessed sacrament of the altar, after the words of consecration, there is the true body and blood of our Saviour Jesus Christ, the selfsame in substance that was hanged and shed upon the cross, he, the same day at afternoon, having a great rabblement with him of his damnable sect, openly in the pulpit, within my diocese, did preach erroneously to the people against it; and, maliciously inveighing against my sermon, denied the verity and presence of Christ's true body and blood to be in the same sacrament, and also falsely and untruly interpreted and expounded my words. And especially, where I preached and affirmed the very true body and blood of our Saviour Jesus Christ to be in the said sacrament, the selfsame in substance that was hanged and shed upon the cross, he, like an ass (as he is an ass indeed), falsely changed and turned the word 'that' into 'as,' like an ass, saying, that I had said as it hanged, and as it was shed upon the cross."

The archbishop hereupon, perceiving the bishop's drift, and hearing him talk so much of the presence of Christ's body and blood in the sacrament, said unto him, "My lord of London! ye speak much of a presence in the sacrament; what presence is there, and of what presence do you mean?" Wherewith the bishop, being somewhat stirred and moved in his mind (as appeared by his choleric countenance), spake again to the archbishop very earnestly, and said, "What presence, my lord? I say and believe that there is the very true presence of the body and blood of Christ. What believe you, and how do you believe, my lord?" Upon which words the archbishop, because he saw his answer dark and subtle, and minding somewhat to nip the gross absurdities of the papists, asked him further, whether he were there, face, nose, mouth, eyes, arms and lips, with other lineaments of his body? Whereat the bishop shaking his head, said, "Oh! I am right sorry to hear your grace speak these words;" and therewith boldly urged the archbishop to show his mind therein ; * the! aforementioned sir William Peter, at that time beholding and looking very earnestly upon the archbishop, but saying nothing to it. And then my lord of Canterbury, being further provoked by the bishop of London to declare what, and how, he believed in the sacrament of the altar,* wisely weighing the fond presumption of the party, with the place and occasion of their assembly, refused then so to do, saying, that their being there at that time was, not to dispute of those matters, but to prosecute their commission committed to them by their prince ; and therefore willed him to answer them unto such things as were objected against him.

Whereupon, under his protestation, he required to have a copy both of the commission, and also of the denunciation, given unto him, with time to answer thereto ; which the commissioners willingly granted, assigning him there to appear again before them upon Friday then next following, at eight o'clock before noon ; and then to answer the tenor of the denunciation. And so, for that day (he, complaining somewhat of the shortness of his time to answer), they all together departed.

THE SECOND APPEARANCE OF BONNER IN THE CHAPEL OF LAMBETH, BEFORE THE ARCHBISHOP AND OTHER FOUR COMMISSIONERS, THE BISHOP OF ROCHESTER, SECRETARY PETER, SECRETARY SMITH, AND THE DEAN OF PAUL'S.

See Appendix.

Upon Friday the 13th of September aforementioned, four commissioners, associated then also with sir Thomas Smith, knight, the other of the king's two principal secretaries, and joint commissioner with them, sat judicially in the archbishop's chapel, within his house at Lambeth ; before whom (according to their former assignment) there and then appeared the bishop of London. To whom the archbishop, in the name of the rest, first said, " My lord of London ! the last time you were before us, we laid certain articles and matter to your charge touching your disobedience to the king's majesty, and you have this day to make your answer thereunto : wherefore now show us what you have to say for your defence."

Whereunto the bishop, first asking the archbishop if he had all said and done, and he again saying, " Yea," made this answer : " My lord, the last day that I appeared before you, I remember there sat in the king's majesty's commission, your grace, you my lord of Rochester, you Master Secretary Peter, and you Master Dean of Paul's ; but now, I perceive, there sitteth also Master Secretary Smith, who, because he sat not at the beginning, nor took there the commission upon him, ought not so to do : for by the law, they that begin, must continue the commission." Whereupon the archbishop first answered, that he was no lawyer, and therefore could not certainly show what the law willeth in that case ; " But," saith he, " if the law be so indeed, surely I take it to be an unreasonable law."

" Well," said the bishop, " there be here that know the law, and yet I say not this to the intent to stand or stick much in this point with you, but to tell it you as it were by the way; for I have here mine answer ready."

A precise point of law, whether a new commissioner may sit afterward, which sat not at the beginning.

The words of secretary
Peter to Bonner.

Then said Master Secretary Peter to the bishop, "My lord! in good sooth I must say unto you, that although I have professed the law, yet, by discontinuance and disuse thereof, and having been occupied a long time in other matters from study of the law, I have perhaps forgotten what the law will do precisely in this point. But, admit the law were so as you say, yet yourself know, my lord, that this is our certain rule in law, 'quod consuetudo est juris interpres optimus;' and I am sure you will not, and cannot deny, but that the custom is commonly in this realm in all judgments and commissions used to the contrary; and, in very deed, we all together at the court, having the commission presented unto us, took it upon us; and therefore, for you to stick in such trifling matters, you shall rather in my judgment hurt yourself and your matter, than otherwise."

"Truly, Master Secretary!" said the bishop, "I have also of long while been disused in the study of law, but having occasion, partly by reason of this matter, to turn my books, I find the law to be as I say; and yet, as I said, I tell you hereof but by the way, not minding to stick much with you in that point."

Words of secretary
Smith.

At which words, Master Secretary Smith said also unto the bishop, "Well, my lord of London! as cunning as you make yourself in the law, there be here that know the law as well as you: and for my part I have studied the law too, and I promise you these be but quiddities and quirks invented to delay matters, but our commission is to proceed summarily, and 'de plano,' and to cut off such frivolous allegations."

"Well," said the bishop again, "look well on your commission, and you shall find therein these words, 'To proceed according to the law and justice;' and I ask both law and justice at your hands."

Words of secretary
Peter.

Then Master Secretary Peter willed him to stand no more thereupon, but to proceed unto his answer: whereupon he took forth a writing, wherein was contained his answer to the denunciation exhibited the Wednesday before by Latimer and Hooper, and delivering it unto the archbishop, said, that it was of his own hand-writing, and for lack of sufficient time written so hastily and coarsely, that it could scarcely be read by any other, and therefore he desired to read it himself; and so taking it again, read it openly, the copy whereof here followeth; * which,<sup>1</sup> as here may appear, contained, among other, much matter and causes against Latimer and Hooper, the denouncers, why they ought not in law to be heard or admitted against him, but utterly to be repelled.*

The Answer of Bishop Bonner to the Denunciation of Latimer and Hooper.

I Edmund, bishop of London, concerning William Latimer and John Hooper, the pretended denounciators of this matter here now before you, and for answer unto the unlawful, untrue, and uncharitable, pretended denunciation of them, lately indeed, contrary to justice and good reason, exhibited here and read before you, under protestation heretofore made by me, and read unto you, remaining in the acts of this court, unto which I refer me, and have the same here again for repeated and rehearsed to all purposes agreeable to the law, do, for my necessary defence and help, allege and say as followeth.

Edward
VI.

A. D.
1549.

I. First, I do allege and say, that the said William Latimer and John Hooper, or either of them, were not, nor now are, to be admitted in any wise, by virtue of this or any other commission, as denunciators against me their bishop; especially, for that they and either of them have, as well before the time of their pretended denunciation, and also then and since, been and be vile and infamed, notorious criminous persons, and also open and manifest notable heretics, especially concerning the sacrament of the catholic church, and namely concerning the blessed sacrament of the altar;<sup>1</sup> by reason of which their heresies, they were and be, by the order of the said catholic church, here in this realm of England, justly and duly excommunicated and accursed, and have divided themselves thereby from the unity and integrity of Christ's catholic church; and for such persons they have been and are named, reputed, and taken openly, notoriously, and commonly, amongst the catholic people of this realm of England, and especially of this city of London; familiarly haunting and conversant with sacramentaries, and openly known condemned heretics, and favourers and abettors of the same, and their detestable and pestilent doctrine and heresy.

Allegations or rather cavillations of Bonner against his denunciators.

II. Item, That the said John Hooper, amongst other his poisoned and venomous doctrine, and amongst other his erroneous, detestable, and abominable errors and heresies taught and spread abroad here within this realm, infecting and poisoning the king's subjects therewith, hath, before the time of the said pretended denunciation, damnably and detestably made divers erroneous and heretical books, especially one, entitled, 'A Declaration of Christ, and of his Office,' printed (as he falsely surmiseth) in Zurich by Augustine Fries, wherein he, in many places, heretically and damnably denieth the true presence of Christ's body in the blessed sacrament of the altar, and also, in effect, denieth the verity of Christ's blessed body upon the cross, calling it 'mathematical,'<sup>2</sup> and excluding thereby the true and very substance thereof.

See
Appendix.

III. Item, That the said John Hooper doth persevere, and continueth still, in his said poisoned and wicked venomous doctrine, in all points maintaining and defending the same, and every part thereof, all the ways he can, especially against the presence of Christ's blessed body in the sacrament of the altar; and his said books, especially the said 'Declaration of Christ and of his office,' he doth yet allow and maintain as good and catholic, whereas indeed it is heretical, wicked, and damnable: the contents of which doctrine and book so entitled, the said Latimer, especially touching the heresy against the verity of Christ's body, and his true presence in the sacrament of the altar, hath heard, taught, read, preached, believed, holden, maintained and kept; and so, at this present, doth yet believe, hold, maintain, and keep; contrary to the faith of Christ's catholic church, and the unity of the same observed amongst all true christian people; incurring thereby heresy, excommunication, and schism, to the loss both of their souls, and of their believers'.

If all truth were away, he had spoken more truly.

IV. Item, That the said Latimer and Hooper, and either of them, being of these vile and detestable qualities, and consequently, by the ordinance of the catholic church of Christ, as well of this realm, as also throughout all Christendom, being so excommunicated and cast out thereby from the said church, are not to this pretended denunciation against me their bishop, nor to any judicial act, to be admitted, nor yet to be accompanied withal, or answered unto; but are, by Scripture, and the order of Christ's catholic church here in this realm, utterly and truly to be excluded, avoided, detested, eschewed, and abhorred, in all manner of wise, of all faithful and true christian people, fearing God, and desiring the advancement of the truth.

V. Item, That whereas the said Latimer and Hooper, in their said pretended denunciation, amongst other things, do untruly deduce that they have made their said pretended denunciation, not moved of any malice or evil will, but for the good tranquillity and governance of this realm, which, as they pretend in their gay and glorious proem, they would seem to have a great care and solicitude of, whereas in very deed they and such as they are, by sundry ways, and especially by their corrupt doctrine, and heretical naughty preaching, and infecting of the king's majesty's people, have disturbed and greatly inquieted the good tranquillity and governance of this realm, as evidently and notoriously it is well known; the truth is, that this their saying is evidently and plainly false; for notorious it is, and lawfully shall be proved, that the said Hooper, conspiring with the said Latimer, and other heretics of their factious sect and damnable opinion, did, the first day of September last past, after that I, the said bishop of London, had made the sermon at Paul's Cross, assemble maliciously, uncharitably, and unlawfully, a great rabblement of such as himself is, within my diocese and jurisdiction, and, under the colour of reading, did openly and manifestly rail and inveigh against me the said bishop, for my said sermon; not for any such matter, pretence, or cause, as is falsely and untruly surmised in the said pretended denunciation, but only and chiefly for that I, the said bishop, as became a christian man, and especially him that had and hath cure and charge of his flock, faithfully and truly to teach them, did, taking occasion of the communion not frequented nor revered, but neglected and contemned, confess and declare my faith and belief openly before my audience, touching the blessed sacrament of the altar ministered in the same communion, affirming, as the catholic church affirmeth and teacheth, that in the blessed sacrament of the altar there is the very true body of our Saviour Christ, the selfsame in substance that hanged upon the cross, and the very true blood of our Saviour Christ, the selfsame in substance that was shed upon the cross.<sup>1</sup> Against which affirmation and assertion, being catholic and true, the said John Hooper (albeit now colourably, and falsely, and foolishly, he pretendeth another matter more plausible in his opinion and judgment in sundry places of the city and suburbs of London) hath since that time maliciously<sup>2</sup> inveighed and taught, learning and teaching his audience heretically (being many in number, and assembling in great routs) to prove, contemn, and despise, the said blessed sacrament of the altar, and not to have a true and faithful belief of it, as hitherto always the catholic church hath ever had,<sup>3</sup> the said William Latimer, and the rabblement of his complices, conspiring and agreeing in points therein, and inducing others to do the same; not making any such pretence at all, as they, in their said pretended denunciation, do falsely surmise and deduce; but only and chiefly offended for my said assertion and affirmation of the verity of Christ's body and blood in the sacrament of the altar.

(1) How fain would this man find a fault, if he could tell how.

See
Appendix

VI. Item, That whereas the said William Latimer and John Hooper, in their said pretended denunciation, do further deduce, and falsely surmise, that I, the said bishop of London, had delivered to me from the king's majesty, by the hands of the lord protector's grace, and the rest of the king's majesty's council, certain injunctions with articles to be insinuated and preached to the king's majesty's subjects, at a certain day limited, and after such sort, form, and manner, as is in the said pretended denunciation surmised untruly and deduced: it is notorious and evident, as well by the tenor and continue of that writing which was to me, the said bishop of London, delivered by the hands of sir Thomas Smith, knight, one of the two principal secretaries to the king's majesty, as otherwise, that the said surmise, in such sort and fashion as it is deduced and made, is not true in this behalf, referring me to the tenor of the said writing, which neither was signed with the king's majesty's hand, nor sealed with any his majesty's seal or signet,<sup>4</sup> nor yet subscribed by any of the said council, or delivered after such sort as is alleged and pretended, as more evidently hereafter shall appear, and sufficiently be proved, for my lawful necessary defence in this behalf.

VII. Item, That in case any such injunctions, with articles after such form and fashion, had so been delivered unto me as is surmised and pretended, yet false and untrue it is that I, the said bishop, either left out, or refused to

(1) But what and where were your proofs?

(2) As though he could not both confute your error then, and also say the truth now, without all malice or affection.

(3) 'Ever,' that is since pope Innocentius the Third's time, four hundred years ago.

(4) Though the bill of articles bears no seal or signet, yet you be but a cavalier, knowing that you were sent for, and in the presence of the lord protector, in the council-chamber received the copy of the injunctions, with the articles promised to be sent to you in writing, as they were indeed; neither are ye able to deny the same, though ye list to shift out the matter with vain terms of uncertainty and obscurity, when the purpose of the thing maketh cleare against you, according as it appeareth in the articles hereafter ministered against you the second time.

declare the same for any such cause or causes falsely and untruly surmised in the said pretended denunciation, or else so perversely and negligently did, as likewise in the said pretended denunciation is deduced; which thing may well appear in the discourse of my said sermon, where, in substance and effect, I declared faithfully and truly these points specially following; that is to wit, that all such as rebel against their prince, get unto them damnation, and those that refuse the higher power resist the ordinance of God; and he that dieth therefore in rebellion, is by the word of God utterly damned, and so loseth both body and soul, alleging for this purpose the 13th chapter of St. Paul to the Romans, and it at large declaring unto the audience. Furthermore, speaking of the rebels in Devonshire, Cornwall, Norfolk, and elsewhere within this realm; standing in doubt whether I might put them in the place of those that put trust in themselves and despised all others, or in the place of both, doing as they did; forgetting God, not duly considering the king's majesty, their supreme head next and immediately under God; forgetting their wives, their children, their kinsfolk, their alliance, acquaintance, and friends, yea themselves, and their native country, and most unnaturally rebelling against their sovereign lord and king, whom, by God's law they were bound to love, serve, and faithfully obey; I did, to the best of my power, dissuade rebellion, and exhort the audience unto true obedience being thus commanded: And all rebellion being, in like manner, forbidden, under pain of eternal damnation, all these rebels in Cornwall, Devonshire, Norfolk, or elsewhere, who take upon them to assemble a power and force against their king and prince, against the laws and statutes of the realm, and went about to subvert the order of the commonwealth, did not only deserve therefore death, as rebels and traitors, but also did accumulate unto themselves eternal damnation, even to be in the burning fire of hell, with Lucifer, the father and first author of pride, disobedience, and rebellion.

And here I did ask, who had induced the said rebels thus to do? To which I answered by another question, demanding who moved and induced Eve to take the apple and break her obedience against God's commandment? who moved also and induced Cain to kill his brother Abel? yea, who moved Judas the apostle to betray his master Christ? Was it not the devil? Yes truly, and he it is (said I) that of his great malice and hatred to men and good order hath moved and induced these rebels to this unnatural rebellion against their prince and sovereign lord. Whereupon I asked, what pretences they had, and, answering thereto, said, that amongst others they had masses and holy water; upon which I, exclaiming against them, said, Good Lord! is not this a marvellous thing, to palliate, colour, excuse, and maintain rebellion and inobedience, to pretend mass or holy water? as who saith that these things had been instituted and ordained to defend, maintain, and excuse rebellion, treason, and inobedience; which I told the audience they could not do. And thereupon I brought four texts of Scripture to prove this thing that I said, alleging Numbers xvi., 1 Kings<sup>1</sup> xv., Leviticus x., and the fourth, that myself added also, St. Luke xiii. joined with the vth of Acts, setting them forth the best I could, as one not much exercised in preaching, but restrained therefrom. And here I concluded, that whatsoever pretences these rebels had of masses, holy water, or such other, it could not in anywise excuse or defend their rebellion and inobedience, referring myself herein to the indifferent hearers in the said audience.

And here, pulling out a writing, sent from the king's majesty's privy council unto me, touching the victory against the said rebels, which for brevity of time my memory would not serve to declare without book, I did rehearse it in writing word by word; in doing whereof it well appeared, that I did not favour the opinion of the said rebels, or maintain their enterprise, but contrariwise did detest them and all their doings, declaring obedience to be better than sacrifice; and that in disobedience and rebellion nothing could or did please Almighty God. Further, taking occasion of the proud Pharisee and the fumble Publican ascending into the temple to pray, and noting the outward and extern doing of them both, with the success thereof, I declared to the audience touching the order of the church and the extern rites and ceremonies of the divine service, that forasmuch as God requireth humility of heart, innocency of living, knowledge of him, charity and love to our neighbour, and obedience to his word, to his ministers, and to the superior powers, we must bring all these things to all our prayers, to all our service; and that this is the sacrifice that Christ requireth, and that these be the things that make all other things pleasant to Almighty God: fürther saying, that the extern rites are but exercises of religion, and appointed by superior powers, and that in the choosing thereof we must obey the magistrates, and that we also do see that those things ever have been, and shall be, diverse, as the time and place is; and yet all hath pleased God, so long as humility of heart, innocency of living, knowing of God, charity and love to our neighbour, with obedience to God's word, God's ministers, and the superior powers, are concurrent and present therewith.

Edward VI.

1549.

See Appendix.

Moreover, I then said, that if any man should use rites, and disobey thereby the superior powers, the devotion of his ceremony was made evil by his disobedience; insomuch that that which (standing the law) might be good, was, by pride, disobedience, and rebellion, made evil and unprofitable; putting example in the fact of Saul, reserving the fat sheep for sacrifice; and in Korah, Dathan, and Abiram, and also in Nadab and Abihu, Aaron's two children, and in the Galileans, whose blood Pilate did mix with their sacrifices. And thereupon I told the audience that they must do herein especially two things: the first, they must join to and with their devotion faithful obedience, and then they shall win the garland, and otherwise have a zeal, 'sed non secundum scientiam,' deserving no thank or praise of God; and also they must, with and to their obedience, join devotion, knowing that God more doth require and consider the heart, than the outward doing. And thereupon I exhorted the audience, that when they came to take the communion, or to hear or say the service, appointed by the king's majesty, they must bring devotion and inward prayer with them, or else their prayers shall be but vain, as wanting and lacking that thing which God requireth, that is, the heart and mind to pray to him. And herein, because I marvelled that the communion was no more frequented now-a-days, and lamenting the irreverent coming to it and using of it; fearing that it proceeded of an evil opinion and belief touching the sacrament of the altar, ministered and distributed at the same communion; and to the intent to make the people have better opinion of it than they seemed to have, I did faithfully, truly, and plainly declare my belief of the said sacrament, wherewith the said Latimer and Hooper, with their complices, were so much offended and aggrieved.

VIII. Item, That whereas the said William Latimer and John Hooper do further, in the said pretended denunciation, untruly, and uncharitably deduce and allege, that I, in my said sermon, did treat of such things as most should move and stir up the people to disorder and dissension,<sup>1</sup> it doth hereby evidently and clearly appear, that either the said pretended denunciators do take and esteem a declaration faithfully made of the loyal obedience of subjects to the king's majesty, the supreme and sovereign lord, and the great peril and danger of rebellion committed by subjects against their king and prince and sovereign lord, to be a moving, provoking, and stirring-up of people to discord and dissension; or else that the affirmation and assertion catholic of the verity of Christ's body and blood in the blessed sacrament of the altar, set forth by me as afore, doth effect and work such disorder and dissension. For evident it is to all those who indifferently heard my said sermon, that I (grounding myself upon Scripture, and taking occasion of the Sunday then occurrent) did speak specially and earnestly of these two things, without taxing of any man specially by name, or other circumstance, to slander them thereby; and I did both set forth the obedience and duty of all subjects generally to their king, and specially, of subjects of this realm to the king's majesty that now is, whose minority to all people of this realm is more than manifest, and is also apparent or evidently known to all the whole world beside. And also, I did then declare and lay open the imminent danger and great peril of rebellion in subjects against the high powers and authority, and also specially of the rebellion late committed by them of Devonshire, Cornwall, Norfolk, and elsewhere, against the king's majesty that now is, which I would not have done, except I both had believed<sup>2</sup> that all the king's subjects without exception were bound to obey the king's majesty, even as he now is, was, and shall be, during his life, which our Lord

(1) But where was any mention made of the king's power in his minority, as it was enjoined you to treat of?

(2) If ye did believe it, why did ye not fully approve and declare the same to the people?

long preserve to all our comforts and wealth! and also that the rebellion of late so committed against his majesty was damnable, and utterly detestable and condemned by God's law: and herein I refer me to the indifferent hearers of this my sermon, wishing that this Latimer and Hooper, with all the rest of these new preachers, did mean as faithfully, truly, obediently and catholicly, as I always have done, towards the king's majesty, his honour, authority, royal power, and surety of his person and realm; and did not more move, encourage, and stir the king's majesty's subjects to sedition, tumult, and inobedience, by their erroneous doctrine and teaching, than I did at any time encourage, move, or stir any of them in any wise, or give occasion to any of the same.

IX. Item, whereas the said William Latimer and John Hooper do falsely surmise in their pretended denunciation, that it was of no light ground looked for, that I, the said bishop of London, should more apertly have declared the injunctions and articles aforesaid, and that it did so appear unto their judgments; I do say, that their judgments are corrupted and only set to slander and picking of quarrels in this behalf, being well assured and so credibly informed, that all the worshipful and honest catholic persons of my said audience were fully satisfied, both as touching obedience to the king's majesty in his tender age and minority, and also touching the penalty and great peril of punishments of the rebellion so lately committed against the said majesty by the aforesaid rebels. And, moreover, I do say, that before my lord protector's grace, and the rest of the king's majesty's most honourable council then present,<sup>1</sup> I made my excuse, and alleged many impediments for my not preaching at the cross; and did not further promise but to do the best I could, which of my fidelity and conscience I did; not omitting any thing of purpose or evil will, that might be to the satisfaction of all people, both good and bad, in every condition and point; specially, in this behalf, collecting and gathering together, with all diligent study, all that might make, in my judgment and opinion, for the better setting forth of the same.

Edward VI.

A. D. 1549.

Bonner's writing exhibited to the commissioners, answering to the denunciation.

Thus have you Bonner's answer to the denunciation aforesaid: wherein first he alleged, or rather shamelessly and slanderously cavilled:

That those his denouncers were vile, infamed, and notorious criminous persons, and also open and manifest heretics, as well against the rest of the sacraments of the church, as chiefly against the sacrament of the altar; and were for the same, by the orders of the church, excommunicated and accursed, and were so taken of all the catholics of this realm, and especially by Hooper; who, besides other his poisoned doctrine and heresy amongst the people, had also, before the time of the denunciation, made divers erroneous and heretical books against the true presence of Christ's body in the sacrament of the altar, and did also continue in the same, allowing and maintaining it as good and catholic: which books and doctrine (chiefly against the sacrament of the altar) Hugh Latimer had, and then likewise did allow, believe, and teach, to the loss of both their own souls, and also of their believers'; and therefore were not now, nor ought at any time, to be admitted either in this their denunciation against him, or in any other judicial act; and that the rather also, because that although they pretend, in their denunciation, that they made not the same of any malice or evil will towards him, but for the good tranquillity and quiet governance of this realm, yet was it notoriously known, that as well the same day at afternoon in which he the said bishop preached at the cross of Paul's, as also at sundry other times, they two, conspiring with others of their faction, did maliciously and unlawfully within his diocese assemble together a great rabblement of such as themselves were, and there, under colour of reading, did openly rail and inveigh against him, not for any the causes pretended in their denunciation, but because he had in his sermon declared (as the catholic church taught), that in the sacrament of the altar there was the very true body and blood of Christ, the same in substance that was hanged and shed upon the cross.

Exceptions laid by Bonner against Hooper.

Frivolous quarrelling of Bonner against him.

(1) Ergo, by your own confession it appeareth that these injunctions were given you by my lord protector's own mouth, though not with his own hands: which article you will not grant.

Edward VI.

1549.

Then, after these vain and frivolous allegations against the denouncers, he cometh and answereth to the substance of their denunciation, and saith :

Bonner put to a bare shift.

That whereas they, in the same, do falsely surmise, that there were delivered unto him from the king's majesty, by the hands of the lord protector and the rest of his highness's council, certain injunctions and articles to be published and declared unto the people at a day limited in the same, their information, in such sort as it was deduced, was most false and untrue, for that the articles delivered unto him by sir Thomas Smith, one of the king's secretaries, were neither signed with the king's own hand, nor sealed with his highness's seal or signet, nor yet subscribed by any of his council, &c.

Bonner's vain cavillation to no purpose.

Where mark, I beseech you, the subtlety of a disloyal papist, who, because the articles were not sealed by the king and his council, would therefore make them not to be of any such force as that the breach thereof should cause him to incur the danger of contemptuous disobedience. But admit they were not signed nor sealed (of which thing, by the way, in the denunciation there is no mention yea or nay), yet it is manifest by the second bill of articles ministered unto him by the commissioners, in the fourth act of his process, that, at such time as he was before the council, those articles were, by the commandment of the lord protector, openly there read unto him by one of the secretaries, and, after addition of the article concerning the king's lawful power and authority during his young years, were also delivered unto him by the hands of the lord protector, in the presence of the rest of the council ; who, thus receiving them, promised there faithfully to accomplish all the contents thereof. After which, they were again delivered unto secretary Smith, to amend such things therein as the lord protector and the rest of the council had there appointed : which being accordingly done (as the bishop himself at the last receipt thereof confessed), they were finally delivered unto him by the secretary ; and therefore was this but a poor shift. Now after this, he maketh this supposition :

Bonner's supposition.

That in case it were true, that the injunctions were delivered him according to their information, yet was it untrue that he did omit or refuse to declare the same for any such causes as they had alleged against him ; and that did well appear in the discourse of his sermon, which tended principally (as he said) to the disallowing and condemnation of all rebels, and chiefly of the rebels in Norfolk, Suffolke, Devonshire, and Cornwall, or elsewhere within this realm of England, who, forgetting their allegiance and duty unto their prince, assigned to them by God's word as their supreme head, their natural love and care for their country, wives, children, and kinsfolk, did both deserve death bodily as traitors, and also accumulate unto themselves damnation of body and soul eternally, with Satan the father and first mover of all rebellion and disobedience. And herewithal further exclaiming against the pretences of those rebels, who, amongst other things, pretended the mass and holy water, with such like, which were never ordained for the purpose to colour and maintain rebellion (as, he said, he then proved out of Numbers xvi., 1 Kings xv., Leviticus x., Luke xiii., and Acts v., in the best manner that he could, as one not exercised greatly in preaching, but restrained therefrom), but having humility of heart, innocency of living, knowledge of God, love to our neighbours, with obedience to God's word, ministers, and superior powers concurrent with them, they, being external rites and ceremonies of the church, were exercises of religion, and appointable by superior powers ; and yet that which (standing the law) might be good, was by pride and disobedience made evil and unprofitable.

Bonner against therebels.

External rites and ceremonies.

And here he further said thus :

Because he saw the people slack in coming to the communion and divine service,<sup>1</sup> set forth by the king's majesty, and to the intent he would make them have a better opinion of the sacrament than he thought they had, he then faithfully did declare his belief therein. Wherewith his denouncers being offended, they uncharitably and untruly deduced, in their pretended denunciation, that in his sermon he did treat of such things as most should stir up unto dissension and tumult ; whereby it appeared unto him, that his denouncers either took his catholic assertion of the verity of Christ's body and blood in the sacrament of the altar, or else his faithful declaration made of the obedience of subjects unto the king's majesty their supreme and sovereign lord, with the peril and danger of rebellion committed against him, to be the cause of disorder and dissension ; for that (saith he) of these two points he chiefly spake, and especially of obedience to the king, whose minority was more than manifestly known, as well amongst the people of this realm, as elsewhere, throughout the world besides : which he would not have done except he had believed that both all his subjects were bounden to obey him, even as he then was and should be during his life ; and also that the rebellion of late committed against him was detestable, and condemned by God's word : and therefore he wished that his two denouncers, with all the rest of the new preachers, did mean as faithfully, obediently, and catholically, towards the king's honour, royal power, and surety of person, as he did ; and had not more moved the people to tumults and disobedience by their erroneous doctrine and teaching, than he had at any time given any occasion thereunto.

Then finally he concluded and said thus :

That whereas his aforesaid denouncers surmise, that it was of no light ground looked for, as it appeared in their judgments, that he should more apertly have declared the contents of the injunctions and articles than he did, that their judgments were in that behalf corrupted, and set to slander and picking of quarrels ; for he was well assured, and credibly informed, that all his honest and catholic audience were fully satisfied, both touching their obedience to the king's majesty in his tender age, and also concerning the great penalty and peril that the late rebels incurred by their disobedience. And besides that, when he was before the lord protector and the rest of the council, after he had made his excuse, and alleged many impediments for his not preaching at the cross, he did not then further promise but to do the best he could ; which he hath of his fidelity and conscience accomplished, not omitting any thing of purpose or evil will, that might satisfy the people in any point concerning the premises.

Whilst he was thus reading these answers, objecting against his denouncers such causes and quarrels as is afore alleged, for which he would have earnestly had the denouncers to be repelled of the commissioners, the archbishop of Canterbury replied, that if there were any such law, he thought it not to be a good or godly law, but a law of the bishop of Rome. "For," said he, "if my matter and cause be good, what should I care who accuse me, yea although he were the devil of hell ?"

"No, sir," said the bishop of London, "it is the king's law used in the realm."

"Well, my lord," said the archbishop, "ye be too full of your law : I would wish you had less knowledge in that law, and more knowledge in God's law, and of your duty."

"Well," answered the bishop again, "seeing your grace falleth to wishing, I can also wish many things to be in your person."

Then spake secretary Peter to the bishop, as touching these denouncers : "We are not so straited in this matter, but that we may

(1) As justly they might ; the same being heretical and blasphemous against the humanity of Christ.

Edward VI. proceed against you, either at their promotion or without them, at our pleasure."

A. D. 1549. "A God's name, then," said Bonner, "put them by, and then do as your pleasure shall be, so you do me right, for I ask but right."

"Nay," said secretary Smith, "you ask you wot not what: you would have us follow your mind in these quiddities and quirks; and all is nothing else but to delay justice. And you do herein as thieves, murderers, and traitors, not to have the truth known."

"Say you so to me?" quoth the bishop: "I thank you. Well, I could say somewhat to you also, were ye not in the place ye be; but let it pass. As for my matter, I fear it not, it is not so evil as you make it; for I have your own hand-writing for my discharge, which, when I shall see my time, I shall show forth."

"My hand!" quoth the secretary. "Let me see it, and let it be read openly." "So it shall," said the bishop, "when I shall see time."

Then said Master Smith, "You do use us thus, to be seen a cunning lawyer."

"Indeed," quoth the bishop, "I knew the law, ere you could read it."<sup>1</sup>

With that, secretary Peter willed the bishop to proceed in reading of his answers; who so did, and when he had finished, Latimer delivered up a writing in paper unto the archbishop and the rest of the commissioners; who then said unto the bishop of London, "Here be certain articles which we intend to minister unto you."

The bishop therewith said, "Do you minister them of your office, or at the promotion of these men (pointing to Latimer and Hooper), for I perceive they gave them unto you?"

"Nay," said secretary Peter, "we will minister them unto you, 'ex officio mero.'"

Articles ministered to Bonner bishop of London by the Commissioners the first time, for him jointly and severally to answer unto.

First, it is reported, that you have received from the king's majesty, by the hands of my lord protector's grace, sitting in the council chamber at council with the rest of the lords of the council, the tenth<sup>3</sup> of August, certain injunctions to be done and followed by you, and articles to be preached by you; that you did there and then accept the said injunctions, and promise to observe and follow the same.

II. Item, That you have not truly, sincerely, and wholly, declared all the articles enjoined to you, in your last sermon, as they were put unto you.

III. Item, Whether ye have written your sermon or no? and if ye have written it, whether of your own counsel only, or by whose help; and who hath seen the same written before and since ye did preach it?

IV. Item, That ye have not declared in your sermon, that the old rite of prayers, as matins and mass, said after that sort in this realm, by reason of disobedience is naught, although a man have devotion unto it; according as it is in your articles.

V. Item, That you have not, in your sermon, declared the articles of the king's majesty's power in his minority, as it was commanded you, to the refutation of the evil opinion and error of the rebels; and, if you have declared it, how and after what sort ye have declared it?

(1) Well cracked, Master Bonner.

(2) Edition 1563, pp 703, 701.—Ed.

(3) Foxe's text reads "eleventh;" see Appendix.—Ed.

VI. Item, Whether ye will take upon you to defend the said rebels' opinion or no?

Edward VI.

VII. Item, That ye know, or have heard say, that certain persons within your diocese, sihe the time that the said injunctions were given unto you, have heard, been at, or celebrate, mass or evensong in the Latin tongue, and after the old rite and manner, other than according to the king's majesty's book.

VIII. Item, That ye have not convented them before you, nor inflicted punishment unto them.

IX. Item, That ye know or have heard say, that there be notable adulterers, fornicators, or incestuous parsons in your diocese; and you cited none of them, nor seen them punished.

X. Item, That ye were at Master Dr. Cox's the king's almoner's sermon at Paul's cross, about Midsummer was twelve months, wherein he declared the great contempt of the bishop of Winchester in not observing the injunction given unto him. And, especially, in that he did not entreat as he ought to have done, and was commanded, of the king's majesty's authority in his minority. Additionall

See Appendix.

XI. Item, That the rites of the common service of the church, now set forth, be in some part of your diocese diversely used; and you, knowing or hearing of the same, have not called any ministers of the service before you for the redress of such diversity, nor corrected the misusers thereof.*

Hereupon, after an oath given unto the bishop "de fideliter respondendo," he desired a copy of the articles, requiring also a competent time to be given unto him to make answer thereunto.

Bonner requireth respite to answer.

To whom secretary Peter replied, saying, "My lord, here be certain of the articles touching your own fact, which you may answer unto forthwith; as whether you wrote your sermon or not before you preached it."

Whereunto the bishop answered, that he wrote it not, but he drew certain notes of it.

"Then whose counsel," said he, "and advice, used you in making your sermon?"

To which he also answered, that he had therein used his own counsel and books; "and yet my chaplains," quoth he, "be much suspected for my doings in many things, and sometimes I for theirs, when there is no cause why."

These words ended, the commissioners assigned him Monday, the 16th of September then next following, to appear before them, and to make his full answers unto all the articles ministered unto him by them this day; the contents whereof are as followeth.

THE FORM AND TENOR OF THE ARTICLES MINISTERED UNTO THE BISHOP OF LONDON, BY THE KING'S COMMISSIONERS, AT THE THIRD SESSION.

Monday, the 16th of September, the archbishop, associated with the bishop of Rochester, secretary Smith, and Dr. May, dean of Paul's, sat judicially within his chapel at Lambeth; before whom there and then appeared the bishop of London, according as he was assigned in the last session; at which time he exhibited unto the commissioners in writing his answers unto the last former articles. But before the same were there read, the archbishop said unto him, that his late answer, made the 13th of September, unto the denunciation, was very obscure, and therewith also contained much matter

*Edward VI.*A. D.
15 19.

Hooper and Latimer desire to purge themselves against Bonner's slanders.

Bonner reproved of untruth.

Latimer purgeth himself.

of slander against Latimer and Hooper, and much untruth; and therefore they desired there to purge themselves. Whereupon Latimer, first obtaining leave to speak, said to this effect:

'That the bishop of London had most falsely, untruly, and uncharitably accused him, laying to his charge many feigned and untrue matters in his former answers to the denunciation, and such as he should never be able to prove. For whereas in his said answer he alleged, that he [Latimer] and John Hooper, with other heretics conspiring against him, did the first day of September, after the bishop's sermon, assemble themselves together unlawfully against the said bishop, that saying of his was most untrue. For neither that day, nor yet before that day, nor until certain days after, he ever knew or spake with Hooper. And as touching his own preaching there, openly accused by the bishop, he said, he never held, taught, or preached any thing concerning the blessed sacrament, otherwise than he ought to do, nor otherwise than according to the Scriptures, and true catholic faith of Christ's church; and therefore offered himself to be tried by the archbishop, or other such learned men as it should please the king's majesty, or the said commissioners to appoint; and further to suffer, to be hanged, drawn, and quartered, if the bishop could justly prove true the things that he had there shamefully laid to his charge.'

Then Master Hooper, upon like license obtained, said to this effect:

Hooper cleareth himself against Bonner.

'This ungodly man,' pointing to the bishop, 'hath most uncharitably and ungodly accused me before your grace and this audience, and hath laid to my charge, that I am a heretic: whereas, I take God to record, I never spake, read, taught, or preached any heresy, but only the most true and pure word of God. And whereas he saith, I frequent the company of heretics, I do much marvel of his so saying; for it hath pleased my lord protector's grace, my singular good lord and master, and my lady's grace, to have me with them, and I have preached before them, and much used their company, with divers other worshipful persons; and therefore I suppose this man meaneth them. And further, whereas he saith that I have made heretical books against the blessed sacrament of the body and blood of Christ, calling it mathematical,<sup>1</sup> I perceive that this man knoweth not what this word 'mathematical' there meaneth, and therefore understandeth not my book, which, I take God to be my judge, I have made truly and sincerely, and according to his holy word; and by the same his holy word and scriptures, I am always (and shall he) ready to submit myself to your grace's judgment and the superior powers, to be tried.'

Which ended, with many such more words of like importance, the archbishop, to shorten this matter, asked the bishop how he could prove that Hooper and Latimer assembled together against him the first of September, as he had alleged, seeing they now denied it; and therefore willed him to answer forthwith thereunto.

Bonner chargeth Hooper of heresy.

The bishop then answered that he would duly prove it, so that he might be admitted to do it according to law: and with that he pulled out of his sleeve certain books, saying, "I have this varlet's books which he made against the blessed sacrament, which you shall hear." Then, as he was turning certain leaves thereof, Hooper began again to speak; but the bishop turning himself towards him, tauntingly said, "Put up your pipes; you have spoken for your part; I will meddle no more with you:" and therewith read a certain sentence upon the book. This done, he said, "Lo! here you may see his opinion, and what it is." At which words the people standing

(1) This term 'mathematical' is referred of Master Hooper not to the substance of Christ's body upon the cross, but to the papistical accidents, without substance upon the altar behind, and seeing his irreverent and unseemly demeanour and railing, fell suddenly into great laughing; whereat the bishop being moved, and not perceiving the cause wherefore they did laugh, turned him towards them in a great rage, saying, "Ah woodcocks! woodcocks!"

Edward VI.

A. D. 1549.

The people laugh Bonner to scorn.

Then said one of the commissioners, "Why say you so, my lord?" "Marry," quoth he, "I may well call them woodcocks, that thus will laugh, and know not whereat; nor yet heard what I said or read."

"Well, my lord of London," said the archbishop, "then I perceive you would persuade this audience, that you were called hither for preaching of your belief in the sacrament of the altar, and therefore you lay to these men's charge (meaning Hooper and Latimer), that they have accused you of that: howbeit, there was no such thing laid to your charge; and therefore this audience shall hear openly read the denunciation that is put up against you, to the intent they may the better perceive your dealing herein." And therewithal he said unto the people, "My lord of London would make you believe, that he is called hither for declaring and preaching his opinion touching the sacrament of the altar: but, to the intent you may perceive how he goeth about to deceive you, you shall hear the denunciation that is laid in against him read unto you:" and thereupon he delivered the denunciation unto sir John Mason, knight, who there read it openly. This done, the archbishop said again unto the audience, "Lo! here you hear how the bishop of London is called for no such matter as he would persuade you."

See Appendix.

The words of the archbishop to the people.

Sir John Mason readeth the denunciation.

With this the bishop, being in a raging heat, as one clean void of all humanity, turned himself about unto the people, saying, "Well, now hear what the bishop of London saith for his part." But the commissioners, seeing his inordinate contumacy, denied him to speak any more, saying, that he used himself very disobediently; with more like words of reproach.

Bonner in a rage.

Not suffered to speak to the people.

Notwithstanding he, still persisting in his irreverent manner of dealing with the commissioners, pulled out of his sleeve another book, and then said unto the archbishop, "My lord of Canterbury, I have here a note out of your books that you made touching the blessed sacrament, wherein you do affirm the verity of the body and blood of Christ to be in the sacrament, and I have another book also of yours of the contrary opinion; which is a marvellous matter."

He chargeth the archbishop with contrariety.

To this the archbishop answered, that he made no books contrary one to another, and that he would defend his books, howbeit he thought the bishop understood them not: "For I promise you," quoth he, "I will find a boy of ten years old, that shall be more apt to understand that matter than you my lord of London be."

The archbishop purgeth himself and his books.

Thus, after much multiplying of like words, the commissioners, thinking not good to spend any more waste time with him, willed him to show forth his answers unto the articles objected the last day against him: whereupon he, having them ready, did read the same openly to them; wherein, after many words of his former protestation recited, with a marvellous lamentation to see that one of his vocation, at the malicious denunciation of vile heretics, should be used after such strange sort, having nevertheless done the best he could to declare his obedience unto the king's majesty for the repressing and discouraging of rebellion and rebels, and also for the advancement of the verity of Christ's true body and his presence in the sacrament of the altar, for which only the malicious denouncers with their complices had studied to molest and trouble him, he then cometh to answering the articles, and saith, that to the first, second, and fourth, he hath already, in the former answers to the denunciation, sufficiently answered, and therefore was not bound by law to answer any further. As to the third and fifth, he said to this effect :

Bonner commanded to answer to the articles.

sermon.

That he began to write his sermon, but being soon weary, he did only make certain notes thereof, without help of any other, saying that he showed them to his chaplains, requiring them to put him in remembrance thereof. Amongst the which, for the better setting forth of the king's majesty's power and authority in his minority, he had collected as well out of histories, as also out of the Scriptures, the names of divers young kings, who, notwithstanding their minority, were faithfully and obediently honoured, and reputed for very true and lawful kings: as Henry III., being but nine years old; Edward III., being but thirteen years; Richard II., being but eleven years; Henry VI., being not fully one year; Edward V., being but eleven years; Henry VIII., being but eighteen years of age. And out of the Old Testament, Osias and Ahas, who were but sixteen years old; Solomon and Manasseh, being but twelve years; Josias, Joachim, and Joash, being but eight years of age when they entered their reigns. All which notes, with many others, he had purposed to declare, if they had come into his memory,<sup>1</sup> as indeed they did not, because the same was disturbed, partly for lack of use of preaching, and partly by reason of a bill that was delivered to him from the king's council, to declare the victory then had against the rebels in Norfolk and Devonshire, which being of some good length, confounded his memory; and partly also for that his book in his sermon time fell away from him, wherein were divers of his notes which he had collected for that purpose: so that he could not remember what he would, but yet, in generality, he persuaded the people to obedience to the king's majesty, whose minority was manifestly known to them and to all others.

Then, as to the sixth (he said), he knew not the rebels' opinion,<sup>2</sup> and therefore could not answer thereunto. And as for answer to the seventh, eighth, ninth, and eleventh articles, which touched his pastoral office, he said that notwithstanding his manifold and great troubles, as well by his own business and his family's sickness, as also by uncharitable informations made against him, yet he hath not failed to give order unto his officers straitly to look unto such matters; and such as he hath known, which were very few or none, he caused to be punished according to the laws. All which answers, with others written with his own hand hereunder follow.

The Answers of Bonner unto the Articles objected to him by the King's Commissioners the first time.

I, Edmund, bishop of London, under protestation heretofore by me made, exhibited, and repeated before you, which, in all my sayings and doings, I intend to have repeated and rehearsed again, to all lawful effects and purposes, for my honest and necessary defence; with protestation also of the nullity and iniquity of your process I had made in this behalf; and likewise of the generality, uncertainty, obscurity, contrariety, repugnancy, variety, insufficiency, and invalidity of the things alleged and deduced before you against me, as well in the commission and denunciation in divers parts, as also touching the articles

(1) A good prelate, that had lost his memory for lack of preaching.

(2) Bonner knew not the rebels' opinion, if you will believe him and interrogatories so ministered unto me: lamenting not a little, that one of my vocation, at the malicious denunciation of vile, heretical, and detestable persons,<sup>1</sup> should be used after this strange sort; having done the best I could to declare mine obedience unto the king's most excellent majesty, for the repressing and discouraging of rebellion and rebellious persons, and for the advancement of the verity of Christ's true body and his presence in the most blessed sacrament of the altar: for which only the malicious denunciators with their complices have studied to molest and trouble me; although colourably they would be seen to pretend other causes, especially the good and tranquillity of this realm, which our Lord God knoweth they care nothing for, but contrariwise do let and impeach the same; corrupting and infecting with their poisoned and false doctrine, and teaching the king's subjects in this realm, to the great peril and danger thereof many ways: do answer unto certain pretended articles and interrogatories ministered by you indeed unto me the said bishop, the 13th day of September, 1549, as followeth:<sup>2</sup>

VI.

A. D.

1549.

To the first article objected against me, beginning thus: 'First it is reported,' &c., and ending thus, 'to observe and follow the same,' I do say, and for answer do refer me unto my former answers heretofore, that is to wit, the 13th of September, made and exhibited by me before you unto the said pretended denunciation, touching this matter: alleging withal, that a report of things doth not absolutely prove, nor necessarily infer things to be in very deed true after such a sort, fashion, manner, and form as sometimes they be reported and rehearsed.

To the second, beginning thus: 'Item, whether that you,' &c., and ending thus, 'as they were put unto you;' I do answer and say, that this article doth depend on the first article next before, which, after such sort, fashion, manner, and form as it is deduced, was justly by me, in my answer made unto the same, denied; and I therefore now am not bounden by the law eftsoons to make other answer thereunto.

To the third, being an interrogatory, and beginning thus: 'Item, whether,' &c., and ending thus, 'ye did preach;' I do answer and say, that I began to write a piece of my sermon, and being soon weary thereof, I did leave off, and did make only certain notes of my said sermon, and put the same notes in writing of mine own hand, without help or counsel of any other; and the same notes did show unto my chaplains Master Gilbert Bourn and Master John Harpsfield, both before and also since my said sermon, only desiring them to put me in remembrance of my said notes and process to be made thereupon, and also to search out for me the names of such kings as were in their minority when they began to reign.

To the fourth article, beginning thus: 'Item, that ye have not declared,' &c., and ending thus, 'as it is in your article;' I do answer and say, that this article doth depend upon the first and second articles here before denied, deduced in such sort, manner, and form as is expressed in the same; and moreover I say, that already answer is made hereunto by me, in my former answers made to the said pretended denunciation.

To the fifth article, beginning thus: 'Item, that ye have not,' &c., and ending thus, 'declared it;' I do answer and say, that this article also doth depend upon the first and second articles; and that answer is made thereunto by me already in my former answers made unto the said pretended denunciation. And moreover I do say, that for the better advancement and setting forth of the king's majesty's royal power and authority, even in his minority, and for the due obedience of his majesty's subjects unto his highness, even during the said minority, I had collected together, as well out of histories as also out of the scripture of the Old Testament, the names of divers kings being in minority, who, notwithstanding their said minority, were faithfully, duly, and reverently obeyed, honoured, served, taken, and reputed, for very true and lawful kings, as Henry III., being but nine years old when he entered to reign and govern as king; Edward III., being but thirteen years of age; Richard II., being but eleven years old; Henry VI., being not fully one year of age; Edward V., being but eleven years old; Henry VIII., being about eighteen years old; and so all these kings, being in their minority as the king's majesty that now is, and yet having authority and power regal, as appertaineth; and in the Old Testament, Osias and Achaz were very true kings in their minority, being but sixteen years of age; Solomon and Manasses being but twelve years of age; Josias and Joachim being but eight years of age; and Joash being but eight years old: all which things, I say, I had collected in notes, communicating the same with my said two chaplains; and praying them to put me in remembrance, if in numbering of them, or in setting forth in my other notes, at the time of my sermon, I did fail, or have default of memory in any wise. And all these things I would have specially set forth in my said sermon, if they had come to my memory, as indeed they did not, partly for disturbance of my memory not accustomed to preach in that place, partly also by reason of a certain writing that was sent to me from the king's majesty's privy council, being of good length, to declare unto the people touching the victory against the rebels, especially in Norfolk, Devonshire, and Cornwall; confounding my memory in things which before I had set in good order; and partly also for the falling away of my book in the time of my said sermon, in which were contained divers of my said notes touching the king's majesty's minority, as is aforesaid, having yet nevertheless otherwise, in generality and speciality, persuaded the people to obedience unto the king's said majesty, whose minority to them and all others is notoriously and manifestly known; and his majesty, saving of these late rebels, faithfully, truly, and reverently obeyed of all the rest of his subjects.

To the sixth, which beginneth, 'Whether ye will,' &c., and ending thus, 'the opinion or no;' I do answer and say, that not knowing certainly of which rebels the article meaneth, nor yet what their opinion is indeed, I ought not to be driven to make answer hereunto, nor yet can make good and perfect answer therein though I would.

To the seventh article, beginning thus: 'Item, that ye know,' &c., and ending thus, 'the king's majesty's book;' I do answer and say, that albeit I have by the space of these five weeks last past and more, been in manner continually in business and trouble, as well in providing for my said sermon, as otherwise, specially by reason of my family, much vexed with sickness, to my great disquietness and charge, and also by reason that I have been so much troubled and cumbered by informations and complaints unjustly and uncharitably made against me, over and besides the having of divers and sundry persons, which daily resort and come unto me for their suits and business, both in matters of justice and otherwise, yet I have not omitted to send forth to my archdeacons and other my officers, to inquire and search diligently in this behalf, and to certify me accordingly; and yet I cannot hear certainly of any that have heard, been at, or celebrated masses or evensongs in the Latin tongue, after the old rite and manner, except it be in the house of my Lady Mary's grace, or in the houses of the ambassadors, nor yet there, nor in any of them, but by flying and not assured report; and without knowing the names and persons that so have heard, been at, or celebrate the same: and in this behalf how far I can and ought to proceed, and after what sort, I do refer me unto the statute late made in that behalf.

See
Appendix.

To the eighth article, beginning thus: 'Item, that ye have,' &c., and ending thus, 'punishment unto them;' I do answer and say, that this article doth depend on the next article going before; and so consequently answer is already thereunto made.

To the ninth article, beginning thus, 'Item, that ye know,' &c., and ending thus, 'nor see them punished;' I do answer and say, that touching such as either have been denounced or detected for such criminous and culpable persons to me or my officers, there hath been process already made before my said officers, as it appeareth in my register, and the acts of my court; and moreover, I have given express commandment to my said officers, to inquire and search for more such offenders, and to certify me thereof, that I may proceed against them accordingly.

To the tenth article, beginning thus: 'Item, ye were,' &c., and ending thus, 'the king's majesty's authority in his minority;' I do answer and say, that as touching the time mentioned in the article, and the declaration to be made by Dr. Cox, I do not well remember either the same time, or yet the special points and substance of the said Dr. Cox's declaration. Truth it is, I was at a sermon made at Paul's cross by the said Dr. Cox, wherein he inveighed against my lord of Winchester; and, as far as I can now call to my remembrance, it was touching disobedience wherewith my lord of Winchester by the said Dr. Cox seemed to be charged; and for a sermon also that my lord of Winchester was seeming to have made before the king's majesty in the court of Winchester.

Edward
I.A. D.
1549.See
Appendix.

To the eleventh article, being by itself delivered unto me the 14th of this present September, 1549, in the night, at my house of London, beginning thus, 'Item, that the rites,' &c., and ending thus, 'the misuses thereof;' I do answer and say, that I have already given commandment to my officers to make diligent search and inquire herein, and to certify accordingly, to the intent I may proceed therein as appertaineth; and would before this time myself have also inquired and proceeded, had I not so been of all sides oppressed and pestered with multitude of other necessary business, as I have been, to my great disquietness and trouble.

When he had ended the reading of these answers, the commissioners said unto him that he had in the same very obscurely answered unto the fifth article, ministered the 13th of September; wherefore they willed him there expressly to answer by mouth, whether he had, according to the injunctions delivered unto him, declared the article beginning thus: "You shall also set forth in your sermon that our authority," &c.: whereunto he again answered, that he had already made as full and sufficient an answer in writing, as he was bound to make by law.

The fifth
article insufficiently
answered.

The judges then replied, that the answers already made in that part were obscure and insufficient, so that it appeared not certainly whether he had preached indeed according to the same injunction or not; and therefore they eftsoons willed him, as before, directly to answer whether he had so accordingly preached or no, the bishop still answering as before.

Bonner's
obscure
answer.

The judges again demanded of him, whether he would otherwise answer or no? To the which he said, No, unless the law should compel him. Then they asked him whether he thought the law did compel him to answer more fully or no? He answered, No; adding further, that he was not bound to make answer to such positions.

ward con-
tumacy.

The commissioners then, seeing his froward contumacy, told him plainly, that if he persisted thus in his frowardness, and would not otherwise answer, they would, according to law, take him 'pro confesso,' and, 'ex abundantia,' receive witness against him; and therewithal did recite again to him six of the first and principal articles, demanding his final answer thereunto: who said, as before, that he had already fully answered them by writing; but whereas they requested to have his notes, which he said he had made of his sermon, they should have them if they would send for them. And whereas in his answer to the sixth article, he doubted what the opinion of the rebels was, the judges declared unto him that their opinion was, "that the king's majesty, before his grace came to the age of one and twenty years, had not so full authority to make laws and statutes, as when he came to further years; and that his subjects were not bound to obey the laws and statutes made in his young age." Whereunto the bishop answered, that he was not of the opinion of the rebels mentioned in that article, as did well appear by his answers, as well unto the denunciation, as also unto the fifth article objected against him.

Which ended, they, perceiving his scornful carelessness, presently did admit for witness, upon the articles objected against him, Master John Check, Henry Markham, John Joseph, John Douglas, and Richard Chambers, whom also they ocerated with a corporal oath upon the holy evangelists, truly to answer and depose upon the same articles in the presence of the bishop, who, under his former protestation, like a wily lawyer, protested of the nullity of the receiving, admitting, and swearing of those witnesses, with protestation also to object against the persons and sayings of the witnesses in time and place convenient; demanding also a competent and lawful time to minister interrogatories against them, with a copy of all the acts to that day: wherewith the delegates were well pleased, and assigned him to minister his interrogatories against Master Check on that present day, and against the rest, on the next day before noon.

All which interrogatories whoso listeth to peruse, may hereunder read the same, * the <sup>1</sup> said bishop protesting “de nimia brevitare et angustia temporis et de gravamine sibi in ea parte et aliter per hunc processum illato :” *

Certain Interrogatories exhibited by Bonner to be ministered against the aforesaid Witnesses, upon the articles above-mentioned, the eighteenth of September.

I Edmund, bishop of London, under my protestations heretofore made before you, do minister these interrogatories ensuing, against all and singular the pretended witnesses already received and sworn, as hereafter to be received and sworn against me the said bishop in this matter; requiring and desiring under the said protestation, that all and singular the said pretended witnesses may be examined in virtue of their oath upon the said interrogatories, and every part and parcel of them.

First, That all and singular the said witnesses, in virtue of their oath, be examined generally and specially of all and singular the interrogatories commonly used and accustomed to be made in such matters; especially touching their age, their condition, their dwelling-place, now and heretofore, by the space of these twelve years last past; with whom all this time they have also dwelled, and been familiar or conversant; with the names and the places and persons and other circumstances expedient in this behalf; and by whom they have been found and maintained, and for what purpose. Et interrogetur conjunctim, divisim, et de quolibet.

II. Item, Touching the pretended articles made in this behalf, and injunctions mentioned in the same, that they and every of them, in virtue of the said oath, may be examined whether they know their said articles and injunctions to be true in all parts; how they know them to be true; by whom, when, and in what place: deposing the formal words of the said pretended articles and injunctions in especial, as they are deduced in the first article. And therein let them depose how he or they know the said articles and injunctions to be received from the king's majesty: how also he or they know that I, the said bishop, received the said injunctions at the hands of the lord protector's grace: how also they were sitting in the council chamber: moreover who were the rest of the council then sitting, specifying their names and surnames, or titles: also, whether the tenth of August<sup>2</sup> of this present year, or of the last year. Moreover whether the articles or injunctions were joined together, or apart: whether the tenor thereof, and the form and manner of the doing and following, touching me the said bishop, and also touching the preaching thereunto, was as is deduced in the first article: declaring moreover, when, where, and how, I, the said bishop, accepted the said injunctions, or promised to observe and follow the same, and by what express words. Et interrogetur ut supra.

IV. Item, Whether the said witnesses or any of them were desired or required, by any person or persons, to be witness in this matter; and by whom, when, where, and how the same was done, and in whose presence. Et interrogetur ut supra.

V. Item, Whether they or any of them had consulted with others to come unto my sermon, for what purpose, by whom they were induced and moved, and how they agreed; and what they did after my said sermon for the impugnation or depraving thereof. Et interrogetur ut supra.

VI. Item, Whether they or any of them have been or be conversant or familiar with any that hath been known, noted, or reputed for a sacramentary, in denying the verity of Christ's true and corporal presence in the sacrament of the altar; and whether he and they detest and abhor and abstain from the company of all such persons as be known, noted, or suspected for sacramentaries in that behalf, and what opinion he and they have with their contests touching the said presence. Et interrogetur ut supra.

VII. Item, Whether they or any of them have wished me, the said bishop, to be deprived or put in prison; and whether they or any of them have reported and said that I shall be deprived or imprisoned, rejoicing thereof; and for what cause they have so wished or reported, or any of their contests. Et interrogetur ut supra.

VIII. Item, Whether they or any of them have been in times past a friar, preacher, minorite, Augustine, or Carmelite, monk, canon, observant, or religious person, professing solemnly poverty, chastity, and obedience, according to the laws, customs, or ordinances of this realm, then used and observed. Et interrogetur ut supra.

IX. Item, Whether they or any of them, being so professed, have been, or be since that time, married to any person; having likewise or otherwise been professed or loose, or been a widower; and how oft they have been married, and whether any of their wives be yet alive. Et interrogetur ut supra.

X. Item, Whether they or any of them have read the commission in this matter, and whether they or any of them do know or think, that the commission, injunctions, articles, and denunciation, do agree together or no: and wherein they think or know discrepancies or diversities to be between them in this behalf. Et interrogetur ut supra.

XI. Item, If they, or any of them do depose, that I have not sincerely and wholly declared as is contained in the second article, let him and every of them be examined, in virtue of their oath, how they do know it, and by what means; declaring whom they think to have knowledge therein with them. Et interrogetur ut supra.

Concerning the second article.

XII. Item, If they or any of them do depose that I have transgressed and offended in the fourth article beginning thus: 'Item, That ye have not declared,' &c. let them and every of them be examined, in virtue of their oath, whether they know that these words following, 'as matins, masses, now said after that sort in this realm,' were and be put in the injunction pretended to be ministered unto me, the said bishop, or no. Et interrogetur ut supra.

Concerning the fourth.

XIII. Item, If they or any of them do depose that I have transgressed and offended touching the fifth article, let them and every of them be examined, in virtue of their oath, whether the injunctions pretended in this behalf were signed with the king's usual signet, or other at all; whether it was sealed with any seal: whether it was subscribed by the lord protector's grace, or any of the privy council: whether it was in full council sitting delivered unto me by the lord protector: whether it was delivered to me, the rest of the king's majesty's privy council there then sitting: whether on the said days as is contained in the fifth article: by whom it was written, when, and where. Et interrogetur ut supra.

Concerning the fifth.

XIV. Item, If they or any of them depose, that I do defend the opinion of the rebels, let them be examined, and every of them, what rebels they be, what is their opinion, and how the law of this realm doth determine therein, declaring by what words and facts I, the said bishop, did speak and do; and at what time and place, and in whose presence such words or acts were spoken or done. Et interrogetur ut supra.

Concern-
seventh.

XV. Item, If they or any of them do depose, that I know, or have heard say credibly, that since the time of the said pretended injunctions, certain persons within my diocese have heard, been at, or celebrated mass or evensong in the Latin tongue, and after the old rite and manner, other than according to the king's majesty's book, let them and every of them be examined, in virtue of his said oath, how they know that I so know, or have heard say; and of the name or names of the party or parties; and of the time and place when, and where it was; and whether any denunciation or detection were, according to the statutes and ordinances of this realm, made unto me or no. Et interrogetur ut supra.

Concerning the ninth.

XVI. Item, If they or any of them do say, that I know or have heard say of such notable adulterers and offences mentioned in the ninth article, let them and every of them be examined, in virtue of his and their oath, what they do know that I do know, or have heard say; and who be the persons; where they dwell; who hath denounced or detected them; and how I could and ought to have cited them and punished them in this behalf. Et interrogetur ut supra.

Concerning the tenth.

XVII. Item, Whether they or any of them do say, that I know certainly now, what Dr. Cox declared in his sermon at Paul's cross, as is deduced in the tenth article: let them be inquired and every of them, in virtue of their oaths, how they can prove it, by whom, and after what sort. Et interrogetur ut supra.

Concern-
eleventh.

XVIII. Item, If they or any of them do say, that I do know or hear certainly of the diversity of the rites of the common service of the church, now set forth, and of the ministers and parsons transgressing therein, let them and every of them, in virtue of their oath, be examined whether there hath been any detection or denunciation made to me thereupon; and how they know or can prove that I have been culpable and negligent herein. Et interrogetur ut supra.

XIX. Item, Whether they or any of them have been spoken unto or solicited herein to testify, and after what sort; by whom, when, and where; and what was their conference and communication therein. Et interrogetur ut supra.

XX. Item, That they and every of them declare and show the true and sufficient cause of their testimony, in all and singular the premises.

After this the judges delegate assigned the bishop to appear again before them upon Wednesday then next ensuing, between the hours of seven and eight of the clock before noon, in the hall of the archbishop's manor of Lambeth, there to show the cause why he should not be declared "pro confesso," upon all the articles whereunto he had not then fully answered, and to see further process done in the matter. *The said bishop of London, being by the said judges delegate, at and in the time of his act and process sped the sixteenth day of September, examined openly, upon certain of the articles aforesaid, answered to them as followeth:

Touching the first, the judges' delegate demanded of him, whether he hath received from the king's majesty by the hand of my lord protector's grace, and other of the king's honourable council in the council-chamber, certain injunctions in writing, beginning, 'By the king,' and ending, 'Forasmuch,' &c. Whereunto the said bishop answereth, that he hath already made a sufficient answer thereunto in writing.

To the second article the said bishop of London saith, that he hath already made a sufficient answer.

Touching the third article, the judges require the said bishop to deliver such notes of his sermon as, he saith, he made; which he promiseth they shall have, if they send for them.

To the fourth article he saith, he hath also answered heretofore.

Touching the fifth, it is answered as afore in the acts.

To the sixth he saith, he hath made a full and sufficient answer already; and because, as the judges said, he doubteth what the opinion of the rebels is, it is now declared unto him by the said judges, that this is their opinion; videlicet, that the king's majesty, before his grace be come to the age of twenty-one years, hath not so full authority to make laws and statutes, as when he cometh to further years; and that his subjects be not bound to obey the laws and statutes made in the said young age, as appeareth by the tenor of the which article proceeding: and they require his answer thereunto. The said bishop answereth: that he is not of the opinion of the rebels mentioned in this article; and saith further, that this may appear by his answer made to the pretended denunciation, and also by his answer to the fifth of their articles objected against him decimo tertio Septembris.*

And so Bonner, still protesting of the nullity and invalidity of all their proceedings, they did, for that present, depart.

In this mean while the commissioners certified the king's majesty and his council, of the bishop's demeanour towards them, and what objections he had made against their proceedings, making doubts and ambiguities, whether, by the tenor of his majesty's commission, the commissioners might proceed not only at the denunciation, but also at their mere office; and also whether they might as well determine as hear the cause. Whereupon his majesty, by advice aforesaid, for the better understanding thereof, did, the 17th of September, send unto the commissioners a full and perfect declaration and interpretation of his will and pleasure in the aforesaid commission, giving them hereby full authority to proceed at their own discretions, as appeareth more at large by the tenor thereof ensuing:

THE FOURTH SESSION<sup>1</sup> AGAINST BONNER, BISHOP OF LONDON,
BEFORE THE KING'S COMMISSIONERS, IN THE GREAT HALL
AT LAMBETH, THE EIGHTEENTH OF SEPTEMBER.

After this declaration being sent down and received from the king, the bishop of London (according to the commissioners' assignment the Monday before) appeared again before them upon Wednesday the 18th of September, in the great hall at Lambeth; where under his wonted protestation, first he declared, that although he had already sufficiently answered all things, yet, further to satisfy the term assigned unto him, to show cause why he ought not to be declared "pro confesso," upon the articles theretofore ministered against him, and to the which he had not fully answered, he had then a matter in writing to exhibit unto them, why he ought not so to be declared, which he read there openly; the copy and words whereof be as follow.

*Matter<sup>2</sup> exhibited up to the Commissioners by Bonner, why he ought not to be declared for cast and convict.

I, Edmund, bishop of London, under protestation heretofore by me made before you, which I have heretofore repeated; and, especially, under protestation of the nullity and invalidity, injustice and iniquity, of your pretended and unlawful process made by you against me; and, especially, against your pretended assignation made by you the last session unto me appearing in your pretended acts: do say, that your said assignation is unavailable, nothing worth in law, unlawful, unjust, and unreasonable; and I, therefore, not bound by the law to obey unto [it], for just and reasonable causes hereafter following. First, it is true, notorious, and manifest, that the said pretended assignation, in words and pronounciation, was made by you sir Thomas Smith, one of the pretended commissioners in this matter, without express consent given unto you by your pretended colleagues in the commission; or, at least, he, as a commissioner, did proceed herein with the rest of the said colleagues, and did indite the acts, prescribing to the actuary or scribe, what he therein should write.

Item, It is likewise notorious and manifest, that the said colleagues did, in your absence, begin to sit as commissioners and judges, by virtue of the said commission pretended to be sent unto you, and began to make process against me, as appeareth in the acts of the first session in this matter; by reason whereof ye ought not by the law to have intermeddled therein otherwise than the law doth suffer you to do; which ye have done indeed naughtily and unlawfully, contrary to justice and good reason, and are unmcet to be commissioner against me in this behalf.

(1) In this session Bonner exhibiteth more matter in writing, why he ought not to be declared 'pro confesso.'

*Edward
VI.*

A. D.
1549.

Item, It is likewise true, notorious and manifest, that the answers being already given by me fully, lawfully, and sufficiently, so far as the law bindeth me, as well to the pretended denunciation in that matter, as also to all and singular articles, that in any wise against me have been objected in this behalf; and nothing at the least wise sufficient and good in law alleged, declared, specified, or apparent to the contrary in any specialty or particularity; by reason whereof I ought not further, without special allegation, declaration, specification, and appearance, to make other or more special answer heerein, no cause in law sufficient and reasonable compelling and enforcing me therunto. I am not by law bound to do further than I have done, referring me as well to my answers given to the said pretended denunciation and articles, as, also, unto the king's ecclesiastical laws, used and observed commonly here within this realm.

Item, It is likewise true, notorious, and manifest, that in all proceedings hitherto ye have proceeded so extraordinarily and unduly in this matter, that ye have confounded all kind of lawful process; sometimes proceeding 'ad denunciandum;' sometimes 'ex officio mero;' sometimes 'ex officio mixto;' contrary to the king's ecclesiastical laws, and contrary also to the commission directed in this behalf; referring me to all the same. And it may be said herein, that hitherto ye have proceeded against me 'summarie,' against the true sense of the word, and proceeded also 'cum strepitu,' but 'sine figura iudicii.'

Item, It is likewise true, notorious, and manifest, that divers of the articles pretended are superfluous and impertinent, not relieving, though they were proved, containing in them untruth and falsity; some also be obscure, general, and uncertain, not canyng certain answers made unto them. And also others be depending of articles being denied, or at the least way qualified; some also captious and deceitful, to bring the answer into a snare; some also containing matter of divers sorts, part whereof is not true, but false; and some also being articles of the law, and such sort that, by the king's ecclesiastical laws, a subject of this realm is not bound to make answer unto them, but lawfully may refuse and deny to do it, by reason of the said just and reasonable causes being in this behalf.

Item, It is likewise true, notorious, and manifest, that ye sir Thomas Smith, when I, Edmund bishop of London, was last with the council in the council-chamber at Whitehall: ye the said sir Thomas, after the departure of the lord protector from the said council, and after the departure of the rest of the lords of the said council, did write yourself certain articles or injunctions, amongst which was that of the king's majesty's minority and his authority in the same, which articles or injunctions ye writ yourself; and afterwards, also, ye copied them upon an altar or table within the said council-chamber; and your self, and none other, did then write the same, and deliver it to me. By reason whereof it cannot be, nor is, true, that which in the commission, denunciation, articles, and other things is deduced and objected against me in this behalf; referring me as well to the tenor of the said commission, denunciation, injunctions, and articles, as also unto my allegations and answers herein made unto the same, remaining in the acts of this cause and matter.*

When these fond and frivolous objections were thus read, the archbishop, seeing his inordinate and intolerable contempt towards them, charged him very sharply, saying thus:

'My lord of London, if I had sitten here only as archbishop of Canterbury, it had been your part to have used yourself more lowly, obediently, and reverently towards me than you have; but, seeing that I, with my colleagues, sit here now as delegates from the king's majesty, I must tell you plain, you have behaved yourself too, too much inordinately. For at every time that we have sitten in commission, you have used such unseemly fashions, without all reverence and obedience, giving taunts and checks as well unto us, with divers of the servants and chaplains, as also unto certain of the ancientest that be here, calling them fools and daws, with such like, as that you have given to the multitude an intolerable example of disobedience. And I assure you, my lord,

*See
Appendix.*

The intolerable contempt and irreverent behaviour of Bonner, reprov'd. The words of the archbishop.

Edward VI. there is you, and one other bishop whom I could name, that have used yourselves so contemptuously and disobediently, as the like I think hath not before been heard of or seen; whereby ye have done much harm.

Bonner's scornful answer.

See Appendix.

At these words the gross bishop (a beast, a man might justly term him) said scornfully to the archbishop, "You show yourself to be a meet judge."

The archbishop, then proceeding, laid to his charge how indiscreetly, the last day in the chapel, he had called all the people woodcocks.

Whereunto he answered, that the last session William Latimer, one of the denouncers, being there present, had practised with the audience, that when he lifted up his hand to them, they should (and did as it were by a token given them) say as he said, and do as he did; as, at one time, upon the lifting up of his hand, they cried, "Nay, nay;" and at another time, "Yea, yea," and laughed they could not tell whereat; with such like fashions.

Vain suspicion of Bonner.

Unto which words Latimer, seeing his vain suspicion, replied, saying, that he lifted not up his hand at any time but only to cause them to hold their peace.

The words of secretary Smith.

Then secretary Smith said to the bishop, that in all his writings and answers that he had hitherto laid in, he would not once acknowledge them as the king's commissioners, but used always protestations, with divers ink-horn and naughty terms, calling them pretended commissioners, pretended delegates, pretended commission, pretended articles, pretended proceedings; so that all things were pretended with him.

All things pretended with Bonner, that made against him. Bonner and the rebels compared.

'Indeed,' said secretary Smith, 'such terms the proctors of churches use, to delay matters for their clients, when they will not have the truth known. But you, my lord, to use us the king's majesty's commissioners with such terms, you do therein very lewdly and naughtily. And I pray you what other thing did the rebels? For when letters or pardons were brought them from the king and his council, they would not credit them, but said they were none of the king's or his council's, but gentlemen's doings, and made under a bush; with such like terms. But now, my lord, because hitherto we cannot make you confess whether, in your sermon that you preached, ye omitted the article touching the king's majesty's authority in his tender age or not, but still have said that ye will not otherwise answer than ye have done, and that ye have already sufficiently answered (with many such delays), so as we can by no means induce you to confess plainly what you did, yea or nay; therefore, I say, to the intent we may come to the truth, we have dilated the matter more at large, and have drawn out other articles whereunto you shall be sworn; and then I trust, you will dally with us no more as you have done: for, although ye make your answers in writing, yet you shall be examined by us, and make your answers by mouth to the same articles; or else you shall do worse. Indeed I do not, as I said, discommend your protestations and terms of law, if it were in a young proctor that would help his client's cause; but in you, it may not be suffered so to use the king's commissioners.'

New articles and injunctions ministered to Bonner.

Bonner assigned the next day to appear.

Then did the delegates minister unto him certain new articles and injunctions, and did there oerate him with a corporal oath in form of law, to make a full and true answer thereunto. The bishop, notwithstanding, still (according to his wonted manner) under his former protestation, protested of the nullity and invalidity of these articles, injunctions, and process, desiring also a copy thereof, with a competent time to answer thereunto. To whom the judges decreed a copy, commanding him to come to his examination to the archbishop the next day at eight of the clock before noon.

Then the commissioners did receive for witness upon these new articles now ministered unto the bishop, sir John Mason, knight, sir Thomas Chalenor, knight, Master William Cecil, Armigel Wade, and William Hunnings, clerks to the king's majesty's council, whom they onerated with a corporal oath in the presence of the bishop, who, still protesting of the nullity of their receiving and swearing, objected against them and their sayings; and therewith, repeating his interrogatories already ministered, said, he had more to minister by to-morrow at eight of the clock.

New witness against him.

The same day and time likewise the bishop exhibited unto the commissioners an information, or rather cavillation, against William Latimer, which also I thought to impart unto the reader.

*The<sup>1</sup> Information given against William Latimer, Priest of Saint Laurence Poultney, by Edmund, Bishop of London, the eighteenth day of September, A. D. 1549.

See Appendix.

In the said act and session, Edmund bishop of London giveth information and saith: that that said William Latimer, priest—tending the good and tranquillity of this realm of England, as he saith, and that the same is very greatly and manifestly hindered and impeached, when that any of the king's majesty's people and subjects do believe or say, that the king's majesty, our sovereign lord, in his minority hath not full power and authority royal, as fully and justly as when his majesty doth come to full and perfect age: and, likewise, that it is so hindered and impeached, when any of the king's majesty's said people and subjects doth believe or say, that the king's said people and subjects are not bound to obey the king's majesty in his said minority—bath, of late, in open audience reported and said, that the said William Latimer hath, with his ears, heard divers persons of this realm, at sundry and divers times, unreverently, inobediently, and not faithfully, speak of the king's majesty—that now is, words in effect and substance as followeth, or such like: 'Tush! the king,' meaning the king of England that now is, 'is but a babe or child: what laws can he make? or what can he do in his minority? Let him have a toast and butter, or bread and milk; and that is more meet for him, than to make laws or statutes to bind us to obey them. We are not bound to obey, till he be past his minority, and come to his full and perfect age.'

And these words were spoken before you, my lord of Canterbury, my lord of Rochester, Master Thomas Smith, and Master William May, by the mouth of the said William Latimer at your last session; and the said William Latimer was neither controlled by any of you for these words ne any of them, ne yet commanded to bring in such persons as had uttered and spoken the said words, but passed in silence: saving that I, the said Edmund, did speak against the said William Latimer in this behalf, telling him that I would detect and denounce hereof. By all which appeareth that the said William Latimer hath long concealed, and not opened the words aforesaid, in such places, and to such persons, as of bounden duty he ought and should; but kept the persons and sayings secret, either not taking this matter of such importance as he pretended, either else unfaithfully and untruly behaving himself towards the king's majesty and his council; worthy, therefore, to be convented and punished, with his aiders and abettors, favourers and councillors.*

These vain cavillations ended, the commissioners for that day finished their session, assigning the bishop to appear in that same place again upon Monday then next following, between the hours of six and nine, in the forenoon, then and there to show a final cause why he should not be declared "pro confesso." And so delivering him a copy of the articles, they departed; the contents whereof ensue:

A new term assigned to Bonner to appear.

Articles and Positions given by the King's Commissioners to the Bishop of London, to be answered by him jointly and severally in every point the second time.

I. That ye were sent for to the lord protector's grace, and the rest of the council, and came thither into the court at Westminster the tenth of August, or some other day of the same month.

II. Item, That at the same time the lord protector and divers other of the king's majesty's privy council sitting in council, ye were called in; and there the said lord protector did, on the king's majesty's behalf, declare unto you divers faults and abuses which were found in you, and gave you strait charge to amend them; adding threatening, that else you should be otherwise looked unto.

III. Item, That the said lord protector's grace did declare unto you, for better admonition and amendment of you, that you should have, from the king's majesty, by his advice and the rest of the privy council, certain articles and injunctions, to observe and follow, given you in writing.

IV. Item, That there and then the said lord protector commanded sir Thomas Smith knight, secretary to the king's majesty, to read a certain paper book of injunctions and articles unto you, the said secretary standing at the council-table's end, and you standing by and hearing the same.

V. Item, That the said lord protector there and then willed certain things in the said book of injunctions to be reformed, as whereas ye were appointed to preach sooner, at your request it was appointed unto you to preach the Sunday three weeks after the date of the said writing.

VI. Item, That in the said articles the lord protector's grace found fault, because an article or commandment unto you set forth and declared of the king's majesty's authority now in his young age and of his laws and statutes in the same time, was omitted; and therefore, either immediately before you came into the council chamber, or you being present and standing by, commanded the said secretary Smith to put it in writing, and annex it to the rest of the articles.

VII. Item, That the said secretary Smith, then and there did, immediately upon commandment, write into the said book or paper, wherein the rest of the articles were written, the said article, namely, You shall also set forth in your sermon, that the authority of our royal power is (as truth it is) of no less authority and force in this our young age, than was that of any of our predecessors, though the same were much elder, as may appear by example of Josias and other young kings in the Scripture; and therefore all our subjects to be no less bound to the obedience of our precepts, laws, and statutes, than if we were of thirty or forty years of age.

VIII. Item, That the lord protector did so deliver you the book or paper, willing, first, the said secretary Smith to amend all things as he had appointed.

IX. Item, That ye then and there did promise to the lord protector's grace, that ye would observe and fulfil all in the said injunctions and articles contained.

X. Item, That all things in the said book putten and mentioned by the said secretary Smith, and the same so read to you by him, and you first agreeing that all that was by him so written was by the lord protector's appointment, the said book was so delivered unto you then and there, by the said secretary Smith in the council chamber.

XI. Item, That you have the said book in your possession, or else know where it is, the true copy whereof in effect is annexed to these articles.

XII. Item, That ye were commanded in the same injunctions to preach the Sunday three weeks after the delivery thereof at Paul's, and there to treat upon certain articles, as is specified in the said book of injunctions, and especially the said article, beginning, 'Ye shall also set forth,' and ending, 'thirty or forty years of age.'

XIII. Item, That for the accomplishment of part of the said injunctions and commandment, you did preach the first day of September last past at Paul's cross.

XIV. Item, That at the said sermon, contrary to your injunctions, ye omitted and left out the said article, beginning, 'Ye shall also set forth in your sermon,' &c., and ending, 'thirty or forty years of age.'

Edward VI.

XV. Ye shall also answer whether ye think and believe that the king's majesty's subjects be bound to obey as well the laws, statutes, proclamations, and other ordinances made now in this young age of the king's majesty, as the laws, statutes, proclamations, and ordinances made by his highness's progenitors.

A. D.

These articles being thus ministered to the said bishop of London, the next day being Thursday and the 19th of September, the forenamed commissioners sat in the archbishop's chamber of presence at Lambeth, attending the coming of the bishop of London; before whom there appeared Robert Johnson, the bishop's registrar, and there did declare unto the commissioners, that the bishop his master could not at that time personally appear before them without great danger of his bodily health, because that he feared to fall into a fever by reason of a cold that he had taken by too much over-watching himself the last night before, whereby he was compelled to keep his bed: nevertheless, if he could without danger of his bodily health, he would appear before them the same day at afternoon. This excuse the judges were content to take in good part. Yet, said master secretary Smith, if he were sick indeed, the excuse was reasonable, and to be allowed; "but," quoth he, "I promise you my lord hath so dallied with us, and used hitherto such delays, that we may mistrust that this is but a feigned excuse: howbeit, upon your faithful declaration, we are content to tarry until one of the clock at afternoon." And so they did, willing Master Johnson to signify then unto them, whether the bishop could appear or not.

See Appendix.

Bonner, for fear of a fever, could not or durst not appear.

At which hour Robert Johnson and Richard Rogers, gentlemen of the bishop's chamber, appeared again before the commissioners, declaring that (for the causes afore alleged) their master could not appear at that time neither. Whereupon master secretary Smith said unto them, Pretendeth again his fever.

'My lord of London your master hath used us very homely, and sought delays hitherto; and now, perhaps, perceiving these last articles to touch the quick, and therefore loath to come to his answer, he feigneth himself sick. But, because he shall not so deceive us any more, we will send the knight marshal unto him, willing him, if he be sick indeed, to let him alone, for that is a reasonable excuse; but, if he be not sick, then to bring him forthwith to us: for I promise you he shall not use us as he hath done; we will not take it at his hands. And, therefore, master Johnson (said he), you do the part of a trusty servant as becometh you; but it is also your part to show my lord his stubborn heart and disobedience, which doth him more harm than he is aware of. What! thinketh he to stand with a king in his own realm? Is this the part of a subject? Nay, I ween we shall have a new Thomas Becket. Let him take heed; for if he play these parts, he may fortune to be made shorter by the head. He may appeal if he think good; but whither? To the bishop of Rome? So he may help himself forwards. I am sure he cannot appeal but to the same king, who hath made us his judges, and to the bench of his council; and how they will take this matter when they hear of it, I doubt not. He would make men believe, that he were called before us for preaching his opinion of the sacrament, wherein I assure you he did both falsely and naughtily; yea and lewdly; and more than became him; and more than he had in commandment to do; for he was not willed to speak of that matter, and perhaps he may hear more of that hereafter: but yet we will lay no such thing to his charge, and therefore we will not have him to delay us as he doth.'

His excuse not well taken by the commissioners.

A good admonition sent to Bonner by Smith.

This ended, the delegates notwithstanding decreed to tarry again for him until two of the clock at afternoon the next day, being Friday, and the 20th of September.

Appendix.

* Interrogatories<sup>1</sup> deduced and ministered by Bonner, the second time, against the Witnesses aforementioned and assigned; for them to be deposed upon by the Commissioners.

I. First, If they, or any of them, depose upon the first article and position, thus beginning: 'That ye were sent,' &c., and ending thus: 'of the same month: let them, in virtue of their oath, be examined, whether that they know or believe surely, that that writing of articles and injunctions, which sir Thomas Smith knight, one of the principal secretaries to the king's majesty, saith, was delivered by the hands of the lord protector's grace in the council-chamber, to me the bishop of London, had, amongst other things, this clause following: 'Given at our palace at Westminster the seventh day of August, in the third year of our reign.' And whether they know or believe, that there were any other articles and injunctions besides that writing bearing the said date; and, if they say so, let them be inquired and examined upon their oath, of the whole tenor thereof, and every part and parcel of the same, with the date thereof, seal, subscription, sign, and other circumstances expedient for knowledge in this behalf: and let them give a sufficient cause of their knowledge herein. Et interrogetur conjunctim, divisim, et de quolibet.

II. Item, Whether they, or any of them, do know or credibly have heard say, that I, the said bishop, received from the king's majesty, by the hands of the lord protector's grace, sitting in the council-chamber at council with the rest of the lords of the council the tenth of August, certain injunctions to be done and followed by me the said bishop, and articles by me to be preached. Et, &c.

III. Item, In case they, or any of them, do depose upon the contents of the second article, beginning thus: 'Item, that at,' &c.; and ending thus, 'I looked unto:' let them be examined in virtue of their oath, if they know certainly the time touched in the said article, and whether it be of the seventh of August or of the tenth thereof; or of what other special time, with causes of their knowledge therein; and whether the declaration touched in the said article was by mouth, or in writing; and of the tenor thereof: with declaration of the former words in that behalf, and who were present thereat. Et, &c.

IV. Item, In case they, or any of them, do depose upon the third article, let them in virtue of their oath be examined of the time and place thereof, and what should be the articles and injunctions in every part; the date thereof, and causes of their knowledge therein, and who and how many were there present. Et, &c.

V. Item, In case they, or any of them, do depose upon the contents of the fourth article, let them be examined as before, whether that pretended paper or book of instructions and articles mentioned in the said article was the selfsame in all points, that is spoken of in the first interrogatory; and whether the said paper or book was signed with the king's majesty's hand, or sealed with any his grace's seal or signet, or subscribed with any of the hands of the king's majesty's council; and let them give cause of their knowledge, and who and how many were present thereat, and of the time.

VI. Item, In case they, or any of them, do depose upon the contents of the fifth article, let them and every of them be interrogated and examined in virtue of their oath, whether the said book was delivered to me the said bishop, or not; and of the time thereof, with causes of their knowledge; and how many and who were present thereat, and of the special place wherein it was done.

VII. Item, In case they, or any of them, do depose upon the contents of the sixth article, let them be examined as before, whether any such article was written and delivered to me, the council sitting within the council-chamber; and of the time thereof, with causes of their knowledge; and how many and who were present thereat, and of the special place wherein it was done.

(1) For these interrogatories see Edition 1563, pp. 712, 713.—Ed.

VIII. Item, In case they, or any of them, do depose upon the seventh article, let them, in virtue of their oath, be examined of the special time and place; and whether, at the delivery thereof, the lord protector or the rest of the council were then present, or not; with the causes of their knowledge. Edward VI.

IX. Item, If they, or any of them, do depose upon the contents of the eighth article, let them be examined as before, whether the lord protector or the rest of the council were present in the council-chamber, or departed before master secretary Smith had the article touched in the seventh article before expressed, beginning thus: 'Item, that the said secretary,' &c.; and ending thus, 'forty years of age.'

X. Item, Let them, and every of them, in virtue of their oath, be examined whether I, the said bishop, at any time that motion was made either of sermon to be made by me, either else of articles to be declared by me, did only excuse mine inability for lack of exercise: but also added, that in case I should be enforced by the council to preach or declare, I would do the best I could, without further promises, or taking upon me to do.

XI. Item, If they, or any of them, do depose upon the tenth article, let them be examined in virtue of their oath, whether the things mentioned in the said article were put into the book and amended, the lord protector and the rest of the council being present or absent; and who and how many were then present, with the causes of their knowledge therein.

XII. Item, If they, or any of them, do depose upon the eleventh article, let them be examined in virtue of their oath, whether they know, think, or believe, that that book which is in my possession, or else known where it is, be the very true book that was delivered in this behalf unto me; and whether they know, think, or believe, that the copy annexed to the articles be a true copy thereof, in all words and sentences agreeable unto the same; giving causes of their knowledge therein.

XIII. Item, If they, or any of them, depose upon the contents of the twelfth article, let them be examined in virtue of their oath, by whom I was so commanded, as in the article is contained; by what words, in what place, before whom, in writing or by mouth, at what time and after what sort; giving causes of their knowledge therein.

XIV. Item, If they, or any of them, do depose upon the contents of the thirteenth article, let them be examined as before, whether they or any of them did hear me preach; when came they to my preaching; where did they stand; what words and sentences they then heard; who was with them there as contests; with cause of their knowledge; and how many of their acquaintance were then present.

XV. Item, If they, or any of them, do depose upon the contents of the fourteenth article, let them be examined, in virtue of their oath, how and by what means they know it was so; and whether of a malicious set purpose, or else by forgetfulness.

XVI. Item, If they, or any of them, do depose upon the fifteenth and last article, let them be examined as before, whether they be lawyers or no; specially whether they know certainly the laws, statutes, and ordinances of this realm in this behalf or no; giving sufficient causes of their knowledge in this behalf.

XVII. Item, Touching Master Cicell, one of the pretended wives, let him be examined in virtue of his oath, whether the eighteenth day of September 1549, in open audience in the court kept in the Great Hall at Lambeth, he, the said Master Cecill, did not openly, and with vehemence, report and say, that I, the bishop of London, was the most inobedient and wilful that he had seen or heard of, and one that most evil behaved himself to the commissioners; with other words unseemly then spoken: specifying the said words, and to whom they were spoken; and how many and who answered unto them, and what they said.*

THE FIFTH ACTION OR PROCESS THE TWENTIETH OF SEPTEMBER, AGAINST BONNER BISHOP OF LONDON, BEFORE THE KING'S COMMISSIONERS.

At which day and time the bishop appeared himself personally before them in the same Chamber of Presence; where first he did exhibit his answers unto the last articles ministered unto him the eighteenth of September; the contents whereof hereunder follow :

The Answer of the said Bishop of London made unto the Articles ministered unto him the second time.

The answers of me, Edmund bishop of London, under mine accustomed protestation given unto the articles of late ministered and exhibited against me here in this court; with special protestation also, that I do not intend in any wise to make answer to any of the said articles otherwise than the law of this realm doth bind me to do, nor to speak or say contrary to any thing that in my former answers I have said or done; and that if it so chance me to do, it is not, nor shall it be, with my good will or full consent; and that so soon as I shall perceive it, I intend to revoke it, and so now as then, and then as now, do so in that case revoke, to all honest and lawful purposes.

To the first article I do answer and say, that there was a messenger, whose name I know not, that came unto me to Fulham, as I now remember, but I do not remember the day thereof; and he said that my lord protector's grace required me to come by and by to speak with him. And thereupon, having made the said messenger to break his fast, I repaired to the court at Westminster; but not upon the tenth day of August, but some other day of the said month.

To the second article I do say, that it is obscure, uncertain, and over general, especially in those words 'at the same time,' which may be referred to the tenth of August, and then answer already is made thereunto; and it may be referred to some other day of the said month of August, either before the tenth of August, or after. And because it remaineth undeclared, I am not bound in law to answer unto it, neither yet to these words and sentences in the said article, to wit, 'then, and there,' for they, without declaration, are uncertain, obscure, and general; and I, before the specification and declaration thereof, not bound herein to make an answer, especially having already made full and sufficient answer in this matter, according to the commission, as I do take it, and according unto the law; which also willett, that if a certain answer be looked for, the position and article must before be certain.

He answereth
in a general.

To the third, fourth, fifth, sixth, seventh, eighth, ninth, tenth, eleventh, twelfth, thirteenth, and fourteenth articles, he answereth all after one manner and sort, as thus: That it doth depend on the articles, to which for causes aforesaid, he saith, he is not bound in law to make answer, especially having already made. Saving that in the sixth he addeth thereunto, that he at no time heard the lord protector find fault, nor commanded, as is deduced in the said article, so far as he doth find. Also saving the seventh article, where he addeth, 'Nevertheless confessing and acknowledging, with heart and mouth, the king's majesty's authority and regal power and minority, as well and full as in his majority.'

Also saving the eighth, ninth, tenth, and eleventh articles, where he addeth, 'As they be deduced, they are not true; as appeareth in conferring one with another.'

To the twelfth and fourteenth articles, he addeth, 'As they be deduced, they are not true;' confessing, nevertheless, the king's majesty's authority and power regal, as before is expressed.

To the fifteenth article he answereth and saith, that it is a position in law, and that yet both now and heretofore he hath made answer thereunto in effect and substance, as appeareth in his former answers, and so shall do always according to the law and his bounden duty, acknowledging, as he hath already done, the king's majesty's regal power in his minority, to be no less than in his majority; and the subjects bound to obey unto his grace, his laws, statutes, and ordinances, and his said authority, as well in his minority as in his majority; not allowing, but expressly condemning the opinion of all rebels holding the contrary.

After this, perceiving that master secretary Smith was somewhat more quick with him than others of the commissioners, and that he would not suffer him any longer to dally out the matter with his vain quiddities and subtleties in law, but ever earnestly urged him to go directly to his matter, and therewithal sometimes sharply rebuking him for his evil and stubborn behaviour towards them; Bonner, to deface his authority (as he thought), did also then exhibit in writing a recusation of the secretary's judgment against him; the form and manner whereof, as he exhibited it unto the judges, I thought here also to exhibit unto the reader as hereunder followeth :

Edward VI.

A. D. 1549.

Bonner refuseth secretary Smith to be his judge.

The Recusation of the Judgment of Sir Thomas Smith, made by the Bishop of London the first time. See Appendix.

In the name of God, Amen. Forasmuch as equity, natural reason, and all good laws, do require that judges shall be of that integrity, wisdom, circumspection, learning, and indifferency, that, exercising the office and room of a judge, they may and shall do it without hatred, malice, or grudge against any person convented or called before them; uprightly, sincerely, and duly executing and doing their office unto them in any wise committed: and forasmuch also as all judgments and process ought to have their due course, and proceed without suspicion or corruption in any wise: and finally, forasmuch as very dangerous it is to appear and make defence before an incompetent judge, who commonly and accustomedly, of private and unlawful corrupt affection to the one side, and for malice, hatred, and envy borne against the other side, rather serveth his carnal, corrupt, and wilful appetite, than by any thing else is moved to obedience and keeping of good order, law, or reason, touching him that is convented and compelled to make answer against his will: I therefore, Edmund bishop of London, having perceived and felt by all the sayings, proceedings, and doings of you sir Thomas Smith, knight, one of the two principal secretaries to the king's majesty, in this matter attempted and moved against me, that ye have been, and yet continually are, a notorious and manifest enemy of me the said Edmund, and much offended that I should in any wise allege and say, or use any such things for my most defence, as the law giveth me license and liberty to do; yea, hearing most favourably and effectually my denouncers and enemies with both ears in any thing that they shall allege, purpose, attempt, or do against me, though their persons in law are not in any wise to be heard or admitted, nor yet their sayings true; and not hearing me so much as with one ear in my lawful sayings and doings in this behalf; but, contrariwise, opening your mouth at large, ye have sundry times, against good wisdom and reason, outraged in words and deeds against me the said Edmund, saying, among other words: 'that I did as thieves, murderers, and traitors are wont to do, being myself (as ye untruly did say), inwardly indeed culpable; and yet outwardly otherwise unable to defend the matter against me, but only by taking exceptions, and making frivolous allegations against my judges and commissioners; and that I have been and am as sturdy, wilful, and disobedient, as may be in your judgment and opinion, maintaining and upholding the rebels and their opinions; and that I shall answer by mouth, or else smart and do worse; or else ye will send me to the Tower, there to sit and be joined with Ket and Humphrey Arundel the rebels:' over and besides divers other threatenings and comminatory words by you pronounced and uttered unseemly, and far unmeet to proceed out of the mouth of you, that are in such room and place as ye be in.

Causes why he refused secretary Smith.

Bonner layeth exceptions against him.

And moreover, increasing your malice, evil will, and grudge borne against me, ye have, amongst other things, untruly surmised, written, alleged, and said, that a certain book of articles and injunctions by the lord protector's grace in the full council, after a certain prescribed fashion and form in the denunciation, commission, and articles which, de facto, were induced, brought in, and objected against me, was delivered unto me: and, moreover, of an evil will and ungodly intent and purpose, contrary to the truth, ye have withdrawn, added, altered, and qualified divers things in the same, otherwise than they were spoken and done; and yet ye are not ashamed to allege, write, and say, that all is true, and one consonant and agreeable in all points with the other,

whereas indeed it is not so.<sup>1</sup> And yet have further, de facto, against the law, and against the commission to you directed, and against my just and lawful allegations and sayings, proceeded unlawfully and unjustly against me, attempting many things against me unlawfully and unjustly, as appeareth in the acts of this matter, to the which I do refer me so far forth as they make for me, and be expedient by me and for me to be alleged and referred unto yourself also unlawfully and unjustly, de facto, with your colleagues; the which, without you had begun the said matters, proceeding where by the law ye so ought not to have done indeed, but abstained therefrom, as heretofore sundry times I have alleged, appearing in the acts of this court; I do, upon these just and reasonable causes, according to the order of the king's majesty's ecclesiastical laws, refuse, decline, and recuse you the said sir Thomas Smith, as an incompetent, unmeet, and suspect judge, against me in this behalf; and decline your pretended jurisdiction in this matter for causes aforesaid, desiring nothing but justice, and offering myself prompt and ready to prove them as far as I am bound, and according to the order of the king's majesty's ecclesiastical laws of this realm in this behalf, as time, place, and otherwise shall require.

of secre-

Smith to Bonner.
appendix.

This recusation ended, the secretary told him plain, that, notwithstanding, he would proceed in his commission, and would be still his judge until he were otherwise inhibited; and said unto him further, "My lord! whereas you say in your recusation, that I said that you did like thieves, murderers, and traitors; indeed I said it, and may and will so say again, since we perceive it by your doings."

Bonner in a pelting
chafe.

Whereupon the bishop in a great and stout rage replied, saying, "Well, sir! because you sit here by virtue of the king's commission, and for that ye be secretary to his majesty, and also one of his highness's council, I must and do honour and reverence you; but as you be but sir Thomas Smith, and say as ye have said, that I do like thieves, murderers, and traitors, I say ye lie upon me, and in that case I defie you; and do what ye can to me, I fear you not, and therefore, 'quod facis, fac citius.'"

Whereat the archbishop with the other commissioners said unto him, that for such his unreverent behaviour he was worthy imprisonment.

Then the bishop, in more mad fury than before, said again unto him, "A God's name, ye may do de facto, send me whither ye will, and I must obey you therein; and so will, except ye send me to the devil; for thither I will not go for you.<sup>2</sup> Three things I have; to wit, a small portion of goods, a poor carcass, and mine own soul: the two first ye may take (though unjustly) to you; but as for my soul, ye get not, "Quia anima mea in manibus meis semper."<sup>3</sup>

"Well," said the secretary, "then ye shall know that there is a king."

"Yea, sir," saith the bishop, "but that is not you; neither, I am sure, will you take it upon you."

"No, sir," said again the secretary, "but we will make you know who it is." And with that the commissioners commanded the bishop and all the rest to depart the chamber, until they called for him again.

Now, in the mean while that the commissioners were in consultation, the bishop with Gilbert Bourn his chaplain, Robert Warrington his commissary, and Robert Johnson his registrar, were tarrying in a void quadrant-place before the door of the same chamber; where the bishop, leaning on a cupboard, and seeing his chaplains very sad, said unto them in effect as followeth :

‘Sirs, what mean you? Why show you yourselves to be so sad and heavy in mind, as appeareth to me by your outward gestures and countenances? I would wish you, and I require you, to be as merry as I am (laying therewith his hand upon his breast); for, afore God, I am not sad or heavy, but merry and of good comfort; and am right glad and joyful of this my trouble, which is for God’s cause; and it grieveth me nothing at all. But the great matter that grieveth me and pierceth my heart, is, for that this Hooper and such other vile heretics and beasts, be suffered and licensed to preach at Paul’s cross, and in other places within my diocese and cure, most detestably preaching and railing at the blessed sacrament of the altar, and denying the verity and presence of Christ’s true body and blood to be there: and so infect and betray my flock. But, I say, it is there in very deed, and in that opinion I will live and die, and am ready to suffer death for the same. Wherefore ye, being christian men, I do require you, and also charge and command you, in the name of God, and on his behalf, as ye will answer him for the contrary, that ye go to the mayor of London, and to his brethren the aldermen, praying and also requiring them earnestly, in God’s name and mine, and for mine own discharge on that behalf, that from henceforth, when any such detestable and abominable preachers, and especially those who hold opinion against the blessed sacrament of the altar, do come to preach unto them, they forthwith depart out of their presence, and do not hear them; lest that they, tarrying with such preachers, should not only hurt themselves in receiving their poisoned doctrine, but also give a visage to the encouragement of others, who thereby might take an occasion to think and believe, that their erroneous and damnable doctrine is true and good: and this eftsoons I require and command you to do.’

Edward VI.

1549.

Bonner’s talk to his chaplains in the quadrant-place, before the chamber of presence at Lambeth.

Here Bonner’s obedient heart bursteth out. Bonner’s popish message and charge to the lord mayor and aldermen.

And then turning himself about, and beholding two of the archbishop’s gentlemen, who in the same place kept the chamber-door where the commissioners were in consultation, and perceiving that they had heard all his talk, he spake unto them also and said :

‘And, sirs, ye be my lord of Canterbury’s gentlemen; I know ye very well; and therefore I also require and charge you, in God’s behalf, and in his name, that ye do the like, for your parts, in places where you shall chance to see and hear such corrupt and erroneous preachers; and also advertise my lord your master of the same, and of these my sayings, that I have now spoken here before you, as ye are christian men, and shall answer before God for the contrary.’

Bonner’s trifling charge to the archbishop’s gentlemen.

With this the commissioners called for the bishop again, who did read unto them an instrument, containing a provocation to the king, which he made in manner and form here following :

See Appendix.

The first Appellation intimated by Edmund Bonner, Bishop of London.

In the name of God, Amen. It shall appear to all men by this public instrument that A. D. 1549, the 20th day of September, the third year of the reign of our most high and renowned prince Edward the Sixth,<sup>1</sup> by the grace of God king of England, France, and Ireland, defender of the faith, and in earth the supreme head of the church of England and Ireland, in a chamber within the palace of the said bishop, situated in London, and in the presence of me the public notary, and of the witnesses hereafter named, the aforesaid bishop did personally appear, and there did show forth in writing a certain protestation and appellation, the tenor whereof ensueth :

‘In the name of God, Amen. I, Edmund bishop of London, say, allege, and propound, before you being a public notary, and these credible witnesses here present, that although I, the aforesaid Edmund, have attained the bishopric aforesaid by the benevolence of the prince of famous memory king Henry the Eighth, and was lawfully elected and translated to the same, with its rights and appurtenances, and have of a long time possessed peaceably and quietly the same, and presently do possess, being taken as bishop and lawful possessor of the said bishopric, and am lawfully called, taken, and reputed notoriously and publicly; and, moreover, do keep residence and hospitality in the same, according to the order, state, person, and dignity, and as the revenues of the same would permit; and have exercised and done all things appertaining to my pastoral office, as the laws do require, as hereafter I trust by God's grace to do and observe; a man of good name and fame, neither suspended, excommunicated, nor interdicted, neither convicted of any notable crime or fact, always obeying readily the commandment of the church, and other my superiors in all lawful causes; nevertheless, fearing upon certain probable causes, likely conjectures, threatenings, and assertions of certain injurious men my enemies, or at the least, such as little favour me, that great damage may come to me hereafter about the premises or part of them; and lest any man by any authority, commandment, denunciation, inquisition, office, or at the request of any person or persons, may attempt prejudice or hurt to me or my said dignity, either by my excommunication, interdiction, sequestration, spoiling, vexing and perturbing by any manner of means; do appeal unto the most high and mighty prince our sovereign lord Edward the Sixth, by the grace of God king of England, France, &c., and in these my writings do provoke and appeal to his regal majesty. I do also require apostles,<sup>1</sup> so much as in this case they are to be required, the first, second, and third time, earnestly, more earnestly, and most earnestly of all, submitting myself unto the protection, tuition, and defence of my aforesaid most dread sovereign lord, for the safeguard of me, my dignity and title, and possession in the premises, and to all that will cleave to me in this behalf. I do also protest, that I will be contented to correct, reform, and amend this my present protestation, and to the same to add, to take away, and to bring the same into the best form and state that may be devised by the counsel of learned men, or as the case shall require; and the same to intimate according to time and place, and the order of the law, and still shall require.'

Upon all the which things the aforesaid Edmund, bishop of London, did require the public notary hereunder written to make unto him, and the witnesses hereafter named, one, two, or more copies of this protestation.

These things were done the year, day, and time above written, there being present Gilbert Bourn, bachelor of divinity, John Harpsfield and Robert Colen, masters of arts, John Wakeling and Richard Rogers, learned men; being of the diocese of Worcester, Westminster, Coventry, Lichfield, and Gloucester, and specially requested to be witnesses of the same. And I, Frances Harward, of the diocese of Worcester, and public notary by the king's regal authority, forasmuch as I was present when the foresaid protestation, appellation, and other the premises were done, the year of our Lord, the year of the reign of the king, the day of the month and place aforesaid, the witnesses above named being present, and forasmuch as I did enact the same, therefore to this present public instrument, written faithfully with mine own hand, I have put to my mark, being specially requested unto the same.

Which thing after he had read, he did, under his protestation, first intimate unto the archbishop, the bishop of Rochester, and Dr. May, and then protesting also not to recede from his recusation, did likewise intimate the same unto Master Secretary Smith, requiring the registrar to make an instrument as well thereupon, as also upon his recusation, with witness to testify the same.

Then the delegates did again proceed to the examination of the last answers, and finding the same imperfect, they demanded of him

Bonner requireth these things to be entered in register.

(according to the first article), what special day of August he was sent for by the lord protector? To whom he obstinately answered, that he was not bound to make other answer than he had already made, unless they did put their articles more certain: neither would he otherwise answer as long as master secretary Smith was there present, whom he had before recused, and therefore would not recede from his recusation.

Edward VI.

A. D. 1549.

The secretary, seeing him so wilful and perverse, said sharply unto him, "My lord! come off, and make a full and perfect answer unto these articles, or else we will take other order with you to your pain."

See Appendix.

"In faith, sir," then said the bishop again, "I have thought ye had been learned; but now, before God, I perceive well that either ye be not learned indeed, or else ye have forgotten it. for I have so often answered lawfully and sufficiently, and have so often showed causes sufficient and reasonable, why thereunto I ought not by law to be compelled (you showing nothing to the contrary, but sensuality and will), that I must needs judge that you are too, too ignorant herein."

"Well," said Master Secretary, "ye will not then otherwise answer?"

"No," said the bishop, "except the law compel me."

Then said the secretary, "Call for the knight-marshal, that he may be had to ward."

With that all the rest of the commissioners charged the bishop, that he had at that time sundry ways very outrageously and irreverently behaved himself towards them sitting on the king's majesty's commission, and especially towards sir Thomas Smith, his grace's secretary; and therefore, and for divers other contumelious words which he had spoken, they declared they would commit him to the Marshalsea.

Bonner commanded to the Marshalsea.

By this time the marshal's deputy came before them, whom Master Secretary commanded to take the bishop as prisoner, and so to keep him, that no man might come unto him; for if he did, he should sit by him himself.

When the secretary had ended his talk, the bishop said unto him, "Well, sir, it might have become you right well, that my lord's grace here present, being first in commission, and your better, should have done it."

Then the commissioners, assigning him to be brought before them on Monday next before noon, between seven and nine of the clock in the hall of that place, there to make full answer to these last articles, or else to show cause why he should not be declared "pro confesso," did, for that present, break up that session.

Now as the bishop was departing with the under-marshal, he in a great fury turned himself again toward the commissioners, and said to sir Thomas Smith, "Sir, whereas ye have committed me to prison, ye shall understand that I will require no favour at your hands, but shall willingly suffer what shall be put unto me, as bolts on my heels, yea, and if ye will, iron about my middle, or where ye will."

Bonner's great heart could not choose, but he must needs utter his stomach.

Then departing again, he yet returned once more, and foaming out his poison, said unto the archbishop; "Well, my lord! I am sorry that I, being a bishop, am thus handled at your grace's hand;

Edward VI. but more sorry that ye suffer abominable heretics to practise as they do in London and elsewhere, infecting and disquieting the king's liege people. And therefore I do require you, as you will answer to God and the king, that ye will henceforth abstain thus to do: for if you do not, I will accuse you before God and the king's majesty; answer to it as well as ye can." And so he departed, using many reproachful words against sundry of the common people, who stood and spake to him by the way as he went.

THE SIXTH ACTION OR PROCESS UPON MONDAY THE TWENTY-THIRD OF SEPTEMBER, HAD AGAINST BONNER, BISHOP OF LONDON, BEFORE THE COMMISSIONERS, IN THE GREAT HALL AT LAMBETH.

It was assigned, as ye heard, in the fourth act prosecuted the 18th day of September, that upon Monday then next following, being the 23d of the same month, the bishop should again appear before the commissioners within the great hall at Lambeth, then to show a final cause why he should not be declared "pro confesso," upon all the articles whereunto he had not fully answered.

A general recusation of Bonner against all the commissioners.

According to which assignment, the same 23d day of September, the bishop was brought before them by the under-marshal (to whom for his disobedient and obstinate behaviour he was before that time committed), and there did first declare unto them, that his appearance at that time and place was not voluntary, but coerced; for that he was against his will brought thither by the keeper of the Marshalsea; and therewithal also, under his former protestation, recusation, and appeal, did then again intimate a general recusation of all the commissioners, alleging in the same, that because the archbishop, with all his colleagues, had neither observed the order of their commission, nor yet proceeded against him after any laudable or good fashion of judgment, but, contrariwise, had sundry times, as well in his absence as in his presence, attempted many things unlawfully against his person, dignity, and state, especially in committing him to strait prison, and yet commanding him to make answer: and further, because that he, with the rest, had proceeded in commission with sir Thomas Smith knight, supporting and maintaining all his evil doings (notwithstanding that he the said bishop had before justly recused and declined from him), he, therefore, did also there refuse and decline from the judgment of the said archbishop and his colleagues, and did except against their jurisdiction as suspect, and they, thereby, unmeet persons to proceed against him. Therefore, according to his former appeal, he intended to submit himself under the tuition, protection, and defence of the king's majesty; for whose honour and reverence' sake (he said) they ought not to proceed any further against him, but quietly suffer him to use the benefit of all the recusations, provocations and other lawful remedies before alleged, with other superfluous words, at large to be read and seen, as followeth.

He still sticketh to his former protestation.

The Second Recusation made by Edmund Bonner, bishop of London.

In the name of God. Amen. Forasmuch as both natural reason and all good policies of laws, especially of this realm of England, do admit and suffer him that is convented before an incompetent and suspect judge, to refuse him and to decline his jurisdiction, inasmuch as the law and reason on the one side willeth process to run uprightly and justly, and that on the other side corruption and malice earnestly labour to the contrary, and need therefore to be bridled; and because you, my lord of Canterbury, with your colleagues in this behalf (deputed as ye say commissioners against me), neither have observed your said commission, neither yet proceeded hitherto against me after any laudable, lawful, or any good fashion of judgment; but, contrariwise, contrary to your commission, and against the law, good reason, and order, have, at sundry times and in sundry acts, attempted and done many things against me unlawfully, unseemly, and unjustly, and suffer the like to be attempted and done by others, not reforming and amending the same, as appeareth in divers and sundry things remaining in your Acts:

And moreover, because you, my said lord, with your said colleagues, have (both in mine absence, being let with just causes of impediment, which, according to the laws of this realm, I have fully alleged, and very sufficiently and justly proved, according to the order of the king's ecclesiastical laws), injuriously, and much to the hinderance of my name, person, title, dignity, and state, and also otherwise, especially in my presence; against all laws, good order, and reason, without good cause or ground attempted and done many things against me, especially touching mine imprisonment; sending me to strait ward, and yet commanding me to make answer, as appeareth in your unlawful acts:

I, for these causes, and also for that ye my said lord and your said colleagues, proceeding with sir Thomas Smith knight (whom upon just and lawful causes I have refused, recused, and declined), have favoured, yea maintained, supported, and borne him in his unlawful and evil doings, do also refuse, recuse and decline you my said lord, with the rest of your said colleagues agreeing and joining with you; and do except against your proceedings, doings and jurisdiction as suspect, and thereby unmeet persons to proceed herein against me.

And further, I do allege, that having provoked to the king's most excellent majesty, as appeareth by the tenor of my provocation remaining in your Acts, whereunto I do protest that I intend to adhere and cleave, submitting myself unto the tuition, protection, and defence of his said majesty in this behalf, ye in any wise ought not (if ye regard the person and authority of his grace's royal power, as ye ought to do) to proceed herein against me; especially for the honour and reverence ye ought to have unto his majesty in this behalf. And because it appeareth that ye do not duly and circumspectly consider the same, as ye ought to do, but more and more do grieve me; that not considered, I both here to all purposes repeat my former recusation, provocation, and all other remedies that heretofore I have used and mentioned in your said acts; and also do, by these presents, refuse, recuse, and decline you my said lord, and your said colleagues, and your jurisdiction, upon causes aforesaid, offering myself prompt and ready to prove all the same, before an arbiter and arbiters, according to the tenor and form of the law herein to be chosen, requiring you all, for that honour and reverence ye ought to bear to our said sovereign lord, and his laws allowed and approved in this behalf, that ye do not attempt or do, nor yet suffer to be attempted or done, any thing in any wise against me, or unto my prejudice; but suffer me to use and enjoy the benefit of my said former, and this, recusation, provocation, allegation, and other lawful remedies mentioned in your said acts. And in case ye do de facto, where ye ought not de jure, attempt, or suffer any thing to be attempted or done against me in any wise herein, I protest herewith, and hereby, of my great grief and hurt in that behalf; and that not only I do intend to appeal from you, but also, according to the king's ecclesiastical laws, to accuse and complain upon you, as justly and truly I both may and ought to do.

Notwithstanding these recusations, and former appellations, the archbishop with the rest told him plain, that they would be still his judges, and proceed against him according to the king's commission, until they did receive a supersedeas, which if he did obtain, they would gladly obey.

Another appellation of Bonner to the king.

Then the bishop, seeing that they would still proceed against him, did there likewise intimate another appellation unto the king's majesty, expressing therein in effect no other matter, but such as is already alleged in the two former recusations and appeals; saving that he requireth that letters dimissory or appellatory might be given him according to the law, and that for his better safeguard he did submit himself under the protection of the king.

*The<sup>1</sup> Second Appeal made and put in by the Bishop of London.

In this appeal he beginneth: 'In the name of God, Amen.' Then, first, he showeth therein, by what authority, and for what causes, he may lawfully make his appeal for his defence. Secondly, he showeth to my lord of Canterbury, and to his other colleagues, expressed in the said commission, how that against law, order, honesty, reason, yea and against the tenor of their commission, they have unjustly, unseemly, unreverently, and ungodly, grieved, evil-handled, and endamaged him, as well in sending for him after such sort as they did, as also in their unlawful and ungodly proceeding against him. And especially of the outrageous and uncharitable behaviour of sir Thomas Smith, secretary to the king's majesty; 'who,' saith Bonner, 'as exempt from law and reason, saith, He will follow his will therein, and not the law.' And thereof in complaining to the archbishop of Canterbury, and the rest of the commissioners in his appeal, he saith, 'They ought not so to do, especially at the denunciation and promotion of two vile famous sacramentaries.'

In consideration whereof he sheweth he hath a just and lawful remedy granted by the laws of the realm, especially a recusation and provocation, which he had exhibited, and which remained in the Acts of their Court,<sup>2</sup> unto the which he referred himself; which, he saith, had not been duly considered of their parts: but they had proceeded and done contrary, in making him prisoner in his own house, where he had good cause to be absent there-from by the laws of this realm; and also in sending him to the Marshalsea, where they could not nor ought not so to have done, after his recusation and provocation duly and lawfully made from them to the king's majesty; and there he calleth him 'supreme head.'

And further he saith, because he was much damnified and grieved at their unjust and unlawful doings and proceedings against him, he therefore refused and recused them as before he had done, and did appeal to his sovereign lord king Edward VI.; and there he confesseth him again 'supreme head' of the church.

After this, again, in this appeal he accuseth them of their unjust doings, and namely sir Thomas Smith knight; who, contrary to the law, notwithstanding his recusation, provocation, and allegations against them, have appointed him a term to show cause why he ought not to be taken 'pro confesso.' And therein he doth ask and desire, first, second, and third, yea, instantly, more and most instantly, letters dimissory, appellatory libels, or Apostles, to be given him according to order of law, submitting himself and his whole cause and causes, goods, dignity, state, and title, unto the protection and defence of the king's majesty, according to law and custom in that behalf: unto which appeal, he saith, he will adhere, join, and cleave, and prosecute it to all purposes thereof profitable for him in that behalf, according to the law, and not to go there-from.

Further he saith, that the time of his first appeal remaineth unto him yet: and therefore, for that they are suspect judges for causes aforesaid, he maketh a new appeal; and therein intimateth his said recusation again with this present appeal, to the intente they should forbear to do him further wrong, out of respect to the king's grace; unto whom he maketh his appeal, that, being delivered from them, he might prosecute his said recusation and appeal, as appertaineth and to the law is agreeable.<sup>3</sup>*

The commissioners for all this stuck still unto their commission, and would not in any case defer; but urged him straitly to make a more full answer to his articles than he had done.

To whom the bishop said, that he would stand unto his recusations and appellations before made, and would not make other answer. Edward VI.

Then the delegates demanded of him what cause he had to allege, why he ought not to be declared "pro confesso," upon the articles whereunto he had not fully answered; the bishop still answering (as before) that he would adhere unto his appellation and recusatation. A. D. 1549. Bonner denieth to answer.

Whereupon the archbishop, with consent of the rest, seeing his pertinacy, pronounced him "contumax," and in pain thereof declared him "pro confesso," upon all the articles which he had not answered. Bonner declared guilty.

This done, master secretary Smith showed forth a letter which the bishop of London had before that time sent unto the lord mayor and the aldermen of the city of London, the tenor whereof ensueth as followeth.

A Letter of Bonner to the Lord Mayor of London.

See Appendix.

'To the right honourable and my very good lord, the Lord Mayor of London, with all his worshipful brethren; my very dear and worshipful friend with speed.

Right honourable! with my very humble recommendations:—Whereas I have perceived of late, and heard with mine ears, what vile beasts and heretics have preached unto you, or rather, like themselves, prated and railed against the most blessed sacrament of the altar, denying the verity and presence of Christ's true body and blood to be there, giving you and the people liberty to believe what ye list; teaching you detestably, that faith in this behalf must not be coerced, but that every man may believe as he will! by reason whereof, lest my presence and silence might unto some have been seen to have allowed their heretical doctrine, and given credit unto them, betraying my flock of the catholic sort, ye know I departed yesterday from the heretic prater's uncharitable charity, and so could have wished that you, and all other that be catholic, should have done, leaving those there with him that be already cast away, and will not be recovered. For your tarrying with him still, shall not only hurt yourselves in receiving his poisoned doctrine, but also shall give a visage that their doctrine is tolerable, by reason that ye are content to hear it, and say nothing against it. And because I cannot tell when I shall speak with you to advertise you hereof, therefore I thought good, for mine own discharge and yours, thus much to write unto you, requiring and praying you again and again, in God's behalf, and for mine own discharge, that ye suffer not yourselves to be abused with such naughty preachers and teachers, in hearing their evil doctrine that ye shall perceive them go about to sow. And thus our blessed Lord long and well preserve you all, with this noble city, in all good rest, godliness, and prosperity. Written in haste, this Monday morning, the 16th of September, 1549. Bonner would not tarry Master Hooper's sermon.

Your faithful beadsman and poor bishop,
Edmund London.

This letter being read, the secretary demanded of him whether he wrote it not: to whom he would not otherwise answer, but that he would still adhere and stand unto his former recusations and appeals; which the commissioners seeing, determined to continue this cause in state as it was until Friday then next following, between the hours of eight and nine of the clock before noon, assigning the bishop to be there at the same time and place, then to hear a final decree of this matter, he still protesting as before. Bonner's case deferred.

Edward VI.

THE SEVENTH SESSION OR APPEARANCE OF BONNER ON TUESDAY
THE FIRST OF OCTOBER, BEFORE THE KING'S COM-MISSIONERS AT LAMBETH.

Upon Friday the commissioners, for divers urgent causes letting them, did not sit in commission according to their appointment, but deferred it until Tuesday the first of October then next following. Upon that day the bishop appearing before them, the archbishop made this declaration unto him :

Friendly words of the commissioners to Bonner.

That although as upon Friday last they had appointed to pronounce their final decree and sentence in this matter, yet forasmuch as they thought that that sentence (although they had just cause to give it) should have been very sore against him, they had not only deferred the same until this day, but, minding to be more friendly to him than he was to himself, and to use more easy and gentle reformation towards him, had also made such suit and means for him, that although he had grievously offended the king's majesty, and very disobediently behaved himself, yet, if he would in the mean while have acknowledged his fault, and have been contented to make some part of amends in submitting himself according to his bounden duty, he should have found much favour; so the sentence should not have been so sore and extreme against him as it was like now to be; for which they were very sorry; especially to see the continuance of such stubborn disobedience, whereby they were then more enforced to give such sentence against him.

The bishop, nothing at all regarding this gentle and friendly admonition and favour, but persisting still in his wonted contumacy, drew forth a paper, whereon he read these words following.

A Declaration of Bonner before the Commissioners.

Bonner pretendeth submission to the king.

I, Edmund bishop of London, brought in as a prisoner by his keeper, out of the Marshalsea, here before you my lord of Canterbury and your pretended colleagues, do, under my former protestations heretofore by me made before you and remaining in your acts, declare that this my presence here at this time is not voluntary, nor of mine own free will and consent, but utterly coacted and against my will; and that being otherwise sent for or brought before you than I am (that is as a prisoner), I would not, being at liberty, have come and appeared before you, but would have declined and refused to make any appearance at all, and would have absented myself from you, as lawfully and well I might have done; standing to, using and enjoying all and singular my lawful remedies and defences heretofore used, exercised and enjoyed, especially my provocation, and appellation heretofore interponed and made unto the king's most excellent majesty, to whom eftsoons, 'ex abundantia,' I have both provoked and appealed, and also made supplication, as appeareth in these writings, which, under protestation aforesaid, I do exhibit and leave here with the actuary of this cause; requiring him to make an instrument thereupon, and the persons here present to bear record in that behalf; especially, to the intent it may appear, I do better acknowledge the king's majesty's authority even in his tender and young age, provoking and appealing to his majesty as my most gracious sovereign and supreme head, with submission to his highness (as appeareth in my appellation and other remedies) for my tuition and defence, than some other (I do mean you my lord of Canterbury and your said pretended colleagues), who, by law and good reason, ought to have deferred and given place unto such provocation, appellation, and supplication, as heretofore lawfully have been by me interponed and made unto his majesty's most royal person and authority in this behalf.

As soon as the bishop had read these words, he did deliver as well that paper, as also two other, unto the actuary, the one containing an appellation, and the other a supplication unto the king's majesty ; which appellation beginneth thus :

Edward VI.

The Third Appeal made and put in by the Bishop of London.

A. D.

See Appendix.

'In the name of God, Amen.'—Wherein first he showed 'how naturally every creature declineth gladly from that thing which goeth about to hurt it ; and also seeketh help and remedy to withstand such hurts and injuries.'

Further, he showed 'that it is found by experience to be hurtful and dangerous to trust him that once hath hurt and beguiled, lest he might add more, rather than to take aught from.'

Moreover he showed, 'that he had found heretofore, at the hands of the archbishop of Canterbury and the rest of the colleagues in this matter, much extremity and cruelty, injuries, losses, and griefs, contrary to God's law, and the laws and statutes of this realm, and against justice, charity, and good order ; being well assured, if they were not stayed but proceeded, they would add more evil to evil, loss to loss, displeasure to displeasure ; as (said he) their servants have reported, and they agreeably do show the same.'

Again in the said appeal he showed 'that the bishop of Canterbury, and the other commissioners, ought to have considered and done better in that matter for honour and obedience to the king's majesty, which hitherto they have not done (said he), in that they have not given place to his provocations and appellations heretofore made unto his grace justly and lawfully, and upon good and just causes ; namely, for the unjust griefs they did against him, which (he said) do appear in the acts of that matter ; as in pronouncing him contumacem unreasonably, without good cause ; and further in assigning the term ad audiendum finale decretum, and in committing him to strait prison, as appeareth in their acts. Therefore he did not only, ex abundantia, ad omnem juris cautelam, decline and refuse their pretended jurisdiction as before, but also, by these presents here showed, he did appeal from the said archbishop of Canterbury, and the rest, unto the king's majesty, asking also those letters of appeal which the law doth admit ; saying, he did not intend to go from his former provocations and appellations, but to join and cleave unto them in every part and parcel, submitting himself to the protection and defence of the king's majesty : and he therein made, intimation to the archbishop of Canterbury, and to his said colleagues, to all intents and purposes that might come thereof.'

called Apostoli.

Furthermore, as touching the supplication above mentioned, which Bonner, as we said, put up in writing to the commissioners, the copy thereof hereunder likewise ensueth.

The Supplication of Bonner to the Chancellor of England, with all the rest of the King's Majesty's most honourable Privy Council.

Please it your most honourable good lordships, with my most humble recommendations, to understand, that albeit I have, according to the laws, statutes, and ordinances of this realm, made supplication, provocation, and appellation unto the king's most excellent majesty, from the unlawful and wicked process of the archbishop of Canterbury, the bishop of Rochester, master secretary Smith, and the dean of Paul's ; as also as well from their unjust interlocutory, as also their definitive sentence, whereby in law I ought to have liberty to come abroad and prosecute the same, yet, such is the malignity of the judges against me, with bearing and maintenance of others, who sundry and many ways have sought my ruin and destruction, that I am here penned and locked up, used very extremely at their pleasure, and, for the contentation of the said master Smith, not suffered to find sureties, or to go abroad to prosecute and sue my said appellation.

In consideration whereof, it may please your said good lordship to take some order and redress herein, especially for that it is now the time that the king's subsidy, now due, ought to be called upon, and justice also ministered unto his majesty's subjects ; which, being as I now am, I cannot be suffered to do. And thus, without further extending my letter therein, considering that your great wisdoms, experience, and goodness, can gather of a little, what is expedient and necessary for the whole, I do beseech Almighty God to preserve and keep well all your honourable good lordships.

Written in haste this seventh of October, 1549, in the Marshalsea.

Your honourable lordship's poor orator, and most bounden beadsman, Edmund London.

The archbishop's answer to Bonner.
See
Appendix.

These things ended, the archbishop said unto him, "My lord! where you say that you come coacted, or else you would not have appeared, I do much marvel of you: for you would thereby make us and this audience here believe, that because you are a prisoner, ye ought not therefore to answer; which, if it were true, it were enough to confound the whole state of this realm. For I dare say, that of the greatest prisoners and rebels that ever your keeper there" (meaning the under marshal) "hath had under him, he cannot show me one that hath used such defence as you here have done."

"Well," quoth the bishop, "if my keeper were learned in the laws, I could show him my mind therein."

"Well," said the archbishop, "I have read over all the laws as well as you, but to another end and purpose than you did; and yet I can find no such privilege in this matter."

Then master secretary Smith did very sore burden and charge him, how disobediently and rebelliously he had always behaved himself towards the king's majesty and his authority. Whereupon the bishop, under his protestation, answered again, that he was the king's majesty's lawful and true subject, and did acknowledge his highness to be his gracious sovereign lord, or else he would not have appealed unto him as he had; yea, and would gladly lay his hands and his neck also under his grace's feet; and therefore he desired that his highness's laws and justice might be ministered unto him.

Bonner
compared to the rebels of Devon-
shire.

"Yea," quoth Master Secretary, "you say well, my lord: but I pray you what other have all these rebels both in Norfolk, Devonshire, and Cornwall, and other places done? Have they not said thus? We be the king's true subjects; we acknowledge him for our king, and we will obey his laws, with such like: and yet, when either commandment, letter, or pardon, was brought unto them from his majesty, they believed it not, but said it was forged and made under a hedge, and was gentlemen's doings; so that indeed they neither would nor did obey any thing."

The people laughing at Bonner.

"Ah, sir," said the bishop, "I perceive your meaning; as who should say that the bishop of London is a rebel like them." "Yea, by my troth," quoth the secretary. Whereat the people laughed.

Bonner
with his taunts.

Then the dean of Paul's<sup>1</sup> said unto him, that he marvelled much, and was very sorry to see him so untractable, that he would not suffer the judges to speak. To whom the bishop disdainfully answered, "Well, master dean! you must say somewhat." And likewise at another time as the dean was speaking, he interrupted him and said, "You may speak when your turn cometh."

Contemptuous talk of Bonner.

Then said the secretary Smith, "I would you knew your duty." "I would," quoth he again, "you knew it as well as I:" with an infinite deal more of other such stubborn and contemptuous talk and behaviour towards them; which the commissioners weighing, and perceiving no likelihood of any tractable reason in him, they determined that the archbishop, with their whole consent, should at that present there openly read and publish their final decree or sentence definitive against him; which he did, pronouncing him thereby to be clean deprived from the bishopric of London, and further, as in the same appeareth in tenor as is hereunder to be seen;<sup>1</sup> which sentence of deprivation ended, the bishop immediately did therefrom appeal by word of mouth, alleging that the same sentence there given against him, was 'lex nulla:' the tenor of whose words I thought here to express, according as they were by him uttered, in this wise as followeth:

'I, Edmund, bishop of London, brought in and kept here as a prisoner against my consent and will, do, under my former protestation heretofore made, and to the intent it may also appear that I have not, being so here in this place, consented or agreed to any thing done against me and in my prejudice, allege and say that this sentence given here against me, is lex nulla; and so far forth as it shall appear to be aliqua, I do say it is iniqua et injusta, and that therefore I do from it, as iniqua et injusta, appeal to the most excellent and noble king Edward the Sixth, by the grace of God king of England, France, and Ireland, defender of the faith, and of the church of England and also Ireland (next and immediately under God here on earth) supreme head, and unto his court of chancery or parliament, as the laws, statutes, and ordinances of this realm will suffer and bear in this behalf; desiring instantly, first, second, and third, according to the laws, letters reverential, or dimissories, to be given and delivered unto me in this behalf, with all things expedient, requisite, or necessary in any wise.

And thereupon also the said bishop required the public notary or actuary, William Say, to make an instrument, and the witness aforesaid and others present to record the same: to whom so appealing, and requiring as before, the said judge's delegate said, that they would declare and signify to the king's majesty what was done in this matter; and thereupon would defer or not defer to his said appellation, according as his grace's pleasure and commandment should be given to them in that behalf.

And after all this, the said bishop of London said to them, "Jam functi estis officio. What will your grace do with me now, touching my imprisonment? will ye keep me still in prison? shall I not now be at liberty to prosecute mine appeal?" To whom the archbishop answering, said, that they perceived now more in that matter than they did at first, and that this matter was greater rebellion than he was aware of; and therefore they said that as yet they would not discharge him. And thereupon they committed him again to his keeper in prison.

bishop declareth Bonner's sentence in English.

*See
Appendix.*

This talk finished, the archbishop, considering that most of the audience there present did not understand the meaning of the sentence, being read in the Latin tongue, said to them, "Because there be many of you here that understand not the Latin tongue, and so cannot tell what judgment hath been here given, I shall therefore show you the effect thereof:" and therewith he did declare in English the causes expressed in the sentence, adding thereunto these words:

Bonner
deprived and un-bishopsed.

"Because my lord of London is found guilty in these matters, therefore we have here, by our sentence, deprived him of our bishopric of London; and this we show unto you, to the intent that from henceforth ye shall not esteem him any more as bishop of London."

His disdainful words to the commissioners.

Then Bonner desired the archbishop to declare likewise what he had done, and how he had appealed. But the other, seeing his froward contempt, refused it, saying, you may do it yourself. Whereupon very disdainfully again he said, "Jam functi estis officio. What will your grace do with me touching my imprisonment? will you keep me still in prison?"

Bonner
again
committed to his keeper.

To whom the commissioners answered, that they perceived now more in the matter than they did before, and that his behaviour was greater rebellion than he was aware of. And therefore they would not discharge him, but committed him again to his keeper to be kept in prison; where he most justly remained until the death of that most worthy and godly prince king Edward VI.; after which time he wrought most horrible mischief and cruelties against the saints of God, as appeareth hereafter throughout the whole reign of queen Mary. From the executing of the which like tyranny, the Lord of his great mercy keep all other such, Amen!

Now, immediately after his deprivation he writeth out of the Marshalsea other letters supplicatory unto the lord chancellor, and the rest of the king's council, wherein he thus complaineth, that by reason of the great enmity which the duke of Somerset and sir Thomas Smith bare unto him, his often and earnest suits unto the king and his council could not be heard. He therefore most humbly desired their lordships, for the causes aforesaid, to consider him, and to let him have liberty to prosecute his matter before them; and he would daily pray for the good preservation of their honours, as appeareth by the words of his own supplication hereunder following.

Edward VI.A. D. 1549.

Thus after the commissioners had finished with Bonner, he, being now prisoner in the Marshalsea, leaving no shift of the law unsought how to work for himself as well as he might, drew out a certain supplication, conceived and directed to the king's majesty, out of the said prison of the Marshalsea.

A Supplication made and directed by Edmund Bonner, late Bishop of London, to the Privy-Council. See Appendix.

To the right honourable, my lord chancellor of England, with all the rest of the most honourable privy-council :

Please it your most honourable good lordships, with my most humble commendations, to understand, that albeit heretofore I have made such suit, and to such persons as I cannot devise to make more, or to more higher; this is to wit, to the king's most excellent majesty, and his most gracious person in divers sorts, and also unto your most honourable good lordships being of his privy-council, for redress of such notable and manifest injuries and extremities as have been, contrary to all law, honesty, and good reason, inflicted upon me by my lord of Canterbury, my lord of Rochester, Dr. Smith, and Dr. May: yet, because the said Dr. Smith, being a minister to the duke of Somerset, and they both, my deadly enemies, hath sundry ways studied and laboured my ruin and destruction, staying and letting heretofore all my lawful remedies and suits, having therein help and furtherance of these two other aforesaid persons, being ready at foot and hand to accomplish all their desires and pleasures, I shall at this present (having for a time forborne to trouble, for good respects, your most honourable good lordships with any my suits, and especially for your other manifold great affairs in the king's majesty's business, myself yet, the mean while, neither wanting good will, nor yet just cause, being where I am, to make such suit) renew my suit, and most humbly beseech your most honourable good lordships to give me leave to make most humble supplication again to your said lordships, for honest and lawful liberty to prosecute my appellation and supplication heretofore made to the king's most excellent majesty; and, according to the law, to make my suit for redress of the said great and manifest injuries, extremities, and wrongs, done against me by the said persons. And your said lordships, over and besides the furtherance of justice many ways herein to me and others, and the collection of the king's majesty's subsidy now to be levied of the clergy in my diocese, which hitherto hath been and is stayed by reason of the premises, shall also bind me most greatly and entirely to pray daily for the good preservation of your said most honourable good lordships; in all honour, felicity, and joy, long to continue and endure unto God's pleasure.

Written in the Marshalsea the 26th of October, 1549.

Your lordship's most faithful and assured beadsman,
Edmund London.

Substance of a Supplication made and directed by Edmund Bonner, late Bishop of London, to the King's Majesty, out of the Prison of the Marshalsea.

In this supplication, first, after the used form of style, he prayed for the prosperous estate of the king long to reign. Then he showed that his

Edward VI. faithful heart and service to him hath, is, and shall be, as it was to his father before.

A. D. 1549. Then he declared how he had been belied of evil men, and misreported not to bear a true heart to his grace, but a rebellions mind, in denying his royal power in his minority; whereas indeed, he saith, his grace should find him always, during life, both in heart, word, and deed, to do and acknowledge otherwise, and to be most willing to show, &c., and to do all other things for his grace, as willingly as any other subject, or as those that were his denouncers, who, he thought, were not sent of his grace, but pretended commissioners, &c.

Further, he complained of his denunciation by certain commissioners (who said they were sent by his grace), alleging the same not to be lawful; and of his long and sharp imprisonment; and that the commissioners observed neither law nor reasonable order, but extremity. And whereas he had made appeal to his grace, and he could not have it; he desired to have law to prosecute and sue his appeal for his remedy, and that he (considering his vocation) might not be shut up and put from liberty, which his meanest subjects have.

Then he desired his grace's letters of Supersedas against the commissioners, and that the matter might be heard before the council; and then he doubted not but to be found a true faithful man, and herein to have wrong. So in the end he concluded, this (prostrating himself even to the very ground, and humbly kissing his grace's feet) to be the thing only which he humbly desired, &c.

This done, and the supplication perused, the king eftsoons giveth in charge and commandment to certain men of honour and worship, and persons skilful in the law, as to the lord Rich, high chancellor, the lord treasurer, the lord marquis Dorset, the bishop of Ely, lord Wentworth, sir Anthony Wingfield and sir William Herbert, knights, Dr. Richard Wootton, Edward Montague lord chief justice, sir John Baker knight, with judge Hales, John Gosnold, Dr. Oliver, and also Dr. Leyson, that they, scanning and perusing all such acts, matters, and muniments of the said Bonner by him exhibited, produced, propounded, and alleged, with all and singular his protestations, recusations, and appellations, should, upon mature consideration thereof, give their direct answer upon the same, whether the appellation of the said Bonner were to be deferred unto; whether the sentence defined against him stood by the law sufficient and effectual, or not: who, eftsoons, after diligent discussion, and considerate advisement had of all and singular the premises, gave their resolute answer, that the pretended appellation of Edmund Bonner aforesaid was naught and unreasonable, and in no wise to be deferred unto; and that the sentence by the commissioners against him, was rightly and justly pronounced.<sup>1</sup> And this was the conclusion of Bonner's whole matter and deprivation for that time.

Bonner's appellation found to be unreasonable.

His sentence, just and lawful.

of our story, as the order of years and time requireth. And although the trouble of the lord protector<sup>1</sup> falleth here jointly with the deprivation of Dr. Bonner, yet, because he was shortly again delivered out of the same through the Lord's mighty working, I will therefore delay the tractation thereof, till the time of his second trouble, which was two years after; and so, in the mean time returning again into our discourse, intend, by the Lord's leave, to collect and continue the matters begun, touching the king's godly proceedings for reformation of religion in the aforesaid year of our Lord concurring—the year 1549.

Disputation of Peter Martyr with Dr. Chedsey.

And here first a note would be made of Peter Martyr and of his learned travails and disputation in the university of Oxford the said present year with Dr. Chedsey and others, about the matter of the sacrament; which was, that the substance of bread and wine was not changed in the sacrament, and that the body and blood of Christ were not carnally and bodily in the bread and wine, but united to the same sacramentally.

Act of parliament for compiling ecclesiastical laws.

In like manner, some touch or mention here also would be made of the ecclesiastical laws,<sup>2</sup> for the gathering and compiling whereof thirty-two persons were assigned by act of parliament the said present year, 1549. But because these be rather matters of tractation, than historical, I mean (God willing) to defer the further consideration thereof unto the end of the history of this king's days, and so to pass forward to other matters in the mean while.

supremo capiti, vestri humillimi oratores Thomas, permissione divina Cantuariensis archiepiscopus, totius Angliæ primas et metropolitanus, Nicholaus Roffensis Episcopus, et Gulielmus May legum doctor, ecclesiæ cathedralis divi Pauli London. decanus, omnimod. obedientiam et reverentiam tanto excellentissimo principi et domino nostro supremo debitam, cum humillimæ subjectionis honore! Quum itaque a serenissima Majestate vestra literas mandatorias præsentibus annexas receperimus, quibus Celsitudinem vestram de sententia sive finali judicio vel decreto, versus Edmundum Episcopum Londini (virtute literarum vestrarum commissionalium nobis et aliis in ea parte directarum) per nos lato sive promulgato, certiorum reddere in mandatis habuimus: Nos hujusmodi mandato vestro regio juxta officii nostri debitum quam humillime obtemperantes, scrutinium in registro vestro regio (penes ejusdem cause registorem et actuarium remanente) pro promissis fieri curavimus; ex quo inter alia ejusdem cause acta, exhibita, et munimenta liquido apparet, quòd, primo die mensis Octobris, anno Dominicæ incarnationis 1549, regni que vestri florentissimi anno tertio, coram nobis commissariis sive delegatis antedictis—in aula manerii archiepiscopalis Cant. apud Lambethæ in comitatu Surrey, in prædicta causa (vigore delegationis nobis a Majestate vestra factæ, in præsentia notarii publici subscripti, nostri in eadem causa actuarii, testiumque inferius nominatorum), judicialiter et pro tribunali sedentibus et legitime cognoscentibus—comparuit personaliter præfatus Edmundus Londini Episcopus: in cujus præsentia nos archiepiscopus antedictus, de et cum expresso consensu pariter et assensu dicti reverendi patris Roffensis episcopi, Thomæ Smith militis, ac præfati Gulielmi May legum doctoris, collegarum nostrorum una nobiscum judicialiter et pro tribunali sedentium, sententiam nostram definitivam, sive nostram finale decretum sive judicium, tulimus legimus et promulgavimus in scriptis, sub eo, qui sequitur, verborum tenore:

Quæ omnia et singula nos archiepiscopus, episcopus, et decanus, vestræ Majestatis delegati sive commissarii antedicti, vestræ Celsitudini in altam vestram cancellariæ curiam certificamus et significamus per præsentem. Page 5, line 14.]—Dr. Cottisford became rector of Lincoln College March 2d, 1518, continued such till January 7th, 1538, and died in 1540: he was appointed Commissary by archbishop Warham, the chancellor, in room of Dr. Musgrave, the preceding Commissary, who died in August A.D. 1527: Dr. Martin Lindsey, fellow of Lincoln, acted till Michaelmas, and Dr. Cottisford took the oaths of office December 7th following: he continued Commissary during the remainder of Warham's life, and resigned his office to the Proctors August 26th, 1532. (See Wood's "Fasti Oxonienses," editions by Gutch and Bliss.) The above date of Cottisford's appointment to be Commissary is important, as contributing to prove that the persecution of Garret and the other Reformers at Oxford happened in the year 1528. (See p. 421 of this volume.)

Page 5, line 30. "Which Frith . . . went over the sea."—As Frith was not released from prison till August 1528 at the soonest (for it was after the death of Clerk, Sumner, and Bayly in that month, see the previous context), and Garret was abjured by the cardinal the following November (see vol. iv. p. 608), it is evident that he did not flee to the continent till after that time; it appears from the prologue to his treatise on Purgatory, in reply to Rastel, More, and Fisher, that he received their publications on the subject when he was abroad, Dec. 21, 1530: and from his final Process (Documents, No. XXII.) it seems he was in England in Lent, (i. e. Feb.) 1531; which just allows two years for his absence; but he must have returned subsequently to the continent, for it appears from his Process that he returned for the last time to England July 25, 1532.

Page 5, line 32. "For exhibition of the prior of Reading (as is thought), and had the prior over with him."—This prior of Reading was strongly suspected of heresy at the time that Garret was in trouble at Oxford, as will appear by one of the letters printed from the Public Records at the end of this Appendix, No. VI. He was in consequence imprisoned, and the following extract from the Wolsey Correspondence, in the Chapter House, vol. v. No. 102, shows the probable period and occasion of his release. Stephen Gardiner, then secretary to the king, writes to Wolsey, September 7th, 1529:—"The King's Highness willed me to write unto your Grace, that suit being made unto him in favour of the prior of Reading, who for Luther's opinion is now in prison and hath been a good season at your Grace's commandment, that unless the matter be most notable and very heinous, he desireth your Grace, at his request, to cause the said Prior to be restored to liberty, and discharged of that imprisonment."

Page 5, line 10 from the bottom. "Leonard Cox"—a native of Caerleon, Monmouth, studied at Cambridge, and became a popular philological writer under Henry VIII., from whom he had a house at Reading and a yearly pension of 10*l.* He travelled much on the Continent, and formed there an extensive acquaintance. He defended the doctrine of justification by faith in Christ. He was intimate with Erasmus, and translated his paraphrase of the Epistle to Titus into English, and was yet living in the reign of Edward VI. His "Arte or cratte of Rhetoricke," printed in 1524, was dedicated to Hugh Farringdon, a patron of critical studies and the last abbot of Reading.

Page 6, line 17. "Amongst his friends."—The Life of Frith, in Foxe's Collection of Tyndal, Frith, and Barnes's Works, 1573, adds, "So that at the last, he coming to a porte toune, in Essex, called Milton Shore, and there par-posing to have taken shipping, to have passed over into Flaunders, was betrayed and brought bounde backe agayne and layed in the Tower of London."

Page 6, line 20. "The first occasion of his writing was this."—The matter, from hence to the top of the next page, will be found in Hall's Chronicle, anno 26 Henry VIII.

Page 6, line 23. "The whole effect of which disputation consisted specially in these four points."—The substance of this account is extracted from the Preface to Frith's "Boke answering unto M. More's letter." By the following copy of a portion it will be seen, however, that Foxe has paraphrased the statement (as he has also Frith's letter to his Friends, p. 11), apparently to render it clearer or less assailable:—

"I chaunced being in these partyes to be in company wyth a Chrysten Brother which for his commendable conversacion and sober behavoure myght better be a Bysshoppe than many that weare myters, if the rule of saint Paul were regarded in their election. This brother after moche communicacion desired to know my minde as touching the sacrament of the body and bloude of our Saviour Chryst. Whiche thing I opened unto hym accordyng to the gyft that God had geven me. First I proved unto hym that it was no artycle of oure faythe necessarye to be beleved under payne of dampnacyon. Then I declared that Chryste had a natural bodye even as mine ys (saving synne), and that it could no more be in two places at ones, then myne can. Thirlye I shewed hym that yt was not necessarye that the wordes shuld be so understonde as they sownde: But that yt might be a phrase of scrypture, as ther are innumerable. After that I shewed him certein such phrases and maner of speakynges. And that it was well used in our Englyshe tongue. And fynally I recyted after what maner they myght receyve yt accordyng to Chrystes institution, not fearyng the frowarde alteracion, that the Prests use contrary to the first forme and institucion.

"When I had suffeyentlye publyshed my minde, he desyred me to entitle the somme of my wordes and write them for him, because they seemed over large to be well retheyned in memorye. And albeit I was loth to take the matter in hande, yet to fulfyl his instaunte intercession, I toke upon me to touche thys terryble tragedye, and wrote a treatyse, which besyde my paynfull imprisonment is lyke to purchase me most cruell death; which I am ready and gladde to receyve wyth the spyryte and inwarde man (although the flesh be frayle) when so ever it shall please God to lay yt upon me." From the edition "newly revised," printed in the yeare of our Lord 1548.

Page 11—14. "Letter of John Frith."—The present text of this letter varies considerably, both from that in the edition of 1563, and that in Frith's Life: it is clearly a translation of the Latin of 1559, p. 132.

Page 12, line 35. "After this they alleged the place of St. Augustine, where he saith, 'Hewas carried in his own hands.'"—But this language is owing to Augustine's misconception of the meaning of the Greek translation of "Kings." "Mirum est adversarios malle Augustini verba in absurdissimum sensum (ut infra patebit) violenter detorquere, quam eis commodam et cum cæteris ejus hypothesibus consentaneam interpretationem tribuere. Augustinus enim ad hanc applicationem deductus est ex linguæ Græcæ imperitia. Nam in libro primo Regum ubi de Davide agebatur, versio Septuaginta interpretum legebat παραφέρετο ἐν ταῖς χερσὶν αὐτῶν, hoc est de verbo ad verbum transferebatur in manibus eorum, quoad sensum autem insaniam simulabat coram eis, nempe Philistæis. Id enim plerumque significat verbum παραφέρεσθαι, hoc sensu correspondens non verbo Hebraico הרהר, ut videtur legisse Perronius [Cardinal Du Perron, the smart proselyte] quando ridicule ait Hebræa habere Sinebat se ire in manus eorum, sed verbo הרהר quod dementia[m] fingere hic proprie designat. Augustinus autem cum præ linguæ ignorantia legeret αὐτοῦ pro αὐτῶν, nec sciret quid παραφέρεσθαι apud Græcos significaret, erroneè sic vertebat, ferebatur in manibus suis. Colligo jam summam Augustiniani loci: Dominius ferebat corpus suum, cum diceret, hoc est corpus meum: hoc est, fererat illud quodammodo; id est, fererat sacramentum corporis sui, id est panem ferebat in manibus. Quid hoc in rem adversariorum?" De Eucharistiæ sacrament. auct. Edm. Albertino (Davent. 1654) pp. 653-4, 657. See vol. vi. infra, p. 496. Augustine in Psalm 33 enar. 2. § 2, writes, "ipse se portabat quodammodo."

Page 12, line 47. "Then they alleged a place of Chrysostome."—De Pœnit. Hom. ix. tom. ii. p. 412, edit. Paris, 1834. "Locum tum a Perronio sæpissime tum ab aliis adversariorum magna cum exultatione objectum, velut primarium. . . . Sed intoleranda prorsus est, aut eorum supinitas, Græcum Chrysostomi textum consulere negligentium, aut inscitia non intelligentium, aut fraus dissimulantium. Primo enim pauca sana in illorum versione. Sic reddendus erat ex Græco Chrysostomi locus: Ne, quod panis est, aspicias, ne, quod vinum est, arbitreris. Non enim ut cæteri sibi in secessum abit. Absit: ne id putes. Sicut enim cera igni apposita nihil scoræ ejicit, nihil excrementi (hoc esse tota comburitur et in ignem vertitur), sic et hic puta mysteria consumi cum corporis substantia. Deinde illius sensum mirum in modum depravant. Nam quando Chrysostomus ait, ne, quod panis est, aspicias; mens ipsius nullomodo est, panem non amplius esse; sed, etsi panis sit, non ad eum tanquam ad panem, sed tanquam ad sacramentum, esse attendendum; In signis enim inquit Augustinus (De Doctr. Christ. lib. ii. c. 1) ne quis attendat quod sunt, sed potius quod signa sunt. Nam hæc loquendi formula apud Chrysostomum usitatissima est, qua dicit non esse aspiciendum quod aliquid est, non negans id esse, imo contra supponens esse, sed prohibens tantummodo sub tali ratione intueri." Albertinus de Eucharistiæ Sacram. (Daventriæ, 1654), p. 576. See also Cranmer's Works, vol. ii. p. 341.

Page 18, line 9. "One doctor Cook."—This was Dr. Laurence Cooke, who succeeded the late Dr. Forman October 31st, 1528, as rector of All Saints Honey Lane, but resigned in June 1537, when Garret succeeded as rector, and remained such till his martyrdom in 1540. (Reg. Stokesly and Bonner.) See Foxe's Life of Frith, prefixed to his works, and the note infra on p. 427.

Page 26, line 28. "Jeffery Lome, sometime usher of St. Anthony's school."—Foxe's "porter" is a literal translation of the Latin ostiarium: Todd's Johnson derives usher from huis, Fr. a door. St. Anthony's school was in Thread-needle-street, where the French church formerly stood: it rivalled St. Paul's school in reputation: Sir Thomas More was educated there.

Page 27, top.] Nicholson, with Smith, Patmore, and Philips, is referred to by Latimer in a letter to Hubberdyn, (Documents, No. IX., end of vol. vii.), dated May 25th, 1533, as being then in prison.

Page 27, line 6. "John Raimand, a Dutchman."—Mr. Anderson in his "Annals of the English Bible," London, 1845, vol. i. p. 163, thinks, that for "Raimund" we should read "Ruremonde," a considerable town in the Netherlands, the birthplace of Mercator, and probably of this printer and his brother Christopher; his name is given by Panzer and Le Long as Hans van Roemundt. Thus Christopher Endhoven, the printer at Antwerp, was doubtless named from Endhoven, another considerable town in the Netherlands. This John Ruremonde is probably the Dutchman, who, in the spring of this year (see Strype, i. ch. 8), said that he had sold to Robert Necton 200 or 300 English Testaments about Christmas before, but was then in the Fleet.

Page 29, line 1.]—John Tyndale was the younger brother of William Tyndale: he was joined in the same penance with Thomas Patmore, draper, mentioned at p. 34: see the note hereafter on that page.

Page 29, line 12. "William Stacy, Tyler."—An early and zealous promoter of the Gospel: see vol. iv. pp. 585, 681, and the bottom of this page.

Page 29, line 16. "Lawrence Maxwell, Tyler."—This Maxwell is in all the editions called Taylor or Tailor: but it is evident that the a has crept in by mistake: see Appendix to vol. iv. note on p. 585.

Page 30, line 17. "What became of him," &c.]—Philip was detained in prison by Stokesly till the year 1534: in that year, taking advantage probably of the feelings excited among the people by the death of Frith, he complained to the House of Commons against Stokesly, who refused, however, to appear at their bar: this led to the statute of 1534 (see pp. 45, 66, of this volume), which abolished that of 2 Henry IV. empowering the bishops 'ex officio' to commit to prison persons suspected of heresy. Philip's Articles and Petition are printed from the Chapter House Papers, at the end of this Appendix, No. II.

Page 31, line 3.]—Foxe's account of William Tracy will be found in Hall's Chronicle.

The disgusting treatment of Tracy's dead body is referred to by Pilkington, in his Sermon before the University of Cambridge, as related infra vol. viii. p. 292. A letter of his son, complaining of the shameful indignity, from the State Paper Office, is printed among the Documents at the end of this Appendix, No. III. Chancellor Parker, who was ordered to raise and burn Tracy's remains, was the same individual before whom Tyndale was convened ten or twelve years previously, and "rated by him as though he had been a doz." (See p. 116 of this volume.) Tracy's will was likewise condemned under the common seal of the University of Oxford, Jan. 28th, 1531 (Gutch's Fasti Oxon. vol. ii. p. 51).

Page 32, line 10.]—Here ends the passage from Hall,

Page 33, line 16 from the bottom. "Ye use to go on pilgrimage to our lady of Grace, of Walsingham."—“So superstitious, so weak and credulous were the commonalty, that they believed (as they were then imposed upon and taught) the Giazias, or what is called in the sky the Milky-way, was appointed by Providence to point out the particular place and residence of the Virgin beyond all other places, and was on that account generally in that age called Walsingham-way; and I have heard old people of this country so to call and distinguish it some years past.” (Blomefield's Norfolk, vol. ix. p. 280.)

The people “will make comparysons betwene our lady of Ipsweyche and our lady of Walsyngam. As wenyng that one ymage more of power then the other; which they wolde never do, but yf in stede of our lady they put theyr truste in the ymage selfe. And the people in spekyng of our lady; Of all our ladyes sayth one, I love best our lady of Walsyngam. And I sayth the other our lady of Ipsweyche. In whiche wordys what menyth she but her love and her affeccion to the stocke that standyth in the chapell of Walsyngam or Ipsweyche.” (Sir Thomas More's Dyaloge, book i. chap. 17.)

Page 34, line 16 from the bottom. "Thomas Patmore, draper."—The following passage from the Foxian Papers, Harl. MSS. No. 425, fol. 15, is worth recording here:—“There were, soon after the coming over of the New Testaments in English, translated by William Tyndale, which he sent to his brother John Tyndale, a merchant, apprehended the said John Tyndale and Thomas Patmore, a merchant, and a young man that dwelt about London Bridge, by the bishop of London, and brought before Sir Thomas More, being the Chancellor, and by him committed to ward. After, they were brought forth before the lords in the Star Chamber, and there were charged with the receiving of Tyndale's Testaments and divers other books, and delivering and scattering the same abroad in divers places of the city of London; which they confessed, and therefore had judgment—That they should be sent to the Counter of London, and there to remain until the next market-day, and then each of them to be set upon a horse, and their faces to the horse's tail, and to have papers upon their heads, and upon their outward apparel, that is to say, upon their gowns and cloaks, to be tacked or pinned thick with the said New Testaments and other books. And at the Standard in Chepe should be made a great fire, wherinto every of them should throw their said books; and farther, to abide such fines, to be paid to the king, as should be assessed upon them; which penance they observed. This is extant to be seen in the records of the Star Chamber.” In the margin of this MS. is the following notandum:—“A foule faute, p. 1195, for this some xviii thousand viii c xl pounds and x pence, ye have printed xviii c. xl pounds and x pence”—referring to the sum which the clergy of the province of York fined to the king for being in the premunire (see p. 56 of this volume), which is misprinted at p. 1195 of the Edition of 1570, “xviii hundred and xl pound x pence.” This error remained uncorrected till the Edition of 1596. Strype misunderstood the MS. as describing the fine imposed on these three prisoners; and others, following Strype, have reckoned their fine at 200,000*l.* apiece. From Foxe's own account, at top of next page, it seems the fine was left for the bishop to fix, for Patmore was fined 100*l.* by Stokesly.

Page 37, line 33.]—The brother here alluded to, was Thomas Philip; see the note above on p. 30. Patmore was yet in prison May 25, 1533: see note on p. 27. See a curious paper respecting the commission of enquiry into his case among the Documents printed at the end of this Volume, No. XXIII.

Page 37, line 7 from the bottom.]—This Christopher cannot be either of the printers mentioned in the note on p. 27: for Christopher Ruremonde continued in business till 1541; and it is not likely to have been Endhoven.

Page 33, line 8. "The child bishop, called St. Nicholas."—See vol. vii. p. 596, note (7); also, vol. i. p. 86; vol. viii. p. 222.

Page 38, line 24. "For saying that Bilney was a good man," &c.]—See Appendix to vol. iv. note on p. 643, line 33. This Lobley is also mentioned at pp. 386, 410, of this volume, and at p. 586 of vol. iv.

Page 38, line 13 from the bottom. "William Smith, Tailor."—See vol. iv. p. 681. He is probably the Smith alluded to in Latimer's letters; see note above on p. 27.

Page 43, line 9 from the bottom. "Bilney preached true at Wilsdon."—I herde ones when I was a chyld the good Scottyshe Freer father Donolde, whom I reken surely for a saynt, if there be any in heaven. I herde him preche at Paule's cross that our lady was a virgin; and yet at her pilgrimage he made many a foul meeting. And so loud he cried out; ye men of London gange on your self with your wives to Wyllesdon in the devyl's name, or else keep them at home with you with sorrow." (The objector in Sir Thomas More's Dyaloge, book i. chap. 17, fol. xxx. verso.)

Page 45, line 1.]—Foxe says, "the next or second year following, which was A.D. 1534;" but Hall, whom Foxe cites for his authority, places all this correctly under the 23d of Henry VIII., and Jan. 15th 23d Henry VIII. would be A.D. 1532; and lower down in the page he says that the king married Lady Anne Bullen "in this present year," an event which happened about November 1532 (see note infra on p. 60, line 14). The fact is, that the Parliament which met January 15th A.D. 1534 consummated the measures initiated in that which met Jan. 15th A.D. 1532. (See Parry's Councils and Parliaments of England; and all the Historians.) Foxe himself indicates the progressive nature of the measure both here and at p. 66, where he refers to this passage.

Page 47, line 37.]—Foxe here represents Henry as having obtained the opinions of the Universities on the subject of the Divorce before ever he applied to the pope; but he represents the case differently, and no doubt more correctly, at pp. 50, 54, 56, where it is expressly shown that he applied first to the pope in 1528, and to the Universities in 1530. Cranmer is commonly said to have suggested the application to the Universities when the king was at Waltham, in August 1529; and the Instruments sent by the Universities, printed by Burnet in his Records, are all dated within the year 1530 (see the note infra, on p. 56). The king early obtained the opinions of some divines, English and foreign, in favour of the divorce, and in his speech at Bridewell, Nov. 8th, 1528, he expressly mentions this circumstance, but makes no allusion to the Universities (see pp. 48, 49 of this volume). Cavendish, indeed, in his Life of Wolsey, claims for his master Wolsey the honour of having suggested the application to the Universities; but as he goes on to state the production of their replies before the Parliament, which did not take place till the year after Wolsey's death (see p. 56 of this volume), it is probable that Cavendish has confounded the opinions of the foreign Universities with those of the Divines, the obtaining of which might have been suggested by Wolsey. Collier prefers Cavenlish's account, but one of his reasons for so doing has no force (see the note infra on p. 56, line 10).

Page 48, line 4.]—Respecting this embassy of Gardiner and Foxe to Rome in the spring of 1528, see more at p. 656 of this volume, and vol. iv. pp. 599—608, and Appendix on p. 681.

Page 48, line 7. "Sent Cardinal Campeius (as is said) into England, joined with the Cardinal of York."—See vol. iv. p. 608, and the note thereon in the Appendix. Campeius or Cumpegio arrived in London, according to Hall, Oct:

9th, 1528. A commission was first given to Wolsey to try the cause, dated "Orvieto, Id. April. pontif. anno quinto," i. e. April 13th, 1528: a joint commission to Wolsey and Campegio was given the same year, dated Viterbo, 6 Id. Junii, i. e. June 8th, 1528; both of which documents are printed in Rymer.

Page 49, line 11. "These twenty years almost."—The queen also presently says—"I have been married to him almost twenty years." As they were married June 7th, 1509, and the present month was November, these speeches were made in 1528.

Page 50, line 17 from the bottom.]—Foxe here expressly asserts, that Henry did not apply to the Universities till after his application to the Pope: see the note on p. 47.

Page 50, line 14 from the bottom.]—Rymer gives a royal license to the legates to proceed with the cause, dated "Windsor, May 30, an. Regni vicesimo primo:" i. e. 1529. Foxe is therefore mistaken in dating this 1530. There is some difficulty in making out the exact truth as to all the circumstances of the Process before the legates, the accounts vary so much. In the Addenda to his History, Burnet corrects some things in his previous Account of the Process: he considers that he had followed too implicitly the historians of the time, and states that he had subsequently obtained from Dr. More, Bp. of Ely, a great collector of Records, a sight of the original Register of the Commission, attested by the registrar and the clerk of the court. From this source he has made several corrections of his former account. Foxe's narrative is chiefly taken from Hall.

Page 50, line 9 from the bottom. "*Ascited* personally to appear, or by their proctors.**"—Foxe, in all the editions except the first, here says, "Ascited by Dr. Sampson to appear;" it appears from the Register of the Commission in Burnet, that the bishop of Lincoln was appointed by Campegio to summon the king, and the bishop of Bath and Wells the queen; and that the king appeared by two proxies, Dr. Richard Sampson, dean of the Chapel Royal, and Mr. John Bell.

Page 51, line 5. "The king... came to the court, and the queen came also."—The original Register (quoted by Burnet in his Addenda) states that the king never appeared in person at all, and the queen only the first time, June 18th; whence Burnet infers, that all these speeches must be invented by the historians. But Burnet himself publishes a letter from the king to his agents, shewing that the king and queen were both present. The Register states that the cardinals rejected the queen's appeal on the 18th June, and pronounced her "Contumax;" but gave her till June 21st, when for non-appearance they again pronounced her "Contumax," and gave her till June 25th, when she sent her appeal in writing, which is extant: whereupon she was a third time pronounced "Contumax," and they proceeded "ex officio" to frame xii Articles, on which they examined witnesses at successive meetings of June 28, July 5, 9, 12, 14, 16, 19, 21, and 23, on which last day Campegio adjourned, for the Roman Harvest Vacation, to October 1st.—A citation of the queen is given in Rymer, dated June 26th: and in another document printed by Rymer, dated July 1st, eight bishops approve of the proposed inquiry.

Page 51, line 3 from the bottom. "The first bull granted by Julius."—This Bull, or rather Brief (for such was its real character, and this is one proof of its forgery), was alleged to have been discovered in the papers of D. de Puebla, Spanish ambassador in England when the marriage took place. (See Burnet, who shows its want of genuineness.) There is a copy of it among the Records at the Rolls House.

Page 51, note (3).—See the Appendix to vol. iv. note on p. 632, line 30, for explanation of "St. Asse."

Page 53, line 7. "From week to week protracted the matter till towards the end of July."—Foxe's text has, "from month to month protracted the matter till the month of August." But in the first edition, from which the words are quoted, Foxe is taking a general and brief survey of the whole process from beginning to end: as here introduced, the words must be taken to describe a particular and somewhat advanced stage of the business; so that they require modification, otherwise they would render the present narrative inaccurate.

Page 53, line 25. "Insomuch that Charles, duke of Suffolk." &c.]—Burnet (Addenda) says, that the original Record of the Trial states what noblemen were present each day, and does not mention the presence of the duke of Suffolk or of Wolsey on this last day. He, therefore, doubts the accuracy of this representation.

Page 53, line 6 from the bottom.]—The Emperor was gone to be crowned at Bologna. A commission to these ambassadors is in Rymer, dated "London, January 21st, anno regni vicesimo primo;" i.e. A. D. 1530. It calls Stokesley bishop elect of London. He was enthroned July 1530.

Page 55, line 27. "A proclamation of the king," &c.]—This proclamation of Henry's is properly dated September 16th, 1530 (see Hall and Stow): it was issued in consequence of Henry's finding that the Pope was unwilling to decide for the divorce, for fear of offending the Emperor. His ambassadors had been therefore acting with decision, and intimating that the patience of the English was exhausted, and the king would take other measures. Henry, expecting daily an excommunication or interdict to be launched against him, issues this proclamation, to prevent its coming into the kingdom. (See Rapin and Burnet.)

Page 56, line 10.]—The determinations of these different bodies are given in Rymer, Anno Dom. 1530, indictione tertiâ:—Angers, dated May 7th: Paris, May 23d: Bourges, June 10th: Paris, July 2d: Tholouse, September 17th: Ferrara, September 24th: Padua, September 22d. If produced in March, it could not be earlier than 1531: the only apparent exception as to the year in which they were furnished, is in the case of Orleans, the instrument from thence being dated April 5th, 1529. Collier seizes on this as an argument against the truth of Foxe's story about Cranmer (infra, vol. viii. p. 6), which relates to August 1529, more than four months after the apparent date of the Orleans instrument; and on this ground prefers the statement of Cavendish, attributing the original suggestion of applying to the Universities to Wolsey. The date of the Orleans instrument, however, is only an apparent exception to that of the others; for at that period the year in France commenced at Easter (see Nicolas's Chron. of Hist.), and Easter fell in 1530 on April 17th, so that April 5th previous would be set down to the year 1529.

Page 56, line 14. "Bourges in Berry."—Bonner in his letter to Cromwell uses this same phrase at p. 159 of this volume. Foxe reads corruptly "Bourges or Berry."

Page 56, line 3 from the bottom. "The first day of September, being Friday."—A very curious document relative to this affair, among the Chapter House Papers at the Rolls House, is printed at the end of this Appendix, No. IV.: it is a formal presentment by the Attorney-General to Sir Thomas More of sundry clergymen and laymen as having been concerned in opposing the bishop of London on this occasion: Foxe's account is taken from Hall, and is substantially correct, though the document in question gives a more detailed and probably more accurate account.

Page 58, line 1. "The next year, &c.]—This short paragraph of two lines is put in by the Editor, in order to affix the true date to the transactions mentioned in this and the next page, which otherwise would be undated: for it has been deemed advisable, for the sake of rendering Foxe's narrative clearer, to transpose a considerable portion of his text from this place to p. 66, where it will be found, beginning "Mention was made a little before," and ending "queen Anne his wife" in p. 68. This parliament of 1532 adjourned May 14th to February 4th, 1533, and that session adjourned April 7th to January 15th, 1534.

Page 58, line 4 from the bottom.]—This oath, as to the exact language of it, bears the construction above put upon it by the king, which seems to have been first suggested to him by Cromwell (see p. 367 of this volume). Bossuet, however, contends (Hist. Var. c. 7, p. 286), that he and every French bishop took that oath with a mental reservation, limiting it to spirituals: this may serve to account for Cranmer's having taken such an oath, especially when he added a formal protestation limiting the oath, which Bossuet, however, deems "fort inutile."

Page 59, line 27. "The oath of the clergy to the king."—Archbishop Warham recorded in his Register a protest against the king's proceedings, February 9th, in which he says that whatsoever statutes had passed or were to pass in this present parliament, to the prejudice of the pope or the apostolic see, or that derogated from or lessened the ecclesiastical authority or liberties of his see of Canterbury, he did not consent unto them, but disowned and dissented from them." (See Wilkins, iii. p. 746.)

Page 59, line 4 from the bottom.]—Sir Thomas More resigned the chancellorship May 16th, 1532, when the king (on the 20th) committed it to Sir Thomas Audley, with the title of "Lord Keeper;" and in September, when a new seal was given him, it was still with no higher title. Sir Thomas More continued to act as a law officer through the rest of the year, and the title of "Lord Chancellor" was not transferred from him to Audley till January 26th of the next year, when Audley delivering the seal to the king, he kept it only a quarter of an hour, and then returned it to him with the title of Lord Chancellor. (Rymer, vol. xiv. p. 446.)

Page 60, line 4.]—Strype places these preachings in the year 1532. The person presently mentioned, Thomas Abel, was found guilty of misprision of treason in the affair of Elizabeth Barton, the nun of Kent, in 1531 (see p. 63 of this volume), and in 1540 he was executed for refusing to take the oath of supremacy (see p. 438). An Answer to Abel's book is printed in Strype's Appendix to his Memorials, vol. i. No. 39. The King's Book presently mentioned is different from that mentioned at p. 656, note, which was written before March 1528, at which time it was presented to the pope.

Page 60, line 14.]—The time of this marriage has been differently stated. The earliest and most authentic account is that of Cranmer, who in a letter dated June 17th, 1533, says, "She was married much about St. Paul's day [January 25]," and adds, he was not present: "I knew not therefore [for] a fortnight after it was done." (Ellis's Letters, ii. p. 39.) Wyatt, Stow, and Godwin say January 25th. Hall, Cowper, Holinshead, and Sanders, say November 1532; and Foxe follows this date.

Page 60, line 16 from the bottom. "Books of the Germans, as Francis Lambert De Sectis."—Some notice has been taken of this writer in the Appendix to vol. iv. note on p. 558; to which may here be added the following passage of his own writing, describing a few of the circumstances which induced him to enter (as he did, at an early age) into the order of the Observantines: the same means are taken, we are well aware, in our own day to captivate the inexperienced.

"Apud Avenionam inclytam Galliarum urbem, me tenello adhuc puero existente, patre defuncto, et Christi Spiritu animum pueri ad meliora sollicitante, occurrit externus ille Minoritarum (quos Observantes vocant) splendor, multam sanctitatis speciem habens, quos tales fore interne puerili æstimatione sentiebam. Admirabar in illis tegumentorum decentiam, vultus demissos, oculorum inclinationem, suavissima fietæ pietatis eloquia, pedes nudos, sandaliis calepodiisque utentes. Laudabam in iis gestuum gravitatem, incessum maturum, brachia complicata, exquisitos et eisdem expolitos prædicandi gestus; et similia quæque. At ignorabam lupinum illud vulpinumque pectus, sub vestimentis orium latens." Schelhorn Amœnitates Literariæ (Francof. 1730) tom. iii. pp. 313, 314.

The full title of the particular work here mentioned is as follows:

"In regulam Minoritarum et contra universas perditionis sectas Fr. Lamberti commentarii ve evangelicæ, denno per ipsum recogniti," &c. Argentorati, 1525. See Freytag's "Analecta Literaria," p. 508; and Dr. McCre's "Miscellaneous Writings," p. 105. A copy of the work is in Ston College Library.

Page 61, line 24. "The seventh day of September."—"Being Sunday." (Hall.) This is the true date, the original letter to the king announcing the birth (now in the Harleian MSS. No. 283) is dated this day from Greenwich. Cranmer's letter to Hawkins misdates it a week later. (Turner.)

Page 62, line 23. "Hypocras."—Hypocras was a beverage, composed of wine, spices and sugar, strained through a cloth. It is said to have taken its name from Hippocrates' sieve, the term apothecaries gave to a strainer. (Halliwell.)

Page 64, line 11. "Ye heard before, how the queen, after called princess dowager," &c.]—This paragraph in Foxe begins thus: "Ye heard before how the parliament had enacted that no person after a certain day, should appeal to Rome for any cause: notwithstanding which act the queen, now called princess dowager, had appealed to the court of Rome before that act made; so that it was doubted whether that appeal was good or not." This statement involves anachronism and self-contradiction, and is therefore modified in the present edition. Katharine appealed in June 1528 (see p. 51); but the first Act restraining Appeals was the result of this very debate, being passed in the parliament which sat February 4th—April 7th, 1533, 24 Hen. VIII. cap. 12; it was not, however, confirmed till the following year, by royal letters patent dated July 9th, 1534 (see Rapin and Burnet). The Act for calling Katharine "princess dowager" was not passed till 1534, Statutes 25 Hen. VIII. cap. 22.

Page 64, line 10 from the bottom. "This divorce following after the new marriage."—It seems probable that the private marriage of Anne Bullen was preceded by a private divorce of Katharine. (See Turner's Hist. of Hen. VIII. ii. p. 333, note.)

Page 69, line 10. "An Act," &c.]—This Act is given in the Statutes at Large, cap. 1; it was passed in the parliament which sat November 3d—December 18th, 1534. The penalty annexed to the breach of this Act is given at p. 114.

The Convocation which sat at the same time before their rising addressed the king, December 19th, through Cranmer, to command all his subjects who had in their possession any books of suspected doctrine, especially in the vulgar tongue, imprinted beyond or this side the sea, to bring them in within three months under a penalty to be limited by him: they requested, moreover, that his Majesty would be pleased to decree, that the Scriptures should be translated into the vulgar tongue by some honest and learned men to be nominated by the king, and be delivered to the people according to their learning. A sort of compromise between the two parties.

Page 70, line 38. "The general sentence which is usually accustomed to be read four times in the year."—This is reprinted by Strype, Mem. i. Records, No. 46, with this title: "The General Sentence or Curse used to be read to the people four times in the year, Taken out of the Festival, printed by Wynkyn de Worde, 1532."

Page 83, note (3).]—The passage here referred to by Tonsal has been interpolated in the papal editions of Cyprian, Romæ, 1563; Paris, 1726, p. 195, and Paris, 1836, p. 172, in order to make it support the supremacy of St. Peter, and so (it is imagined) of the bishop of Rome. Baluze intended honestly to have omitted the interpolated words (see notes p. 545, edit. Paris, 1726), but the succeeding Editor replaced them, and cut down Baluze's notes and altered them beside, before they would suit. See James's "Corruption of Scripture, Councils, and Fathers," pp. 75—83, edit. Lond. 1843, for a full account of the original depravation of the passage.

Page 91, line 13 from the bottom, and note (5). "Yet, notwithstanding his Master's high legacy and commandment, would flee," &c.]—The circumstance here alluded to is recorded in vol. i. p. 101. Besides Hegeſippus, the authority there referred to, Origen (in Joan. tom. xx. § 12), quoting the apocryphal book 'the Acts of St. Paul,' introduces one of the expressions made use of in the story, which Ambrose has detailed at some little length (In Aux. Epist. lib. v. Ep. 32). But as Basnage remarks: "Ignoscant Ambrosiani cineres, si de hac traditione multi nobis injiciantur scrupuli. Primum enim trecentis amplius annis ignota fuit, etsi bene multi martyrii Petrini mentionem moverint. Deinde non satis conspirat cum Scripturâ: Cum enim imminentis sibi supplicii Petrus Christum jam monitorem habuisset, Scio cito futurum ut deponam tabernaculum meum, sicut Dominus noster Jesus Christus declaravit mihi, nil opus erat miraculosâ Servatoris et apparitione, et declaratione Vado iterum Romam crucifigi. Quæ si vera est, posterior illâ esse debuit, cujus Petrus meminit in Epistola, quæ liberâ non catenatâ manu exarata est." (Annales Politico-Eccles. ad an. 65, § 11.)

The church of Rome has, as usual, made her use of the tradition (see Cave's Life of St. Peter, sect. 9, § 6): and Baronius, with the help of Pseudo-Linus, embraces it manfully:—"Traditionis incredibilitatem adauget Baronius, qui Petrum e carcere aufugisse scribit: Non deerat, inquit, ad hæc præstanda carceris custodum officium Processi et Martiniani, quos Petrus initiaverat sacro baptisate. Fugiebant quidem Apostoli, antequam raperentur in carcerem. Inauditum autem est ipsos unquam arripuisse fugam e custodiâ publicâ, quo facto multis offensionem movissent." (Basnage, ut supra. Page 114, last line.]—Tyndale was probably the son of Thomas Tyndale, by Alicia Hunt, of North Nibley, in Gloucestershire, and born about 1484, and therefore about 50 years old at his death. (Anderson's Annals of the English Bible.)

Page 115, line 16.]—Tyndale is supposed to have lived at Sir John Walsh's for about two years, 1520—1522, at Little Sodbury in Gloucestershire. See the note infra on p. 127, line 25.

Page 115, line 23. "Luther and Erasmus."—Tyndale, however, seems like Zuinglius and Lefevre to have received the light independently of Luther or any other man: for in his Exposition of the Epistle of St. John, published in September 1531, he says, that he had "marked" the disposition of the Romish ecclesiastics to quench the truth "above this dozen years:" which carries us back to 1518 or earlier, when he was a private lecturer in divinity at Magdalen Hall, Oxford, whence he removed in 1519 to Cambridge.

Page 116, line 17 from the bottom.]—The bishop's chancellor mentioned here was the same Dr. Thomas Parker who dug up and burnt William Tracy's bones: see p. 31.

Page 117, line 9 from the bottom. "Especially for the great commendation of Erasmus, who, in his annotations," &c.]—Foxe is here guilty of an anachronism. Tyndale, it is true, in his Preface to the Pentateuch, says, "The bishop of London came to my remembrance, whom Erasmus (whose tongue maketh of little gnats great elephants, and lifteth up above the stars whoever giveth him a little exhibition) praiseth exceedingly among other, in his Annotations on the New Testament, for his great learning." But the earliest edition of Erasmus's Testament, which Tyndale could here have referred to, was the fourth, printed at Basil 1527, when Tyndale was already abroad; in which edition, in the "Capita Argumentorum," prefixed to the Testament, for the first time Erasmus mentions Tonstal among his patrons; in the editions of 1516, 1519, 1522, he does not mention Tonstal at all. Tyndale, therefore, must have been attracted to London by Tonstal's general reputation as a patron of poor scholars, afterward so much enhanced by Erasmus's notice of him in the Preface to his Testament.

Page 118, line 17. "Humphrey Mummuth."—He has been mentioned by Foxe, vol. iv. p. 617. Foxe has probably derived this portion of his narrative partly from Tyndale's Preface to the Pentateuch, published 1530, and partly from Munmouth's Letter to Wolsey, out of the Tower, May 19th, 1528, printed by Strype, Mem. i. Records No. 89. That letter states, that Tyndale resided with Munmouth in London more than six months in the year 1523.

Page 119, line 30. "At his first departing out of the realm he took his journey into the further parts of Germany, as into Saxony, where he had conference with Luther," &c.]—Sir Thomas More in his "Dialogue" states, "It is to be considered that at the time of this translation, Hychens [that is, Tyndale] was with Luther in Wittenburg, and set certain glosses in the margin [alluding to the quarto edition] framed for the setting forth of that ungracious sect;" and again: "The confederacy between Luther and him is a thing well known, and plainly confessed by such as have been taken, and convicted here of heresy, coming from them." The confessions, however, of men under torture, and in danger of their lives, prove nothing; and Tyndale, in his Answer to Sir T. More, pointedly denies it: "And when he saith Tyndale was confederate with Luther, that is not truth."

The following statement, gathered from Anderson's "Annals of the English Bible," will be acceptable:—It appears from Munmouth's letter, that, after residing with him above six months, Tyndale (probably at the beginning of 1524) "made his exchange to Hamburgh," whence he corresponded with Munmouth "within a year after;" during which interval Luther was engaged in his violent controversy with Carolostat, and would not be likely to harbour any man who, like Tyndale, would entirely differ from him on the Eucharist. From Hamburgh he proceeded to Cologne, probably about April or May 1525, where he was joined by William Roze, a friar observant of the Franciscan order at Greenwich, who became his amanuensis. Here he printed, in English, first the Gospel of St. Matthew with a Prologue, and the Gospel of St. Mark; also Luther's Preface to the Epistle to the Romans, which had been translated into Latin by Justin Jonas in 1522-3, and therefore Tyndale did not necessarily translate it from the German, as Bishop Marsh has said; moreover, Tyndale added to the original nearly half as much more. He then proceeded with a quarto edition of the English New Testament with marginal glosses, and proceeded as far as sheet K, when the work was stopped by John Cochläus, who gives a full narrative of the affair in his "Com. de Actis et Scriptis Martini Lutheri," Mogunt. 1549, or Cologne. 1568, pp. 153—156. From Cologne Tyndale and Roze contrived to escape with the sheets already printed to Worms, where they finished the quarto edition of 3000 copies, with glosses, within the year 1525 (Anderson, p. 63). Only a fragment of this quarto edition is known to exist, containing, however, the title-page and Prologue: it came to light in 1836, at the late Mr. Rodd's, the bookseller, of Newport Street, London. At the same time Tyndale set about an octavo edition without glosses, which had been read in England as well as the quarto, early in 1526. (Id. pp. 65, 66.) Only two copies of this are known to be extant: see Appendix to vol. iv. notes on pp. 617, 667. Mr. Anderson (p. 153) cites, in confirmation of all this, a letter from Dr. Robert Ridley to Henry Goide, a chaplain to Archbishop Warham, dated Knoll, Feb. 24th, 1527 (Cotton MSS. Cleop. v. fol. 362, b), and another from Nixe, bishop of Norwich, to Warham, dated Hoxne, June 14th, 1527. (Cotton MSS. Vitell. B. ix. fol. 117, b.) While, therefore, it may be true that Luther and Tyndale met at some time, it could hardly have been prior to the first publication of his Testament in 1525.

Lastly, it seems very doubtful whether Tyndale understood German, and could have translated from Luther's German. George Joye (Anderson, p. 397), when he had picked a quarrel with Tyndale, says, "I am not afraid to answer Master Tyndale in this matter, for all his high learning in Hebrew, Greek, and Latin, &c." And Herman Buschius told Spalatinus, "Wormatiæ sex mille exemplaria Novi Testamenti Anglicè excusa. Id operis versum esse ab Anglo, illic cum duobus aliis Britannis divertente, ita septem linguarum perito, Hebraicæ, Græcæ, Latinæ, Italicæ, Hispanicæ, Britannicæ, Galicæ, ut quæcumque loquatur, in ea natum putes." (Schellhorn, Amœnitates Literariæ, iv. p. 431.)

Page 121, last line.]—"This servant" who accompanied Phillips was one Gabriel Donne, or Dunne, a monk from Stratford-le-Bow abbey, who had proceeded as a student to Louvain. See two letters of Thomas Theobald, dated Antwerp July 31st, 1535, to Cromwell and Cranmer (Cotton MSS. Galba B. x. 81, 102), which describe the movements of Phillips. His history has been traced out by Mr. Anderson, who shows that he stood proctor for his convent in compounding a dispute between the convent and the vicar of the parish of West Ham, Feb. 7th, 1517. (Tunstall Register, fol. 145.) He continued for six months at Louvain, aiding Phillips in his persecution of Tyndale, and returned to England in June 1535, when he was appointed by Mr. Secretary Cromwell abbot of Buckfaster, or Buckfastleigh, in Devonshire, worth 1000 marks per annum. He was in St. Paul's at the convocation of 1536; his name is among those subscribed to the Articles then issued: see Dodd's Church History. He obtained the prebend of Wilsdon in St. Paul's, March 16th, 1541. He was appointed to administer the affairs of the diocese of London on the suspension of Bonner in September 1549, till the appointment of Ridley in April 1550; and died an unaltered man, Dec. 5th, 1558. From his bequests to Trinity Hall, Cambridge, of which Gardiner was Master from 1525, and old Bishop Nixe a great benefactor, we may well conjecture that he was partly educated there, and that he and Phillips were employed by them to circumvent Tyndale.

It is now succeeded by a large prison and house of correction.

Page 123, line 4 from the bottom.]—There is among the Cotton MSS. (Galba B. x. fol. 60) a letter from Poyntz to his brother John at North Okendon in Essex, who was much about the Court, begging him to exert himself with the king to interpose for Tyndale; it is dated Antwerp, August 25th, 1535, and in consequence of it a letter was written by Cromwell to the marquis of Barough, and another to the archbishop of Palermo, which were sent to Mr. Robert Flegge, a merchant at Antwerp, who acknowledges the receipt of them Sept. 10th in a letter to Cromwell, dated Antwerp, Sept. 22, 1535 (Cotton MSS. Galba B. x. fol. 62). This archbishop of Palermo was Carondelet, president of the council. In this letter Flegge states that he had forwarded them to the marquis by Poyntz, as described by Foxe.

Page 127, line 25.]—Mr. Anderson, in his "Annals of the English Bible," states that Sir Thomas Poyntz lies buried at the parish church of the family manor, North Okendon, Essex, eighteen miles from London, and gives the following inscription from his tablet on the church wall:—

"Thomas Poyntz Armiger (filius Gulielmi Pointz, ad quem post mortem fratris, Joannis, Domini[um] hujus villæ] et patronatus Ecclesiæ pervenit; qui duxit in matrimonium Annam van Calva, Filiam et unam cohæredam Joannis Calvæ Armigeri nationeq. Germani, ex qua genuit Gabrielem, Ferdinandum, ac Robertum filios, filiamq. unam Susanam.

Reg. Eliz. quinto."

He was descended from Drago Fitz-Pons, who accompanied the Conqueror into England. While one branch of this ancient family settled in Essex, the other settled in Gloucestershire, and Tyndale commenced his career in connexion with the one branch, as he ended it with the other: for Sir John Walsh, where he was tutor, married the daughter of Sir Robert Poyntz, of Iron Acton, Gloucestershire.

Page 132, line 14 from the bottom. "George Joye."]—See the Appendix to vol. iv. note on p. 617. The present passage refers to a proceeding on Joye's part, which compelled Tyndale to disavow him, as he had previously done by Roye. The widow of Christr. Endhoven at Antwerp undertook to print a new edition of Tyndale's New Testament; and Joye engaged to correct it from the Vulgate, after his own opinion: this edition was finished in August 1534; the only copy known to be extant is in the Grenville collection. Meanwhile, Tyndale also himself was preparing a corrected edition of his Testament, which was finished in November: it is prefaced by two addresses, in the second of which he gives his name at full length, and warns the public against Joye's edition, in which he had introduced many unwarranted and improper alterations of Tyndale's translation, which was made from the original. Joye wrote an "Apology" Feb. 28th, 1535, to satisfy Tyndale and the public: in this, however, he did not succeed, and Tyndale felt obliged to discountenance him. Joye fell into much discredit with the Protestants for his petulant behaviour against Tyndale, nor does his character appear to advantage. Townley makes this remark (Bibl. Literature, vol. ii. p. 394). It is not generally known that this Joye was examined before the bishops, the very same day with Bilney and Arthur: see vol. iv. p. 621. This appears from a publication of Joye's, which is quoted in the British Magazine for January 1816. The extracts there given do not indicate in Joye a very scrupulous veracity, and his behaviour to Tyndale might seem to argue a want of strict probity: but it would be unfair to make this a ground of censure on the whole body of the Reformers; for in the present instance he was denounced for his disingenuous behaviour.

D. 1483, got a great reputation by his writings, and the bishopric of Nocera; but he was looked upon as a mercenary writer, so that no great credit is given to his histories. He died the 11th of December, 1552, at Florence, whither he had retired, very much discontented with the court of Rome, because he could not obtain the bishopric of Como." (Bayle's Dictionary.) There is a slight mistake in Foxe's designating him actually a "cardinal," though he was aspiring to the honour. "Il avoit eu la foiblesse de croire des astrologues qui lui avaint prédit qu'il serait cardinal: il se lassa enfin d'attendre l'effet de leurs predictions, et quitta la cour Romaine en 1549." There was an injunction on the subject issued by Cranmer in the preceding summer within the Diocese of Hereford through the chancellor, sede vacante, but nothing sooner. If the present “Item,” however, be still deemed genuine, it must refer to Coverdale’s Bible, finished October 4th, 1535. (See note infra, on p. 410, line 8.)

Page 184, line 34. “*Luther’s books . . . Beside the books of Latin, French, and Dutch, in which there are of these evill sectes an innumerable sorte, there are made in the English tongue, First Tyndale’s New Testament, father of them all by reason of his false translating: And after that the five books of Moses, translated by the same man, &c. &c.

“Which books all be it that they neither can be there printed without great cost, nor here sold without great adventure and perill; yet cease they not with money sent from hence to print them there, and send them hither by the whole fattes full at once, and in some places looking for no lucre, caste them abroad by night,” &c.—(*The Confutation of Tyndale’s Answer—printed at London by W. Geddes's "Miscellaneous Tracts," vol. ii. pp. 210—220: "That the reader" (he writes) "may not think that this story is believed no where but in Spain, he must know that the truth of St. James's body being at Compostella has been confirmed by the Breves of several popes; and who, having granted the same Indulgences to those that go thither in pilgrimage, as are granted to pilgrimages to Jerusalem, the Western Christians were, by those Indulgences, set on flocking from all parts to Compostella in vast multitudes, to the great benefit of the distressed Spanish kings: for though the reports of St. James's own personal military feats against the Moors may not be very certain, certain it is that his pilgrims did both with their purses and persons do the Spaniards great service against those Infidels, and the truth is, that was the great design of that pious fraud.

"I shall here enumerate only the absurdities expressed in this Legend, which are plain indications of its being a foolishly framed, though cunningly devised, fable.

"As, first, St. James's going to the Blessed Virgin to have a license from her to do what Christ had commanded him.

"Secondly, the Blessed Virgin, in whom no grace shone more illustriously than a profound humility in the sight of God, requiring him to build his first church in Spain to her honour.

"Thirdly, St. James's having sailed round Spain before he landed in it.

"Fourthly, his having raised an old heathen prophet to light, who had been dead and buried near six hundred years.

"Fifthly, his having built a church in Spain within ten years after Christ's ascension; with the whole story of the jasper pillar; and which story is so firmly believed, that, to this day, there is no lady so famous over Spain and Portugal for working of miracles, as our Lady of the Pillar.

"Sixthly, the marble ship his body was carried in from Joppa to Galicia.

"Seventhly, there being a king of Galicia at that time.

"Eighthly, his fighting against the Moors, armed cap-à-pie, and mounted on a prancing white palfrey.

"Ninthly, the yearly tribute of an hundred Christian damsels paid by the Spaniards to the Moors.

"Tenthly, St. James's head having been sent from Jerusalem to the king's daughter, and by her sent to Compostella, above one thousand years after he was killed. His head is likewise at Braga; and if the dean of that church's word may be taken for it, who shewed it to me and to some Protestant merchants, it is certainly the true head; more miracles than can be numbered having been wrought by it, as he told us, to confirm its being so." The proviso, "except where necessity requireth," belongs rather to Gratian than to the Decree itself; though it is in some measure borne out by the words of Causa xxx. quæst. 3, § 4.

Mary was deprived being yet unmarried, and ended his life at Ankerwyke."

Page 236, line 5. "And thus much, hitherto, of Lambert's articles, answers, disputation, and his condemnation also." ]—In Foxe this sentence is followed by these words: "Now to proceed further to the story of his death." Then comes the paragraph beginning, "Upon the day," &c. and the next to it, "As touching," &c. After which comes a paragraph, "Thus ye have heard, by what craft and subtlety, . . . should not be long protracted." This last paragraph is evidently out of place, and has been shifted higher up into its present position.

Page 255, note.]—Both this document relative to the Council of Vicenza and the former relative to the Council of Mantua (p. 138), were published under the following title: "Henrici Octavi regis Angliæ ad Carolum Cæsarem, cæterosque orbis Christiani monarchas, populumque Christianum, Epistola, cur is Vicentiam non sit venturus: additus est et libellus ille, quem sup. anno Rex universique Britannicæ proceres de Mantuensi Concilio ediderunt; Londini, 1538." They were translated into English the same year. As Foxe does not state any immediate source from whence he derived his documents, the above reference is given. (See Herbert's Typographical Antiquities by Dibdin, vol. iii. p. 303.) It seems to have been judged expedient to make the continental protestants acquainted with the king's reasons for declining to attend at Vicenza, which was done in Sereniss. et inclyti regis Angliæ Henrici Octavi. . . Epistola de Synodo Vincentina; at the end Vitebergæ, ex officina Petri Scitz, 1539.

Page 258, line 25.]—These Injunctions will be found in Bonner's Register, folio 27, &c. Foxe omits the preamble, and condenses most of the Injunctions themselves. It is intitled in the margin of the Register, "Proclamatio sive mandatum Regium contra Bibliopolas atque libellos per eos venditos;" and it is dated "Westm. decimo sexto Novembris, anno regni Regis II. VIII. xxx<sup>mo</sup>.; [A.D. 1538.] Agreeably to this entry, Foxe's date of these Injunctions, three lines above, "the next year following, which was A.D. 1539," has been altered.

Page 260, line 30. "The intended marriage of the lady Anne of Cleve."—Foxe says "the late marriage," &c.: but it has not yet been mentioned, nor has the narrative reached that period: it took place January 6th, A.D. 1540.

Page 261, line 6 from the bottom. "In the year next following, which was A.D. 1539."—Foxe says, "In the year next following, which was A.D. 1540." A parliament did meet in April, 1540, but the parliament which passed the Act of Six Articles met April 28th, A.D. 1539. Foxe again makes the same mistake infra at p. 398, where his text has again been corrected. The Act of Six Articles is printed at full in the Statutes of the Realm, vol. iii. p. 725, entitled, "An Act for abolishing of Diversity of Opinions," 31 Hen. VIII. cap. 14.

Page 265, line 18. "Who within few days after was apprehended."—This is an error, arising from Foxe's having erroneously supposed that the parliament which passed the Act of Six Articles, as just described, sat in 1540 instead of 1539 (see the last note but two): he was not arrested till June 10th, 1540 (see pp. 398, 461).

Page 269, line 26. "Emissene, comparing a man."—These homilies are mistakingly attributed to Eusebius of Emesa. "Eus ipsius non esse inter eruditos constat. Id enim non modo nostri pridem observarunt, sed et ex Adversariis ipsis, Bellarminus, Baronius, Sixtus Senensis, Possevinus et Perronius; tum quia in nonnullis Imperatoris Constantii mentio fiat, tanquam hæretici et crudelissimi, quod convenire non potest Eusebio Emeseno, tum quia stylus omnium Latini authoris sit, ut ex innumeris indicis cuivis legenti liquido patet, tum propter varias alias rationes, quas apud illos videre est." Albertinus de Eucharistiâ, p. 877; who thinks that the various homilies are assignable to different writers. That which Foxe quotes is given to Eucherius of Lyons.

Page 271, line 31. "Another of the like standing, called Christianus Druthmarus."—A monk of the Benedictine order, whose evidence was said by some Romanists to have been unfairly obtained.

"Christianus Druthmarus Corbeie veteris Monachus scripsit sec. ix. commentarium in Mathæum, ex quo excerpta quædam lectu dignissima Mabilonius affert Annal. tom. ii. lib. 33, p. 660. Wetstein states that he had collated both of the editions mentioned in the previous quotation, and found no material variation between them. (See Fabricii Biblioth. Mediæ Latinitat.) See Maitland's "List of printed books in the Archiep. Library at Lambeth," p. 368, for some curious information on the very rare first edition of this writer (the existence of which was denied by several Romanists), printed at Strasburg in 1514.

Page 291, line 16. "With a wanyand"—more frequently written "with a wanion." Nares says that the phrase is of very common occurrence in the old writers, but totally unexplained: he conjectures it to mean "with a vengeance, with a plague."

Page 292. "This cowardly recantation of Berengarius."—There was nothing voluntary in this declaration; and it is rather hard to imagine a man ready to profess, what adherents of the Church of Rome have actually themselves since declined to stand by. See this proved in Aubertin's work "De Eucharistia," p. 951; who, after quoting several Romish writers, and the Glossator too on this very portion of the Canon Law, goes on:—"Verum, confessorum illam per se Berengarius non edidit. Illi a Papa Nicolao et Concilio Romano præscripta est. Judicio ergo Alexandri, Bonaventuræ, Gabrielis [Biel], et Roffensis, Nicolaus et Conc. Romanum errarunt in fidei materia."

The writers here mentioned object to the wording of the recantation, just as the modern priests of Rome wish to abandon the language of the 'Trent Catechism, de Sacram. cap. iv. § 31.

Page 305, line 3 from the bottom. "The year of our Saviour 1067, at what time pope Hildebrand began first to occupy the papal chair."—Hildebrand, or Gregory VII., did not become actually pope till April 22d, A.D. 1073: he exercised, however, very great influence in the appointment and counsels of the pope for some time previous, as Foxe shows, vol. ii. pp. 96—101, 115; and this is probably his meaning in the words, "began first to occupy the papal chair." The date 1067 is repeated at p. 331 with reference to the Council of Milan, there supposed to have been held under Alexander II., but really under Nicolas II, A.D. 1059. Foxe here also evidently refers to that Council, see p. 306, note (1). Under all these circumstances, the date 1067 has been left to stand, though it might well be altered to 1059; for Nicolas II., crowned January 1059, was a pope in whose appointment Hildebrand seems to have had chief influence (see vol. ii. pp. 97, 98).

Page 308, line 7. "The sixth council, called the Synod of Constantinople, almost seven hundred years after Christ."—More correctly the "Quinisext" or "Trullian" Council, having been held, A.D. 692, in a palace at Constantinople called "Trullum," as a supplement to the Fifth and Sixth General Councils. The Decrees of the Trullian Council are printed in Labbe, tom. vi. and the chapters referred to here by Foxe are in cols. 1147—1149. The Fifth General Council was held at Constantinople A.D. 553, and the Sixth A.D. 680.

Page 308, line 9. "Because in the order," &c.]—Though this translation accords with the Latin given in note (2), yet it scarcely represents the Greek with sufficient exactness. Read, "Since we have learnt that in the Church of Rome it has become the rule that all candidates for the office of priest or deacon shall engage that they will have no more connexion with their wives, we, following the rule of apostolic piety and order, enact that the lawful marriages of men in orders from henceforth shall stand in force, &c." And a few lines lower down, for, "And likewise this priest and deacon, &c." read, "And, in the same way, if any priest or deacon, upon pretence of religion, &c."

Page 311, line 1. "Pope Damasus reciteth."—Most of the names here adduced (if not rather the whole) are long posterior to the time of Damasus. Ant. Augustinus Archbp. of Tarragona thinks the list has been made up by other writers. See his Dialogi de emendatione Gratiani, lib. i. dial. 6. 1: "Cur ergo Damasus tribuit, quæ aliorum sunt? Id non Gratiani, sed Palæa erratum esse suspicor, cujus nomen edidit Demochares. Aut si Gratianus id scripsit, ex titulo libri pontificalis Damasi deceptus est." (P. 63, edit. Venet. 1786.) See more in the Addenda to this Volume.

Page 311, line 23.]—The words "of the flesh" are put into the text from the Latin in the note.

Page 312, note 1.]—Bishop Hall, in the 3d Epistle of the 2d Decade, quotes this Letter with the highest commendation, as conclusive proof of priests' marriage having been so long allowed in the Church, and refers his reader to Foxe for the translation of it.

For this Epistle, and especially his notice of this Letter, he was taken to task by C. E. mass-priest: which called forth his work intitled "The Honour of the Married Clergy." In Book III. of this treatise, and sections ii. iii. iv. v. he takes up the subject of this Letter at large. In the course of his remarks, Bishop Hall speaks in the warmest terms of approbation of Foxe and his "Acts and Monuments."

Page 312, sub-note b. "Canon Apost. v."—Cabassntius is so much offended at the clearness of the sentence against the celibacy of the clergy (Notit. Eccles. p. 9, Lugd. 1690), that he thus evades the Canon: "verisimiliter fuit olim ab hæreticis vel schismaticis confectus." But Bellarmine's argument is more ingenious: "Adde quod iste ipse Canon pro nobis facit; nam Græca vox, pro qua habemus religionis, est εὐλαβείας, quæ cautionem proprie significat. Itaque sensus est, episcopus aut presbyter nequaquam prætextu cautionis uxorem abiciat; id est, ne curam uxoris dimittat eo prætextu quod tenetur ab ea se continere." (De Cler. lib. i. cap. 21.) However, the cardinal's proposed translation is reckoned among "corruptions" by Dr. James; and religionis is the accredited term, and that used in the version of Dionysius Exiguus. (Gibbings' Roman Forgeries, and Falsifications, Dublin, 1842, pp. 104-5.)

Page 314, note (1).]—Foxe's reasoning seems to prove conclusively, that the Nicholas to whom the letters are addressed was Nicholas II., pope A. D. 1059. If so, we must look for some author contemporaneous with that date. The date assigned to Udalric in this note comes nearest, but does not reach it by 100 years. The following observations of Eccard on the subject are worth recording here:—

"Eadem (epistola) jam olim in Catalogo Testium Veritatis Flacii, in Antilogia Papæ, et alibi, sub nomine Udalrici Episcopi Augustani impressa est. In veteri Epistolarum Ecclesiasticarum collectione Msta, quæ in regia bibliotheca Hanoveræ reperitur, ejusdem initium hoc est: Nicolao domino et patri, pervigili S. Romanæ ecclesie provisorio, G. solo nomine Episcopus amorem ut filius, timorem ut servus: Nicolaus II. Papa an. 1058 electus et an. 1061 mortuus concilium an. 1059 Romæ celebravit, in quo clericorum conjugia prohibuit. Et hæc occasione Epistola, de qua agimus, conscripta est. Sed diu ante, anno nempe 973, jam obierat Udalricus Episc. Augustanus, ejusque ætate nulla de conjugii Clericorum quæstio mota est. Episcopum vero in Germania nullum Udalrici nomine sub Nicolao II. invenias, multo minus Augustanum. Suspicio hinc, hominem veteris literas ducendi rationis ignarum cum G. invenisset, id V. esse putasse, et Udalricum interpretatum; cum vero Udalrico Episc. Augustano nullus hujus nominis celebrior esset, eidem Epistolam hanc oscitanter adscriptis, et asseclas hinc plures ea in re accepisse. Codex vero Hanoveranus clare admodum G. habet: et fuere Nicolai II. Papæ tempore duo Episcopi satis clari, quorum nomina ab ea litera appellant—Gundacarus nempe Episcopus Eistetensis, et Guntherus, Cancellarius Regius et Episcopus Bambergensis. Hic Henrico IV. Imp. addictus erat; et Bambergenses scriptores eum virum in omni scientiarum genere versatum, raræ eloquentiæ laude celebratum, ac literis tam divinis quam humanis eruditum appellant, id quod in auctorem Epistolæ ad Nicolaum Papam quadrat. Unde etiam huic eidem illam adscribendam esse non immerito censemus.” (Corpus Historicum mediæ ævi—a J. G. Page 327, line 3. “In his synod at Rome.”]—A. D. 1063, cap. 3, in Labbe, tom. ix. col. 1176. Foxe’s text reads erroneously “of Mantua.”

Page 327, line 20. “Writing to Otho, archbishop of Cologne . . . in the Council of Mantua.”]—“Anno, archbishop of Cologne, proposed the assembling of a council, in order to put an end, by that means, to the schism [between Alexander and Cadolus the anti-Pope]. The proposal was not at all relished by Alexander; but being persuaded by his friends to agree to it, a council was appointed to meet at Mantua [A. D. 1067], and the Italian bishops, those especially of Lombardy, were invited to it. Cadolus was particularly summoned; but he did not appear. The Council, however, met at the time appointed, and it being made plainly to appear that Cadolus had been preferred to the see by dint of money, his election was declared simoniacal and null, and he forbidden, on pain of excommunication, to exercise thenceforth any pontifical, episcopal, or sacerdotal functions. Alexander, too, was arraigned of simony, but having denied the charge upon oath (which he at first shewed himself averse to, as inconsistent with the dignity of high Pontiff), his election was declared canonical, and he acknowledged by the whole Council for lawful Pope.” (Bower’s History of the Bishops of Rome, vol. v. p. 230; and Pagi Crit. in Baron. an. 1064.) See Appendix to vol. ii. note on p. 100.

Page 330, line 13. “Notwithstanding the constitution of pope Leo,” &c.]—“Notwithstanding” is here substituted for Foxe’s “according to,” which misrepresents the meaning of “post” in the note.

Page 349, line 30. “The gloss . . . reporteth, that ‘this institution of penance.’”]—It would be more accurate to say, that this is among the suppositions of the Glossator, John Semeca, part of whose words are:—“vel forte tunc non erat,” &c. Decret. pars ii. de Pœnit. Dist. i. § 1.

Articles. (See notes infra, on pp. 537, 547.) This conjecture is confirmed by a note in Appendix to vol. vi. on p. 643.

Page 360, line 17. “Also, for the second conviction or attainder they so provided, that, the next year following,” &c.]—Foxe seems to have supposed that this Act of 32 Hen. VIII. chap. 10, relaxing the severity of the Act of Six Articles, applied only to § 20 of that Act, relating to concubinary clerks; but it also recites, and clearly includes in its provisions, § 5, relating to married clerks. The Act of Six Articles is printed in the "Statutes of the Realm," tom. iii. p. 740; and the Act 32 Hen. VIII. chap. 10, is at p. 754.

Page 368, line 18. "Whereof before you may read more at large."—Foxe here puts this erroneously to the year 1530; perhaps Cromwell's advice might have been first tendered in that year. (See before, p. 56.)

Page 368, line 29. "He was constituted also vicegerent to the king."—The appointment is preserved in the Cotton MSS., Cleop. F. ii. fol. 131, and printed in Burnet, Collier, and Wilkins, iii. p. 784. Its proper date is July 18th, 1535 (Stowe and Collier). It gave him rank next to the king himself, it made him Superior of all the monasteries, and in the king's absence he might preside in the Convocation. It was after this that he sent out the Visitors to inspect and report on the Abbeys. He was also "vicar-general." The offices of vicar-general and vicegerent, however, were distinct, as Burnet informs us: Cromwell was only vicar-general for two years; by this office he had no precedence, nor authority over the bishops.

Page 373, line 21. "Full of all feidity."—Though the monastic institutions, by putting an unnatural restraint on human nature, tended to produce, and notoriously did produce everywhere, such results as are here hinted at, yet it is not improbable that, the dissolution of the monasteries being resolved on, persons were ready, in hopes of reward, to make depositions before the Visitors, which were devoid of truth. See a note on this passage in Wordsworth's Ecclesiastical Biography, London, 1839, vol. ii. p. 235.

Page 375, line 10.]—The words here given are not exactly the same as in the Epistle of Leo itself; see the Canon Law, Causa xvi. Quæst. i. § 19.

Page 376, line 10.]—See vol. ii. p. 262; where Foxe is right. Neubrigensis, lib. iii. cap. 8, says, "Ex abbate Fordensi episcopus Wigorniensis factus." M. Westm. also says that, in the year 1181, "Baldewinus Abbas Fordensis, Cisterciensis ordinis, successit Rogerio Episcopo ad Ecclesiam Wigornensem." Baldwin is reckoned by Foxe 41st archbishop, vol. ii. p. 718.

Page 376, line 17. "A. D. 607."—This would perhaps be better, "A. D. 610." See Concilia studio Labbei, vol. v. col. 1618, and Pagi in Baronii Annales ad an. 610, § 10.

Page 378, note (3).]—The results of this Convocation, which sat from June 9th to July 20th, 1536, may be seen at pp. 164—168. See the note on that passage. "Alesius" was an assumed Greek name of Alexander Alane, meaning "the Wanderer."

Page 385.]—This story of Frebarn is placed by Foxe to the year 1538; but as Maitland's History of London makes Sir William Forman chosen mayor, and William Wilkinson and Nicholas Gibson sheriffs, in 1538, and the year then ran on to March 25th, it is evident that the ensuing narrative belongs to 1539 according to modern computation. Dr. Wordsworth observes (Eccles. Biog. vol. ii. p. 262, note), that "this story was associated with many serious and interesting considerations, which, in the age when it was written, would exempt it from the charge of trifling and levity to which it may now seem liable." See examples of this given by Dr. Wordsworth.

Page 386, line 11 from the bottom.]—"Michael Lobley" is no doubt the person mentioned before at pp. 38, 412, and vol. iv. p. 586.

Page 397, line 19. "Blood of Hayles . . . proved to be the blood of a duck."—This was one account current among the people: the commissioners, however, sent to examine into the pretended miracle at the time of the dissolution of the monasteries, state that it was clarified honey, "which being in a glasse, appeared to be of a glistering redde, resembling partly the color of blod." See Wordsworth's Ecl. Biogr. and Latimer's Remains (P. S. Ed. Index); also p. 406 of this volume, note (1).

Page 398, line 14 from the bottom.]—Foxe's text erroneously says "A. D. 1540." The same error has been corrected before, at p. 261.

Page 398, line 11 from the bottom. "On the 10th of June."—Foxe says, "In the which month of July:" this accords with Stowe, but is wrong. The passage of the Lords' Journals runs thus: "Hodie [June 10th] Vicesgerens Regius supradictus, Comes Essex, in hora pomeridiana, per Dominum Cancellarium et alios dominos de Arcano Domini nostri Regis Consilio, ex Palatio Regio Domini Regis Westm. hora tertia pomeridiana super accusationem Læse Majestatis missus est in Arcem Londinens." Tytler and Lingard follow this date: but Hall, Stowe, Herbert, Foxe, Burnet, Collier, Mackintosh, and others, are wrong. Cromwell's name, indeed, remained on the roll till June 18th, the day after his attainder, when it was struck off; but he is never marked "p," present, after the 10th of June.

Page 399, line 4.]—The Bill of Attainder was introduced June 17th, but not finally passed till June 29th.

Page 407, line 31. "For the rood of grace."—This rood used to perform at Boxley in Kent. "It chanced (as the tale is) that upon a time, a cunning carpenter of our country was taken prisoner in the wars between us and France, who (wanting otherwise to satisfy for his ransom, and having good leisure to devise for his deliverance) thought it best to attempt some curious enterprise, within the compass of his own art and skill, to make himself some money withall: and, therefore getting together fit matter for his purpose, he compacted of wood, wyer, paste and paper, a roode of such exquisite art and workmanship that it not only matched in comeliness, and due proportion of parts, the best of the common sort; but in strange motion, variety of gesture, and nimbleness of joints, passed all other that before had been seen: the same being able to bow down and lift up itself, to shake and stir the hands and teet, to nod the head, to roll the eyes, to wag the chappes, to bend the brows; and finally to represent to the eye both the proper motion of each member of the body, but also a lively, express, and significant shew of a well-contented or displeased mind," &c. (Lambard's Perambulation of Kent, pp. 182, 183.)

Page 410.]—Foxe's account of the printing of the Great Bible is so confused, that it has been deemed advisable to re-arrange his materials. This simple expedient, which has already been adopted with the best effect in several previous cases, has rendered the text accurate and intelligible.

Page 410, line 7. "Thomas Matthew's Bible."—In this Bible the whole of the New Testament, and the Old to the end of 2 Chron., also some other parts, were Tyndale's: the residue Rogers supplied, having Coverdale's sheets before him. This left the press in June or July, 1537. Grafton embarked his all in the book. The bishops appear to have been disputing at London over the framing of the book called "The Institution of a Christian Man," or "The Bishops' Book." In August the bishops dispersed to avoid the plague, which was raging in London, and Cranmer repaired to Forde, in Kent. Thither Grafton, on his arrival from the Continent, followed the archbishop, and obtained from him a recommendation to Cromwell, dated Forde, August 4th, and stating that he liked it better than any translation which he had yet seen, and begging him to procure the king's license for it. The matter quite succeeded, for we have a most joyful letter of thanks from Cranmer to Cromwell, dated Forde, August 13th, and another dated August 28th. Grafton obtained the monopoly of it, and reimbursed himself. The terms in which Cranmer expresses his thanks to Cromwell imply, that such a Royal countenance of the English Scriptures had never before been obtained; which confirms the correctness of the criticism offered in the note on p. 167, on the supposed license to Coverdale's Bible.

The following Documents, bearing on this subject, have already been printed:—

1. Cranmer's two letters to Cromwell, thanking him for obtaining the king's license. Cotton MSS. Cleop. E. v. fol. 292, 329; and Jenkyns's Cranmer's Remains, i. p. 199.

2. Richard Grafton's Letter to Cromwell, London, August 28th, presenting him with six copies of the Bible, and thanking him in the highest terms. Cleop. E. 5, folio 330; Anderson's "Annals of the English Bible."

3. Richard Grafton's Letter to Cromwell, petitioning for the exclusive sale of his Bible for three years; and that every curate should be ordered to have one, and every abbey six copies; dated 1537. Cotton MSS. Cleop. E. 5, folio 325; Strype's Life of Cranmer, Appendix, No. xx.; and Todd's Cranmer, i. pp. 216, 220.

4. A Declaration to be read by all curates upon the publishing of the Bible in English. Cleopatra E. 5, p. 327; and Strype's Life of Cranmer, Appendix, No. xxiii.

5. Cromwell's Letter to the Bishops, enclosing the said Declaration. Strype's Memorials, vol. i. p. 307, sub anno 1538, from the same source as the Declaration.

Page 410, line 4 from the bottom. "Concerning the printing whereof, here followeth the story."—These words are put in by the Editor, to establish the connexion between what precedes and what follows: for in Foxe's original text, the whole of the previous statement is introduced much later. The present arrangement of the matter is much clearer.

Page 410, line 3 from the bottom. "About the time and year when Edmund Bonner," &c.]—It has been necessary to substitute in this sentence "archdeacon of Leicester" for Foxe's "bishop of Hereford," and "bishopric of Hereford" for "bishopric of London," and "1538" for "1540." For Fox, bishop of Hereford, died May 8th, 1538; and Bonner was elected to that see October 20th following, and confirmed Dec. 17th. (Richardson's Godwin.) He thanks Cromwell, however, for his appointment as ambassador to France, and to the bishopric of Hereford, in a letter dated Sept. 2d. (See p. 150 of this volume.) This portion of Bonner's history is before referred to by Foxe, at pp. 149, 160, 161, in a manner which implies the correct chronology.

Page 411, line 4. "To imprint the Bible in English within the University of Paris."—The following documents, bearing on this Paris impression, are important.

1. The King's Letters Patent to Grafton and Whitchurch, for printing the Bible in English, dated 13 Novembris, Tricesimo primo Regni (1537): Rot. Pat. 31 Hen. VIII. and Burnet's History, vol. i. Records, No. 15.

2. The French King's License to Richard Grafton and Edward Whitchurch to print the English Bible in Paris. Cleop. E. 5, p. 326; and Strype's Life of Cranmer, Appendix, No. xxx. This is conjectured by Mr. Anderson to have been issued about May 1538.

3. A letter from Coverdale and Grafton to Cromwell, Paris, 23d June, 1538. "After moost humble and hartie commendacions to your good Lordship. Pleaseth the same to understand, that we be entred into your worke of the Byble, whereof (accordynge to our moost bounden dutie) we have sent unto your Lordship 2 ensamples; one in parchement, wherin we entend to prynt one for the Kynges Grace and another for your Lordship; and the second in paper, wherof all the rest shalbe made; trustynge that it shalbe not only to the glorye of God, but a synguler pleasure also to your good Lordship the causer thereof, and a generall edefyenge of the Kynge's subjectes, accordynge to your Lordship's moost godlye request. For we solowe not only a standynge text of the Hebrue, with the interpretation of the Caldee, and the Greke, but we set, also, in a pryvate table, the dyversite of redinges of all textes, with such annotacions, in another table, as shall douteles delucidate and cleare the same; as well without any singularyte of opinions, as all checkinges and reprofes. The prynt, no doubt, shall please your Good Lordship. The paper is of the best sorte in France. The charge certaynly is great; wherin, as we moost humbly requyer your favourable helpe, at this present, with whatsoever yt shall please your good Lordship to let us have. . . . We be dayly threatened, and look even to be spoken withall, as this bearer can farther enforme your Lordship: but how they will use us as yet we knowe not," &c. (Gov. State Papers, i. p. 575.)

4. A letter of Coverdale's to Cromwell, dated 9th August, 1538, states that the work was going forward, and sends some sheets by the hands of Sebastian, a servant of Cromwell. (Ibid. p. 578.)

5. Another of Sept. 12th, states that the "Bible goeth well forward, and within few months will draw to an end by the grace of Almighty God." (Ibid. p. 589.)

6. A letter from Coverdale, Grafton, and Grey to Cromwell, sends further specimens of the Bible, and explains certain marks. (Ibid. p. 578.)

7. A letter from Cranmer to Cromwell, 14th Nov. 1538, says:—"My veray singuler good Lord. After my mooste hartie commendations theis shalbe to signifie unto your Lordship that Bartelett and Edward Whitechurche hath ben with me, and have by their accomptes declared the expensis and charges of the pryntynge of the Great Bibles: and by thadvise of Bartelett I have appoynted them to be sold for 13s. 4d. and not above. Howbeit, Whitechurche informethe me, that your Lordship thinketh it a moore conveniente price to have them sold at 10s. a peece," &c. (Ibid. p. 589.)

8. A letter from Coverdale to Cromwell, Paris, Dec. 13th, 1538, sending over the portion then printed by the hands of Bonner, bishop of Hereford. (Harl. MSS. No. 604, p. 98.)

9. The Prohibition of the French Inquisitors, dated December 17th, 1538. (Strype's Life of Cranmer, Appendix xxx.)

Page 411, line 16.]—From the Prohibition of the French Inquisitors it appears, that the French printer was named Francis Regnault.

Page 411, line 20. "A New Testament in English and Latin."—This was of Coverdale's translation in parallel columns with the Latin Vulgate. It was printed at Paris under Coverdale's eye by Grafton, and under what circumstances, is explained by a letter of Grafton's to Cromwell in the Gov. State Papers, vol. i. p. 591.

Page 411, line 32. "Leaving behind them all their Bibles." &c.]—It is the opinion of Mr. Todd, that "the proprietors lost few copies of the impression:" for notwithstanding the delay of getting over the French types and presses and printers to London, the whole was finished there in April next. It appears also from Coverdale's letter to Cromwell, only four days before the seizure, that the sheets then printed were for safety sent over to England, and the Bible only wanted the finishing of the last sheet.

Page 411, line 6 from the bottom. "Printed out the said Bible in London."—The following observations on this Bible will be acceptable to the reader. The title of it ran thus:—

"The Byble in Englyshe, that is to say the content of all the holy scrypture, bothe of ye olde and newe testament, truly translated after the veryte of the Hebrue and Greke textes, by ye dyligent studye of dyverse excellent learned men, expert in the forsayde tonges.

"Prynted by Rychard Grafton and Edward Whitchurch. Cum privilegio ad imprimendum solum 1539. The ende of the new Testament, and of the whole Byble fynished in Apryll, Anno 1539. A dno factū est istud."

This, though sometimes called the first edition of Cranmer's Great Bible, should rather be called Cromwell's, for he was the patron of the undertaking. "It was printed in April of the above-named year, and differs from all the subsequent editions, occasionally in the text, but more especially in the woodcuts having small side ornaments affixed to them, which are wanting to the same cuts in the edition of 1540. It may be known also by the cut prefixed to the fifteenth chapter of Job, which represents musicians annoying a saint. This cut, as well as the eight which form the border of the title-page of the New Testament (peculiar also to this edition), seems to have been taken from some old Missal. The ornamented Capital D prefixed to the twelfth and sixteenth chapters of the first Epistle to the Corinthians, but inverted to form a C, is also found in this edition only. Like all the editions of Cranmer's Bible, it has the singular mistake in the heading of the 39th chapter of Genesis, where Pharaoh's wife is substituted for Potiphar's." (Extract from the late Rev. R. H. Barham's letter to Mr. Grenville, giving a description of the copy in St. Paul's.)

Page 411, line 6 from the bottom. "Printed sundry impressions."—There was a first impression published April 1539, being probably those sent over by Coverdale previously; and a second about November or December, with Cranmer's Preface of the next year's edition, which Preface was certainly finished Nov. 14th, 1539. For an account of the numerous impressions of this Bible in 1539, 1540, 1541, see Anderson's "Annals of the English Bible."

Page 411, line 2 from the bottom. "While the said Bible was in printing."—This can only be understood correctly of the Edition of 1540, commonly called Cranmer's Bible.

Page 412, line 1.]—Stokesly, bishop of London, died Sept. 8th, 1539, and Bonner was elected October 20th, and confirmed Nov. 11th: installed at St. Paul's April 4th, 1540. (Register, and Richardson's Godwin.)

Page 412, line 6.]—Grafton was perhaps at Paris at this time, endeavouring to recover the Bibles from the French king, as described a few lines before and at the top of next page. Bonner's oath is given above at p. 162, in which he speaks of himself as elected and confirmed bishop of London; it must therefore have been taken after Nov. 11th, 1539.

Page 412, line 19. "Lobley"—is, no doubt, the same individual as has been already mentioned at pp. 38, 386, and vol. iv. p. 586.

Page 412, line 18 from the bottom. "After this the bishops," &c.]—Foxe seems to have imagined, that the printing of the English Bible ceased on the death of Cromwell, in July 1540: and hence, perhaps, being puzzled with the dates of the documents just given from the edition of 1563, he omitted them in all subsequent editions; but it is a remarkable fact, that after the death of Cromwell, the king, determined to have the Bible go forth, made Tostal bishop of Durham, and Heath bishop of Rochester, put their names to the next edition, finished in November 1541. This was the last printed in that reign: but even then, the reason why no more were printed in Henry's reign seems to have been, not the opposition of the bishops, but that the market was sufficiently supplied; for though the Convocation which met January 21st, 1542, attempted to get the English Bible handed over to the bishops for their revision, and it was ultimately (through Cranmer's contrivance) referred to the Universities; yet they did nothing in the matter; and as if in contempt of the bishops, the king granted to Anthony Marler an exclusive patent, dated Westm. March 12th, 1542 (Rymer), to print the Bible for four years. Mr. Anderson computes that 20,000 copies had been now printed, and that a large stock must have remained on hand, which would pretty well supply the wants of the next four years: besides which, many thousands of the New Testament were still printing. Some check was put on the public use of the Scriptures by the parliament in January 1544 (see p. 527 of this volume), but no steps were taken to prevent the printing of them.

Page 412, line 13 from the bottom.]—Grafton and Whitchurch both appear to have been troubled between 1541 and 1543: see p. 441 of this volume.

Page 412, line 4 from the bottom.]—The “three hundred pounds” seems an exaggeration. Grafton gave his bond for 100*l.* (equal to 1500*l.* now). Pryn’s MS. Inner Temple. Whitchurch may have been punished as well.

Page 413, line 6.]—Bonner’s return home is placed by Foxe, at p. 162, in February 1540.

“Henricus Octavus dei gratia Angliæ et Franciæ Rex, fidei defensor, dominus hiberniæ, et in terra supremum Caput Anglicanæ ecclesiæ, Reverendo in Christo patri Edmundo London Epo. ejusve in Absentia vicario suo in spiritualibus generali Salutem. Vobis mandamus quod immediate post receptionem præsentium in singulis ecclesiis cathedralibus et collegiis ceterisque ecclesiis tam paroch. et capellis quam aliis quibuscunque infra dioc. et jurisdictionem vestras ex parte nostra publicari et solemniter denunciari faciatis quoddam decretum per nos de advisamento Consilii nostri conceptum et factum, quod vobis per latorem præsentium in quibusdam schedulis papyro impressis et hinc brevi annexis vobis mittimus; mandantes præterea quod immediate post publicationem et pronunciationem dicti decreti per vos sic factas dictum decretum super hostium ejuslibet ecclesiæ vestræ dioc. predictæ, ut subditis et legis meis plenius apparere poterit, poni et affigi faciatis. Et hoc sicut nobis inde respondere volueritis diligenter fieri curetis. Teste meipso apud West. vij<sup>o</sup> die mensis Maii Anno Regni nostri Tricesimo tercio.

Lucas.”

This Brief is followed in the Register by the Decree itself, dated the day preceding (May 6th, 33 Hen. VIII.); of which a copy will be found, Cotton MSS. Cleop. E. v. fol. 337; and Burnet, Records, book iii. No. 24; and Wilkins, iii. p. 856. The churches were all to be provided with their Bibles by the Feast of All Saints next coming. From the Minutes of the Privy Council (London, 1837, pp. 185, 186), under date April 25th, and May 1st, of 33 Hen. VIII., it appears that the present Decree was issued at the instance of Anthony Marler, merchant and haberdasher of London, who had been at the expense of an edition of the English Bible, finished April 1540, with a prologue by Cranmer, a copy of which on vellum, presented by Marler to Henry, is now in the British Museum.

It would be a mistake, however, to suppose, as Foxe’s statement would incline one to suppose, that this was the first royal decree in favour of the Scriptures in English; a previous one was issued Nov. 13th, 31st Hen. VIII. (A. D. 1539) in favour of Cranmer’s Bible, which is printed in Burnet’s Records.

Page 416, line 30. “And please your grace,”]—“And,” “an’t,” i. e. if it.

Page 417, line 23.]—The first edition reads, “Answer well, I would advise thee, for thou shalt,” &c. and so in the Life of Barnes prefixed to his Works, 1573.

Page 417, line 34. “Before the cardinal,”]—Foxe, in his edition of Barnes’s works, alluded to p. 570, note, says, “before the said bishops and abbot.” See Appendix to vol. iv. notes on p. 608.

Page 419, middle.]—Barnes in his Supplication to Henry VIII. states, that he was under confinement first and last 2 years and 3 quarters, before he fled to the Continent. See Appendix to vol. iv., notes on p. 681.

Page 419, line 11 from the bottom. "Dr. Barnes . . . Æpinus . . . sent . . . as an ambassador."—This embassy was in 1534, though Æpinus, who was the first Reformed superintendent at Hamburgh, did not join them till the following year. See "Memoria Jo. Æpini, auctore Arn. Grevio," Hamb. 1736, Preface, and p. 21; and Seckendorf's "Comment. de Lutheranism," lib. iii. pp. 88 and 113.

Page 420, line 6. "Continued a faithful preacher in this city" (London).—It is probably to this period of Dr. Barnes's life that we must refer a curious Paper, printed among the Documents at the end of this Volume, No. XXIV. The Paper was very likely exhibited to Cromwell by some of Barnes's friends, in the hope of inducing him to use his influence with Dr. Buckmaster to confer the vacant preferment in St. Mary Woolchurch on Dr. Barnes.

Page 421, line 14.]—Dalaber's account of Garret is here given exactly as it stands in the Edition of 1563; in the subsequent Editions it appears materially altered in some parts, in substance as well as phraseology; as Foxe, however, states at p. 427 that Dalaber died in 1562, it is plain that these alterations could not have had his sanction.

Page 421, line 16. "In the year of our Lord God 1526 or thereabout."—The date of Dr. Cottisforde's appointment to be Commissary (see note supra on p. 5), and the papers relative to Garret printed at the end of this Appendix, No. VI., prove that the ensuing narrative belongs to the year 1528: one of those papers, however, dated February 26th, 1528, states that Garret had been at Oxford about the preceding Easter (April 21st, 1527); which agrees with Dalaber's statement near the bottom of p. 425, that he had known Garret almost a twelvemonth: but if he came in February of that year, as Dalaber here seems to state, it would be called 1526, as the year ran on to the 24th of March. Dalaber's narrative, so punctiliously exact in this particular, appears not so exact in speaking of the proctors; for it would seem from his account as if Ball and Cole had been co-proctors in the same year: whereas it appears from Wood's "Fasti Oxonienses" (Bliss's and Gutch's editions) that Simon Ball of Merton College was elected proctor with Thomas Byrton of Cardinal College, late of Magdalen, April 11th, 1526, 18 Hen. VIII.; and that Arthur Cole of Magdalen College was elected proctor with Richard Logan of Oriol, May 7th, 1527. Hence it would seem that Simon Ball was proctor when first Garret came to Oxford early in 1527, and Arthur Cole when the subsequent events happened in the early part of 1528, for Cole's successor was not chosen till April 22d, 1528.

It appears from the same authority, that Garret was admitted B. A. some time in 1517, 9 Hen. VIII., and Fooke's Letter at the end of this Appendix states him to have been now fellow of Magdalen College.

Page 422, line 18. "Because the scholars in Alborne Hall were all arceturs."—"Arceter or Arcetyr, he that lernethe or techethe arte. Artista." Prompt. Parv. MS. Harl. 221, and as printed by the Camden Society, Lond. 1843, vol. i. p. 14. See the Addenda to this Appendix.

Page 422, line 26. "Francis Lambert upon the Gospel of St. Luke."—This must have been a rather popular exposition, as Von der Hart mentions a third edition (tom. i. p. 233), "Fr. Lamberti Avenionensis in Lucae Evang. Commentarii nunc tertio recog.; Argentorati, 1526."—The Christian Observer for August 1836 has some interesting notices of this adherent of the Reformation. Seckendorf's Comment. de Lutheranism, lib. ii. sect. 8, § xiv. is also worth referring to, as usual. See the note above on p. 60.

Page 423, line 16. "The New Testament of Erasmus's translation."—Foxe unaccountably omitted the words "of Erasmus's translation" after his first Edition. Erasmus's Latin Testament was first published 1516. Respecting this book, see the note on p. 117, and Appendix to vol. iv. note on p. 681.

Page 425, line 29.]—It is to be regretted that Dalaber should have entertained such loose ideas of the duty of speaking the truth, as this passage seems to imply. It is to be remembered, however, that the doctrines of the Romish church, in which the Reformer had been educated, favoured lying, and even perjury, when employed in self-defence; and it is the less surprising that some of them continued to act on such a principle, when they were placed in most critical circumstances by their popish adversaries.

Page 427, note (1).]—The Garret Papers, printed at the end of this Appendix, No. VI., show Foxe to be mistaken in saying that Garret was taken at Hinxsey, unless that means that the proctor and his men met him there, and received him at the hands of the Somersetshire officers. The Documents just referred to afford several notices respecting Garret, subsequent to this his apprehension at Bedminster: we may add to them that Cranmer, in a letter to Cromwell, dated October 8th, 1535, and printed by Todd and Jenkyns from the Chapter House Papers, recommended him to the parsonage of St. Peter's beside Calais, in preference to the curate of St. Mary's in Calais, who was a candidate (see note on p. 501, infra). Anne Boleyn also solicited preferment for him. (Todd's Cranmer, i. p. 138) It appears, moreover, from the Stokesly Register that he was inducted June 14th, 1537, to the rectory of All Saints, Honey-lane, on the resignation of Laurence Cook, the man who forbade the people to pray for Frith at his martyrdom. "Tho. Garret, alias Garrard, A.M. admiss. ad eccl. Omn. Sanctorum Hony-lane, Lond. 14 Jun. 1537, per resign. Laur. Cook vacantem." (Reg. Stokesly.) "Undecimo die dicti mensis Octobris [1540], Ricardus Benese, presbyter, admissus ad eccl. parochialem Omn. Sanct. Hony-lane, per attineturam Thomæ Garrard, ultimi Rectoris ibidem, vacantem, qui propter hæresim nuper attinctus fuit." (Reg. Bonner folio 132.)

Page 428, line 1.]—These Articles are abbreviated from those in the Register: an exact copy of the Articles is given among the Garret Papers at the end of this Appendix.

Page 428, line 14 from the bottom. "Named John Salisbury."—These words are preceded in the edition of 1563, p. 610, by the following: "now yet living, and dean of Norwich." John Salisbury, suffragan bishop of Thetford, was made dean of Norwich on the resignation of William Castleton in 1539. He was deprived in the beginning of Queen Mary's reign, March 1st, 1554. He was restored in 1560, and in 1571 made bishop of the Isle of Man; but held his deanery in commendam with it till his death, which happened the latter end of September 1573, when he was buried in Norwich cathedral. (Le Neve's Fasti, pp. 213, 214.)

Page 429, line 6. "William Jerome, vicar of Stepney."—Query whether this were the same as William Jerome, Benedictine, who with Tho. London a Cistercian, and John Okeley a Carmelite, petitioned for the degree of B.D. March 4, 1530, 22 Hen. VIII., but were all three rejected. (Wood's Fasti, Bliss.)

Page 429, line 17.]—Foxe's statements are supported by two Documents printed at the end of this Appendix, No. VIII.

Page 430, line 5 from the bottom. "With a wanhope."—See Appendix to vol. viii. p. 530, and Todd's Johnson, and Nares on "wanhope."

Page 433, line 12 from the bottom. "The like also did Jerome," &c.]—A joint recantation of Barnes, Jerome, and Garret is given among the Documents at the end of this Appendix, No. VII.; also Jerome's Sermon, No. XXI. printed from a copy preserved in the Rolls House, but much injured by damp.

Page 435, line 7. "That is only the death of Christ."—"Is" seems a mistake for "doth," or "by" is omitted after "only."

Page 438, line 5.]—"And" after "grace" (in all editions) seems redundant.

Page 440, line 19.]—As these Commissions have not been printed by Foxe, a specimen is given among the Documents at the end of this Appendix, No. IX., from the Bonner Register, fol. 17 verso, dated Jan. 29th, 1541, which was probably the first issued, and prepared the way, with other measures, for the persecution commenced 1541 (see p. 413): this Commission was reissued March 22d, anno regni xxxij [1542], under which date it appears in the Bonner Register, fol. 37, addressed to lord chancellor Wriothsley, the lord mayor for the time being, and the other persons named in this Commission:

moreover Henry there styles himself "in terra ecclesiæ Anglicanæ et Hibernicæ supremum caput." He uses the same style again in a fresh issue of this Commission, dated Greenwich quinto die Januarii, "anno regni tricesimo sexto" [1545], addressed to the same parties as the last (Bonner Register, folio 67); it is immediately followed in the Register by the same brief to Bonner and oath to be taken by the Commissioners, as appear on this page, and at p. 264. The same Commission was reissued, mutatis mutandis, by Edward VI., April 13th, 1547, the first year of his reign: see the note infra on p. 714.

Page 440, note (2).—This Commission is translated from the Latin, which will be found among the Documents, No. IX., also the Oath. Foxe's translation is a little corrected.

Page 443, line 16. "The year aforesaid, which was 1541."—It is evident, however, that the persecution which commenced this year extended through several years, for the same royal Commission to inquire on the Six Articles was issued in 1541, 1542, and 1545 (see note above on p. 440); and the recantation of Wisdom and Beacon (mentioned at p. 448) took place in 1543 (see Documents at the end of this Appendix, No. XII.): moreover, a proclamation of the king's council in 1529, given by Foxe, vol. iv. p. 676, from the Tonstal Register, folio 143, was reissued in 1542, called in the Bonner Register, folio 38, "Proclamatio facta per regium consilium contra hereses et alias opiniones dampnabiles;" and this was followed in the same year by a list of books to be searched for by the curates of the parishes, printed at the end of this Appendix, No. X., from the Bonner Register: Burnet prints a part, but only a part, of this list in his Records. Some of the names in this and the following pages have already been produced by Foxe at vol. iv. p. 586, "out of the fragments of old registers," in which he "found no certain time or year expressed."

Page 443, line 4 from the bottom. "The Scot of St. Katharine's."—This refers to John Wilcock or Willock: see pp. 446, 448, and the Addenda.

Page 448.]—See the Addenda to vol. iv., note on p. 586, respecting several names on this page.

Page 448, line 26. "Gough the stationer."—He fell into trouble in connexion with Garret and the circulation of Lutheran books in 1528: see letter of the bishop of London among the Garret Papers at the end of this Appendix. The period here referred to was probably about 1541: for in the Minutes of the Privy Council printed by Government, under date of January 5th, 1541, occurs the following: "John Gough of London, prynter, was sent to the Flytt for prynting and selling of sedyeyous books."

Page 448, line 27.]—Friar Matthew Ward (mentioned here and at pp. 443, 444, and iv. 586) is distinct from the Robert Ward, shoemaker (see p. 447, and iv. 586), whose recantation will be found among the Documents printed at the end of this Appendix, No. XI., from the Bonner Register.

Page 448, line 32. "John Taylor."—This was the John Taylor, alias Cardmaker, vicar of St. Bride's, afterwards burned in Queen Mary's reign. That he was again in trouble for "comforting Dr. Crome in his folye," appears from a letter of the council to Mr. Secretary Petre, dated May 13th, 1546. See Gov. State Papers, Henry VIII. vol. i. p. 846, cited infra in the note on p. 537.

Page 448, line 15 from the bottom. "Using these words for the same, 'Benedicite, Domini.'"—Query, 'Benedicite Dominum.'

Page 448, line 5 from the bottom.]—Robert Wisdome was in trouble in 1541; and again in 1543, when he was imprisoned by the Council in Lollards' Tower. He wrote an animated defence from prison, which is printed by Strype, Mem. i. Records, No. 115. His recantation, with that of Becon and Singleton, is given among the Documents at the end of this Appendix, No. XII. It was made at the same time with theirs, and belongs to the year 1543. This is important, as fixing a point of Becon's history which has been hitherto in dispute. He subsequently went into exile; but afterwards became archdeacon of Ely, and one of the famous synod of 1562: he died 1568. See more about him in Strype's Mem. book i. ch. 49, and Cranmer, book ii. cap. 28; Parker Soc. General Index; and Documents at the end of this volume, No. XXII.*

Page 448, last line. "Sir George Parker."—In connexion with this individual and the accusation against him, may be mentioned a very curious paper among the Records in the Rolls House, never yet printed or noticed; it has been placed among the Documents at the end of this Appendix, No. XIII. Sir G. Parker is probably the Parker mentioned in No. IV. of the Documents.

In the Latin edition, p. 139, Foxe speaks as though he had been eye-witness of this ludicrous affair. He there gives it immediately after the martyrdom of Cowbridge, related above, p. 251, and connects it thus: “Sub idem ferè tempus quo Oxoniæ hæc acta sunt, aut non multùm secus . . .” See the next note but one, and the note on p. 461.

Page 462, note (4).]—Foxe’s text reads: “After the death, . . . his fourth wife;” which is inconsistent with his previous history, and with facts.

Page 463, line 3.]—These Royal letters for the abolition of idolatry are preserved also in the archives of the dean and chapter of St. Paul’s, as addressed to them (Sampson Register, folio 117 verso): that copy corresponds with this given by Foxe, except that in line 3 it reads “have to your bounden duty,” and next line “your people;” there are a few other variations of no importance: it is signed by “William Southampton, Robert Sussex, John Russell, Antony Browne, Antony Wynkfeld, Cuthbert Duresme, John Gage.”

Page 501, line 1. "The said Damlip was sent for to appear before the archbishop of Canterbury."—There is a letter printed in the Government State Papers and Jenkyns's Cranmer, i. p. 252, from John Butler, the archbishop's commissary at Calais, to Cranmer in Damlip's behalf, dated Calais July 22d: as it speaks of Sunday as July 21st, it was sent in 1538: he runs down the prior, and begs that Damlip might be appointed curate of Notre Dame in Calais.—There is also a letter of Cranmer's to Cromwell enclosing the above, dated Lambeth July 24th, and earnestly recommending that Damlip be allowed to return and preach unmolested. (Ibid.)

Page 501, line 17. "Damlip had secret intimation from the archbishop of Canterbury."—There is a letter from Cranmer to Cromwell (printed in the Government State Papers, and in Jenkyns's Cranmer, i. p. 250) dated Lambeth August 15th; in which Cranmer says that Damlip asserted he only denied "transubstantiation," but that two friars stepped forward, and declared that he had denied the real presence; "on which he withdrew himself; and since that time no man can tell where he is become; for which I am very sorry, because that I think he is rather fled suspecting the rigour of the law than the defence of his own cause. In consideration herof, and to the intent that the people of Calice may be quiet and satisfied in this matter, I have appointed two of my chapleins to go thither and preach incontinently: nevertheless, it is thought that they shall do little good there, if the said prior return home again." Cranmer then begs that he may be authorized to detain the prior, and that some other person might be made prior in his room.

Another letter, dated Lambeth August 18th, states that he has got the prior in custody; and thanks Cromwell for his letter to the lord deputy Lisle, and urges him to defend the gospel. (Strype's Cranmer, Jenkyns, i. p. 259.)

Page 501, line 20 from the bottom. "Were sent over Dr. Champion, doctor of divinity, and Master Garret, who after was burned."—So long back as 1535 Cranmer had in two letters, dated January 22d and October 8th, stated his wish to send two of his chaplains to preach and enlighten the town and marches of Calais. (Jenkyns, i. pp. 126, 144.)

Dr. Champion was chaplain to the archbishop. There are several allusions to him in Cranmer's letters published by Dr. Jenkyns. On the foundation of the new chapter at Canterbury in April 1542 he became one of the first prebendaries, but died soon after. At his burial, Rafe the bell-ringer of Christ-Church poured hot coals on him in his grave, to the great slander of the said Dr. Champion, as though he had been a heretic worthy of burning. (Strype's Cranmer, p. 102.)

With respect to Garret, in a letter from Cranmer to Cromwell (Cranmer's Letters in Jenkyns), dated Oct. 8th, 1535, the archbishop says, "Inasmuch as I am advertized, that the parsonage of St. Peter's besides Calice is like shortly to be void and in the king's grace's disposition, I beseech you either to obtain the same for Master Garret, whose learning and conversation is known to be right good and honest, or else for some other as is so able and willing to discharge the same as he is. Wherein I assure you that you shall accomplish a right meritorious deed before God, and deserve condign thanks hereafter of your prince for promoting of so great a commodity for his realm. And whereas I am informed that the curate of St. Mary's within Calice intendeth to make suit unto you for the said benefice; I pray you not to regard his suit, for I know that he is nothing meet for that room, especially in this world of Reformation."

Garret may well be supposed, therefore, to have had the archbishop's confidence for such a mission as this; at the same time it is remarkable, that the edition of 1563, p. 658, reads here and a few lines lower "Mayster Hore." Garret was at this time (1539) rector of All Saints, Honey Lane, to which he was inducted June 14th, 1537. (See note before on p. 427.)

Page 502, line 12.]—Sir Nicholas Carew was executed March 3d, 1539, which was the 30th of Henry VIII. Hall correctly places this event in the 30th year of the king: and Strype gives a passage of a letter from Butler, Ellyot, Partridge, and Traherne to Bullinger, dated March 8th, 1539, in which Sir N. Carew's repentance in prison is very pleasingly described.

Page 515, note (1).]—In the edition of 1563, p. 665, the name of “John Boote” in this list does not occur; which renders it probable, that Foxe, perceiving the deficiency in the number of names, had endeavoured to supply it, but without success as to the thirteenth.

Page 515, note (2).]—There has been no mention of any former trouble of this William Stevens; and it is most likely that Foxe has confounded his name with that of William Smith (pp. 512, 513). The edition of 1563, p. 665, says nothing about a previous trouble, but thus introduces the present affair: “And the foresaid William Stevens was by the lorde deputy charged, that he had staid the foresaide Adam Damlip,” &c. and after the words, “he must have been more faulty,” goes on: “and then the said Stevens was first sent over into England, and clapt in the Towre, and afterwarde, to witt immediatlye after the saide commissioners repair unto the kinges highnesse, the said lorde deputye was sent for over,” &c. If Foxe discovered afterwards that Stevens had been troubled with the others in the first commission, he has omitted to introduce it into the history; but the probability is (as above stated), that he for the moment confounded W. Stevens with W. Smith.

Page 537, line 20. "The next Lent following, Dr. Crome," &c.]—Dr. Crome seems to have been a very prominent preacher of the Reformed doctrines, and to have attracted the notice of the hierarchy on various occasions. It may be useful to draw together the scattered notices of him which have been met with.

1. He was reported to the council for a sermon preached at Aldermay church on Relic Sunday, July 11th, 1529. (See Documents at the end of this Appendix, No. XVI.)

2. He recanted March 11th, 1531 : his articles are given at the end of this Appendix from the Tonstal Register, and this recantation is referred to vol. iv. p. 699, December 15th, 1531.

3. He was thought a most excellent preacher by John Periman, 1531. (Vol. v. p. 32.)

4. He and Latimer are named by Bainham, in 1533, as two of the most scriptural preachers of that time. (Vol. iv. p. 699.)

5. He was reported to the council for a sermon preached at Allhallows Bread Street, July 16th, 1539. (See Documents at the end of this Appendix.)

6. He recanted at Paul's Cross, Septuagesima Sunday, February 13th, 1541. (Ibid. and Hilles's letter, Parker Soc. Reformation Letters, p. 211.)

7. Dr. Crome recanted again at Paul's Cross, Sunday, May 9th, 1546 ; and in consequence of his not having satisfied his enemies on that occasion, he was put to a further recantation at Paul's Cross on Sunday, June 27th following. (Ibid.)

Some letters among the Gov. State Papers, vol. i. confirm this last statement. Thus, the Council to Petre, May 11th (p. 842), states that Dr. Crome had been before the council the day previous, "about his misbehaviour at Paul's Cross, contrary to the king's Highness' expectation and his own promise."

"Ye shall perceive that Mr. Crome notith in his answer, to be comforted by oon Lasselles, whome we have in examinacion, nat called apou Crome's deteccion, but because himself boosted abroad, that he was desirous to be called to the Counseill, and he would answer to the pricke."

Another letter from the same to the same, May 13th (p. 846), states that Crome confessed to having been tampered with by one Huick, who suggested to him to use a double entendre in reciting the Articles at Paul's Cross. They expected that same day to have before them "Latymer, the Vicar of St. Bride's [John Taylor, alias Cardmaker], and summe others of those that have specially comforted Crome in his folye." Petre same day sends for Crome's Articles signed by himself (p. 847).

The Council inform Petre May 14th, that Latymer was several times before them the day previous, and confessed to having been with Crome several times since he had been at the lord chancellor's house, but evaded their questions ; when they gave him some interrogatories, to answer in writing while they examined the others ; but he refused to proceed because he doubted its being the king's pleasure, as he had formerly been misinformed by Cromwell that the king wished he should resign his bishopric. At last he answered in much the same evasive way as Crome, and bishop Heath and others were that afternoon "to fish out the bottom of his stomach." "Lascelles will not answer to that parte of his conference with Crome that toucheth Scripture matier, without he have the king's expresse commaundement, with his protection ; for he saith it is neither wisdom nor equitie that he should kill himself." The vicar of St. Bride's was "of the same sorte, but yet not so bold as the rest."

"And as to the Scott, he is more mete for Dunbar than for London ; for neither hath he any manner of wit, or lerning, mete for a preacher, but is a very ignorant ; and hath framed his sayenges after his audience, as, to be rydde, he will saye nowe what you wil byd him."

The following notice of the same matter occurs in a letter from Otwell Johnson to his brother, July 2d, 1546 (MSS. in the Tower Records, and Ellis's Letters, Second Ser. ii. p. 177.)

"Our Newes hier of Dr. Crome's canting, recanting, decanting, or rather double canting, be thies ; that on Souday last, befor my Lorde Chauncelor, the Duke of Norfocke, my Lord Great Mr., Mr. Riche, Mr. Chauncelor of the Tenths, with the Suthwells, Pope, and other nobles and knightes, and on th' other side the Bisschoppes of London and Wourcester, all principal Doctors and Denes, beside graynnesses, and a rabble of other marked people, the reverent Father just named openly declaired his true meanning and right understanding (as he said and according to his conscience) of the VI. or VII. Articles you hard of, as he shuld have done upon the ijde Sunday after Ester, but that he was letted from his said true intent by the persuasions of certain perverse mynded persons, and by the sight of lewde and ungodly books and writings, for the which he was very sorry, and desired the audience to be ware of such books, for under the fayer apperance of them was hidden a daungerous accombraunce of Christen conscienses, and so exhorted all men to embrace auncientnes of catholike doctrine, and forsake new fanggelnes."

Page 538, line 1.]—There is a little ambiguity as to the year in which this first examination of Anne Askew took place, for she herself calls the year 1545, which might mean 1546, as the year ran on to March 24th, and the month she writes of was March. But the alleged recantation, quoted at p. 542 exactly from the Bonner Register, calls it 1544. It is most probable, however, that that is a mistake of the scribe, for Foxe in a paper quoted by Strype from the Foxian MSS. says that Sir Martin Bowes was the mayor of London who examined her, and he entered office November 1545 (Maitland's London). Foxe after the edition of 1563 altered the date of the Recantation into 1545, probably because he had ascertained that she was first examined in 1546, and that the date in the Register was erroneous. Other examples of such clerical errors in the Registers are not wanting (see infra, notes on pp. 777, 781.) The first examination of Anne Askewe seems to have taken place March 11th; for she states at bottom of this page that she was committed at the close of her examination to the Compter, and remained there "eleven days, no friend admitted to speak with me," i. e. till March 22d inclusive, for on March 23d her cousin Britain was admitted to see her.

Page 539, line 6.]—Bale observes that the design of the papists in proposing to introduce these individuals was, to get some handle from their conversation with Anne Askew against themselves. By "Sir Guillam" is meant Thomas Gilleaume or Williams, a Scottish Protestant Exile, of whom read more in the Addenda. John Huntingdon has been mentioned at p. 449, as at that time (1543) a papist. Respecting him, see Strype's Cranmer, book ii. cap. 28.

Page 539, line 14. "Fourthly he asked, if the host should fall."—Upon the mouse-eating, see what is to be done, quoted from various writers, in Gerhard's Loci Theolog. lib. xxii. cap. 12, pp. 216, 217, tom. x. edit. Tübing. 1762. See also Cranmer's Works by Jenkyns, vol. iii. p. 124.

Page 539, line 24.]—March 23d fell on a Tuesday in 1546, so that the examination and subscription before Bonner took place on Thursday March 25th.

Page 539, line 18 from the bottom. "Doctor Crome, Sir Guillam, Whitehead, and Huntingdon."—So the Latin and all the old Editions of Foxe punctuate, making four individuals, though Anne Askew had only mentioned three of them a little before. David Whitehead is meant, respecting whom see Strype's Cranmer, book ii. chap. 28. He also re-appears infra, vol. viii. pp. 679, 687.

Page 540, line 1.]—These two gentlemen seem to be Spilman and Brittain, soon after mentioned, and at p. 543.

Page 540, line 5.]—This archdeacon was John Wimsley (see p. 543) alias Savage, a natural brother of Bonner's.

Page 542, note (1).]—The Bonner Register has been consulted (fol. 101), and Foxe's text of Anne Askewe's pretended recantation exactly conformed to it.

Page 543, line 14 from the bottom.]—This account of the second examination of Anne Askewe was printed by Bale at "Marpurg in the land of Hessen 16 die Januarii, 1547." He says in the preface, fol. 11, as follows:—

“ Whose lattre handelynge here foloweth in course, lyke as I receaved it in coppye by serten doche merchautes, comynge from thens, which had bene at their burnynge and beholden the tyrannouse vyolence there shewed. First out of the prison she wrote unto a secret frynde of hers after thys maner folowynge: ‘ I doo perceive,’ ” &c.

From Bale's account it appears, that Anne Askewe, or Kyme, and her husband were both brought before the council at Greenwich on Saturday, June 19th, and remanded to Newgate.

Page 544, line 11. “ The sum of, ” &c.]—This examination was on Friday, June 25th. (Bale.)

Page 544, note (4).]—The following is the passage in Bale's account referred to in this note:

“ Concernynge Maister Kyme thys shuld seme to be the matter. Her father Syr Wylliam Askewe, knyght, and his father olde master Kyme were sumtyme of familiartye and neybers within the countie of Lincolne shyre. Whereupon the seyde Sir Wylliam covenanted with hym for lucre to have hys eldest daughter marryed with hys sonne and heyre (as in an ungodlye manner it is in Englande much used amonge noble men). And as it was her chaunce to dye afore the tyme of maryage, to save the money he constrayned thys to supplye her rowme, so that in the ende she was compelled agaynst her wyll or fre consent to marrye with hym. In process of tyme by oft readynge of the sacred Bible she fell clerele from all olde superstycions of papystrye to parfyght beleve in Jhesus Christ. Wherby she so offended the prestes (as is to be seane afore) that he at their suggestion vyolente drove her oute of hys howse. Wherupon she thought herselfe free from that uncomelye kynde of coated marryage, by this doctrine of S. Paul 1 Cor. 7: If a faythfull woman have an unbelevynge husbände whych wyll not tarrye with her she maye leave hym. For a brother or syster is not in subjectyon to such, especiallye where as the marryage afore is unlawfull. Upon thys occasion (I heare saye) she sought of the law a dyvoceement from hym, namelye and above all bycause he so cruellye drove her out of hys howse, in despyght of Christe's veryte. She coule not thynke hym worthye of her marryage which so spyghtfullye hated God the chefe autor of marryage. Of this matter she first examyned (I thynke) at hys instaunt labour and sute.”

Page 545, line 7. “ The Lord strengthen you. ” ]—So reads Bale's text, and Foxe's of 1563, but the subsequent editions alter it into “ us. ” The Latin (p. 194) says “ Dominus te in veri cognitione corroboret. Ora, ora, iterum atque iterum ora. ”

Page 545, note (2).]—Anne Askewe's verses will be found at the end of this Appendix, No. XIX.

Page 546, line 18. “ Condemned without a quest. ” ]—So reads correctly Bale's text (fol. 33 verso), but Foxe's in every edition reads “ with, ” and his margin has “ by a quest. ” The truth is, that the proceedings against her were illegal, as she ought by the law of 1544 (see pp. 527, 528) to have been tried by a quest or jury of twelve men, any of whom she might have challenged: but she was condemned by the lord chancellor and the council: on which Otwell Johnson writes to his brother July 2d (MSS. in the Tower Records, and Ellis's Letters, Sec. Ser. ii. p. 177), “ On Monday following quondam bishopp Saxon, Mtres Askewe, Christofer White, one of Mtres Fayre's sons, and a tayliour that came from Colchester or therabout, wer arraigned at the Guyld Hall, and received thayer judgement of my lord Chauncellor and the Counsaile to be burned, and so wer committed to Newgate again. But sins that tyme, th'aforsaid Saxon and White have renounced thair opinions, and the talke goeth that they shall chaunce to escape the fyre for this vice.”

Page 547, line 1.]—Otwell Johnson, as cited in the last note, thus speaks of this: "The gentilwoman hath been rakked sins her condempnacion, as men say, which is a straunge thing in my understanding: the Lord be merciful to us all."

Page 547, line 5. "On Tuesday."]—i. e. June 29th, the day after condemnation. This tallies with a passage in Otwell Johnson's letter already quoted, dated July 2d, which would be the Friday following the condemnation.

Page 547, line 9.]—Nicholas Shaxton, whose recantation is here referred to, had been a man zealous for the truth. He was suspected of heresy by old Nixe, bishop of Norwich (see vol. iv. pp. 650, 680): an attestation to his orthodoxy at that date is printed at the end of this Appendix, No. XVII. He was made bishop of Salisbury in 1535, but relinquished it July 4th, 1539, when he was imprisoned, and recanted on this occasion with Crome. At the end of this Appendix, No. XVII. will be found his Articles and Submission at this time, July 9th, 1546, from the Bonner Register, fol. 100. One expression of his Submission renders it probable that his solicitation of Anne Askew, and preaching at her martyrdom, were part of the penance inflicted on him; and if so, they become an additional confirmation of the supposition that she was martyred in July and not in June. (See the note next following this.) Todd, in his Defence of Cramer, p. 68, note, mentions a little book intitled, "Confutation by R. Crowley of XIII. Articles, whereunto N. Shaxton, late bishop of Salisbury, subscribed, and caused to be set forth in print the year of our Lord 1546, which he recanted at Smithfeld in London at the burning of Mrs. Askewe." Crawford attributes the Articles to Gardiner.

Page 551, line 9. "About the month of June."]—But Otwell Johnson's letter of July 2d implies that they were not then executed. See the notes preceding this, on p. 547. Bale also, in his preface to the first examination, folio 3 verso, says that it was "in the yeare of our Lorde 1516 in Julye:" and at folio 5, "about the xxv yeare of her age, with iii companions." There can be little doubt, therefore, that Stowe's date, July 16th, is correct.

Page 553, middle.]—Queen Katharine Parr was married July 10th, 1543, just before the martyrdom of the three Windsor men.

Page 564, line 21. "The Sunday before Anne Askew suffered."]—That would be July 11th according to Stowe's reckoning, who places her martyrdom to Friday, July 16th.

Page 565, line 12. "A Proclamation for the abolishing of English Books, after the death of Anne Askew, set forth," &c.]—This Proclamation is recorded in the Bonner Register, folio 91, intitled, "A proclamation devised by the kinge's highnes with thadvise of his mooste honourable counsell to avoyde and abolyshe such Englyshe bookes as conteyne pernicious and detestable errors and heresies, made the viij day of Julye, the xxxviij yere of the kinges majesties mooste gracious Reyne." This was probably before Anne Askewe's death.

Page 566, note (1).]—Foxe has evidently taken the List in the text from the Bonner Register, folio 87, where it appears preceded by a certificate of Bonner to the Privy Council (printed at the end of this Appendix, No. XVIII.), of his having burned the after-named books at Paul's Cross in sermon time, agreeably to the Proclamation. As the Proclamation of July 8th, 1546, is not recorded in the Register till afterwards, Foxe has expressed a doubt to what Proclamation reference is made; but the date of the certificate clears up that point. Foxe's List has been collated with that in the Register, and presents some variations. In the Register, the books of each author are connected together by a bracket-line running down the margin, and the author's name is written outside the bracket; the Editor has consequently introduced the authors' names between square brackets into the margin of this edition from the Register. The Editor, however, has subsequently observed, that they are introduced by Foxe himself in his first edition. Again, from the "Abridgement of Unio Dissidentium," mentioned near the bottom of p. 567, to the end of the List, the arrangement of the works is different from that in the Register, Foxe having collected together those works which he knew to be the production of the same author; whereas the Registrar, in several cases, has put a long line after the work, as not knowing its author. Thus the four works mentioned next after the "Unio Dissidentium" are placed in the Register next after "The Image of a very Christian Bishop, &c." near the end of the List. The names of "Melancthon," "Luther," and "Urbanus Regius," in p. 568, are put in by Foxe; "T. Solme" is called "Thomas Solme" in the Register; also, the last three works of Tyndale are in the Register mentioned after the "Image of a Counterfeit Bishop," in p. 568; and they are there followed by "A booke in Artycles againste the Christian Religion made by Robert Barnes above-named," which Foxe has moved back to stand with Barnes's other works.

Page 566, note (3).]—It is observable, that Foxe says little or nothing about Coverdale's translation of the Bible: it was the first ever printed, and was finished October 4th, 1535. It would seem that this translation had not the confidence of the Reformers. The following is an outline of Mr. Anderson's statement on the subject, in his Annals of the English Bible.

Foxe says above, at p. 120, that Coverdale met Tyndale at Hamburgh, and assisted him in re-translating the Pentateuch, from Easter (April) to Dec. 1529; but that seems improbable. There is a letter from Coverdale to Cromwell, among the Cromwell Correspondence in the State Paper Office, (printed in the Parker Society Reformation Letters), dated August 27th, 1527, from which it appears that Coverdale had entered into friendly relations with Cromwell, and even a state of subserviency, which effectually screened him from Tonstal, Stokesly, and More, though his name was shown up to them in 1532 (see p. 40 of this volume). There is another letter of Coverdale's to Cromwell, dated The Augustines, May 1st, printed by the Government Commissioners (see Gov. State Papers, i. p. 383), in which Coverdale begs for books, and says he had "begun to taste of Holy Scripture," and adverts to some proposal made to him by Cromwell "on Easter even in Master Moor's house," most likely Sir Thomas More's. The Government Commissioners date this May 1st, 1532: it might have been in 1531; and then we may suppose that Cromwell and More, who had been enraged at Tyndale's version in 1530, might have formed a scheme of getting a rival translation made by Coverdale. In the preface to his Bible he says that he was desired, anno 1534, to set it forth (i.e. print it:) which further implies, that his work, which Cromwell had suggested at More's house and patronized, was then completed. The printing of Coverdale's Bible was finished by October 4th, 1535; but the preface concluded with an allusion to Queen Anne, which, as she fell into disfavour and was executed in May 1536, would not do. The title-page, therefore, was re-printed, and the year altered to 1536. The Convocation, however, in June of that year virtually expressed their dissatisfaction with both Tyndale's and Coverdale's translations, by petitioning the king, "That he would graciously indulge unto his subjects of the laity the reading of the Bible in the English tongue, and that a new translation of it be forthwith made for that end and purpose." It appears, however, that two editions of Coverdale's Bible were printed by James Nicholson in 1537, and both "Set forth with the Kynge's most gracious license." A letter from Coverdale to Cromwell proves, that Cromwell had obtained the king's license for him. But, meanwhile, Rogers had been engaged in preparing the new folio Bible of Tyndale's translation on the Continent, under the title of Thomas Mathewe. This at once secured Cranmer's, and through him Cromwell's and the king's, favour; and the Protestants generally were already prepossessed in favour of anything of Tyndale's. From this time Coverdale's translation fell into the shade. It is very inferior to Tyndale's, particularly in rendering penance "penance" or "amendment," and several similar renderings. Soon after this, Coverdale was engaged to correct the 2d edition of Mathewe's Bible; and now, in 1546, we find his own Bible at the head of a prohibited list.

Page 569, line 5 from the bottom.]—The whole of this Document in the original occupies six closely-written skins of parchment, beginning at folio 188 of the Warham Register, whence it is printed in Wilkins's Concilia, iii. p. 727. Only a portion of it is given here: the remainder of it will be found infra, vol. vii. pp. 498—505, where internal evidence shows its date to be

May 24th, 1530. Latimer replied to it in a letter to the king, dated Dec. 1st, 1530 (vol. vii. pp. 506—511). Mr. Anderson (Annals, i. 256) cites a letter to Archbishop Warham from old Nix, bishop of Norwich, dated Hoxne, May 14th, only ten days previous to this document, pointing out to Warham the extreme danger from the quantity of heretical books imported, and the necessity for suppressing such as held these erroneous opinions, "for if they continue any time, I think they shall undo us all." Page 602, line 24. "The story of Cochleus against the Hussites and Lutherans, with the preface," &c.]—There is some little confusion and mistake here; we should read, "and his Appendix to the work of Conradus Brunus the lawyer subjoined to the same." The latter work is entitled "De seditiosis libri sex—auth. Conrado Bruno Jurecons. Jo. Cochleii de seditiosis Appendix triplex, contra quosdam rebelles hujus temporis. . . ex officina Fr. Behem typog.; Moguntiae, 1550." Cochleus compliments the Senate of Venice (p. 283) on its zeal in burning, what it was instructed to consider, heretical books:—"multa volumina, novis hæreticorum fermentis infecta, quæ Gallicus quidam Bibliopola spe lucri furtim invexerat, bonorum vero virorum indicio detecta, publice sunt jussu et autoritate vestra combusta. Si hoc salubre ac necessarium prudentiæ atque diligentæ vestræ exemplum secutæ fuissent multe in sacro Romano imperio præclaræ alioqui et opulentæ civitates Germanicæ, facile potuissent ea evitare incommoda, quæ multis jam annis summo cum detrimento Reipublicæ suæ pertulerunt."

The former sentence taken from the treatise "De Consideratione," is in lib. ii. cap. 6, § 10; the latter, after "for," in lib. i. cap. 6, § 7.

"In general the blandishments of the priests were so successful, that every religious house possessed lands more or less, not only in their own vicinity, but throughout the whole of Scotland. Travellers taken sick, or on a visit, were waylaid by the ghostly fathers, who, with their ready instruments of moral compulsion, effectually unloosened the hold of the unfortunate proprietor, of the humble croft which his father had left him. The monks of Melrose had territories in the counties of Berwick, Lanark, Haddington, Ayr, Peebles, Roxburgh, Dumfries, Selkirk, Kinross, and Perth; and property in the towns of Leith, Edinburgh, and Glasgow; together with possessions in England. Nay, so extensive was their gripe, that we find annexed to the far distant bishopric of Moray, a small tenement in South Berwick. They, however, were by no means fastidious; they took every thing which the pious generosity of the faithful chose to shower upon them. The gift of a monk's hood, of green colour, by Mr. Gilbert Beryk, was thankfully received by the Dean and Chapter of Glasgow, and a record of it duly inserted in their chartulary. Liber Episcopatus Glasguensis, 2 tom. An inventory of them has been preserved. First, we have a bit of the wood of the Cross; Item, a golden vial, with part of the hair of the blessed Virgin; Item, a golden vial containing part of the coat of St. Kentigern, and Thomas Becket; Item, in another golden casket, the mouth of St. Niman; Item, part of the zone of the Blessed Virgin; Item, in a small vial of crystal, part of the milk of the B. V.; Item, a bit of the manger (præsepis) in which Christ lay; Item, in a small saffron-coloured vial, the oil which emanated from the tube of St. Kentigern; Item, another casket, with the bones of St. Blasius and Eugenius; Item, part of the comb of St. Catharine; Item, a small bag with part of the sweat of St. Martin; Item, a precious (preciosa) bag, with the breasts of St. Kentigern and Thomas Becket; Item, four other sacks with the bones of saints; Item, a wooden chest with many small relics; and, at last, when the person making the inventory was getting tired of his duty, he sums up the whole with—Item, two linen sacks full of the bones of Kentigern, Tenaw, and different other saints. Can there be a more wretched exhibition of human folly, or the picture of a more debasing superstition?" (North British Review, vol. ii. p. 379.)

Page 647, middle. "Persecution in Kent."—The ensuing narrative belongs to vol. iv. p. 173.

Page 648, line 22.]—The second article, as it stands in the original Register, is omitted by Foxe, being as follows: "Item, quòd Sacramenta Baptismi et Confirmationis non sunt necessaria ad salutem animæ."

Page 652, line 3.]—Dr. Maitland published large portions of the processes against these persons out of the Warham Register in several successive numbers of the British Magazine, from April 1843 to February 1844: it appears that the article omitted in reference to John Browne, as remarked in the last note, is also omitted in reference to several of these persons.

Page 654, note (1). "To go woolward."—This old penance, mentioned lines 16 and 28 in this page, is described in the Appendix to vol. ii. note on p. 124. At line 16 of this page all the original editions of Foxe omit the word "go." Mr. Russell's note on this phrase may be consulted with advantage. (Tyndale's Works, vol. i. p. 510, Lond. 1831.)

Page 655.]—The whole passage from the last paragraph of this page, beginning "In the mean season," to the bottom of p. 658, belongs to page 68 supra.

Page 656, line 8.]—"Expedition" for "expediting." "Expedition" is the very term used by Gardiner in his letter: that letter is dated Orvieto, March 31st, and contains internal evidence of belonging to 1528; for Friday is spoken of as March 27th, and the following Sunday is called Passion Sunday, which fell on March 29th in 1528. (See Nicolas's Tables.) Foxe has misdated this embassy "A.D. 1532," being misled probably by the mention in Gardiner's letter of "the King's book," which he hastily assumed to be the book published in 1532 (see above, page 60), instead of that produced to the Pope at Orvieto, March 2d, 1528. (See Gardiner's letter.)

Page 656, note (?). "With answer also to the contrary objections of Abel and others."—These words should doubtless be expunged. (See last note.) This King's book was produced to the Pope at Orvieto, March 2d, 1528. (See Gardiner's Letter, alluded to in the text.) But Foxe represents Abel as rising up 1532, and as answered by another King's book, supra p. 60.

Ciacconius remarks, in reference to the Cardinal's mission:—"Cum nec precibus, validisque rationibus, ac summi Pontificis, ac Imperatoris, aliorumque Christianorum Principum viribus immanem illam belluam ad sanitatem revocare minime posset, re infecta Romam rediit." (Vite Pontiff. Rom. et Cardinalium, edit. 1677, tom. iii. col. 391.)

Page 699, note (2).]—Mr. Bruce in his preface to Hutchinson's Works, edited by him for the Parker Society, has proved the statement in the text to be a libel on Crammer.

Page 706, note (1).]—These Injunctions of Edward VI. have been reprinted by Bp. Sparrow in his Collection, in Burnet's History, and in Wilkins's Concilia, iv. p. 3, all of which copies agree. They are inserted also in the Ridley London Register, fol. 301, bound in the same volume with Bonner's. Several inaccuracies in Foxe's text have been corrected from those sources. Bonner received these Injunctions with a protest, which is printed in Burnet and Wilkins.

Page 712, line 1. "Bestow much substance . . . and other like blind devotions."—A clause from the will of Agnes Parker, of Keswick, buried at Cringleford in the year 1505: "Item, I owe a pilgrimage to Canterbury. Also, I own to St. Tebbald of Hobbies. Item, to St. Albert of Cringleford three times."—Another of these middle-age customs was the drinking established for religious purposes. In some cases a wealthy man founded a drinking for the good of his soul, as may be proved by the will of Robert Sygon, of Lynn, and James Cooke, of Sporle, the one dated in 1505, and the other in 1506. Hart's "Antiquities of Norfolk," pp. 36, 56; Norwich, 1811.

Page 713, line 17. "Thomas bishop of Westminster."—It appears from the Westminster Register, folio 273 (see the note infra on p. 716), that that see was taken out of the London diocese Dec. 17th, an. Hen. VIII. 32 [1540], and restored to it April 1st, an. Edw. VI. 4 [1550]; and that Thomas Thirlby was consecrated bp. of Westminster in Henry VII.'s Chapel Dec. 19th, 1540: translated to Norwich April 1st, 1550, and to Ely 1554. The Royal Commission for a Visitation is given at folio 300 verso of the same Register, dated August 10th, 1 Edw. VI. [1547]. The Injunctions in the text are given at folio 265 verso, and Foxe no doubt took them from thence. Several inaccuracies in his copy have been corrected from the Register.

Page 713, line 24.]—Foxe reads here, "thrice in the year in other several places of your diocese:" but the original Register says, "thryse in three other generall places of your dioces," and so it is printed in Wilkins from Heylin's Hist. of the Reform.

Page 713, line 5 from the bottom.]—Foxe reads "visit the churches;" but the Register, "visit the dioceses."

Page 714, line 1.]—The words "the king" are put in from the Register; which also reads "this city" at line 4, "their own" at line 6, and "you, your chancellor" at line 12.

Page 714, line 2 from the bottom. "The Six Articles."—Though Edward now abolished that cruel Act, yet it is singular that in the Bonner Register, folio 114 verso, is a royal commission for the execution of the statute of VI. Articles, dated Greenwich, 13th of April, first year of this reign, similar to that issued in the preceding reign (see the note above on p. 440). This commission not being noticed by the historians, is placed among the Documents at the end of this Appendix, No. XX. See the note infra, on p. 735.

Page 716, bottom.]—This letter missive of Bonner is in the Bonner Register, folio 111, and the Westminster (appended to Bonner's), folio 268.

Page 717, middle.]—This letter of the Council is in the Bonner Register, folio 110, and the Westminster, folio 268. Henry VIII. had, so far back as October 1541, issued a proclamation for the abolishing of images. See above, p. 463.

Page 718, line 9.]—This letter of the Council to Cranmer is in the Bonner Register, folio 112, dated the "xxith" of February. Foxe has supposed this a mistake for "xith," but it is rather a mistake for "xxist;" for Cranmer would certainly not have waited thirteen days before he communicated on the subject to Bonner. In the bishop of Westminster's Register, folio 268 verso, the reading is "xxi of February," and so it is in the copy printed in Wilkins (iv. p. 22), from the Cranmer Register.

Page 719, middle.]—These letters missive from the Council are given at folio 112 of the Bonner Register, and folio 269 of the Westminster.

Page 720, line 12.]—The date of this letter is "xith" in the Bonner Register, but "xiiith" in the Westminster Register, folio 269, and "thirteenth" in the Cranmer Register, as printed by Wilkins, iv. 32. Bonner's letter to his archdeacon, for the execution of it, is dated "decimo sexto Martii."

Page 726.]—This letter from the king and his Council to Bonner is at folio 219 of the Bonner Register.

Page 726, line 8 from the bottom.]—"To have reformed" is the reading of the Register (folio 219); which Foxe corrupts into "preferred."

Page 726, line 5 from the bottom. "The redube of these things."]—"Redube," an old word for "redress," which latter is employed near the end of the Document. "To redubbe" occurs at p. 170 of this volume, line 25 from the bottom: see the note on that passage in the Addenda.

Page 727, middle.]—This letter of Bonner to the Dean and Chapter of St. Paul's is in the Bonner Register, folio 219 verso. Wilkins erroneously prints the date "25th of July."

Page 728, line 5.]—Foxe says erroneously, "the 11th day of August," misled by an incorrect copy of a document in Bonner's Register. See note infra on p. 762.

Page 728, line 26. "Such stoutness of heart," &c.]—The remainder of this extract from the first edition will be found also at p. 750.

Page 729.]—These Private Injunctions will be found in the Bonner Register, folio 220 verso.

Page 735, line 4. "We of pity, because they were bloody, took them away."]—See the note in this Appendix on p. 714.

Page 741. "Matter concerning Edmund Bonner."]—Burnet gives the whole order of the process against Bonner, in almost everything coinciding with Foxe, and says, "this account is drawn from the Register of London, where all these particulars are inserted. From thence it was that Foxe printed them. For Bonner, though he was afterward commissioned by Queen Mary to deface any records that made against the Catholic cause, yet did not care to alter any thing in this Register, after his readmission in Queen Mary's time. It seems he was not displeased with what he found recorded of himself in this matter." The account in the Register consists of two distinct parts: first, the "Process," beginning with the points given to Bonner by the king to redress (see p. 745), and running from folio 220 verso to folio 239 of the Register; secondly, at the bottom of folio 239, immediately after the conclusion of the "Process," follows a "Supplement" of five closely-written pages of the Register, entitled in the margin, "Quidam sermones verba et colloquia habita emissa et hinc inde prolata inter Epm. London et regios [Commissarios] diversis diebus preter ordinarium processum in dictæ privationis negotio." Foxe has, in his account, woven these two narratives together. References to the folios of the two Registers are furnished in the ensuing notes.

Page 749, line 15.]—Foxe says "Wednesday," which was the eleventh of September in 1549. (See Nicolas's Tables.) The original "Process" and "Supplement" expressly say "Die Martis" and "Tuesday." The preliminary account of Bonner's behaviour, on entering, is the first thing given in the "Supplement," and is thus introduced (Register, folio 239, ad inum): "The talke and communication in substance and effecte hadd and passed betweene the Archebischopp of Canterburie and the bisshopp of London at his firste appearance before hym and other the Commissioners which was in the chambre called the Chambre of presence in the said archebischop's house att Lambeth, the Tuesday, being the xth day of Septembre 1549, and abowte iij of the clocke after noone as folowith."

Page 750, line 24. "Such stoutness," &c.]—We have had this passage already at page 728.

Page 754, bottom.]—For Bonner's reply to the Denunciation see Register, folio 222 verso.

Page 755, line 27. "Printed (as he falsely surmiseth) in Zurich by Augustine Fries."—This is the reading in the edition of 1563, p. 700; the printer's name is corrupted in subsequent editions into "Friers." But the Colophon of the first edition of Hooper's treatise (see Parker Society's edition, p. 96) is, "Prynted in Zurych by Augustyne Fries Anno MDXLVII." Bonner's Register (fol. 222 verso) reads "Fries." His next work, "The Answer to Gardiner's Book on the Sacrament," was also printed the same year at Zurich by the same person (see Parker Society's edition, p. 98). What reason Bonner had for questioning either the place or the printer, does not appear. Hooper dates his dedication of the second work from Zurich, from which it would seem that he was actually there, and must have known the truth of the matter better than Bonner.

Page 755, Item v.]—See Bonner Register, folio 223.

Page 756.]—The numbers "VI." and "VII." are prefixed to these two "Items" on this page, on the authority of the Register, folio 223. Foxe prefixes no numbers in these instances.

Page 757, note (1).]—These references are correct, and agree with Bonner's Register and Foxe's first edition (1563) p. 701. Some of the numbers are corrupted in later editions.

Page 762, line 17 from the bottom.]—The Register distinctly reads the "xth of August," but Foxe has "xj," which is clearly wrong.

Page 763, line 18.]—At the close of Article X. the Register puts a stop after "minority," and then "Additional" without any stop, followed in the same line by "11. Item," &c. So that the word "Additional" is meant to apply to Article XI.: this is explained by Bonner's reply to Article XI. in p. 769.

Page 765, line 13.]—The words "meaning Hooper and Latimer" are in the Register, folio 240 verso.

Page 765, line 8 from the bottom. "Thus," &c.]—Here Foxe begins his own abstract of what followed, gathered from Bonner's answers ensuing, and an abstract of them given in the Register, folio 237, and inserted at p. 772, from the first edition of Foxe. So that we have three accounts of the same matter.

Page 768, line 16 from the bottom. "To the Eighth," &c.]—Foxe in the edition of 1563, p. 705, mis-numbers this "To the seventh article:" the Register and subsequent editions are correct.

Page 769, line 8. "To the eleventh Article."—The Register here says "To one Article," &c.: see note on p. 763, line 18.

Page 770, line 13 from the bottom.]—The word "in" before the words "the first article" is omitted by Foxe so as to obscure the meaning. The text is restored exactly according to the Register, fol. 224 verso.

Page 770, note (2).]—The Register plainly says, "the tenth of Auguste of this," &c. Foxe omits the word "of."

Page 777, line 13.]—"The Information" is taken from the Westminster Register, which is incorporated with the Bonner Register (see fol. 227 verso). The words "in the said act and session" are prefixed by Foxe. The Register incorrectly dates it "A.D. 1550."

Page 779, line 8.]—See Register, folios 237 verso and 241.

Page 779, line 12.]—The "Process" in the Register (fol. 237 verso) calls Robert Johnson "nuncius specialis:" but the "Supplement" (fol. 241) calls him merely "Mr. Robert Johnson, with Mr. Robert Warmyngton," yet afterwards (fol. 241) calls the one "the bishop's registrar," the other "his commissarie."

Page 779, line 9 from the bottom.]—"I am sure," is the reading in the Register, fol. 241. Foxe reads "I say."

Page 781, line 13 from the bottom.]—The Register, fol. 228 verso, says correctly "the 18th day of September," but adds incorrectly "1540." Foxe reads incorrectly "the viij day."

Page 784, bottom. "Now in the meanwhile," &c.]—This portion is taken from the "Supplement" (Register, fol. 241), where it is thus introduced (this introduction is given by Foxe, Edition 1563, p. 716):—

"The saynge and exhortation in effecte of the bishop of London to Cuthbert Bourne his Chapleyn, Robert Warmyngton his commissarie, and Robert Johnson his Register, declared to them the said xx day of September in the Quadrants or voyde place beinge betweene the chambre of presence and the greate chambre of Lambeth immediately before the said bishop was comitted to prisone, and in the tyme that he and thother aforsaid were comanded to avoide the Chambre of presence and to stande aparte from the Commissioners, and not to come in agayne untill they shulde be licensed and called in."

Page 786, note (1).]—The original Latin of this passage runs thus in the Register, fol. 229, whence Foxe's text has been a little improved:—"Apostolosque quatenus in hoc casu de jure sunt petendi peto, primo secundo tertio, instantius instantissime, mihi dari fieri tradi et deliberari eum effectui; subjiciens me, statum, famam, opinionem, ac dignitatem meam episcopalem predictam, meumque titulum et possessionem meam in premissis ac in dignitate mea episcopali hujusmodi, omnesque et singulos mihi in hac parte adherere volentes, protectioni, tuitioni, defensioni et præsidio dicti illustrissimi domini nostri regis, domini mei Superioris."

Page 787, line 8.]—Both the "Process" (fol. 230 verso) and the "Supplement" (see fol. 241) have this passage, headed in each case thus: "Thees be the woordes and talke in effecte passed betweene Mr. Secretary Smythe and the Bysshopp of London; whereupou he was committed to the Marshalsee 20 Septembris, anno 1549 sub noctem apud Lambethite."

Page 787, line 10 from the bottom. "Break up that session."—The following passage from the "Process" (Reg. fol. 238) should be here inserted:—"And after all this the saide judges delegate did then and there charge the said bysshopp that he at this present time did contumeliouslie and unreverentlie (as seemed) behave hymself dyverse wayes towards them, sytting on the king's majesties commission, and specially toward the said Sir Thomas Smythe his grace's secretary, and therefore and for dyverse other contumelious woordes spoken by the saide bysshopp they comytted hym to the Marshalsee, the saide Bysshopp at his departynge protestinge as before."

Page 790, note (2).]—Foxe's text reads, "and which remained in their courts:" the Register, "in thactes of this court:" seventeen lines lower Foxe omits the words "more and most instantly:" and in the following line he puts "appellatories" for "apostles:" and four lines lower he omits "adhere" and "cleave." See the document in p. 786; the two mutually explain each other.

Page 790, note (3).]—The conclusion of this passage from the Edition of 1563 is imperfect in Foxe: it thus reads in the Register, fol. 231 verso: "to thintente as well ye forebeare to doo further wronge, for respect to his grace to whom I have appealed; and also that I beinge delyvered from you may prosecute my saide recusation and appeal, as appertayneth and to the law ys agreeable:" Foxe reads, "least they should do wrong to the king's grace; unto whom he maketh his appeal," &c.

Page 799, note.]—The king's brief and the certificate of the Council are in the Register, fol. 235.

ADDENDA.

Page 18, line 16. "Thomas Benet."—In the Harleian MSS. No. 419, fol. 129, is an account of Thomas Dugate, alias Benet, written by Ralph Morice to Archbishop Cramer, which agrees with this account in Foxe: it states that Dugate had been scholar of Christ's, afterwards chosen fellow of Bennet College, Cambridge.

"In removing one of the old Alms-houses of the Livery Dole, at Hcavtree, near Exeter, a curious discovery has been made: it is the remnant of the stake to which Bennet the schoolmaster was tied in 1531. The stake found is of elm, slightly charred; and there has been also found the iron ring, which went round the apex of the stake, into which a stout staple, clamp, or bolt, somewhat in the guise of a ship's anchor, with transverse prongs or flukes, was inserted, having a ring or circular hole at the top, through which the chain went, which confined the sufferer to the fatal tree. The relics are to be deposited at the Institution."—From the Western Luminary, cited in the Record of Oct. 8, 1849.

sequent Editions many alterations crept in : the following are the most important various readings in the original text. Line 9 from bottom, the Original reads "second;" line 5 from bottom, "service of them who little care what come . . . their purpose;" note (1), "departure" for "death."—Page 91, line 14, "speaketh of the fall;" line 15, "gave him an inking;" line 21, "which words" for "and that those words;" middle, "not made a constiute shepherd;" line 16 from bottom, "traitor of his master;" line 13 from bottom, "notwithstanding . . . yet would flee;" line 10 from bottom, "might not weigh;" line 7 from bottom, "wrought for Peter;" next line, "for he received;" next line, "was chosen to;" next but one, "of the Apostles he saith which were;" last line, "that he might be found."—Page 92, line 10, "who should dare;" line 14, "dignity of Paule . . . equally committed;" middle, "and that Peter, nor no other;" line 14 from bottom, "well nigh" for "almost;" line 6 from bottom, "apostolate" for "apostleship."—Page 93, line 6, "Bishopric of the holy Apostle;" line 15, "like primacy there;" line 17, "indeed was founded;" line 19, "preachers and converters;" line 21, "challenge the primacy;" line 26, "the church of Rome;" line 32, "therefore there;" line 34, "when he had done certain actes, yea and made certain determinations and statutes;" line 39, "sentences," "prejudicial or compulsory, but to follow their own willes and customs;" line 45, "refuge" for "appeal;" line 52, "primates, or so obstinately have holden or maintained;" line 53, "bishop."—Page 94, line 4, "as but his fellows;" line 8, "any exercise of sovereignty;" line 27, "advanced worldly with all titles;" line 18 from bottom, "untangled" for "not entangled;" and next line, "and uncorrupted" for "neither corrupted;" line 15 from bottom, "suit was not to the bishop;" line 7 from bottom, "had of his suburbicans. And."—Page 95, line 14, "Scripture, is by his own confession quailed and brought to a litle;" line 18, "And afore the primacy of Peter, . . . that was only in preaching . . . with his mouth. That primacy did;" line 21, "derived" for "delivered," also "to other apostle;" line 23, "after him" for "according to him;" line 9 from bottom, "This similitude yet hath not his full place in a mystical body; although the Scripture, speaking of king Saul, saith: 'When thou wert but of small reputation in thine own eyes, I made thee, &c.;" line 5 from bottom, after "tribes of Israel" insert "that is of men which see God by a shadow;" next line, "of such which."—Page 96, line 2, omit "believing and;" line 3, "take other office;" line 33, "other one universal;" line 38, "if you precisely weigh;" line 40, "meant other thing;" next line, "intronizate" for "enthroned;" two lines lower, "Cornelius), that then;" two lines lower, "was, one primacy to have ado;" three lines lower, "for that it is not lawful . . . nor that the former bishop being lawful ought to be deposed giltlesse, without his fault be proved;" line 6 from bottom, "conclude" for "include;" line 3 from bottom, "written to and of any other bishop, lawfully chosen and possessed."—Page 97, line 15, "But yet" for "and also;" line 19, "they know that God," insert after "know" "what men they be themselves, and understanding they have of man's souls, but so that they perceave;" line 21, "be the chief before all other, and above all the goddes," which is closer to the Latin; line 24, the remainder of this section and quotation from Theophylact is much altered: "That is. Although thou art an Apostle, although an Evangelist, although a prophete, or what soever thou art, be subject, for this subjection over throweth no godliness. And he saith not only, let him obey, but let him be subject. And if the apostles be subjecte to Princes, muche more all bishops and patriarches, yea the bishops of Rome, and all other." Middle, "to the house of God shall assist thee, and be ready. And in the xvi. chapter also David;" line 31, "the ancient heads of Israel, for that they should judgment and causes;" line 38, after "his office" insert "whether priest or Levite, for the burnt offerings, and peace offerings, and to minister and to thanke, and to pray in the gates of the lodge of the Lord. And Ezechias."—Page 98, middle, the Original reads, "of our Lord," "to Constantine, . . . and to Heraclius, and to Tiberius;" line 19 from bottom, "whether to the King as to the chiefe, whether to the Dukes," which is the Wickliffite version; line 10 from bottom, "if ye lust regard."

Page 133, line 18.]—All the old Editions, and Tyndale's Works (p. 455), read, "I omit it to God."

Page 152, middle.]—Euridge or Eridge is an estate of Lord Abergavenny's in the parish of Frant, Sussex, near Tunbridge Wells: Byrling is another estate of the same nobleman's in Kent.

Page 154, line 2 from the bottom. "I stack upon it."—The same expression occurs in a letter of Bonner, very similar both for style and subject to 'his in Foxe, published in the "Gentleman's Magazine," June 1850, p. 565: "Mr. Wyat nothing earnestlie stake in it, nor desired effectually themperour to heare us farther."]

Page 155, line 29, and margin. "With a Pilate's voice."—A loud, determined, harsh expression of tone seems to be intended. The simile is, however, of very rare occurrence. Chaucer has it once in the Prologue to the Miller's Tale, v. 16:—"But in Pilate's voice he gan to crie."

On which Mr. Tyrwhitt remarks, "Pilate, being an odious character, was probably represented as speaking with a harsh, disagreeable voice." See Sharpe's Dissertation on the Coventry Mysteries, pp. 52, 200.

Page 165.]—These Injunctions of 1536 are found in Cranmer's Register, Wilkins' Concilia, and Burnet. But there is another copy of them in the Rolls House, among the Chapter House Papers, Vol. A., 1, 12, p. 77, varying in some particulars from Foxe's and all the other Copies of the same Document. For example, in the preamble, after "the twenty-eighth year" is added "and the day of Auguste," consequently after the Feast of St. Peter ad Vincula (August 1st) in that year. Three lines lower, after "ecclesiastical within this realm" the following words occur, "Visiting by the King's highness' supreme auctoritie ecclesiasticall the people and clergie of this deanerie of N. by our trustie commissarie Mr. N. N. doctor of law, lawfully constitute and deputed for this parte, have" &c.—Page 166, line 16, the Rolls Copy reads "part are necessary;" and 4 lines lower, after "open and declare" it omits, "in their sermons and other collations;" and in next line it reads (for the remainder of the paragraph), "which of the said articles be necessary for their salvation, and which of the same do but concern the decent and public order of the said church. And the first diligently to implant and inculcate into the minds of their parishioners; and to show the other to be laudable and expedient and not to be contempned: albeit that no man may reckon to be saved by observing of them." The Rolls Copy places this and the next paragraph in p. 168, next before the concluding paragraph "All which and singular," &c. It also transposes the next paragraph in p. 166, "Besides this, to the intent," &c.; and the two bottom paragraphs in p. 167—"Also the said dean," and "Furthermore; because," &c.—to stand consecutively after the top paragraph of p. 168, ending "their counsel and wisdom." In the bottom paragraph of p. 166, the Rolls Copy omits "and other collations;" and says "parents" for "fathers and mothers;" and begins bottom paragraph of p. 167 with "To this" instead of "Furthermore."

The Rolls Copy also omits the paragraph about the Bible in p. 167.

Page 168.]—There is among the Chapter House Papers at the Rolls House, Vol. A., 1, 9, p. 1, a Copy of these Injunctions of 1538, signed with Cromwell's own hand, and stated to have been exhibited Sept. 5th, A.D. 1538. It fills up the date in the third paragraph "the feast of All Saints [Nov. 1st.] next coming:" and 2 lines lower, "whereas your parishioners;" and in the next line, "the parson and the parishioners;" 5 lines from bottom, "they look to be saved;" and 2 lines lower, "but to use."—In p. 169, at beginning of the fourth paragraph, it omits "feigned" before "images;" and lower down in same paragraph it reads, "to be books" and "otherwise admonished."—In p. 170, middle, it reads, "both you by the same may be better." It omits all the rest of Foxe's Document, except the last sentence, in which it reads "successors" for "parishioners," and "King's highness or his," and is subscribed "Thomas Cromwell."

Page 170, line 25 from the bottom.]—"Redubbe" (see Editions 1570, 1576) means to correct or redress. The substantive "redube" in the sense of "redress" is used at page 726 of this Volume, line 5 from the bottom.

Queen Elizabeth writes to Lord Gray and other Councillors, April 16, 1560: "We inervell much that any maner of Person of our Army shuld notefye to the Scotts any Lack or Doubt of our Proceeding, ether for want of Money or such lyke. Wherefore we require yow all by the best Meanes that ye can, to redubbe this, and to establish the Scotts in good Comefort." Burghley State Papers, Hayne, p. 292. The Council also, on the next page, add their advice to Lord Gray, "that it is necessary to redubbe this wound gyven." The Duke of Norfolk to Queen Elizabeth, Sept. 1571, writes: "O most gracious Sovereigne Lady, how many have rune astraye, who finding mercie, have afterwarde with good service redubbed their former follies." Murdin's State Papers, p. 153. See the Glossaries to Vols. iii., iv., of the Government State Papers, for many more examples: also Halliwell's Archaic Dictionary.

Page 180, line 7. "Upon this his submission."—"When D. Butte herd frier Forest in saing his Confiteor for his absolution (for he had once recanted) and was come to ideo precor, and added ideo precor beatam Mariam et beatissimum ac Sanctissimum Patrem Franciscum orare pro me: 'by iny trouth' quod he, 'and this Fryer prove not a false herlet, let me brent for him;' and in dede it proved even so. For he fill to his vomit agen, and was brent with the idole of Wales." (G. Joye's Refutation of the Bishop of Winchester's derke declaration, 1546, fol. cx. recto.)

Page 184.]—The text of Lambert's Answers is given in the Edition of 1563, probably, according to his MS.; but it is much doctored in the subsequent Editions, and whole passages omitted: in the present Edition these are restored, together with the most important readings of 1563.

Page 188, line 18. "Les Illustrations de Galles."—These include the little treatise "Le Promptuaire des Conciles de l'Eglise Catholique," from which the verses here quoted are taken, fol. 95, edit. Paris, 1547:

"O bone Calixte: Nunc omnis clerus odit te," &c.

Page 190, note (2).]—"Opposing" in the text means the same with "apposing," i. e. examining. The term is retained in the Cambridge "opponency."

Page 199, line 8. "You be not called."—This is a more correct rendering of the passage than the one current, and accords much better with the argument, &c.: see Elliott's Horæ Apocalyp. vol. ii. p. 89, and Pole's Synopsis in locum, the latter part. It is altered in 1570, and all subsequent Editions.

Page 201, line 9. "Silver coron and fined often and many sithes through fire."—The words "coron and" are omitted in all Editions after 1563. Coron may be explained by the German Korn, which means 1st, a grain, as of wheat: 2dly, the grain or globe of gold or silver which remains in the coppel, when a small quantity of gold or silver has been assayed and purified: 3dly, it hence describes gold or silver of a superior standard. "Eine Münze von gutem Schrot und Korn" means, a coin of full weight and value. The term "Korn-ähre" (ear of corn) has been applied to a rich ore in the Hessian silver-mines. Du Cange uses "nummi cum granis facti" of an improved currency. "Coron," or "corn," therefore, here means cupellated or assayed. Lambert probably picked up the word during his residence abroad. (See pp. 181, 226.) The mention of "corn" suggested Jeremiah's comparison of God's word to "pure clean wheat" separated from the chaff, cited in the next sentence. See more in "Notes and Queries," 2 S. v. p. 217. The Dutch is Koorn and Koren.

Page 211, lines 28 and 49. "The fiftcen Ooes."—This prayer is contained in the "Prymer of Salysburye use set owght along . . . wyth many prayers and goodly pcyctures yn the kalender, yn the matyns off our lady . . . wyth the xv oo yn ynglysh neuely enpryntyd yn Paris wythyn the house off Thylman Kerver, 1533."—In the Hore B. Virginis ad verum Sarisb. Eccles. ritum, 1527, we find on the second page of fol. lxiv:—"These be the xv. oos, the whiche the holy Vergyn saint Brigitta was wounte to say dayly before the holy Rode in saint Paules chyrche at Rome: who so say thys a hole yere he shall deliver xv soules out of Purgatory of hys nexte kyndreed, and converte other xv synners to gode lyf and other xv ryghthouse men of hys kynde shall persever in gode lyfe. And what ye desyre of God ye shall have it, yf it be to the salvacyon of your sowle."

Page 221, line 21 from the bottom. "Stied into heaven."—The "Errata" to Edit. 1563 directs "hied" to be corrected into "stied," i. e. ascended. This word occurs in the Festyvall, xxxix. Edit. 1528: "And this daye he styed up into heven;" and again on the next leaf; "Than in his styenge up, that we call the ascencyon."

Gower's Ballade to Henry IV., in Urry's Chaucer, p. 541, 176, gives:—

"And or Christ went out of this erthe' here
"And stighed to heven."

Page 229, line 11 from bottom.]—Foxe is mistaken in saying "Dr. Day," for he was not bishop till 1543. Dr. Sampson was bishop of Chichester from 1534 till March 1543, and was one of the king's privy council. (See Richardson's note on Godwin.)

Page 236.]—See an anecdote told in a letter by Richard Hilles to Bullinger respecting Lambert and Collins, Parker Soc. Reformation Letters, London, 1846, p. 201.

Page 251, line 4.]—It would seem from the letter of Hilles to Bullinger, just quoted, that Foxe is incorrect in dating Collins's death "1538," as he did not suffer till soon after Whitsuntide (May 16th) 1540.

Page 258, line 5.]—The original Edition reads "both that it may please."

Page 310, line 9 from bottom. "As witnesseth Jerom."—This should run, as it appears in Jewel's Reply to Harding (from which these instances would almost seem to have been selected), "Tertullian was a priest, as appeareth by St. Jerom, and married, as appeareth by his own book written to his wife." Art. xvii. vol. iii. 363, edit. Oxford, or P. S. E. vol. ii. p. 727. See also Defence of the Apology, pt. ii. ch. 8. div. 1: "Pope Damasus (you say) could not write of those popes that so many hundred years followed after him. That I grant you is also an error. Bid your Gratian reform it; for his only it is: it is none of ours. Howbeit, as for the truth of the matter itself, read the lives of all these popes, and ye shall find it true that Gratian saith." Jewel's Works, vol. iv. p. 557, edit. Oxf. 1848.

Page 350. "Melancthon's fruitful Epistle."—This Letter having been translated into English, and afterwards by J. C. printed at Weesell, 1547 (see Grenville Cat.), became rather "fruitful of trouble to possessors and disseminators." Dec. 21th, 1540, "certain Letters were sent from [Doctor Spenser] the Bishop of Norwich's Chancellor and Thomas Godsalve, touching the apprehension of one Thomas Walpole, a seditious fellow and a setter furth of a naughty book made by Philip Melancthon against the King's Acts of Christen religion." Jan. 2d, "Thos. Cottisford Priest, chaplain to the Bishop of Elye, and Deryek . . .<sup>1</sup> a Fleming, servant to the said Bishop, were brought before the Council by Sir Gyles Alynghton, Knight, and Philip Parys, Esq.<sup>2</sup> accused by oon Thomas Walpole for the setting furth and publishing of a seditious Epistle written by Melancthon against the Act of the Six Articles, and upon their examination the said Deryek confessing that he had the copy of the said Epistle of the said Cottysford, was committed to the Marshal's ward; and Cottisford confessing that he had the copy of the said Epistle of Blages wife, a grocer in Chepe in London, was committed to the Porter's ward, until the matter were further tried. Whereupon Letters were sent to the Recorder of London, and William Lock, mercer, to examine the said Blages wife, and to search her house for the said Epistle, and thereupon to send her hither with her confession and also thepistle if they could cum by it, with diligence." On the 4th of January, 1541, "the wife of . . . Blage, a grocer in Chepe appeared, and was examined touching the delivery of a seditious Epistle of Melancthon's unto Thomas Cottisford, Priest, and confessing as well the maner of the delivery of the said Epistle to the said Priest, as also declaring that she had it of oon Richard Grafton, a printer, was dismissed." Acts of Privy Council, vol. vii. 97, 104, 106.

Walpole, who was also examined on that occasion, admitted that he had set forth the Epistle, and had, moreover, been engaged in certain conjurations; whereupon he, Cottisford, and Grafton were sent to the Fleet prison, there to remain during the King's pleasure; and as nothing more occurs respecting them in the Council Register, they probably remained a considerable time in confinement. It may be observed, that this proceeding proves Melancthon's Epistle to have been translated as early as December, 1540; but the first edition of it in English hitherto known is that of 1547.

It is, however, probable that the tract noticed in Watt's Biblioth. Brit. entitled—"A very godly Defence . . . defending the Marriage of Priests, gathered by P. Melancthon; translated by L. Beauchampe;" Lond. 1541, was a translation of Melancthon's Epistle; but the fact has not been ascertained. See Acts of Privy Council, preface to vol. vii., p. xxxvi. and note.

The Defence above alluded to, bears the imprint of "printed at Lipse, by Wryght Hoffe." See Herbert's Typogr. Antiq. iii. 1833.

Page 395, line 14 from bottom. "And the ruffians to goe."]—"To" is intensive in this and many other cases: see Jamieson's Scot. Dicty., and Boucher's Glossary, ed. 4to under all-to. In the Wycliffite Versions, vol. ii. p. 478, (Oxf. 1850) the words of Jerom's Prologue "quid interpretem lauiant" are translated "wherto the remenour thei to-ten:" and in the later translation of Esther, cap. iv. 1, we have, "he (Mardochee) to-rente hise clothes;" and frequently so in the book of Psalms, as in Ps. cvi. 16; "For he to-broside the irene gatis, and the irene barris he to-brac."

Page 406, line 7. "The holy blood of Hayles."]—Inducements were not lacking to keep up the reputation of this Relic. In the notes to Leland's Collectanea vi. 283, Hearne has transcribed an ancient fragment detailing liberal grants of Indulgences to visitants:—

"The yere of our Lorde MCLLXX, Edmond, the nobyll Erle of Cornwall, brought a porcyon of precyous blode of Chryste Jhesu that he shedde for mankynde upon the crosse, unto the Abbey of Haylys, upon holyrode day in herviste, where God daylie shewithe miracles throw the virtue of that precyous blode. Also Pope Calix the IIIthe hath grauntede full remission at the feste of Corpus Christi, and at the pryncipall festes in the yere, that ys to say at Holyroday in May, and Holyroday in herveste, at yche of thes festys with iiij days folowynge. And also the iiide weke of Lent, and iche of thes iiij full remyssyon of all synnes. Also XV Cardinals hath grauntede yche be hemselfe c. pardon to all hem that honoure that precyous blode and other reliquies whiche be in that forsayde place, and put to ther helpynde hondes to the welfare of that forsayde Monasteri of Haylys."

Page 406, middle. "To Saynt Syth for my purse."]—Bishop Bale has a paragraph nearly parallel to this and the following stanza, in his "Image of both Churches," on the Revel. chap. xvii. 4. § 9:—

"Here were much to be spoken of saynt Germanes evyll, saynt Sythes kepe, saynt Uncomber's otes, master Johan Shornes bote, saynt Gertrude's rates, saynt Job for the poxe, saynt Fyacre for the ague, saynt Apolyne for tothe ake, saynt Gracyane for lost thryft, saynt Walstone for good harvest, saynt Cornelis for the foul evyll and all other sayntes els almost."

But neither he nor Foxe seem to have adverted to the Station-Keepers (Stationarii) of these saints or their images, and the fees to which their protection or favour was made to ground a claim. It formed one of the grievances exhibited by the German princes in 1523, at the Council in Nuremberg, No. vii. See Chemnitz, "Examen Decrett. Concil. Trident." pars iv. sect. ii. cap. 16.

"Compiled by Gray."—This is the writer, apparently, alluded to by Puttenham:—"And one Gray, what good estimation did he grow unto with the same King Henry, and afterward with the Duke of Somerset, Protectour, for making certayne merry Ballades, wherof one chiefly was 'The Hunte is up, the Hunte is up.'" (Arte of English Poesie, p. 12, edit. 1589.) In Collier's Extracts from the Registers of the Stationers' Company, 1818, a Copy of the Ballad alluded to by Puttenham is transcribed, p. 129. See also a reference to him in the Acts of the Privy Council, of Jan. 3, 1541, vol. vii. 105.

Page 415, top.]—The following reminiscence of Barnes's earlier days, by Gardiner, is from Dr. Maitland's Essays on the Reformation, p. 346, where it is cited from the Preface to "A Declaration of such true Articles as George Joye hath gone about to confute as false," printed in 1546:—"Barnes whom I knewe fyrst at Cambridge, a trymme minion frere Augustine, one of a merve skoffynge witte frerelike, and as a good felowe in company was beloved of many, a doctor of divinity he was, but never like to have proved to be either martyre or confessor in Christes religion, and yet he began there to exercise raylinge (which amonge such as newly profess Christ, is a great pece of connyng, and a great forwardness to reputacion, specialye if he rayle of Byshops as Barnes began, and to please suche of the lower sort as enueth euer auctoritie), cheflye againste my lorde Cardinal, then, under the King's maistry, having the high administration of the realme."

Page 415, line 22. "Master Stafford."—Strype, Memorials, book i. chap 3, shows from a MS. in Pembroke College, Cambridge, that George Stavord or Stafford, of Durham, became a B.A. and a fellow of that College in 1515; ordained Deacon at Ely in 1517; Proctor and University preacher in 1523; and about the same time D.D., and reader in divinity for four years together. He was noted to be, with Dr. Warner of Corpus, the first at Cambridge who read lectures on the Scriptures, whereas before they were read only on the Sentences. Dr. Colet had preceded Stafford as an expositor of Scripture at Oxford, from 1497 to 1504 (see vol. iv. p. 246, and notes). Latimer speaks of one of Stafford's lectures on St. Paul's Epistle to the Romans, in his Seventh Sermon on the Lord's Prayer. (Parker Soc. Ed. p. 440.) Stafford died in 1530, having bequeathed his books to the College Library.

Page 422, line 19. "Were all arcelurs."—An instance of this very rare word is recently furnished in the Prologue to the "Wycliffite Versions of the Bible," Oxford, 1850, p. 5.—"Sumetyme children and yunge men arsistris were devout;" where various readings are "arsitris, arsetris."

Page 432, middle. "To the sum of forty pounds a year."—As this may be proclaimed to be a misrepresentation of Gardiner's intentions, we present his own version of the story more at length; but he was an adroit fellow, assenting fully to the doctrinal statements of an opponent, and then completely mystifying them.

"I refused to be his scoolemayster, but beyng as I perceaved he was mynded to fall from errour, I wold communicate unto hym some honest portion of my lyvynge, and named xl li a yeare, and he to lyve felowlyke with me in my house. "The Scot of St. Katharine's."—Compare this with "the Scottish friar" mentioned at p. 446, and "Wilcock, a Scottish friar," at p. 448, and "John Wylcock, Scottish friar," at vol. iv. p. 586, and we recognize John Willock, an eminent Scottish Protestant Exile, who came into England after the martyrdom of Patrick Hamilton. See some account of him in the Rev. Peter Lorimer's History of Patrick Hamilton, Edinburgh, 1857, p. 190.

Page 446, line 26. "For that he was a Scottish friar."—See the preceding note.

Page 447, line 16. "Confession is confusion and deformation."—Dr. Maitland suggests that either the transcriber or the printer has omitted "confirmation" before "deformation," and refers to vol. vii. p. 47, line 13, as showing how "confirmation" was sometimes spoken of. The passage stands, however, in all the old Editions of Foxe as printed in the text.

Page 449, line 6. "Alexander Seton"—was another eminent Scottish Protestant exile in London, of whom see more in the History of Patrick Hamilton, just referred to, p. 181. He has been mentioned already, p. 448.

Page 449, middle. "Alexander Seton."—"The Gardiner of Winchester was not ashameth now of late (as I harde it credyble reported) to saye unto one that was accused of his malignaunt multitude, whan he was no longer able to withstande the manifest treuthe: Master Seton we knowe ye are learned, and plentiouslye endued with knowlege in the Scriptures, yet thinke not that ye shall overcome us. Bale's Image of both Churches, (second part,) on Rev. xiii. § 6, Parker Soc. Ed. p. 433.

Page 501, line 6. "And soluting."—There is another instance of this word in G. Joye's Refutation of the Bishop of Winchester's derke declaration of his articles, 1546, fol. lix. recto:—"Here ye playe Sir Thomas Mor is parte, which when he was suborned of you the Spiritualtie to wryte agaynst the truthe, and coulde not solute the Scriptures," &c.]

Page 501, middle. "Stepped aside."—The first edition (p. 657) adds: "through fear and frailty of the flesh. Whose godly doctrine had taken nevertheless such deep root in the hearts of a great number of the people, yea of old wives, and hoar headed men, that a great nnumber of such could quickly descry a Papist superstitious from a true preacher, when any such treated of the blessed sacrament. But leaving here for a time," &c.

Page 502. "Sir Nicholas Carew . . . . his superstitious faith."—The representation given by the Earl of Sussex rather varies from the account in Foxe, besides that it was Sir George Carew, who was Lieutenant of Rysbanke (see The Chronicle of Calais, London, 1846, p. 138): "Indevouring ourselves (continues his Lordship) to have further knowledge, who were noo of the favorers of the said Damplip and Smythe and of their adherents, have perceived and found amongst others Sir George Carewe, your Highness Lieutenant of Rysebanke and one of your Counsellers here, to be one of them that favored the said Sir William Smythe and his opinions; forasmuch as it is afore us proved by the others of all your Graces Counsellers here present (the Lorde Grave and the High Marshall only except), that the said Sir George in the Councel Chambr here spake in favour of the said Sir Willyam," &c. . . . "And furthermore, after the abjuration of the same Smyth, the said Sir George and the Lord Gray wrote to the Archbishop of Canterbury, desiring him by the same that the said Sir William Smythe might be sent again to Calice, to serve there as he did before. And further the said Sir George, being examined upon certain informacions, whether he did eat flesh, and divers other persons with him, and also in the presence of much people, spake favorable and comfortable words to one Raaf Hare, at the time of his departing into England to answer to that that he was accused for a Sacramentary, whereupon afterwards he was abjured," pp. 300, 301.

This account of Sir George Carew agrees more closely with what appears on p. 520 infra.

Page 507, line 17. "Using this word, 'the Lord.'"—A dislike to this phraseology manifested itself, and for a lengthened period, in different ways. Thus Myles Hoggarde, The displaying of the Protestantes . . . newly imprinted—London, 1556, fol. 2 verso, sings:—

"What titles and what termes you use,
It maketh most men smile
How droncken in the Lorde ye are,
How closely ye begyle."

And "the old Doway Bibles always translated 'our Lord' instead of 'the Lord,' though any one who knows Greek or Latin, knows the latter is beyond all question the true translation. They give the reason for this in a note to 1 Tim. vi. 20. Speaking of the words used by Protestants, they say, 'and though some of the said terms have been by some occasion without ill meaning spoken by Catholics, before the Heretics arose, yet now, knowing them to be the proper speeches of heretics, Christian men are bound to avoid them.—As now we catholics must not say the Lord, but our Lord, as we say our Lady, not the Lady.' In the new Doway Bibles, all these places are changed to agree with the Protestant Bible." Catholic Layman, 1853, p. 61.

Page 514. "A new commission."—The 8th volume of State Papers published under authority of Her Majesty's Commission; 4to, 1849, contains a letter from the Earl of Sussex and other Commissioners to Henry VIII., dated 5th of April, 1540, being a report of this Commission, from which some extracts here follow, as they tend to illustrate and confirm, or correct (if needful), the statements in the "Acts and Monuments."

After certain bills, &c. had been delivered, the Commissioners observe; "by the which byllys and their examinations and proves taken upon the same, there doth plainly appear unto us, that there hath been, and yet is, great division amongst them by reason of variety in opinion in Christ's religion, sprong and grown amongst them by the reading and preaching of oone Adam Damply, which came to this your Graces town of Calys about this time two years, and here did continue till the latter end of July than next following. Which Adam in his first readings and preachings did read and teach well the Scripture (as they thought); and after (perceyvng himself to be in the favour and credit of the people) preached and redde openly ayenst the Blessed Sacrament of the Altar . . . and soo continued in his said readings and erroneous preachings by all the time he continued in your Graces said town, which was to such time he came before the Archbishop of Canterbury, and was there examined; upon which examynacion (it is said) he departed, in what manner it is not to us known. And sone after the seide Adam's departing, was sent from London oone Sir William Smith, to serve as parishe Priest in our Ladie Church in Calice, who after a few of his first sermones confederating himself with the Commissary here called Butler, and oder persons of your Graces retinue and subjects in the said town, took boldness to preach ayenst the Mass, Mattyns, and Evensong, and all other the lawdable ceremonies of the Church comenly used and commaunded by your Grace to be observed by your Highnes proclamation; calling the said ceremonies stinking and beggerly: and soo continued his said preachings unto such time, as he and certain oder persons of the said town and Marches, accused to be Sacramentaries, were brought before the seide Archbishop, and abjured; which abjuracion the said Sir William Smith was enjoined by the sayde Archbishop to declare in Calice, by reason whereof he repaired to the seid town, and there, in a Sermon openly made in the Market Place by him, declared he was condemned by two witnesses; and that if oone thousand persons wolde have said the contrary, it wulde not have holpyn him, although he had been very innocent, as he toke himself to be, for he said it was ayenst Goddes lawe and mannys law, and that he well trusted to see reformed; which made his adherents more stronger in his and the seid Damplyns opynions, than they were before." Pp. 299, 300.

Page 515.]—The person, who bears the name of Keverdun in Foxe, p. 498, and of Keverdale on p. 515, has that of Kynnardaye in the letter of the Commissioners:—"There is oone William Kynnardaye of your Graces retynewe here, which hath been long a greate Sacramentary." He is stated, however, to have changed his opiunion; and yet for his long continuance in error "we think good and been fully purposed (unless your Graces pleasure shalbe to the contrary) to discharge him of his roome, and of the said town and Marches." "And so we doo" (they continue) "one William Stevins, Richard Pellend, and Thomas Broke, Deputie Customer to your Grace under Mr. Payton, which thre persons have favoured Damply and Smythes opynions, and have been principal doers therin. And the seid Broke hath not only been a great favourer of Sacramentaries in this town, as by his letters subscribed by the name of Didimus Paludanus Londoniensis, estraunging the plainness of his name, plainly appereth, but also this two Lentes last past hath eaten daily mutton and other kinds of flesshe in his house, and this latter Lente wekely a mutton in his house besides pyggys and other kinds of flesh, and suffereth divers persons resorting to him to do the same, encouraging also some of his household to do in likewise, having none other excuse but that he hymself hath great pain with the collyke." Pp. 301, 302.

With regard to Sir G. Carew, the Commissioners observe in addition, that because he "is oone of your Graces officers charged with a great charge at Rysebauke, and also one of your Graces Counsellers here, we determine not to procede ayenst him . . . unto such time as we may be farther ascerteined of your Highnes fether pleasure in that behalf." P. 303.

Page 518, line 5 from bottom. "Skorkned and ratled."—See Appendix to vol. iv., where, in Bilney's letter to his Father and Mother occurs:—"yt (the fire) hath not skorkled one her of my hede."

Page 523, middle.]—The "Errata" prefixed to the Edition of 1576 says, "for 'Dod' read 'Tod.'"

Page 526, line 8. "But yet," &c.]—The first edition (p. 627) thus expresses this sentence: "But here I will not discusse the reason of her fact or perjurye, but leave it rather unto the exact judgements of the devines. But I truly do much commend and praise this singuler and rare example of love in this woman, In that I finde it so geason in a great number of matrones." Where "geason" means scarce: see "geson" in Halliwell and Jamieson's Scottish Dictionary: see also Jewel's Works, vol. v. pp. 306, 473, "Then thy faith be geason," being a translation of Tunc fides rara.

Page 526, line 15. "Unto such perjury."—The first Edition adds: "for the defence of whose honesty they shuld by all means possible provide, and caught to bestow their lives upon them. And notwithstanding these their doings they will be counted the only pillars of the catholic church, which otherwise would decay and come to ruin."

Page 539, line 6. "Sir Guillam."—This individual, Thomas Guillaume or Williams, was another of the eminent Scottish Protestant Exiles, who came into this Country after Patrick Hamilton's martyrdom. The Rev. Peter Loriner, at p. 189 of his History of Hamilton already referred to, says that he was colleague with John Rough, mentioned by Foxe at vol. viii. pp. 443, &c., as chaplain or Court preacher to the Earl of Arran, the regent; but after the Earl's apostacy he came to England, and became a preacher in one of the churches of Bristol. He was "the first man, from whom John Knox received any taste of the truth." He returned to Scotland afterwards.

Page 543, line 2. "John bysshopp of Bedford."—This was John Hodgkins, who with John Bird had laboured to convert Bilney back again to popery: he was then a Black friar, and December 9th, 1537, was consecrated to the see of Bedford, in preference to Robert Struddel. (Styrye's Cranmer.) He died about June 1560. (Bliss, Ath. Oxon. ii. 781.) It is curious that Foxe, in the "Errata" to his first Edition, suggests the correction of "Bedford" into "Bath;" but the Bishop of Bath was William Knight.

Page 545, line 6. "Then was I sent to Newgate."]—The following throws light on this point:—

"At Greenwiche, June 19th, 1546.

"Thomas Keyme of Lincolneshire, who had married one Anne Ascue, called hether, and likewise his wiffe who refused him to be her hosbande withoute any honeste allegacion, was appointed to returne to his Countrey tyll he shoulde be eftesoones sent for, and for that shew was very obstynate and headdy in reasonyng of matters of Relygeone, wherein she shewed herselfe to be of a naughty oppynyon, seeinge no perswasione of good reason could take place, she was sente to Newgate to remaine there to answer to the Lawe; like as also one White who attempted to make an erronyouse Booke, was sente to Newgate after debatying with him of the matter, who shewed himselfe of a wronge oppynyone concernyng the blessed Sacramente."

Privy Council Minutes, Harl. MSS. No. 256, folio 224; printed in the Archæologia, vol. xviii. p. 119.

Page 569, bottom.]—A copy of this preamble will be found at p. 499 of vol. vii., corrected from the Register; also some articles not found in the ensuing list. It is worthy of observation, that the whole piece is given in the first Edition almost verbatim according to the Register, and with the same references to Tyndale's folios; but without Foxe's comments on the Articles.

Page 578.]—Art. IV. stands in Latin in the first Edition of Foxe (1563): "Non licere Christiano resistere principi infideli et ethnico, tollit libertatem arbitrii." The Register makes two distinct Articles: "Non licet . . . ethnico," fol. 32, pa. 2. "Tollit, &c. fol. 30, pa. 1<sup>a</sup>." Article V. ends, in Edition 1563, thus: "is damnable sin, contra morales etiam virtutes;" which seems to mean, "Even in spite of the existence of moral virtues."

Page 587, Art. XXI. "Is a proper thing."]—So reads the Register, and all the old Editions of Foxe. Wilkins (who prints the whole in his "Concilia" from the Register) reads "improper," and notes, "MS. male proper legit."

Page 607.]—The whole of this Process against Sir John Borthwick, with his answers, will be found in Foxe's Latin, Basil, 1559, pp. 166—170; it is also printed in the Bannatyne Miscellany, Vol. I., part ii. p. 256. Foxe's text has been collated with the Latin, and with Hall, and in several places very much improved, and omissions supplied.

Page 618, line 25.]—Religio in Latin, and religion in English, were at that period employed with a peculiar reference to the monastic life, as religieux is in France to this day. Borthwick, in fact, desired the same suppression of the monasteries in Scotland, as had taken place in England under the auspices of Henry VIII. In his reply to this Article, he remarks on the cunning manner in which his adversaries employed the term religion, as though he wished the Christian religion itself to be abolished.

Page 620, line 7 from the bottom. "The sentence of condemnation."]—A reversal of this sentence, dated Sept. 5th, 1561, appears for the first time in the Bannatyne Miscellany, Vol. I., part ii. pp. 260—263, declaring "the said Schyr Jhon Borthwick not to haw falzeit tharintyll, nor to hawe deservit infamite punisshement nor skath [damage] tharfor, bot he as ane man of gud fame may persow his just actionis befor ony juge competent, notwithstanding the said pretendit sentence," &c.

"The circumstances (observes Dr. Lee) attending the second judicial enquiry are remarkable, particularly in this respect, that the judge who presided in the court by which Borthwick was unanimously acquitted in 1561, was one of those "plain enemies to the truth," described in the Process of Declarator, who had sat on his first trial in 1540, and had then been consenting to his condemnation—John Wynnam."

Page 626, line 8. "Boisteous threats."]—"Swelling, noisy," seems to be the meaning of this word, as used in Foxe. In the Festivall, fol. cxxvi. verso, it is said that "his (Christ's) ryght hande was persed with a grete and boystous nayle;" and the same volume furnishes an instance of the adverb, at present absent from the commoner glossaries:—"Salome boystously handled our Lady," fol. lxxvii. verso: see also Todd's Illustrations of Gower and Chaucer, p. 322.

The word has been altered, perhaps mistakingly, both in Foxe and other works; Cavendish, for instance, terming what we may suppose to have been a large full-sleeved, official gown, "a boisterous gown of black velvet," vol. i. ed. Singer, p. 273.

The original tract, from which Foxe quotes, reads boistious; see also the Prologue, p. 31, vol. I. of The Wycliffite versions; Oxf. 1850.

Page 627, line 32. "Dane John Winryme."]—On the use of Dan or Dane, applied to monks, here and at p. 637, see the Appendix to Vol. iii. note on p. 258.

Page 629, line 2 from the bottom. "Bless your cursings."]—The separate Edition adds: "If my conscience had judged me to have done evil, I should have desisted for your cursings, or elles for your brotherlike warnings; but because I used no ungodly deed, I suffered patiently for your cursings; believing," &c.

Page 629, line 12 from the bottom. "The holy church's cursings."]—Foxe's text alters this into "the holy Church."

Page 630, line 6.]—That "Adorne" is no misprint for "adore," is plain from the following couplet, cited by Halliwell from Hall's Chronicle, f. 55.

"The sonne, the moone, Jupiter and Saturne, And Mars, the God of armes, they dyd adore."

Page 634, line 36. "His tormentors."]—All the Editions of Foxe read "Warders;" but "tormentors" is retained from the original Tract. The word occurs in vol. iii. of Foxe, p. 493, end:—"When, by the commandment of the tormentors, he was risen up," the Latin original being "cum vero de mandato lictorum e loco orationis surrexisset;" tom. i. 37, ed. 1715. An explanation of this word, occurring as it does not unfrequently in Foxe, may be given in Mr. Sharpe's words:—"The original meaning of the word Tormentor as applied to a public officer is not now generally known, and therefore some account of it may not be out of place. It occurs in St. Matthew xviii. 34, where it is observed by Dr. Campbell, that the original word properly signifies examiner, particularly one who had it in charge to examine by torture; whence it came to signify jailer, for on such, in those days, this charge commonly devolved.

"Cotgrave explains Tormentor by the French word Bourreau, which he translates an executioner, a hangman.

"But a most apposite illustration of the term will be found in the following extract from Stowe's Chronicle, ed. 1614, p. 459: 'And in a stage play the people know right well, that he that playeth the Sowdain is percase a Sowter [cobbler]; yet if one should know so little good, to shew out of season what acquaintance he hath with him, and call him by his own name while he standeth in his majesty, one of his tormentors might hap to break his head; and worthy, for marring of the play.'

"In Lysons' Mag. Brit. Cambridgeshire, p. 89, an ancient book of Churchwarden's Accounts for the parish of Bassingbourn is noticed. It commences in 1497, in which year are several entries of Church-ales, and in 1511 'the playe of the holy martir Seynt George' appears to have been represented.—Amongst the contributors, John Bocher gave the painting of three falchions and four tormentums; and John Good, carpenter and wheelwright, gave the workmanship of the falchions and tormentums, beside some of the stuff.

"The weapons called tormentums were evidently intended for the persons who played the part of the Tormentors, and perhaps the modern javelin men are the aptest exemplification of those attendant officers that can be found; indeed they appear to have a considerable degree of resemblance and analogy."—Sharpe's Coventry Mysteries, pp. 33, 34.

"Then Andrewe stode up and dyd of his clothes, and gave them to the tormentours."—The Festyvall, fol. lvi. recto, ed. 1528.

And in Bishop Christopherson's Exhortation against rebellion we have a further illustration, "of whom Ziska caused to be murdered, with other tormentrye."

Page 699, line 35. "When Joan Butcher should be burned."—The Latin edition of the Acts and Monuments contains some anecdotal remarks in connexion with this subject, and in favour of toleration, which are not given, so far as we are aware, in any of the English editions.

ARTICLES OF THOMAS PHILLIP, AND HIS PETITION TO THE HOUSE OF COMMONS AGAINST THE OPPRESSION OF BISHOP STOKESLY.

(See page 30 of this Volume.)

From the Chapter House Papers now at the Rolls House, 2d Series, No. 153.

HERE foloweth certayne artycles and interrogatories objected agaynst Thomas Phyllipe cotecyn of London by Richard Foxford Vicar generall to the reverend fader in God John Bushop of London: and the said Thomas Phillypp his answer to the same made the iiijth day of February.

In the name of God Amen. We, Richard Foxford Doctor of both lawes Vicar generall to the reverend father in God John, by the sufferance of God bushop of London, lawfully procedynge of our mere office agaynst Thomas Phillip of the parish of Sainte Myghellys in the querne of the cetye and iurisdiction of London laye and objecte ayaynste the all and singuler Artycles folowynge concernynge suspecion of heresy. To the whyche and every parte of them we requyre A true full and a playne answer by the vertu of an othe ther-uppon to be geven.

First. that thou art a Christen man And so expressly professid chrystys fayth And the catholyke determinations of our mother chrystys church concernynge the vij Sacraments And articles of the fayth. Objection.

To thys the sayd Thomas answeryth And beleveth it to be of trewth. 1 Answer.

Item, we laye and objecte againste the, that thou dyuerse tymes erroneously and dampnably erred and spokyn agaynste the blessed sacrament of thalther sayinge affermyng and belevyng that in the blessed sacrament of thalther is not the bodye of chryst, but only don for a remembrance of chrysts passyon for a signification and token of a better thyng to com. Objection.

To thys he answereth and sayth that he doughted not nor he never hard ne rede the contrary, but that our blessed Saviour Jhesu chryst did institute the holly and reverend sacrament And he beleveth that the blessed sacrament of thalther is the very bodye of chryst And he never beleved nor sayd the contrary. 2 Answer.

Item, we laye and objecte agaynste the that thou haste sayd affermed and beleved that there is no purgatorye, but that it is only a devise made by prystys to gett monye to praye for soules And that every soule assone as it departeth thys worlde goeth forth to heaven or to hell. Objection.

To thys he answereth and beleveth the artycle not to be trewe, nor any parte therof. And to this he professeth Chrystys fayth and the catholyke determinacions of our mother chrystes church. 3 Answer.

Item, that thou hast sayd affermyd and beleved that a man shoud not goo in pylgrymage, for it is but vayne glorye. Objection.

To this he answereth and beleveth thartycle not to be trewe nor any parte theroff. 4 Answer.

Item, that thou haste sayd affermed and beleved that men be not bound to kepe and observe the faystynge dayes ordered and kept by hollye church, ne to kepe or fulfyll any maner of vowe. Objection.

To this he answereth and beleveth thartycle not to be trewe nor any parte theroff. 5 Answer.

Item, that men are not bounde to kepe anny manner of hollydaye excepte sondaye. Objection.

To this he answereth and beleveth tharticle not to be trewe nor any parte thereof. 6 Answer.

Item, that thou hast sayd affermed and beleved that we shuld pray only to god and to no sayntes. Objection.

To this he answereth and beleveth tharticle not to be trewe. 7 Answer.

Item, that thou haste sayd affermed and beleved that a man nedeth not to confesse hym to a prest but only to god. Objection.

To this he answereth and beleveth tharticle not to be trewe nor any part theroff. 8 Answer.

Item that thou haste sayd affermed and beleved that pardones graunted by the pope are of none effecte. Objection.

To thys he answereth and beleveth thartycle not to be trewe nor any parte thereof. 9 Answer.

Item, [we] objecte and laye to the and agaynste the that thou of longe space haste hade in they keypyng dyverse bokes whiche tho haste rede to other persons And in tyme of suche redynge thou haste tought and rehersed the artycles afor-sayd or some of them; then one and than another as ye have hade your occasion. Objection.

To thys he answereth and sayeth he can make no answer howbeit he confesseth that he hath hade the newe testament of the olde translacion in his constody by the space of xx yeres taken oute as he sayth of Saynt Jeroms translacion in the whyche he hath rede dyvers tymes. 10 Answer.

Item, that thou art of the parish of Saynte Myghells in the querne of the cety of London and by reason therof of our Jurisdiction. Objection.

To thys he answereth and beleveth that artycle to be trewe. 11 Answer.

Item, we laye and objecte agaynste the that all and singuler thes premysses be of trewth and openly known And that upon them goyth and raygneth the Objection.

comen voyce ..... fame aswell within the cetye of London as in other places therabouts.

12 Answer.

To thys he answereth and denyeth that he ys defamed And therefore he is not bound to make Answer to the artycles.

Agaynste all these your artycles I professe the fayth of our Savyour Jesu chryste and the catholyke determynacions of our mother chrystes church.

The ryght worshipfull comense of this Realme in thys present parlyament assembled.

Moste lamentably complaynyng shewyth unto your worshippis your poore suppliant Thomas Phillip cetecen of London, howe that he hath not ceasyd by the space of iij yeres and more whiche he hath contynued prisoner in the tower of London at all tymes when he myght to complayne his great Injuries and wronges whiche he hath suffered and as yet sufferyth thorough the unryghtwyse dealyng and judgyng of the reverend fader in god John bushop of London and your sayd orator in his suets hetherto hath byn so fervent or els so deligent that he hath byn thought somewhat importunat and yet hetherto could have no remedye for the same. Notwithstandyng seyng it is not mete that any man whose consiense beareth hym record that he is innocent and faughtles in suche crymes as ar layd to hys charge shuld thynke or knowledge hymself gyltye or faughtye because he is as grevously ponysshed as though he were faughtye in dede, therefore the sayd thomas thought it verye necessarye at thys tyme to declare and shewe hys greves and wrongys to your worshippys and to besече remedye for the same, leste yf he dide not he shuld seme other to grant hys impryssonment to be juste and dewe to hys deservynges, or els suspecte you of Justys. Wherefore he in hys moste humble wise (as before sayd) shewyth your worshippis howe that before chrystmas was iij yeres the sayd bushop caused your beadman to be attached by auctoritic of the kyngs statute in the dayes of kyng henrye the ij<sup>d</sup> made agaynst heretycks, procedyng as agaynst one defamed or evedently suspected for a transgressor of the same. And unto hym so attached ministred certayne articles concernyng heresy (as the bushop sayd) affermyng all and every one of them to be trewe and openly so to be knowen, and that uppon the same gooth and comyth the comen voyce and fame of the whyche voyce and fame albeit hys lordship could not at that tyme nether at any tyme synce make any maner of lawfull proffe, or prove so moche as wone of the sayd articles to be trewe, yet because your sayd supplyant refused then as he yet doth to make abjuracion and so to graunt and confesse hymself an heretyke wherby the sayd bushoppys honnor and name myght be saved whyche shuld otherwise be spotted and stayned as he thynkyth and as the tronh is, yf he shulde seme to have layd the cryme of heresy to any persone and could make no maner lawfull proffe in the worlde, no nat so moche as of the fame or suspceyon of the sayd cryme, but to bryng your supplyant by some meanes to hys purpose of abjuringe did excommunicat hym, yet nether defamed ne suspected nether of any cryme condempned. And yet his Lordship not so contented hath moreover synce untrewly surmysed agaynst your sayd orator that he hath byn a prechar, a teacher, a scole-kepar, now at Salysbury, than at Burford, nowe here than there, but in treweh he wottyth not where And a reder of dampnable lectures nowe to thes personnes and eftsons to other persons but snerly he wottyth not to whom; Intendyng of lyke to bryng your beadman into obloquy and slander (whiche ys ther caste so to doo) of the comen people whom at the tyme of the sayd attachement he found so clere from all manner Infamys slanders and suspceions that all the people before the sayd bushop showtyng in Judgement as with one voyce openly wyttnesed hys good name and fame to the great reprove and shame of the sayd bushop yf he had not shamed to be ashamed agaynste whyche surmyses your saide poore orator hath allwayes offered to the said bushop and att this tyme doth also offer that in case he can by the order of Justys prove that ever he held or defended any erroneous openyons or ever made convynticle or unlawfull confederacion or ever did teache or instructe any person or persons contrarye to the catholyke fayth of chrystes church or ever did styre or move the people to sedytion or insurrectyon contrarye to the pease of our soveraigne lord the Kyng; or ever did shyft or fle from one dyoces to another or ever did despise or contempne

(1) So reads the MS.: probably the statute 'Ex officio,' 2 Hen. IV. is intended.—Ed.

the ecclesiastycalle censures And to make an ende that he ever transgressed the statute made against heretycks, or was defamed or suspected in any poynt of the same statute, hys faught openly declared and knowen he, wold not refuse to be comytted to the extremyte of the lawe and to be made an ensample to all other: and although the sayd bushop perchance wold not gladly make suche offer for hys owen parte to hys superyors, whiche have autorite to judge hym as well as he hath to judge your sayd supplyant, yet refused he that and wold nothyng els but that your beadman shuld abjure as though there were no defference betewne an innocent and a nocent, betewne one gyltye and one not gyltye. Whereuppon your sayd besechar perceyvyng that the sayd bushop intended nothyng els but to make hym as it were a shep redye in the bochers lesure to slaughter when so ever it shuld please the bocher to send for hym, And also consydyryng that the sayd bushop or any other bushop of thys Realme had no auctorite to attache any the kyngs subjects or to judge them in cause of heresy, but only by auctorite of the sayd statute, so that the bushop was in thys cause but an inferyor mynyster to our sayd sovrage lord the kyng of whom he had receyved suche auctorite to attache or cause to be attached and to judge any the kyngs subjects defamed or evedentlye suspected of any crime in the sayd statute contayned And none other, for hys lawfull defense agaynst the inquite and malyce of the sayd bushop your supplyant made hys apealle unto hys sayd sovrage Lord under whyche apealle on the one side and the sayd sentence of excommunication on the other side given as ys before rcheryd your besechar hath ever syns stonden: whyche apealle neverthelesse was made before the sayd sentence was given: wherfore yt maye please you the premysses tenderly considered in your depe Judgements and discreicious, and the afore named thomas Phillip in hys moste humble wise beseceth your worshippes, that ye moved with mercyfull petye uppon suche hys wofull and myserable estate by reason of hys longe imprisonment Therefore it maye please you to be meanes and intercessors for hym to the Lorde Chauncelor And (yf nede require) to other the lordes of the kyngs moste honorable counsell, that your besechar maye obtayne the benefyte of the kyngs wryt caulled corpus cum causa or some other to be awarded by vertu whereof your supplyant may be brough with hys cause before your worshippes at a certayne daye and place apoynted: And in lyke wyse to graunt the kings wret of subpena to be derected unto the sayd bushop or sergant at armes comandynge hym by vertu of the same to apere personally in the same tyme and place apoynted by your worshippes there to make answer to the premysses, before whom it maye be tryed whether your supplyant was at the tyme of hys said attachement an offender of the sayd statute of our Sovrage Lordes: or els the sayd bushop an abuser of the same statute. Thus at the reverence of Chryst and in the waye of charyte. And your sayd beadman shall dayly praye to allmyghty god for your worshippes long tendure.

LETTER FROM RICHARD TRACY TO —.

(See page 31 of this Volume.)

State Paper Office. Miscell. Letter. Hen. VIII. Vol. 4, No. 49.
Holograph.

Yt ys not unknouen to you of my late trouble that I have had touching my fathers testament, and that not only, but also of the greate and abhomynable worldly shame doon unto his kynred in burnyng his roten bones. This shame ys not only to his kynred, but also to alle the gentilmen of the shere, for he had ben High Shirif of the Shire, and also put in greate truste by comission of the Kyng that dede ys, as also of the Kinge that nowe ys. Sir yt ys shewed me that the pryncipall actor therein ys in troble and that he shalbe punyshed therefore. Sir, if the judgement of the Apostle be used herin, scilicet, quod non solum qui ea faciunt sed etiam qui consentiunt facientibus pari digni sunt pena; yf the comon report be true and also alle lykely presumption, there be certeyn persones consenting to that acte of infamy, by whome if they be founden guilty, as by meanes I thinke they wilbe, by examination of the pryncipall, yt will not only be proffett to the Kynges grace one thousande poundes in thinges that be passed by his owne graunte, whiche if this mater be founden againste theym, may be by his lawes (as I thinke revoked agayne) as also to the shire of Gloucestre greate commodite and proffett; as I can shewe unto Master Cromwell, to whome (as I here say) the Kinge hath committed this mater. Sir I wille not shewe this mater by writing, but yf ye can perceyve that the pryncipall be not of this mater discharged by charter, or in the way of discharge, I wille come to London, if I be able, within 4 daies of Candellmas, and then I wille declare the secrettes of this mater to Master Cromwell if I may speke with hym. Sir, if the mater be not passed remedy to speke therein, I pray you if you have suche acquayntaunce with Master Cromwell to stay yt untill my commyng, and then ye shall perceyve a perfect trithe to be in experience, quod iniquitates sue capiunt impium et funibus peccatorum suorum constringitur. Proverbiorum 5. Et in laqueo isto quem absconderunt, comprehensus est pes eorum. Psal. 9<sup>o</sup>. Sir I cannot write my hole mynde to you, but I wille for shortnes of tyme pray to God that His wille may be fulfilled, et cum Apostolo 1 Thess. 3<sup>o</sup>. ipse autem Deus et Pater noster et Dominus Jesus Christus dirigat viam nostram ad vos, &c., in quo et valeas ex edibus nostris 15 die Januarii.

No superscription.

Tuus Ricus Tracy.

The next letter in the volume is from the same, partly addressed to Mr. Robert Acton, High Sheriff of Worcester, about the ill conduct of the abbot of Hales; but that is in the year 1538. This letter is certainly of an earlier date.

(1) Foxe here omits an example deduced from the work entitled "Vitas Patrum," and another related of Gregory, both of which seem to establish the doctrine of Transubstantiation. The origin of this last story may be seen in the life of Gregory the Great, in the Acta Sanctorum, Mart. tom ii. p. 131.

Letter from Dr. London, Warden of New College, to John Longland, Bishop of Lincoln. Oxford, 24 February, [1528]. Holograph.

MY humble dewtie observyd vnto your gudde lordeschippe. It may please the same to vnderstond that Mr. dean at hys commyng hoom brought to the commissarie secret commaundement from my lord cardinall is grace to attache oon Mr. Garrat lurking in Oxford at oon Radley ys howse wiche wasse greatly suspect of heresy and hys grace willyd he schuld haue be sentt vppe secretly in exchewing slawndre vnto hys grace is and your vniversitie. Apon scaturday last past the commissarie toke hym in the sayd howse and kept hym secret in hys own chambre willing next mornyng erlye to send hym vnto my lorde is grace by oon of the proctors and Mr. Standiche. As Mr. commissarie wasse at Evensonge Mr. Garrett piked the locke of Mr. commissarie is dore. went immediatly to glocestre colledge. and wt owt delay there toke a secular scolers coote and wentt a waye wt all spede he myght. The commissarie made as moche serche as he cowde and at the laste lernyd where he escapyd. and toke the scoler whos coote he hadd and examyned. hathe confessyd hys bokes of heresy writen wt hys own hand and ys in prison. Thys monday the vigill of seinet Mathias<sup>1</sup> the conissarie schewyd me of thys mater, and he and Mr. deau desyred me to helpe what I cowde to try owt more of thys thinge. We have thys monday serchyd Radley is howse and som bokes Mr. Garrett hadd ther lefte behynd hym : and som I hadd at a bokebynders vz. ijj de vnione dissidentium. ther by Mr. Garratt put by byndyng : the same day he wasse taken. And certen oother bokes we hadd of the scoler wiche dydd lende to Mr. Garrat hys coote. After that apon farther examynation we haue tryed that Mr. Garrett hathe destribute many oother bokes to dyvers scolers whyche bokes we haue all in hand and be in suertie of the scolers. All ys don as secretlye as we possible may doo in avoyding slawnder. And if the mater be nott folowyd while it ys fresche the infecte persons will flee and convey ther bokes. wherfor we do our best diligens. Oon of thees scolers ys namyd John Mayow whom we gate thys nyght after son wasse down. He hadd in hys cheste the table wiche in the next leffe I haue wryten in euery manner as it ys writen wt the scolers own hand. He saithe master Garrett hathe the same table in hys pursse and willyd thys yonge man to covey itt and sold vnto hym all suche bokes as be expressyd in the end of the next leff : and the scoler payd xvjs<sup>s</sup> for them. In thys table be figures of algorisme<sup>2</sup> and I doo coniecture that Mr. Garrett hathe so many bokes of siche soorts as the fyguris expressithe for he hathe sold manye. He com to Oxford apon cristis natiuitie evyn :<sup>3</sup> and hathe be lurking ther ever yns. In thys litell tyme he hathe do moche hurtt. How moche yitt I can nott trewly acerten your lordeschipp but by godds grace I schall trye owt all the reste to the vtmoste right schortlye apon your mynd and pleasur knowen if I schall soo doo. After thys Mr. Garrat escapyd. the commissarie being in extreme penyfyens knew noo other remedye. but thys extraordinarye : and causyd a fygure to be made by oon expert in astronomye. and hys iudgement doothe contynually persiste apon thys. that he fledd in a tawnye coote sowthe este ward. and ys in the myddyll of London and will schortly to the see syed. He wasse curatt vnto the person of honye laane. It ys liklye he ys pryvelye clokyd ther. Wherfor as soon as I knew the iudgement of thys astronomer I thought it expedyent and my dewtye wt all spede to acerten your gudd lordeschippe of all the premisses that in tyme your lordeschippe may aduertiese my lorde is grace and my lord of london of thys man is fleynge from Oxford dyvyned towards london. It will be a gratiose dede that he and all hys pestiferus works wiche he caryeth about myght be taken, to the saluation of hys own soule, openyng of many pryve heresydes, and extinction of the same. And I besek your gud lordeschippe nott to be displeasyd w<sup>t</sup> thys my rude wryting wiche for hasting forth of the bringer herof I haue to rudely and brevely made. And schall w<sup>t</sup> all spede upon farther knowledges doo my bownden dewtie in acertenyng your gud lordeschippe what we doo by the grace of almyghty godd who w<sup>t</sup> increse of moche honor long preserve your gud lordeschippe. Antony Dalaver, scolar no graduat hathe holpe to convey Mr. Garratt, he [Page 2.] dydd lend unto hym hys coote, and wasse as he saithe acquainted w<sup>t</sup> Mr. Garret at Radleyes howse wiche ys oon of the singyng men of seinct Frydeswydes my lord is grace colledge. And Mr. Garret delynered vnto hym at hys departing certen bokes viz. Lambertum super lucam, Lutherum super hoc Jesum iudeum natum, vniones dissidentium, economica Christiani rem christianam instituens: wiche he desyred hym to kepe secreete. And of hys own hand wrytinge he hathe certen noots of lambert owt of a trefyde, callyd Farragines wher he susteynythe confession schuld be generall non per supputationem peccatorum and that indifferently to a man or woman confession may be made and that mulier habet potestatem clauium. Thys scoler ys mervelose obstinat and that ys goton of hym ys with moche difficulte. He saithe he hathe burnyd Farragines Lamberti He saithe also he demaunded of oon Nicholas boke seller of London in pollys churche yerd if he hadd any new werks and he sold vnto hym thys boke callyd Farragines lamberti Your gud lordeschippe schall do a meritoriose dede to intymat vnto my lords grace what poysoun thees boke sellers bringithe in to Inglood and by hys grace is commaundment suer serche to be made for all those conteynyd in the table folowing. Yit thys scoler will no confesse of any lecture he hadd in Oxford but of Mr. Clerk wiche as he saithe rede pollys epistills in hys chambre to hym and all sicke as wold com. upon a yer paste. I pray godd send Mr. Garratt in to my lorde is grace hands and then I trust Oxford will be purged wiche befor hys comyng to Oxford I think veryly wer clere Every hedd of the vniversitie thys day schall have copie of thys table and schall make pryve serche in all ther scolers studies for the bokes conteyned in itt with othe if any sicke may be fownd. For all those bokes we have in keping wer conveyd, and layd in secret places, and if serche be respityd by liklyhodd a'l other bokes will be conveyd. Ther be certen other scolers besyd those two expressyd wiche hadd bokes And it may please your gud lordeschippe I and Mr. commissarie may know my lorde is grace pleasure what schall be don w<sup>t</sup> thees scolers, to be sent vppe or els to be further examyned here. oon scoler ys callyd Byrde noo graduat, and two be monks oon of bery the tother of glassynberye and they w<sup>t</sup> ther bokes be in suertye.

The very trew cople of the table founde w<sup>t</sup> John Mayew scoler of certen bokes [Page 3.] wiche Mr. Garret (as he saithe) counsellid hym to bye, as bokes very necessarie.

Another Letter from Dr. London to the Bishop of Lincoln. Oxford, 26 February, [1528]. Holograph.

My most humble dewtie observyd unto your gudde lordesshippe. It may please the same to understand that syns my last wrytinge unto your lordschippe I have perceyved many things that makithe me very pensif. Thys unhappy Mr. Garrott wasse in Oxford at Ester and after that a season: At hys being ther he sowght owt all siche wiche wer gevyn to greke ebrew and the polyt latyn tonge, and pretendyd he wold lern ebrew and greke. And bowght bokes of new thinges to allewer them: After that he procured a great nombre of corrupt bokes and secretly dydd destribute them amonge his new acquayntans in sondry colleges and hallys. I fere Mr. Clerk wasse hys caller unto Oxford, for he wasse of hys famylyar acquayntans. Daleber hath now confessyde that Mr. Clerk dydd leen unto hym Farragines Lutheri Pomerianum super epistolis Pauli Lamberti de vocatione Enchiridion precationum Hegendorfinus in lucam Hegendorfinus super epistolis petri ad hebraeos pomerianum super deutro. Uniones dissidentium. And thes bokes be myschevos bokes. Thys Dalabar wasse wt. Mr. Clerke in the contry all the last somer at powghley. And yt ys evydently provyd that Mr. Clerk hath redd in hys chambre pollys epistlis to yonge men and siche as wer of ii iii or iv yeres contynuans in the universitie. Wold godd my lorde is grace hadd never be motyonyd to call hym nor any other cambridge man unto hys most towardly colledge. It wer a gratiose dede if they wer tryed and purged and restoryd unto ther mother from whens they com if they be worthy to com thydre agen. Wee wer clere without blotte or suspition till they com. And som of them as Mr. Dean hath knowen longe tyme hath hadd a shrewyd name. Thys yowith hath nott long be conversant wt. Mr. Garrott nor hath gretly perused hys myschevos bokes. And long befor Mr. Garrott wasse taken dyvers of them wer very of those werkes and delyverd them to Dalaber, in whose keyng hydde mervelos secretlye ysterday we fownd all those bokes which be crossed in the table folowing: And I have putt to in the mergent after every boke how many of every sort we fownde. I trust or thys nyght come we will have as many moo. And I [am] mervelose sory for thys youth which thys pestiferous man hathe attemptyd to corrupt. If they [be] openly callid apou itt, altho they apper nott greatly infect, yit they schall never avoyd slaunder. Bicause my lord is grace dydd send for Mr. Garrot I suppose hys grace will know of your gud lordeschipp every thing. No thing shalbe hydd I assur yowr gud lordschipp and every oon of them wer my brothern. And I do oonly mak thys moon for thys yowth, for suerly they be of the most towardly yong men in Oxford, and as furr as I doo yet perceyve not greatly infect, but moche to blame for redyng any partt of thys werkes, and receyving them wiche be playnly condempnyd. I have enclosyd ther fyrst principles, a perloos boke: in the fyrst lef ys a propheeye and the mater folowing do procede of lik spryte. I besek Almighty Jhesus send Mr. Garrot unto my lord is grace handes. And then I trust owr universitie schall hereafter by thys tryal be clere many yeris by the help of almyghty godd: who wt. increse of moch honore long preserve yowr gud lordeschippe.

John Bishop of Lincoln to Cardinal Wolsey, Holborn, 3 March, [1528].

My mooste humble duty remembred unto your good Grace, with my bounden thankes and servyce for your charitable goodness shewed to me of late in dispensing with me for the helth of my weyke body, to use suche meates as be necessary for the same, with your manyfold mooste comfortable wordes spoken in grauntyng the same, which makyth me half hole, that ye be so especiaall gracious good Lord to me. Pleaseth it your Grace to understand sence I wrotte laste unto you of the matters of Oxon I have hadde dyverse knowledges from thence, to my hevynes, of suche chaunce of the grette corruption of yougeth ther, by Master Garrott, with suche erronyous bookes as he hath brought thidre, which hadde many tymes suche corrupt bookes frome London by the cariar, and is thought frome a bookseller in London called Goughe, as itt apperith by such tables as they have found of the hand of the bookseller that sent them, and the names and prices of the bookes conteyned in the same. There arre a mervilouse sorte of bookes founde whiche were hydde undre the erth, and otherwise secretly conveyede from place to place. The cheffe that were famylyarly acquaynted in this mater with Master Garrott was Master Clarke, Master Freer, Sir Fryth, Sir Dyott, Anthony Delabere. And is found in a booke of Master Garrottes, that Doctor Farman of Hony Lane hath receyved bookes of Garrott, as farre as I doo perceyve by ther wrytynges, and he hathe a servaunt called John Goodale whiche dyverse tymes brought suche bookes and wrytynges from London to Master Garrott to Oxon. That man if he be taken can discloyse many thinges of Master Garrott. This Garrott also hath (I feare) corrupted the monastery of Redyng, for he hath dyverse tymes sent to the Prior ther suche corrupte bookes by a poore scoller which hathe confessed the same, to the nombre of thre score or above, and receyved money of hym for them. Howe the said Prior hath used those bookes and with whome I knowe nott. And is to be feared lesse that wycked man Garrott have doon lykewise in other monasterys to thinfection of them and the priestes aboute them. And were well doon that for this Goodale and Goughe streighte serche were maade for ther takyng (if itt might soo stand with your pleasure). It mought please your Grace for the orderyng of this mater and the quyetnes of your universite to call some of these cheefe dooers to come before you and soo to ordre them as your Grace shall fynde them, and the residue (bycause of the multytude and that they be yong and peny-tent and by other malicious persones seduced) by vertue of your commission directed down to your Deane, Master Claymond, Doctor London and the President of Magdalen Colledge, whiche arre wise men, or to any other as shall lyke your Grace, may be ther ordered accordyng unto your commissions and instructions. If I were in helth I wold att your commaundement ryde down for the ordre of the same. All this mater I remytte unto your highe wisdom and mareyfull goodness, besechyng our Lord God of his pytuousse mercy to extincte these abhomyuable errours, and gyve them grace to be as inwardely peny-tentes as they doo outwardely shewe to be. And that the Prior of Redyng shortely be looked upon, and his bookes to be brought in, itt is very necessary. Thus I encombre your Grace with leugthe of wrytyng, and beseech our Lord God long to preserve your noble Grace in high proussperouse honour. Wryten in Holborn the thyrday of Marche.

Letter of John Fooke, Vicar of All Saints, Bristol, to Dr. Cottisford, Commissary of Oxford, informing him of the apprehension of Thomas Gararde at Bedminster. Bristol, 1 March, [1528]. Holograph.

Right worshipful (due commendacions with lyke gladness of your welfare premised) plesith it you to understand that by the diligence and effectuous meanes of Mister Wilkins, chapman of Bristol, father-in-lawe to Maister Cole, oon of your proctors, Maister Gararde was taken in a little towne callyd Bedemister, a myle from Bristol, the laste nyghte before this makyng upon suspicion of heresy. Whereupon the seid Maister Wilkyns and I resorted to hym this day, where we herd hym examined before oon of the Justs of pece of Somersetschyre, to whom he openly confessed that hys name is Thomas Gararde, preste, maister of arte, and felowe of Maudlen College in Oxford, and that he brak out of your chamber with every thing as ye wryte in your late letter to me dyrected, and notwithstanding that the seid Maister Wilkyns offerid hymself to be bownd to the seid Justs in CCC li. to discharge hym of the seid Gararde and to se hym safely brotte to you and to the proctours of Oxford, yet he coude not have hym delyvered, for the Justs seid unto us, that order of the lawe wold not so serve, but that he must comyt hym to the common geil of Somerset Shyre called Ilchester, in the which Shyre he was taken: and so he shalbe taken thether within this ij dayes, and on Monday the nexte folowyng, i. e. ix<sup>o</sup> die Marcii,<sup>1</sup> shall the Sessions be at Ilchester, where my Lorde Chef Justis wilbe surelye, and by that day ye may make provision to send to hym as your counsell shall advise you et cetera. There was such wayte privily leyde, that he coude nott scape by no passage over the water within xv myle of Bristoll: he came to Bristowe the daye before the making hereof att after none and taryde not in the towne, for by lykelehoode he herde of the pryv serch that Mr. Wilkyns had caused Maister Maior to make for the cause of on Fryday morning last, and so suspected it myghte be for hym. Wherefore I suppose he went oute of Bristoll bifore nyght (as he seith) toward the west contrie, and Maister Wilkyns hering of a stranger going thorough the towne sent quickly after hym, and so he was out of the lyberties of Bristoll ere he was taken: but and it had happened that he had be taken within the franchises of Bristolle, I trust we wold have found suche meanes that he shuld have been browte to you at Oxforde agayne oons ere Teusday at nyghte, he lying at an inn (as he seith) at Cockthropp from Satyrday to Wensday last. He is now in a courtiars cote and a buttyned cappe. Mr. Wilkyns caused Mr. Mayer of Bristowe with the aldermen and xx more of the counsell of the same towne to kepe the pryve watch on Fryday at nyghte, whiche were very diligente all at Maister Wilkyns instaunce upon your proctors letter, and the rather for that the mater concerneth my lord Cardinalls commission to you directed. Letter from John Longland, bishop of Lincoln, to the Cardinal, enclosing Nos. 808, 90, 232. Holborn, 5 March, [1528]. Holograph.

My mooste humble duety remembered. Pleasith itt your grace to understand that the wycked man Master Garrott whiche escaped frome Oxon is nowe taken, howe and where your Grace shall understand [by] these inclosed letters, and is nowe in Ilchestre prisone the common gaole of Somersett shire. The Commissary of Oxon hath sence the negligent escape of the said Garrott made grete dyligent serche for hym, and dyd sett for his takyng Dover, Rye, Wynchelsea, Hampton, Chestre, and Brystowe, and he was taken in Bedmynstre a myle from Brystowe ultimo die Februarii. If itt may soo stand with your pleasure to have hym removed by your commaundement frome thence, wheder itt shall please you that he may be examyned, it were conveyent, for the sooner his examynacion is the sooner truth will appear. And in this case Mora trahit periculum, for he hath I thynke many adherents and fautors in England whyche might upon his soone examynacion be known. And nowe that he is taken agen, I reaon itt felix culpa that he dede escape, and that the third parte that nowe doth appere wuld nott have bene known if he hadde nott escaped by reason of the dyligent serche that was immediately upon the same escape maade. Master freer was taken yesterday att the blakke freers London upon the commaundement immediately after your departure. This Garrott, clerke, and freer, are thre perylous men. And have bene occasion of corruption of the yougthe. They have doon moche mischeve. And for the love of God latt them [be] handeled thereafter, for I feare me soore they have infecte many other partes of Englonde whyche will appere if they be strately handeled and examyned. And I beseeche your grace, latt not the prior of Redyng and his books be forgotten, but that wyle your Grace is nowe att Windesour itt woll lyke you to send theyre oon of your discrete chapleyne for thorderyng of that mater. And that the said prisoner may be putt in safe custody within the said monastery till your further pleasure be known. And diligent inquiry and serche to be made for his books in whose hands they be, and they to be brought in. The parson of hony-lane and his servant goodale if they were a while in custody tyll they might clere them selves your Grace shuld knowe by them many infectuouse persones. I feare they be nought. Cuthbert Bishop of London to Card. Wolsey. London, 15 March, [1528].

Holograph.

Pleasith it your grace to understand that accordinge to your commandement sent unto me, aswely by the Master off Savoy your Receyver with 2 Gentilmen off Oxforth, as by Mr. Henege, Archedecon of Oxford, I dyd attache the 6th day off thys moneth Doctour Ferman Parson of Honylane,<sup>1</sup> with John Goodale<sup>2</sup> his servaunt, and also John Goughe<sup>3</sup> bokeseller and stationer, dwelling in Flete Strete, and have kepte them severally hytherto, that oone of them hath not spokyn with an other. Opon which attachment I have examynyd eche of them severally aparte; and what I can get eyther off the sayd Goodale or off John Goughe, it is conteynyd in theyr writings off theyr handes, which I send herwyth. The sayd Goughe sayth he nether knoweth not Mr. Gararde nor yet never bough nor sold with hym, nor hath not sold to any person of Oxford or other bokes forbedyn sens monicions gyffen unto them that they shuld not sel nor bye such bokes. He hath not kept any shop of hys own past 2 yeres, and before he was servaunt to anodyr. Wherefore onlesse ther be any special mater to lay to his charge from Oxford he myght be put to suretie to be forth commynge. I think verayly by the examination of other persons then thes whom for like maters I have had in examination, and put sum of them to penance, that the said Goughe is taken for another man. The bringer off such bookes thys yere past was a Doch man dwellinge in Antwerp callyd Theodoryke, whych was sumtyme abydinge in London, and the last yere was here twys and brought wyth hym many bokes and emonge them sum which wer brought to me whych I forbad to be sold as Economica Christiana, and Precationes Pie; and albeyt that he was so commandyd, yet the sayd bokes were secretlie sold by hym in thys realme to diverse, for many off them be comen sens to my handes. Also he had many New Testamentes in English off the lytil volume, wheroff many be com to my handes sens: albeit he wold not be aknowen off them to any other then such as he thought wold bye them. Wherefore I thinke thys Goughe is innocent in this mater, onlesse ther be other mater then can appere here. I committed hym to the Flete bycause al my presons be ful off other persons out off the fordest parte of my Diocese, as I shewyd your Grace. John Goodal sayth that Master Gerard sent before Cristinasse last 2 fardellys to Oxford, which he bare to the caryar, and wer veray hevey, but what was in them he knew not. He hath ben pupil to Mr. Gerard, but he wyl not be knowen to me of any sinistre opinion that ever he was off hym self or knew the sayd Mr. Gerard to be off. And for as moch as those which do detecte hym be in Oxford, yt wer not evyl to send hym thither to be ther Examyned. He bath bene with Doctour Ferman as his servaunt sens Wytsonyde last, and before was in Oxford. The scolers off Oxorde that wer with me layd mych to hys charge more than I can get off hym. I have also examynyd Doctour Farman off sending off bokes to Oxford, and also what bokes off that sorte he shold have. Opon

(2) Mentioned vol. iv. p. 586. At the Rolls House, Chapter House Papers, 1st Series, No. 1731, there is a Petition from John Goodale to Cromwell as Lord Privy Seal, referring to his services against Popery, and to the King's Proclamation, dated Nov. 16 (see p. 258 of this Volume), and imploring deliverance out of the Fleet.

(3) John Goughe is mentioned at pp. 448, 568, of this Volume.

which examination he denyde to have sent any bokes thither, but as to hym selfe he confessyd he had such bokes, to thentente he mygth se what opinions wer emonge the Lutheranyes and be the more redy to impugne them, for the defence off the church. Whereupon I causyd hym to send for them, sendyng off my folkes also to serch as well the chamber wher Mr. Gerard, as his servaunt, lay: but in thier chamber wer none found, nor yet in his, other then he hym self sent fore, luyng in secrete places. Al whiche wer brought to me forthwith, without difficulte makinge, which wer a grete sorte in 2 bagges. I demaundyd off hym why he had the sayd bokes, and he sayd to no evyl purpose but only as before is written, adding also that thier shold have ben gyven a lycence to the Studentes of Cambryste in that behalffe by your Grace, which he can better shew you. I understond your Grace hath now Mr. Gerard again, by whom ye may know what he wyl charge thys man wyth. The Scolers of Oxford sayd that certain writings off Mr. Gardes own hand shuld charge thys man sore, but they were at Oxford. Syr as towchyng this man I coude never know that he hath prechyd othyrwyse then wel, opynly, what report so ever hath bene made off hym; albeyt I have had sum to here hym purposely what hys doctrine shuld be. Yff Gerard do forder charge hym, he is redy to answere. I send hym to your Grace by my servautes, to thentente ye may here hym speke, which I wold have done the last weke, save that your Grace was with the Kynges Hyghnes: besechyng your Grace that I may know your forther pleasure what ye wold have doon in thys behalff, with the sayd Parson, and to pardon me that I com not myself seinge I have visityd more than alff the Cite, and by thende off the next weke I shal go nygh to make an ende, yff your Grace may so long spare me. Yff your Grace wold put Doctour Ferman to surtie, I thinke he mygth fynd surtie in a gret sum, to be forth commyng; which your Grace for your wysdome, which know what is layd to hys charge, can better consider then I. As knoweth Almyghty Jhesu who preserve your Grace to his pleasure. From London the 15 day of March.

John Bishop of Lincoln to Card. Wolsey. 1 April, [1528].

My duety mooste humbly recommended unto your Grace, with my lawly thanks for your mooste charitable and favorable goodness all ways shewed to me, and in especiall maner in tyme of my disease and sekenes, as well by your mooste honorable letters as by your comfortable wordes, as many wayes I doo knowe to my mooste singuler comforte, and can in no wise make amendes, but I am and ever shalbe your faithful beadsman and servaunt att all your commaundements. I doo undrestand by Master Doctor Chambre your pleasure is that if I may any ways and withoute daunger of my disease, to be att the Courte this Easter.

Your Grace shall undrestand that if I doo amend this weke as I have doon the laste, I truste in our Lord God to be there upon Saturday before noon. I have eenne foote in payne, that if he will suffre me to stande and goo (though itt be with a staffe) I will not fayle but ther be. The Kyng his Grace sent to me on Saturday last to knowe whedre I mought be there or nott, to whome I have maade lyke aunswere as I doo unto your Grace, and shall send His Highenes and your Grace booth perfyte knowledge on Thursday nexte att thuttermoste. Over this for asmoche as your Grace didde commytt the examination of Master Garrett to my Lord Privy Seale and me; immediately upon knowledge of the same, and by thadvise of my said Lord, I sent to Oxon, for thexaminations of certayn scolers ther, and the processes that were ther maade, to have perfyte knowledge whatt we myght laye agaynste the said Garrett, whereof parte I have lefte with my Lord of London (which he will delyver unto your Grace) and the residue I nowe send unto you by this berer. This Garrett in my oppynyon is a very subtyll, crafty, soleyne, and an untrew man, as will appere when his aunswers to my Lord of London and me made and these books of the examinations of the scolers of Oxon be conferred togydre.

Ther is a moncke of Seint Edmundesbury called Doctor Rowham,<sup>1</sup> whiche preched Quarta Dominica Quadragesime<sup>2</sup> att Seint Peters in Oxon, the mooste seditious sermone that ye have herd of in raylyng ayenste your Grace and Byshopes for this sequestration of evyll prechers; maynteyning certayn opynyons of Luther, comfortyng erronyous persones in ther opynyons, sayng nolite timere eos qui occidunt corpus, &c. applyng itt to bold them in the same; with many other inconvenyent and unfyting wordes in his said sermone. Whiche I fear me hath and will doo moche hurte; whose sermone I send nowe unto your Grace: itt is that that is wryten in Englishie. Albeytt he didde speke many moo evil thinges then be ther wryten, as the best of the Unversite will prove, and they have bound hym by othe to drawe his said sermone as nighe as he can as he spake itt and bryng itt in by a day. Howbeytt I feare he will not abyde the aunswere, but will rather flee his way. Wherefore your Grace shuld doo a mervylous good deade streight to send for hym to Bury that he may be forth comyng to his aunswere when your Grace shall commaund. Thus I encombre you with long mater saving itt toucheth the cause of Chryste's Chirche, wherein we have oonly you to be our refuge and comforte. Thus the blessyd Trynyte preserve your noble Grace in long prosperous helth and welfare.

Lord Bishop of Lincoln to Card. Wolsey, Holborn, 8 April, [1528].

My bounden duety remembred unto your good Grace. Pleasith itt the same to undrestand I have used all remedies kowde be devysed with suche exercyse as I might suffre to have thuse of my lymmes, to thentent I might doo my duety this Easter<sup>3</sup> unto the Kyng his Higheues, butt I am yet unwyldy. Further credence herein I besече your Grace to gyve Master Hennage Archedeacon, by whome also I have sent unto your Grace the confession of Garret, whiche was brought to me yesterday by the Lievetenaunte his servaunt.

Yf itt moght soo stand with your gracious pleasure to lycence those scolers of your Unversite of Oxon that have bene thus detecte for havyng of evyll bookes, those that be Prestes to celebrate, and the residue to recyve ther Maker (facta prius reconciliatone) this Holy Feaste of Easter, ye shuld doo a gracious deade; Quum gratia parva confertur digne sumentibus sacratissimum illud sacramentum. dignissimo, necnon a latere legato perquam venerando, hujusque regni Angliæ cancellario æquissimo, perpetuam salutem, una cum summa felicitate in Christo Jesu, precatur Thomas Garardus.

Si unquam tibi curæ fuit reverendissime pater (curæ autem est, non dubito) ovem in montibus errantem in ovile reducere, te etiam atque etiam per summum illum pastorem, qui animam pro salute omnium posuit, rogo, ut jam tandem mei memineris utque ex hiis gravissimis vinculis quibus obruor me eripias: non de ferreis illis loquor, quæ mihi (licet gravia) vel gratissima sunt, nempe meis meritis digna, eoque sunt gratiora, quod a tua reverentia mihi infliguntur; sed de vinculis illis excommunicationis dico, quibus jamdiu sum miscrè alligatus; hæc inquam sunt illa tremenda et horrenda vincula, quæ me totis diebus totisque noctibus obturbant, exeruciant, et ad infernum usque deducunt, ut sæpius in illud Daviticum erumpere cogor—Ego dixi in excessu mentis meæ (et verè mentis meæ, nempe ad tempus omni gratia destitutæ) projectus sum a facie oculorum tuorum: et rursus, non est salus in Deo animæ meæ. Et certe, si hisce in vinculis (quod absit) mori contigerit, nulla reliqua pro peccatis est hostia, sed formidabilis quædam expectatio judicii et ignis vehementiæ, qui devoraturus est adversarium. Quem igitur non deterreat hæc vincula? quem non torqueant? quis est (modo de judicio futuro cogitet) qui non timeret vel una hora (si mutari queat) hujuscemodi in vinculis constrictus dormire, præsertim cum sui obitus diem nemo novit, aut horam: ac horrendum est incidere in manus dei viventis. Solvat ergo, solvat, tua celsitudo (exemplo Christi qui non venerat perdere peccatores sed servare) hæc vincula; atque si me in christi gregem dignum censi judicas, quæso mihi fluctuanti ita tuam digneris porrigere dexteram, quemadmodum Petro mergenti suam porrexit Christus, neque respiciat tua sanctitas ad meum meritum atque delictum, sed ad vocem Christi (ejus vicem quodammodo geris in terris, idque merito); qui misericordiam vult potius quam sacrificium, qui etiam arundinem comminutam non confringet, nec linum fumigans exting[ui]et, qui non in perpetuum irascetur neque in æternum comminabitur, qui non secundum peccata nostra fecit nobis, neque secundum iniquitates nostras retribuit nobis; sed nos peccato obnoxios effusione sui pretiosi sanguinis justificavit; cumque inimici eramus, sua morte deo patri reconciliavit; neque quis prior dedit illi ut redderet ei, sed ipse pro ineffabili charitate, qua nos dilexit et certe diligit, potentiam ac misericordiam suam notas omnibus faciens, hoc fecit. Miserere igitur, miserere mei, quemadmodum ille Pauli Christianos persecuentis, Petri illum negantis ac etiam cum juramento, et civitatis Samaritanorum ipsum non recipientis, misertus est; at sicum hæcenus inutilem ac nullum ferentem fructum ne prorsus succidas, sed salubri consilio fodiatur, præceptisque divinis stercoretur, ut fructum afferat denique; quod mali perpetravi ne mihi imputato sed Satanae, cujus illecebris deceptus sum; et quid mirum? cum ille seipsum in angelum lucis nonnunquam transformat, quo animas imbecilles atque infirmas illaqueet, inque suam ducat ditionem, prætextu pietatis veram pietatem subvertens. Sed ec-quid hæc ego pusillus atque indoctus homuncio ad tuam reverentiam scribo, quæ in hisce rebus imo in omnibus decernendis ut est exercitatissima ita prudentissima. Neque ideo hæc commemero (sic), quo ad misericordiam excitem, quippe qui sponte erga fontes (modo spes sit ulla recipientia) tam magna condonatione semper uteris, ut majorem optari nec potest. Sed ideo hæc scripsi, quo vulnus meum tibi tanquam medico peritissimo, in quo summa spes salutis meæ ac reconciliationis (secundum deum) spes est, non phalaratis verbis sed simplicibus detegerem. Est etiam et aliud quod me vehementer angit: deest mihi quo divina persolvam officia, quem ut mihi habere liceat obsecro. In summa, hæc frigidæ atque incompositas literas æquo ac luto animo suscipias oro, nec stilum sed rem ipsam respicias precor; tua enim benignitas christiano pastore dignissima eas ad scribendum animum mihi dedit. Semper valeat tua reverentia, quam mihi deus propitiam huicque regno diuturnam reddat, assiduis orabo precibus.

Sir Francis Bigode to Mr. Sec. Crumwell, Jervaise, 12 July, [1535].

Right worshipfull Sir. Pleaseth it yower maistership I was of late at Jervaise Abbay nere to Mydlam, and this berer Maister Garrarde with me, who preached ther the trew worde of God in the presence of the Abbot and all his brethern, and as Maister Garrarde in his sermon was declaryng the authoritie of every Bussshop and Preiste in remittynge syn, one of the monkes (callid Dan George Laysinbye) interruptyng the same precher opynlye ther, coram multis, saide that the Bussshop of Rome had the hyste and moste authoritie in all the worlde above all outhur Bissshopps. This notwithstanding Maister Garrarde full discreetly refrayned him sell ther, and peaseablye maide ende of his matter. Then after I commandid the forsaide moncke to be broughte afore the Abbotte me and all the audience, demandyng of hym the cause of his folishenes so to truble that companye gatherid in Godes name to here his blesside worde: whois awneswer deliberately spoken was hereticall and hyely traterous to God and ower moste redowpted soverayn Lorde the Kyng, as here by articles exhibited unto hym by me, yower Maistership shall well persayve. Unto whiche he hath subscribed his name affirnyng (like a trater) as yit his opynion, anempste the Bisshop of Rome, to be good and lawfull. Where I comanded the Constable of the Kynges castell of Mydlam to take the same monke as the Kynges prisoner and have hym to the Castell, wher he is and shall remayne, whiles the Kynges pleasure by you may be knowne. The Abbote and all his brethern wer well willyng he shulde be hadde to prison, and for his desertes to be ordred as wolde the Knyges law; they all behavid them in thys matter like honeste wise and faithfull men to ther Prynce, as far as I coulde persayve; in so myche the Abbote required me, to avoide all suspeches, to exhibite the same questions to all his brethern, unto wiche they all maide awneswer as became trew subjectes. I omitte thynges I wolde have write, but I desier yow to refer credence to the herer. Thus the Lorde keape yower Maistership in helth. From Jervase the 12 day of July.

BE yt knowen to all men that I Robert Barnes doctor of dyvynytye have as well in wrytyng as in preaching overshott my self and beynd deceived by trustyng to moche to myne owne heady Sentence and gyven judgment in and touching thartycles hereafter ensueng; Whereas beyng convented and called before the parsonne of my moost gracyouse soverayne Lord Kynge Henry the vij kyng of Englande and of Fraunce defensor of the faithe Lorde of Irelande and in Earthe supreme hedd, immediatly under godd, of the churche of Englande, yt pleased his highnes of his greate clemencie and goodnesse (beyng assisted with sondry of his moost discreete and learned clergie) to entre suche disputation and argument with me upon the pointes of my oversight as by the same [I] was fully and perfectly confuted by scriptures, and enforced onely for the truthes sake, And for wante of defense of scriptures to serve for the mayntenance of my parte, to yelde confesse and knowledge myne ygnorance, and with my moost humble submission doo promysse for ever from hensforthe to abstayne and beware of suche Rashenes; And for my further declaration therein not onely to abyde suche ordree for my doyngs passed as hys grace shall appoynte and assigne unto me, but also with my harte to avaunce and set forthe the saide Articles ensuyng whiche I knowlege and confesse to be moost catholyke and proper and necessary to be received observed and folowed of all good chrysten people. Though yt soo be that Chryste by the will of his father the oonly whiche hathe suffered passion and deathe for Redemption of all suche as will and shall come unto hym by perfecte faithe and baptisme; And that also he hathe taken upon hym gratis the burden of all theyre synnes whiche as afore will hathe or shall come to hym payng sufficient Remission for all their synnes and so ys become theyre onely Redeemer and justyfior (of the whiche numbere I truste and doubt not but that many of us nowe adaves be of): yet I in herte doo confesse that after by the foresaide meanes we be come right proper folkes, yet than by not folowyng our maisters commaundements and lawes wee doo loose the benefytes and fruytion of the same; whiche in this case ys irrecoverable, but by true penance, the onely Remedy left unto us by our Savyoure for the same. Wherefore I thynk yt more then convenyent and necessary, that whensoever justyfication shalbe preached of that this dede be yoned with all the fore parte to thentent, that yt may teache all true christen people a righte knowledge of theyre justyfication.

By me Robert barnes.

Also I confesse with harte, that Allmightie godd ys in no wyse Auctor Canser of Synne or any evyll. And therefore wheare as scripture saithe Induravit deus cor Pharaonis &c. and suche other textes of lyke seence, they oughte to be understande them, quod deus permisit cum indurari, and not otherwyse. Whiche dothe accorde with many of the auneynt Interpreters also.

By me Robert barnes.

Further I do confesse with harte, that whensoever I have offended my neighbour, I muste first reconcile myself unto hym or I shall gett remission of my Synnes. And in case he offende me I muste forgyve hym or that I can be forgyven, for this dothe the Pater Noster and other places of Scripture teache me.

By me Robert barnes.

I doo also confesse with harte that good woorkes lymtyed by Scripture and doon by a penytent and true reconciled christen man, bee profitable and allowed unto hym as allowed of godd for his benefit and healyng to his salvation.

By me Robert barnes.

I doo also confesse with my harte, that Lawes and ordynances made by Christen Rulers oughte to be obeyed by the Inferyors and subjectes not onelic for feare but also for conscience for whoo soo breakith them breakith Goddis commaundements.

By me Robert barnes.

All and singular the whiche Articles before wrytten I the foresaide Robert Barnes doo approve and confesse to be moost true and catholyke and pro-mysse with my harte by Goddes grace hereafter to maynteyne preache and set forth the same to the people to the uttermost of my power wytte and connyng.

THEFFECTE of certain erroneous doctrine taught by the vicar of Stepney in his sermon at polles crosse vpon sonday was seuenight which was the vijth day of March.<sup>2</sup> (Sheet 1.)

[T]his article confirmeth Doctor [B]arnes booke where he teachith that [M]ens constitucions bynde not the consciens.

[T]his latter parte suith for [an] evasion for these prechers ever observe that to haue oon blynde worde wherby to eskape daungier.

That noo magistrate had power to make that thing which of itself is indifferent to be not indifferent And after these words generally spoken he said thus—soo that these things shuld Judge or accuse his conscience And thenne said he wold be loth to goo soo far as saincte poll doth w<sup>t</sup> other words to that effecte And finally said that honeste men and good christen men wold obserue and kepe al lawes and ceremonies that tende to the hono<sup>r</sup> and glory of god.

The promyse of Justifacoon is w<sup>t</sup> out condicion for he that puttith a condicion vnto it doth exclude gratis doth exclude freely. And like as in the first byrth we haue remission of synnes w<sup>t</sup> out works Soo whenne we fal from that grace again we obteyne remission of synnes w<sup>t</sup> out works also which he called the seconde byrth.

A sume of these articles is that the first persuaded makith obedience to prynces an outwarde behaour oonly. Which is but a playe eyther for feare or manersake.

The seconde engendrieth such an assured presumption and wantonnesse that we care not gretly whither we obey god or noo.

Recantation of William Hierome.<sup>4</sup>

BE it knowen to all men that I William Hierome on myd[lent] Sonday<sup>5</sup> last past have preached erronyouslie pernycyouslie at Paules crosse to the utter perverting of th which dampnable doctryne I utterlie deteste and refu[se moost] hertilie with earnest purpose to preache the contrary to the ut[most] of my power and renounce these articles here folowng from the botome of my herte and hensfourth to preache and teache purelie and sincerely all truethes.

First, where I the saide William Hierome taught the day and place above specefied, that no magistrate can make those things different that Saynt Paule callith indifferent, that is to bynde his subjects by law or statute under payne of dedely synne, I confesse this my doctryne to be dampnable and to be detested of every christen man: and I say further that wh[at] law so ever the magistrate or ruler makith touching the restraynte in this thing indifferent, we his subjects o[w]ght to observe and kepe the same law under payne of goddes indignacyon that is everlasting dampnacyon without he rep[ent] and call for godds mercye. And say agayn that no subject may without conscience say or reason to the contrary, where the magistrate hath stablysshed his law tofore.

Secundely, touching this Article of justification that I the saide Willyam hierome the day and place above named have falsly and erronyouslie taught that without workes of penance, after I be ones frely justified, I may be saved by Christs passion alonellie, denyeng good works to be don for the same; this my dampnable opynyon I utterlie deteste and refuse from my very hert; sayeng that without works of penance no man may after his lapse attayne to his justice agayne, Nor that Christes passion is any thing avayleable to men that do not repente.

Thirdely, for so moche as I the saide William hierome have with moche villany repred the Burgesses of the King[s] graces parliament house as calling them Butter[flies] and] knaves with other wordes of reprofe to the gret defay[myng] of their name and office, which I confesse to be trewly objected to me, for this my lewde and extreme folie I submytte myself to the grete and unspeakeable mercye of my most drad sovereigne lorde, promising to renounce and refuse utterlie thes my lewde doings for ever asking with all humbles pardon and forgyvenes for these my haynous trespasses. And for a full refusall of my two pestilent doctrynes before rehersed I shalbe most hertelye glad and redy to recant revoke with open protestation where and when the Kings gracious majestie shall comau[nd] me, for so moche as I have now lerned of the Kings gra[ces] honourable counsell and lerned clergie that I have not tofore lerned.

RECANTATION OF ROBERT WARD.

(See page 448 of this Volume.)

From the Bonner Register, folio 62 verso. Anno 1544.

Good people I Robert Warde of Thapstede am nowe comen hither as a penyente persone trusting in the mercie of Almighty god, that, likewise as heretofore I have sundry wayes declared my folie and lewde behaviour in woordes and dedes taking upon me to be a teacher and instructor of other, where myne owne selfe being a man of small experyence lesse wytte and of no lernyng, nor yet of other good comendable qualities oughte rather humble to have soughte holsome instruction good advyse and catholique doctrine of other declaring my self rather a good discipule and scolar redy to learne than a folysh and a malapearte lewde rashe maister in presumtuoslie teaching, Soo by the goodnes and healpe of Allmightie god I shall ever from hensforthe by all the wayes possible unto me, endeavour my self not onelie in woordes but also in harte and dedes to declare perfectelie my self to have a righte faith and to be a true and a faithfull christen man. And surely full sorie I am that in tymes past I have not gon aboute this to doo, but like an indiscrete and folysh man have partlye of myne owne folye and partlye being seduced by other pretending to make me moche better then they were them selves doon cleane the contrarye. And good people ye shall understand that wanting (as ys before) bothe experyence wytte and learnyng I have dyverse tymes in alehouses and uncomelie and unmeate places taken upon me to bable talke and rangle of the Scripture whiche I understode not yea and to expounde it after my folysh fantasie chieffie at those tymes when I have not ben myne owne man but over come with Ale. And lykewyse I have dyverse tymes folyshlie and unreverentlie spooked of the masse and not duylie lyke a christen man regarded the same as I doo nowe know that of dultye and reason I shulde have considered yt and all the Sacraments of christs church with the laudable rites and ceremonies of the same. And moreover I have kept unlawful bookes to mayntayne my lewdnes and indiscretion herein. And by cause I knowe that in tymes past this my lewde behaviour and doyng mighte have ben occasion for some of you to have fallen to lyke folie and lewdnes, I am nowe comyn hither willinglie of myne owne self and free mynde to declare myne faulte and humblye besече you all that yt in anny wyse heretofore you have ben offended with me in anny my saide sayengs or doyngs ye will of your charytie freelie forgyve me and to take example by this my penaunce tavoyde and not to fall into the lyke sayengs and doyngs, trusting in god that thoughie my behaviour heretofore hath ben many wayes very noughtie and lewde yet this my humble penaunce and repentaunce well taken heade of, thoughie yt be ferre under myne offenses, shalbe profatable to me and you with all other tavoyde the lyke daunger and inconvenienc: whiche I besече allmightie god to graunte you: unto whom be gyven laude and prayse nowe and evermore.

RECANTATIONS OF WISDOME, BEACON, AND SINGLETON.

(See page 448 of this Volume.)

From the Bonner Register, folio 43.

WORSHYFFULL Audyence, I am placed this day in the myddys of these two penytents, as oone whoo professe hymself earnestely sorye that with my earnest countenance gestures behaviour and speache I have under the name of goddis woorde and pretence of christian charytye so muche slaundered the true doctryne of oure Religion and dyffamed the charytie of the publike ministres of common justice. I have preached agaynst the true doctryne denyng in my sermons manyns freewill, whyche ys a very detestable and abhomyable opynyon derogatinge the grace of godd, purchased for man in oure Redemption, and a pretence for noughtye men to flatter them selvys in theyre ydle and unfrutefull lyvyng. I have preached agaynst veneration and prayenge to sayncts sayeng wee mighte not say, Seynte Petir pray for me. Wherein I knowledge my self to have offended the true doctryne of oure Religion and to have spoken therein untrulye, without colour of learnyng why I shulde so say: howesover I have counterfett before, thyncke not that I counterfett nowe, for I declare unto you playnely what I am, and so wolde I wysse that all those whose wayes I have folowed wolde doo for charytye, and then shulde the ignorant people be soone quyeted, and pacyfyed to yelde to the mooste perfecte christen doctryne nowe set forth by the kinges maiestye. Also I have preached against the charytye of the publike mynystres and noted to the people howe men cannot lyve well in chryste but they be persecuted and layed in pryson for the trutheys sake. Wherein I knowledge myself greatlye to have offended christen charytye and untruely to have slaundersed comon justyce, for I have knowen noo man partycularlye to have been persecuted for the trythe. I have knowen that have been justely executed for their false doctryne as Frythe for a Sacramentarye in whiche opinion he noughtlye dyed. Lambartt for a Sacramentarye, in whiche opinion he noughtlye dyed. Barnes Garret and Jherome who suffered moost justelie for theyre false and untrue doctryne. This execution of Justice in them specially and other for the same causes I have harde of and knowen, but of eny that hathe been persecuted for the tryeth I know noon. This ys a Realm of justice and of noo persecution of them that be goode. I and my felowes here be nott onely not persecuted but we bec moost mercyfully handeled to be suffered to recant after oure so many foorle offenses. Other have justely suffered and wee fynde moost mercyfull pardon and grace. And therefore where my companyon here Thomas Becon sayeth in his booke of Davys harpe, that persecution ys a token of the true Gospell, that ys very false, for allthoughe amongs Jewes and Gentiles chryste be persecuted yet in the churche of chryste where the head and governor professith christe the punyshment of suche monstrouse sects as arryse amongs us may not be taken for persecution: for then shall Anabaptists Sacramentaryes Adamites Arrienes and Sabellianists all whiche be these dayes nowe rysen upp agayne, And suche of a lower sorte as wee bee of here that have denyed worshippyng and prayeng to sainets and suche other matiers, shoulde be noted to saye trougthe be cause wee be justely punyshed therefore. And soo the fylthy rotten and stynkyng membres shulde ever call themselves the best parte and the true churche, but that ys not soo; and therefore wee oughte not to call the punyshment of us and suche other persecution, but execution of ryght and justyce. Our cause ys noughte and therefore wee suffer justelye and thus lett us charytablye speake of our Superiors not diffamyng ne detractyng them but lett us honour them, and solowe the trythe taughte us by theyre Ordre accordinge wherunto yf wee teache and lyve we shall undoubtedlye please godd and that I may soo doo I pray you praye for me. And to thentent noo man shulde mysse reporte what I have saide, I have signed dyverse cotypes of that I nowe reherse with myne owne hande whereof eche man may have the cotype that will.

Recantatio
Thomas Becon, alias nominati
Theodore Basyle.

WORSHIPFULL AUDYENCE, for declaration of my penitent harte and the testyfyng unto you of myne unfeyned conversion from error to trythe, whereupon I have mercye and Remission of furder punyshment, due to myne offenses, I occupye this day the place of a penytent prayeng you to gyve credyte to that I shall nowe say of myself and myne owne mysdemeanor, and pray godd with me, that yt may worke discredite in you of suche thinges as I have taughte or wrytten contrarye to the trythe. I am the man, worshipfull audyence, whoo by the name of Thomas Becon (by whyche name Thomas I was chrystened, and by which I toke upon me tholye ordre of prysthode) have in the countreyes of Norff. and Suff. three yeres paste wyllingly and trulye knowledged in opyn sermons, that I hadd before that day preached and taughte evyll and false doctryne unto them; whiche my Recantation as I made yt ys contyneyed at leingith in this booke: after whiche Recantation I changed my dwellinge, and leavinge that Contry repayed unto Kent where I have lurked ever syns. I changed myne Apparell and shewd myne self lyke a layman. I chaunged also my name, and callid my self Theodore Basile. I changed the forme of teachinge the people frome preachinge unto wrytyng. Onely this I have not changed, but allwayes contynewed lyke myself, that ys to say, as I have under the name of Thomas becon preest preached untruelye soo have I under the name of Theodore basile wrytten untruelye in suche books as under the pretence of teachinge the tryeth I have under my counterfainte name of Theodore Basile wrytten and caused to be sett forth in prynte. I fynde yt worshipfull

Audyence in the experyence of my self moost true, that as saincte Jamys saith Deus superbis resistit God resisteth the proude. I have been possessed with the spyryte of pryde and vayne glorye, and nourysshed therewith have indured theese labours, to wryte suche bookes as have goon fourthe under the name of Theodore Basile. First my newe counterfaite name, Theodore basile whiche ys as moche to say, as a kyng geven of Godd, ys yt not a proude name to be of myne owne chosynge: ye may easely judge whither herein I lye of my self to please men, or ellis say trougthe that ye may knowe me: ye shall fynde in dyverse parties of my bookes greeke woordes made Englyshe as Encomion for a praise mnemosinon for a Remembraunce and suche other monstrouse woordes for the Reader understande that I were learned in the greeke tonge, wherein I confesse playnely I am not learned at all. In my booke callid the Newes owte of hevyn I have so playnely and so evydentely set forth and avauced my folye and pryde as I have mervayled that yt hathe not dyscouraged men, to gyve credyde or rede any other of my books here. In the booke thees be my woordes: I will not prayse the booke, oonlysse I shulde seme to hunte after vayne glorye neyther &c. hytherto pryde appeareth not fullye but in a shadowe, when I say, yt ys worthy &c. but herken what foloweth, Thys I dare booste &c. Canne I say anny more trowe yee? dyd evyr man say of hys owne booke that yt contayneth as moche of chryste in a fewe lines as the Byble and doctors teache of chryste in manye? dyd evyr man gyve suche a tytyle to his owne booke, to call yt the treasure house of christen knowledge? dothe not this place suffyce to prove my pryde? Note yet that folowith: This my booke sayeth, neyther canne any man &c. here ys my booke made Companion with the Byble accordyng to the fyrste sentence of pryde Ascendam et ero similis altissimo. But note you well howe this my prowde and arrogante speche dothe nowe charge me, as yt ys come to passe, for I myne owne self have condempned amongst other this booke and grannted yt to be worthy to be abolysshed, wherein I gyve Sentence againste my self that I shulde seme to condempne and sett at nought tholye byble. But good Audyence, so full of folye ys pryde that yt cannot consider what yt saythe. And here I mighte saye somewhat to maister Wyse dome here presente howe moche was he deceaved or howe moche wente he aboute to deceave the good people, to call me opynly in his sermon made at Aldermarie in Lent last paste The man of godd, who have continuallye laboured in the service of the Dyvell, preaching untruelye by the name of Thomas Becon, and wrytyng untruelye by the name of Theodore basile. I mervaile maister Wyse dome abhorred nott this Spyryte of pryde to make my wrytings equal with the sacred bible and goddis worde. But yt ys to true to true, and yt pleased godd that I shall nowe shewe unto you worshipfull Audyence The furderance of this secte and conspyracye againste the trythe hathe been by the permyssion of godd of suche strength and vehemencye that amongste suche as wynded that ende whiche I call in my potation the buyldyng of the temple, the woorke and forwardnes thereof hathe been of that sorte of men allowed What soever faults those woorkes have besydes I shall alledge none other specyaltie but myself whoo with all my intollerable pryde whiche hathe none excuse or color have been sett forthe unto the people (as ye have harde) to be the man of godd as a healer to the buyldyng of the temple, whereof I spake in my potation (that ys to say) avauicer and setter fourthe of noughtie doetryne. But godd whose power wroughte the confusion of Babilon, hathe severyd oure tonges amongst us and reduced us by the mynysterye of oure mooste dradde soveraigne Lorde through the Spyryte of humnylyte to an mytie and conjunction in trythe from whiche I have been here tofore moche alienate. Whiche I confesse in generalitie. And to avoyde all occation of slaunde, that I shulde for feare be seen to lye of my self, or rather doo thus of a polycie to escape, and so to save my self, then upon true knowledge of myne owne noughtynes, for the relief of other that hathe fallen by myne occasion I shall declare unto you some speecyalties both of myne owne preachinge whiche a greate number of Norff. and Suff. knowe, and also untrne wrytinge whiche my bookes doo testifie. I have preached agaynste the praynge unto sainets untruelye. I have preached againste the contynencie of prysts untruelye. I have preached againste prayer for the deade untruelye. I have preached so of the Sacrament of Thaltare as men were offended with me. I have preached also to the derogation and derysion of the Sacraments of confirmation and extreme unction. And all thys same have I doon under the name of Thomas Becon prieste. Whereof I am ryghte sory; and have heretofore under the same name of Thomas Becon made Recantation whiche ys here (as I have saide) in this booke worde for worde. Nowe syns the chaungynge of myne name from Thomas Becon unto Theodore Basile I have wrytten many many things noughtelie: but specyallie in my booke of pollyce of warre I saye, that as they persecuted the prophetes and true preachers of goddis worde, evyn soo doo they now: in which I seme approve the cause of suche as have been justelye punyshed by the ordre of the kinges maiestye lawes. Whiche be onely suche as have preached or taughte false doctryne, and therefore I cutte my booke here in peeces. In my booke of a Chrystmasse bankett I say the gyftes of grace cannot be ydle. Whiche ys contrarye to Sainte Paule, desyringe the Corynthians that they will not receive the grace of godd in vayne. And in the same booke I say also that yt ys impossible for true faythe to be without goode woorkes, and a faythfull man, whiche is the sonne of Godd. Thys ys dangerouslye and falselye spooken to mantayne the abhominable opynyon of necessitie, whiche is neyther in vice ne vertue. And therefore I cutte the same lykewyse here in peeces. In my booke of a newe Cathecisme I saye that godd commaundeth wee shall make noo gravyn ymage. Theese be my woordes, Gravyn ymages shall then non make. Which my woordes soo spoken against ymages as though all ymages were unlawfull I myself doo condemne. And in token thereof I cutt that booke also here in peeces. In my booke of newes owte of hevyn I saye that godd hath no pleasure in externall sacryfices but abhorreth them: falselye spoken, for albeit godd abhorreth ypcrysie, and ys not pleased with owtewarde Sacrifices where inwarde devotion wantieth, yet was godd highlye pleased with Abelles Sacryfice and ys nowe undoubtedlye moste hyghlye pleased with owre owtewarde celebration of the mooste high, pure, and excellent Sacryfice of the mooste blessed Sacrament of Thaltare, wherein chryste hymself offereth hymself by the mynyster for a continuall memorye Reall and effectual of his oblation made at his laste supper and uppon the Crosse. And therefore I cutte the same book likewise here in peecys. In my booke of Davyes harpe I say that a Christen man setting before his eyes the unmeasurable goodnes of godd and gyvyn earnest faythe thereto cannot otherwyse but love god agayne and take all meanes possible to please hym, to woork his wyll, and to doo that whiche he requyreth of hym. In whiche booke also I bydde men marke that Thapostles saiede wee cannot doo none otherwyse but speake. And after in the same booke I saye, that as good woorks folowe fayeth so dothe persecution folowe the confession of goddis worde. Addyng furthir that Chrystes worde and the crosse be companions inseparable, and as the shadowe folowith the bodye soo dothe the crosse folowe the worde of chryste and as fyre and heate cannot be separated, soo cannot the worde of chryste and the crosse be plucked asonder. In whiche woordes I doo not onelye noughtelie affirm the necessyite of goode workynge of suche as be in faythe, but also falselye and sedytously saye that evyn amongste goode chrysten men the doctryne whiche ys not continuallye persecuted with the crosse (as I call yt) cannot be the true doctryne of chryste. And therefore I cutte that booke in lyke maner here in peeces. In my booke callid the Invectyve againste swearinge I say most presumptuouslye these woordes, My faithe ys that I am wrytten in the booke of Iyef. And in the same booke with lyke presumption as though I were he of whom wolde ask accompte of all that perysshed in their Tyme I say these woordes folowyng, yf any man will not amende after this oure admonytion his dampnation fall upon his owne headd for I am free from his blondde and have doon my durytie in that behalf. I forbydde in the same booke the teachinge of all mennys tradycions (as I call them), and will men having spirituall echarge to teache onelye the scriptyres and suche thinges, whereof the holy gooste ys the Authoure, contempnyng arrogantelye all other teachings: and therefore I cutte the booke here in peeces. In my booke callid the potation I say these woordes They that teache any other thinges than the scriptyres teache not chrysten but humayne inventions. In the same booke I call satisfaction amendement of Iyef whiche I never redde in scriptyure nor auneyent doctours to be the exposition of satisfaction. In the same booke Repetinge the thirde dysse of my bankett I make two meanes onelye tobtayne kyndnes at goddys hande repentance and beleaff, leaving owte the will to be confessid and to make satisfaction. In the same booke speakinge of the confession of oure faythe I say mooste sedytiouslie thesee woordes folowinge, noo menacyng woordes noo imprisonmente noo cheynes noo fetters no swerde no faggot no fyer oughte to plucke us from this confession no tyrannie oughte soo to be feared that godd and his truyth shulde not be confessed: as though thesee punyshments were used againste the true confession of faith. And therefore I cutte this booke also here in peeces. In the preface of my booke whiche I call mooste arrogantelye the golden booke of christen matrimony I wryte in dysprase of Contynencie thesee woordes folowinge Lett other prayse suche as maye justelye seame to be monstrouse of nature for their sterillitie and barrennes; yet will I commend them, whiche accordinge to their fyrst creation and the naturall dysposition, that godde from the begynnyng engraffed in them are fructefull as a plentuous vyne. And after in the same preface I say, lett other prayse them whiche when they dye leave noo lyvyng and quicke testymonies behynde them; yet will I comende them which when they gyve over to nature leave quicke and lyvyng testymonies behynde them wherebye they declare that they have lyvyd and not been [un]fructefull nor unprofitable to the christen publike weale. And in all that booke I exhorte all men to marraige indifferentlye; makinge noo difference whether they bee pryests or noo. And therefore I cutte that booke here in peeces. In my booke also whiche I gloriouslye call a pleasaunte newe nosegay, I say that as he that hathe the true and perfecte sighte of the eyes stumbleth nott but walketh at all tymes without danger soo in lyke maner he that ys endued by christis spyrytt with the lighte of holye scriptures wandereth not from chryste, and that the gaates of hell cannot prevaile againste hym, And that Satan with all his Armye are not able once to abduce and remove hym from the true wayes for the lighte of godds worde ys contynnally before his eyes. In whiche woordes I torne the promisse made by oure Sayvoure Chryste to his church unto every faithfull man as though he whiche were ones faithfull coulde noo more be over come with the devill and comytte deadly synne: falselye. And therefore I cutte this booke here before you all in peeces. Lyke as I doo also thesee other two bookes thooone callid a newe path way to prayer, thother a newe yeres gyfte whiche conteyne lyke naughtie doctryne as thother doo. And besyde thesee specialities whiche I cannot with any excuse avoyde, the good woordes in my bookes, suche as well placed and ordered mighte be spoken, bee of my singularitie and vanytie soo set forthe as they mighte gyve occasion (yf credyte were hadde to the Autor) to maintayne manye suche naughtie and pestyferous opynyons as hathe been of late sood amongs the people. And therefore I wyshe here all my bookes destroyed accordyng to the kynges maiestyes proclamations as thesee be here destroyed with myne owne handes. And to thentent noo man shulde mysraporte what I have saied I have signed dyverse cotypes of that I nowe reherse with myne owne hande. Whereof echie man may have the cotype that will.

THESE be the clauses and sentences before mentioned bryefely in the saide Thomas Beacons Recantation. woorde for woorde as he redde them on the booke mentioned also in the saide Recantation.

I wyl not prayse the booke unlesse I shulde seame to hunte after vayne glorye, neyther will I dyspraise yt unlesse I myghte seme rashelye and withoute a cause to condempne that whiche ys worthy prayse and comendation of yt self. I leave yt therefore to the judgment of other that be goostelye learned and taughte of godde.

This I dare booste that yt contayneth more true and christen learninge than a greate soorte of volumes that wee have estemed highlye in tymes paste he that shall make this book his companyon shall heare fynde in fewe leaves that thole Byble and Commentaries of the auncyent doctours doo teache of chryste in manye soo that yt myght well be callid the treasure house of chrysten knowledge.

Neyther can any man justlie condempne or correcte this Booke excepte wec also will contempne and sett at noughte the mooste sacred and holye byble with the auctoryties whercof this lytle treatyse ys suffycientlye and plentuosly fortiefed and defended againste the borryshe teeth and serpentlyke tonges of thees crakinge calumpnyators and subtyll Sycophants whiche after the manner of Momus are redy to carpe reprehende and condempne every mannes woork and entrepryse be yt never so godlye when they them selves brynge forthe nothing at all that ys worthy eytlier the readyng or the hearynge excepte men have pleasure to reade or here Blasphemies.

BONNER'S ADVERTISEMENTS TO THE READERS OF THE BIBLES SET UP IN ST. PAUL'S.(See page 452 of this Volume.)

From the Bonner Register, folio 25 verso.

An admonition and Advertisement gyven by the bysshopp of London to all Readers of this bible to thenglyshe tonge.

To thentent that a good and healthsom thinge godly and vertuouslye for honest entents and purposes set forthe for many be not hyndered or maligned at for thabuse defeaute and evill behavyour of a fewe, who for lack of discretion and good Advysemēt commonlye without respecte of tyme or other due circumstaunces procede Rashelye and unadvysedlye therein, And by reason thereof rather hynder then set forwarde the thinge that ys good of yt self: It shall therefore be very expedyent that whosoever repayreth hyther to reade this boke or any suche lyke in any other place he prepare hym self cheiflye and principally with all devotiōn humilitie and quyettesse to be edyfyed and made the better thereby. Adjoynyng thereunto his perfecte and moost bounden dutytie of obedience to the Kyngs majestie our most graciously and drade sovraigne Lorde and supreme hedd, especyally in accomplysshing his gracyes most honorable Injunctions and commandemens gyven and made in that behalf, and right expedient, ye necessarye, yt shalbe also, that levyn behynde hym vayne glorie hypocrysie and all other carnall and corrupte affections he bring with hym discretion, honest intente, charytie, reverence, and quyet behavoure to and for the edyfication of his owne sowle, withoute the hindraunce let or disturbaunce of any other his Christian brother. Evermore forseeing that no nombre of people be speccyally congregate therefore to make a multitude. And that noo exposition be made thereupon otherwyse then yt ys declared in the boke yt self. And that especyallye regarde be hadde that noo reading therof be used a lowde and with noyse in the tyme of any dyvnye servyce or sermonde or that in the same be used any dysputacion contention or any other mysde-meanour or fynally that any man justelye may rekn hym self to be offended therebye or take occasion to grudge or maligne thereat.

God Save the kinge.<sup>1</sup>

Thadvertysment of the Bysshopp of London renewed agayne to the Reader of this Byble.

Whereas heretofore there hath been gyven by me the bysshopp of London a right honest charytable and frendly advertysment and Admonition to all maner of persones repayingr hyther to reade this boke, declaring howe and after what maner, ye and at what tymes, they shulde doo yt, to thentent the worde of God reverently and discretlye handeled might bothe be duylye honoured and hadd in better estymacion then it hath been, and also the better goe forward, and be bothe to the hearer and Reader therof more frutefull & profitable: And where as also syns that tyme dyverse wilfull and unlearned persones inconsideratlye and indiscretelie (contrarie to all good order and honest behavoure) have reede the same especyallye and chieffie at the tyme of devyne servyce in this right honourable cathedrall church, yee in the tyme of the sermon and declaration of the worde of Godd, as well at Paules Crosse as also within the quere of this church, in suche sorte as was bothe to the evyll and lewde example of the rest of the multitude, and also to the highe dishonour of the worde of God, Over and besyde the greate disturbance and unquyetness of the people repayingr hyther for honest matiers and purposes: I doo entende, God willing (albeit for dyverse and good considerations and chieffelye for the goode increase and mayntenance of chrysts moost holye woorde and his excellent good Religion, I caused to be sett upp in this said church diverse Bibles in Englyssh, what tyme I was absent in parties be yonde the see on the Kings majesties affaires), In case the saide wilfull and unadvysed persones will styll runne rashelye upon the brydell and upon noe gentle request or desyre will be enduced to reform and amende them selfs and theyre lewde behaviour herein, but persever contynually in theyr folye and obstynate mynde, to take downe the said Bibles agayne. Wherefore this ys esteson of honest frendshypp to requyre and charytabley to desyre and pray every Reader of this booke, that eyther he will in dede observe and keape my former advertysment and fryndelye admonicion adjoynd hereunto, Reading this booke quyetlye and devoutely in tyme convenient and agreeable without the slaunder disturbaunce or offence of any other, as apparteyneth; either ells to take in good parte and be contente that the saide bibles for the said abuses be taken downe, for assuredlye, the faulte and disordr herein not amended but increased, I intende (being thereunto enforced) upon right good considerations and especially for the saide abuses to take downe the said Bibles, whiche otherwyse I wolde be right lothe to do, Considering I have been allwayes and styll wilbe by godds grace right gladd that the scripture and worde of god shulde be well known, And also set forthe accordinglye. And thus good Reader comytting you to Almightye God our moost mereyfull good lorde as well to doo as myne owne self, I beseeche the same to sende us all plentuouslye of his grace, that wee may serve hym according to our moost bounden dutye and desyre you moost hartely herewithall to take this myne Advertysment according to my meanyng, whiche ys to amende the faulte and abuse of the thinge, suffering the good thinge well used styll to remayne and to contynewe.

God Save the King.

No. 1633.

THE depositions of Thomas Herd and Thomas Artes touching a sermon preached by Dr. Crome on Relic Sunday [July 11th], A.D. 1529.

I doo certefy yowre good lordschipe that upon the feste of Reliqwes laste paste in the yere of our lorde god mccccxxixth that I Thomas herde preste of Aldermary chyreh, beyng ther at the sarmon of Master dwtter Crome, wher as that day all London served the feste of the Relyks wher the Curatt of that chyreh wold not suffer none to kepe that serves, and in tyme of the sermon I sayde my serves of that day, and gave lytyll ear on to hym, ontyll the tyme that he spake of the byschoppes that had loste ther promosyns: thes wer hys wordes, as nyer as I can call to my Remembrauns: frynds, sayde he to the audyens that was ther: Wolde to God that ye wold leve yower slanderous fongs: ye say that thes byschoppes be false knavys and hoursons. than sayde he that theye wer no mor knavys thane they that calde them so, but that thay wer as good and as free borne and as good levers, as any of them that spake the wordes: than he sayde morover, that ther onesty ly nott in ther promosyons, for then my lorde mayer beyng mayer, or shrevys, or abbats, or pryorys, whane that thye go owtt of ther ofes, than they shold lys ther onesty yf yt remainyd in ther ofes. Also he sayde that the wer lyemongers in the sety of london and thay utteryd at wyntaners, and at barbors shoppys and at bysshoppes tabylls; and so went forthe with other matters. I gave no ere unto hym. Also he sayde that they have do the kyngs grace as good serves as other men have dun.

Thes be the wordes that Doctor Croom spake in the polpett in hys pares cherche of Aldermary up on relec sonday last past, that I Sir thomas Artes harde and spake in Jhesus Communs and to the parson of Synte Mychell in qwene hethe: ther he syed that ther ys a craft of lyemongeres thatt slandered the good men that had lost ther promocyons, for they say that they be no good men and also that they be horsons; and ther in he sayd they leyde. And that he seyde, that ther honeste lay nat in ther promocios, and proved yt by thys exsampil; yf the mayor of london or the shreves of london beyng for a yer and than going owtt of ther ofes sowlde nat leve ther honeste with ther ofes, bnt ther honeste shuld remayne stelle with them: and also browt in an oder exsampil that the honeste of a man lyth nat in hys sobstansse nor reches, for then when he were at church hys honeste were at home: also he syde that the honeste of a man lyth nat in the golde and selver in a manys perse, for then thewes shuld rob hem, he shuld lose hys honest. Also he sayd yt lay nat in hys garment, for then the talor myth mar yt: he seyde ther honest lay in ther condysson, and they that called them so war to blame for they ware as trewly begot as they: also he seyde that the lyemongers warehouses were they sold ther wayrs was in barbors shoppes in tavernes and at bosshoppes bordes: and thes ben all the word I hard, and marked by me.

Recantation of Dr. Crome at Paul's Cross on Septuagesima Sunday (February 13th), A.D. 1541.

The kyngs highnes having received the answers of Edward Crome doctour of dyvynytie parson of the parysshe church of Aldermary within the Cittie of London to certayne Articulis whereupon he was examined before his Majesties Commissaries thereunto by his highnes appoynted and being also advertysed that the saide doctor Crome ys evyn so resolved and fully persuaded in his harte and conscience as he dothe confesse in his said answers subscribed with his hande and exhibited to the kings highnes, of his moost gracyous goodnes and accustomed mercyfulnis ys contented and pleased at this tyme to foregyve and remytte the Rigour and severytye of his lawes whiche [his] majestie mighte nowe have justelye executed against hym, and his highnes further myndyng the establysshement of a christian unytye quyetyes and tranquyllytie among his loving subjects by unfayned conformytie in true preaching and teaching of the worde of God hathe taken such ordre and direction in this matter as hereafter folowith: First, that the said doctor Crome at his next sermon whiche he shall make at Powles Crosse shall playnlye and openlye declare unto the people and say in this wyse: Where of late moche vanytye of opynions and contention hathe rysen and growne amongst thinhabitants of London by reason that either I by defaute of good utteraunce and openyng my mynde or other negligence of speache have not elierlye and playnly intreated and declared suche matters as I have in my sermons spoken of, or ells because myne Audytours hathe mystakyn my preaching and otherwyse interpreted and understande the same then I mente; You shall understande that I have been am and shalbe of this mynde and opynyon as nowe I shall partycularlye declare unto you, that ys to wyte: That Scripture may upon lawfull considerations be restrayned from the lay people by the kyngs, princes and chief governors of every Ralme, so that they shall not reade yt at theyre pleasures, in all places and at all tymes. Prayour fasting Almes deedes and other suffrages be profitable for sowles departed. Masses publike and private be a sacryfice profytable both for the quyck and the deade, and yt ys not in the power of any man to lynytte and dyspense howe moche and in what space of tyme or what personne they profytieth partycularlye for that perteyneth onely to god which a lone knowith the measures and tymes of his owne Judgements and Mercyes. It ys good and laudable for us to pray to the saints in heaven to pray to god with us and for us. No man syns the Apostles hathe auctorytie to ordeyne any thing as an Artycle of our faithe: notwithstanding every kinge and prynce within his Realme hathe auctorytie to ordeyne diverse things whiche the subjects are bounde to observe and keape obedyentlye. The Apostles taughte sondry things [which] be not in playne and evydent scripture, whiche oughte to be receaved beleaved and kept of christen people as the doctryne Apostolique. The interpretacion of Scripture made by the aumeynt doctours ys to be allowed and reverently esteemed. The Christen people of this Realme of Englande bee the church of Englande, of the whiche church our Soverayne Lorde the kinge ys supreme heed under chryste bothe of the clerye and of the laytye. The auctorytie of the church ys not above the scripture, but perteyneth to church to testyfy, to dyscerne, to reade, to expounde, to declare, to preache, and teache the scripture. Allthough masses and other suffrages bee profytable for the sowles departed, yet the kings majesty and his high cowrte of parliamente have lawfully and justely suppressed the Abbeyes and Monasteryes within this his graces Realme. It ys the duytye of every preacher to pray for the kinge the quene and the prince in theyre sermons. Such preachers as say that the Masse ys avaylable for the sowles departed dothe not thereby, as fer forth as I knowe, goe aboute to depryve the kings Majesty of his supremytie, ne yet to bring in agayne the bysshopp of Roome. Processions at Powles or ells where to pray for seasonable wether and asswaging of the plage and also for the good estate of our Soveraigne lorde the kinge the quene the prynce and thole Realme be well and comendable instituted and good to be contynued. Allso I do nowe proteste and opynly declare here unto you, that whensoever and whatsoever I shall at any tyme hereafter preache or teache in my sermons or otherwyse agaiust thabus of any thinge towching the saide Artycles by me nowe rehersed or any of them, my mynde and intente playnlye ys and shalbe to affirme and mantayne the said Articles and in nowyse to dysalowe impugne or take away any of them, nor in any poynte to dysseute or dysagree from them. Allso the kinges highnes hathe ordered that the saide doctor Crome when and as yt shall chauce hym to preache agaiust any abuses concernyng the saide matiers before specyfyed shall before the rehersall of the said abuses declare opynly to the people hys opynyon and mynde of the right uses thereof according to the premisses. Allso the Kings highnes hathe ordered that the said doctor Crome in the declaration of the saide Articles, or at any other tyme hereafter, shall not for his Excuse or defense say, that he hath been falsely and unjustely accused upon any malice concernyng the premisses. Also the kings grace notyfieth and gyveth knowledge to the said doctor Crome that in case he shalbe at any tyme accused for preaching or teaching hereafter against any of the saide Artycles or for any other lyke matier and duyllye proved, that then he shall not loke for lyke favour, but to have justyce admynstered unto hym accordinglye.

God save the kings Majestie

Recantation and Articles of Dr. Crome, A.D. 1546.

That the Sacrifice of the body and bloude of our Savyour christe by hym offered on the crosse ys the Everlasting and sufficient sacryfice avayleable for the synnes of all the people whiche with an unfayned harte and true belef come unto hym whiche self same sacryfice of bodie and bloude in substaunce ys by vertue of chrystes woorde dylie consecrete and offered by the prieste in the Masse for oure consolation in the remembraunce of his deathe and passion for oure redemption, and ys the verye propitiation and satisfaction for the synnes of the woorld And that thacte of the prieste ys also a sacryfice of prayse and thanks gyving unto god for oure redemption and a meane to obtayne grace and mercye boothe for quycke and deadde and not the satisfaction for the synne and payne of the woorld for that ys onlie to be attributed to christs passion.

Articuli declarati et publice confessarij et recogniti per mag. doctorem Crome in Sermone suo apud crucem paulinam.

Almightie God by the power of his woorde pronounced by the prieste at the Masse in the consecration turneth the breede and wyne into the very body and bloude of our Savyour Jhesu Chryste. And the same ones beyng consecrate ys and remayneth styll the verie body and bloude of Chryste although yt bee reserved and not presentlie distributed for nother in scripture nor in good Author wee fynde that after the consecration the vertue thereof ys revoked and therefore yt cannot but remayne tyll yt bee received.

That the saide oblation or sacrifice so by the priest offered in the mass ys available and profytable both to the quycke and to the deed although yt lieth not in the power of man to lymyte howe myche or in what measure the same doothe avayle but to induce us perfectlie to thinke and credyte the same wee muste consider that the quycke and dead maketh but one bodie whereof criste ys the head. And that thys Artycle hath been taughte and received in the churche of criste evyn from thapostells tyme.

That the churche of christe hath doothe and may lawfully ordre soome priestes to be mynystrees of the Sacramente although those same bee not apte to preache nor be worthy to be admytted thereunto.

Whereas I dyd promyse and take upon me playnelie and clyerlie to setteforth and declare at paulis Crosse the secunde Sunday after Easter certayne Articles by me subscribed, I doo acknowledge and mooste humble with my harte confesse that I dyd nor intended not to sette foorthe the same with a synple mynde according to the true sense and meaning of them but having one meanyng secreatelye in myne harte knowinge in my conscience the sense and meanyng of thartycles to be contrarie to the same. I dyd use collusion and colour of my hole proceeding concernyng the declaration of the saide Articles whereby I mighte appeare boothie to mantayne myne owne former evyl opynyon and neverthelesse to satsyfie my promyse in setting foorthe of Thartycles aforesaide.

Item I doo say and affyrme, that the masse used in the Ralme of Englande ys agreeable to the Institution of chryste And that wee have in this church of Englande the veye true sacramente whiche ys the veye bodye and bloude of oure Savyour chryste under the form of breade and wyne.

Item I doo say and affyrme that yt ys not a thinge of necessitie that the sacrament of Thautare shulde be mynstered to the people under boothe kyndes of breade and wyne and that yt ys none abuse that the same bee mynstered to the people under one kynde forasmoch as in every of boothe kyndes whole cryste boothe body and bloude ys conteyned.

Item I doo say and affyrme that yt ys no derogation to the vertue of the masse althoughe the prieste doo receive the Sacrament alone and none other receive yt with hym.

Item I doo say and affyrme that all thoose Artycles whiche I subscrybed and promysed to declare at paulis cross bee undoubtedlie trewe understandinge by the masse mentyoned in the same Artycles the self same Masse whiche ys daylie used in this church of Englande.

Item I doo professe and proteste that I never hadde any suffycient grounde of scripture or of holy Authors to mantayne myne opynyon why to dyssett in anny of the saide Artycles from the received doctrine of the church of Englande neyther was I so satisfied in my saide opynyons in myne owne conscience as I dyd surelie beleave them my self or toke them for undoubted truythe.

To the kings mooste excellent majestie.

FORASMOCHEAS, mooste dreed and soverayne lorde, myserablye nowe in myne olde age evyn within this yere I have fallen into that mooste detestable and mooste abhomynable heresy of them that bee callid Sacramentaries denyeng wretchedlie the presence of Chrysts blessed body in tholye Sacrament of thaultare And forasmoche also as yt hath pleased your majestie of youre greate charitie and moost godlye care ye hade for my soull to sende unto me the righte honourable bysshoppes of London and Worcetur, together with your graces worshipfull chapleyns doctor Robynson and doctor Redman to conferre with me enforme me and instructe me to thyntent that synallie goddes grace woorking boothe in them and me I mighte be broughte from my saide erreure and heresy into the true catholyck faythe Whiche thinge accordinge to youre graces expectation hathe taken good successe in me (thankes bee to almightie god), for by suche learnynge as they have shewed me and specyallye by the unyforme consent of the whoole chatholyke churche in that Artycle evyn from the Apostells tyme unto this oure age, fewe excepte whiche have been taken and justelie reputed for heretiques, I am fullie persuaded perfectelie beleave and unfaynedlie confesse that after the consecration rightelie doon by the priest there remayneth none other substance but onelye the substance of the blessed body of oure Savyoure Chryste god and man lyke as before I have subscribed unto a bill hereunto annexed. And fynally forasmoche as the saide honourable bysshoppes and worshipfull doctors have hadde further conference with me not onelie in the reeste of the Syxe Articles but also in all other matters of controversie that other they or I coulde call to our remembrance and are agreed fullie in the same, so that nowe I am fullie persuaded and resolved in all matters of any weighte or importuance wherein I was before other ambyguouse and in doute or ells of a contrary judgment unto them, and doo nowe esteeme and judge evyn as they doo in all those things. Therefore I mooste humblye evyn from the botome of myne harte thanke your excellent majestie, that ye have hadde this godlie care for my soull healtie, and that by youre mooste gracyous meanes I am broughte and reduced from that dampnable erreur that I was in. And surelye hadde not this youre pytie and compassion been I wolde obstynatelye have dyed in the same, and so from the temporall fyre shulde have goon to the everlastyng fyre of hell. And nowe with all humylytie and reverence I submytte my self wholly unto your gracies clemencie, redy with all pacyence yf yt bee so sene to youre highnes to suffer evyn the very deathe, as I have justelie deserved, or ells to doo any other thinge that youre majestie shall thynke good and expedient for reducyng your graces subjects from therroure that they be wrapped in unto the true catholycke faythe, and thorder taken in this youre mooste chrysten realme not onely in this one Artycle, but also in all other wherein I my self am nowe (thankes bee to god and your highnes) fullie resolved and throughly persuaded, thus to contynewe to theude of my life by the grace and goodness of God, who evermore preserve youre majestie to his glorie and the profytte of this your Ralme.

By your humble subjecte and moost bounden bedinan Nycolas Shaxton, late bysshopp of Saris. the nynthe day of Julye in xxxviiijth yere of your mooste gracyous Reigne.

Hereafter folowith the true copie of the Artycles.<sup>1</sup>

The fyrste. Allmightie God by the power of his woorde pronounced by the prieste at Masse in the consecration, turneth the breade and wyne into the very naturall body and bloode of oure Savyour Jhesu cryste. Soo that after the consecration there remayneth noo substance of breadde and wyne but onely the substance of cryste, God and man.

The secunde. The saide blessed Sacrament being ones consecrate ys and remayneth styll the very body and bloode of oure Savyour cryste, all though yt be reserved and not presentlie distributed.

The thyrd. The same blessed Sacrament being consecrate ys and ought to be worshipped and adored with godly honour wheresoever yt ys: forasmoche as yt ys the bodie of Cryste inseperably unyted to the deitie.

The fourth. The churche by the mynustration of the prieste offereth dayly at the Masse for a sacryfice to Allmightie God the self same hodie and bloude of our Savyour Chryste under the forme of breadde and wyne in the remembrance and representation of Christs deathe and passion.

The fyfte. The same body and bloude whiche ys offered in the Masse ys the very propitiation and satisfaction for the Synnes of the woorld for asmoche as yt ys the self same in substance whiche was offered upon the crosse for oure Redemption. And the oblation and action of the prieste ys also a sacryfice of praise and thanksgyvinge unto God for his benefites and not the satisfaction for the synnes of the woorld, for that ys onelye to be attributed to chrysts passion.

(1) The following Articles are printed by Burnet, Hist. book iii. Records No. xxix.

The Syxte. The saide oblation or sacryfice so by the prieste offered in the masse ys avaylable and profitable boothe for the quycke and the deadd, although ye yt lyeth not in the power of man to lymyte howe moche or in what measure the same doothe avayle.

The Seventh. It ys not a thinge of necessitie that the Sacrament of Thaul-tare shulde be mynstered unto the people under boothe kindes of bread and wyne. And yt ys none abuse that the same be mynstered to the people under thone kinde forasmoeche as in every of boothe the kindes whole chryste boothe body and bloode ys contayned.

The eighte. Yt ys noo derogation to the vertue of the Masse all thonghe the prieste doo receive the Sacrament alone and none other receive yt with hym.

The nynth. The Masse used in this Realme of Englande ys agreeable to thinstitution of Chryste. And wee have in this church of England the verie true Sacrament whiche ys the very body and bloude of oure Savyour Chryste under the forme of bredde and wyne.

The tenthe. The Church of Chryste hath doothe and may lawfullie ordre some prests to bee mynsters of the Sacramentes, although the same doo not preach nor bee admytted thereunto.

The Eleventh. Priestes being ones dedicate unto god by the ordre of preste-hode and all suche men and women as have advysedlie made vowes unto god of chastite or wydowhode may not lawfullie marry after theyre saide ordres received or vowes made.

The twelfth. Secrete auricular confession ys expedyent and necessarie to be retayned continued and frequented in the church of chryste.

The thyrteenth. The prescience and predestination of All-nightie god although in yt self yt bee infallible inducith noo necessitie of thactuion of man, but that he may freelie use the power of his owne will or choyse, the saide prescience or predestination notwithstandinge.

I Nycolas Shaxton with my harte doo beleve and with my mowthe doo confesse all thees Articles above wrytten to be true in Every parte.

Ne despicias hominem avertentem se a peccato, neque improperes ei: memento quoniam omnes in corruptione sumus. Eccle. viij.

Faythe is that weapon stronge Whych wyll not fayle at nede ; My foes therfor amonge Therwith wyll I procede.	I am not she that lyst My anker to lete fall For everye dryslynge myst ; My shippe substanciall.
As it is had in strengthe And force of Christes waye, It wyll prevayle at lengthe Thoughe all the devyls saye naye.	Not oft use I to wryght, In prose, nor yet in ryme, Yet wyll I shewe one syght That I sawe in my tyme.
Faythe in the fathers olde Obtayne rightwysenesse, Whych make me verye bolde To feare no worldes dystresse.	I sawe a ryall trone Where Justyce shold have sytt, But in her stede was one Of modye, cinell wytt.
I now rejoyce in hart, And hope byd me do so, For Christ wyll take my part, And ease me of my wo.	Absorpt was rightwysnesse As of the ragynge floude ; Sathan in hys excesse Sucte up the gyltelesse bloude.
Thou sayst Lorde, whoso knocke To them wylt thou attende ; Undo therfor the locke, And thy stronge power sende.	Then thought I, Jesus Lorde Whan thou shalt judge us all, Harde is it to recorde On these men what wyll fall.
More ennyes now I have, Than heeres upon my heed, Lete them not me deprave, But fyght thou in my steed.	Yet Lorde, I the desyre, For that they do to me, Lete them not tast the hyre Of their inyquyty.

WILLIAM JEROME'S RECONTANTION SERMON.

(See page 433, line 40, of this Volume.)

From the Miscellaneous Documents of the Treasury of the Receipt of the Exchequer, in a Volume lettered "Tractat. Theolog. et Politic. vol. ix." (A. 1. 15, pp. 277—284,) in the Public Record Office, Rolls House.

"Et ecce duo ex illis ibant ipsa [die in] castellum quod erat in spacio [&c.]"

Soche is the worlde, [that I am] compelled to wrytt those [things] that I now intende to [speak.] So that I have bounde my[selfe this] daye to do that thing [that] I wolde I had done before. To be . . . . shorte and to speke nothinge but that is penned. Soche I saie is the worlde, that I must nedes this do, for to advoyde misreporters and slaunders. Wherefore I desier you right honourable lordes (?) to consyder well the argument I take in hand, and to note well . . . cyrcumstances . . . . . s of . . . selves and by them selves maye be evyll taken, yf it be not coupled with what is sayde before and what after, you (?) . . . my argumentes with the whole . . . bothe of the occasyone, and also of my conclusions.

When I consider within my selfe the aunycnt wryters and fath[ers] of Christes churche, how they have ordered and behaved themselves, in wrytynge of sermones not onlye of many places of the scrypture, but moost specially of this place and upon this gospell for Christes (?) resurreccyon which . . . . . have purposed m . . . y . . . . s . . . . my mynde in I . . . . . d . . . . . maner of wrytyng, but also their whole purposes and ententes. So that whatsoever place of scryptur they tooke in hand, this was allwaye the . . . . of ther purpose, that yf there were any errors amonge the people, they went rather aboute to remove them, then to shew (?) and declare that parte of scripture by processe unto them. And where as they have spyed eny enormities amonge the people, they have not so moche regarded the truth and verityte of the scripture in that place, as the reformacyon of the saide enormities and vyces. So that, I saye, the mynd of all (?) those that I have red, which have wryten any serinones upon this place, hath evermore been [en]tente to reforme vyces knowne amonge the people.

Thes there doynges then . . . . . consyred and pondered, I have determyned within my selfe, shalbe unto me a rule at this tyme. I am also as desyrous to reprove errors and other enormities, as I am to utter unto you the pure and sy[n]cere sentence of the wholie ghoost in this place mencyoned.

Ye, for so moche as I trust, the one p . . . . of this the f . . . . . myndes is taken awaye from this audyence, that is, that ther shuld be any error amongst you, as was amongst them: for the resurreccyon, which now . . . . . [fa]ythfully beleved . . . . . prof . . . . . I wyll after the argument sh[ew]e the entente of them. And I will use this storye of Christes resurreccyon, to declare unto you our eleccyon; and that don, I trust to saye certene other thinges appertaynyng to the tyme.

It shall make moche . . . . . for the stablyshment of every Christene man, to knowe the maner of our eleccyon, yf we wyll consyder the unspeakable love which he shewed unto us, as wytnesseth saynt Paul, "Qui [elegit] nos in ipso ante mundi constitucionem, ut essemus sancti et immaculati in conspectu ejus, &c.," That had chosen us in Jesu Christ before the makinge of the worlde, that we shuld be holy and without blame in his syght.

The next waye to attayne to this his wonderfull eleccyon, I thinke, shall apere more playnlye unto us, yf we wyll resorte to the scripture. And moost specially yf we laye fyrst before us the ingrattitude of our first parentes, whych yet after they were [ca]st oute of paradysse to increate them, God of his mercy left them not, but came unto them, and made them a promyse, as aperthe . . . . . sayenge, "Inimicias ponam inter te et mulierem, et semen tuum et semen ejus; ipsa conteret caput tuum et tu insidiaberis [calcaneo ejus] &c." I will also put enemyte betweene the and the woman, betweene thy sede and hir sede; hir sede shall treade the on the heed, and thou shalt treade upon his hele. After this yet it foloweth to the farther promotyng of the same, the sayde promes was renewed and amplyfyed unto Abraham: To whome it was sayde, "In semine tuo benedicentur omnes gentes," In thy sede shall all nacyns be blessed. It was not longe after but Sara, why[ch] was barene, had promys that she shuld conceive a sonne, where as by the course of nature she was past byrth. Soche was and is the wonderfull eleccyon of God. Ye, the chyld beyng borne, the promes was yet once agayne renued; and God sayde that he wolde multiplye his sede as the sande by the see shore, or the starres in the skye. Yet not longe after was he commaunded to slaye him, in whome this promys was made. It shall not greatlye hynder our purpose, yf we passe the promyses of Abraham, and go farther; where we shall fynde also the promyse that was made unto Jacob, "Benedicentur in te cunctae tribus terrae." If I shuld go aboute to rehearse unto you all the places of scripture that mencyon and manyfest unto us this eleccyon, and the promyses of God made to them whome he hath elected; I shuld seme unto you rather to go aboute the settinge forth of my selfe, then to edefye.

Seynge then that it is proved and openly declared unto us, by the scriptures, by whome and in whome we are elect and chosene, we shall not nede to stande long [in] yt. Of this sede spake Moses, when he sayde, A prophet shall the Lorde God rayse up unto you, even one of your brethren. Now then, to speke of the commynge of this prophet is not nedefull, for so moche as we are moost certene and sure therof; yet not withstandyng, I maye not so passe over yt, but must saye somewhat, because of the ordre of the scripture. Of this is mencyoned in the last of Genesis. The cause that I speke so moche of his commynge is, that I wolde utter and shewe what the knowledge of these scriptures, that speke of his commynge, do proffyt me: which is onlye that it doth declare to the and to me, and to every christen man, that this his great mercy powred over us shuld not be forgotten; and to rubbe your remembraunces, is the chefe cause that I have sayde so moche. Nowe of his commynge, and after what sorte, Esaye declareth in his ix. chapter, &c. Also in the vii. chapter, &c. where it is declared howe that a mayde shuld conceive a chyld, &c. Here is shewed also howe the sede shuld come into the worlde, &c.

Esa. liij. is it declared howe that this sede shuld come, and [be] leade as a shepe to be slayne, yet shall he be dombe before the sherer, and not open his mouthe.

Farther the prophet David, speakyng of this seede, sayth, that the Lorde suffered not his holy to se corrupeyon. Thus, in a brefsome, I have recyted unto you these places of the scripture, that he myght put this eleccon in execucion accordyng to the sayng of saynt Paul, "Qui elegit nos &c. ut essemus sancti &c." which hath chosen us in him, that we shuld be holy as he is holy: that is, that we shuld walke in newe conversacion of lyfe, castyng of our olde workes of darcknes.

Nowe will I here leave of the olde testament, and speke somewhat that is wrytten in the newe. If nowe yt shuld be asked, what it proffyteth to here these thinges? Thus I saye, that to me these sentences doth certainly assure me, that all that was promysed of Christ was done for me, and is true, and must be fulfilled. In the Actes, in the ij. chapter, Peter sayth, This sede, Jesus Christ, have you put to death (speakyng to the Jewes), whome God hath raysed up agayne, and loosed the sorowes of death: because it was impossyble that he shuld be holden of yt. This certefyeth and teacheth us, that Christ is truly rysen from death. And, as saynt Paul sayth, Lyke as he dyed for our synnes, so is he rysen agayne for our justificatyon. To this agreeth our gospell, Luke xxiiij. that we have nowe in hande: which begynneth after this maner. Two of them went the same daye to a towne called Emaus, &c. the one of them named Cleophas, &c. These ij. wanderynge, after that theyr master had bene put to death, Christ beyng rysen came unto them; wherin is shewed his unspeakable mercy, seinge these ij. persons thus walkyng and wanderyng in their infydelyte and ygnorance, withdrew not him selfe, but shewed the fyre love and burnyng charyte that he had, which seketh the welth of his people. Notwithstandyng that they had heard his former prechyng, ye, and certene wemene sayde theyr made us astoned that tolde us he was rysen, and that they had sene an angell. Soche is the wonderfull workyng of God, that not alonely by him selfe, but also by wemen and angelles, sheweth and declareth unto us his resurreccyon, and that so evydently that it cannot be denyed nor doubted of. And nowe that he is rysene, they enter into communycacyon; and he dyssembleth him selfe after soche a sorte, as though he had bene a straunger, &c. And he sayde unto them, what is your communycacyon? Here is yet to be noted, that these men, although they were not perfyte, yet were not utterly to be condemned, for they had a good hope in Christ, although yt was not perfyte. To be short, because I have other thinges in hand. In conclusion, they come to the towne, and he eateth with them, and in the waye dyd interpretate the scriptures unto them; which aperc in the Actes, by Peter, that learned of his master howe he shuld declare by the scriptures that it behoved Christ to suffer and to ryse agayn. Here ye se howe that Christ hath sought occasyons, by these dysciples, not only to shewe the truthe of his resurreccyon to them, but also in them to shewe the same unto th'other apostles, and so to the whole worlde. It proffyteth therefore moche, to be where true preachers of Godes word is. So that he, that wylbe a perfyte and true Christen man, must use the fassyon that these men dyd; that is, to talke of Christ, and reade his woordes, and here yt preached, and to use the company of soche as have the knowledge therof. At length yet he rebuketh them, sayenge, O fooles and slowe of heart, &c.: but to be short, he eateth with them, and breaketh breed, and by the brekyng of breed they knewe him. There are some that saye, that he was there in soche a sorte that they coulde not knowe him; but that I leave to other. S. Austyn and Theophylacte interpretate the same breed to be his bodye: which thyng also I leave to the judgment of other, that are better learned then I. For I do not thynke that he did minstre here the most blessed sacrament of the alter. Notwithstandyng, for so moche as they be S. Austyns wordes, and Theophylact, I shall be contente to alowe th[em] as good sentences, and maye be suffred. But, as I sayde, yt is not lyke, for so moche as these men were so ignorant and remayned in infydelyte, that Christ wolde give them his bodye.

Other there are, which thynke that it was a thinge that Christ used often, to breke breed after that maner. Well, howsoever yt were, yt apereth playnly that their eyes were opened. And that he was very man in dede, apereth by the evangelyst Luke, which wytnessith that he dyd eate with them. Which declareth that he had not a phantasticall bodye, as some heretyckes hath sayde, and also is mdeed rysene agayne from death unto lyfe.

Nowe the benefyte that we have by our sayvour Jesu Christ, I speake of all that are his elect and chosene people, is this, that we are assured, that he dyed for our synnes and is rysene agayne for our justifiacyon, accordyng to the sayenge of saynt Paul, "Quemadmodum &c." For as by Adam all dye, so by Christ shall all be made alyve. Wherefore saythe Paul. 1. Thesse. iiij. I wolde not have you to sorowe as other doo which have no hope, for yf we beleve that Jesus dyed and rose agayne, even so them also which slepe by Jesus, wyll God brynge agayne with him. The benefyte then of Christ is this, that he is rysen, and we that are elect shall ryse agayne by him, and raygne with him in the kyngdome of heaven.

Yet I protest unto you, that this maner of prechyng doth not teache you that you maye nowe lye downe ydlye and do nothyng, or that ye maye lyve in your lusts and pleasures, doynge what ye wyll, as though there were nether God nor lawe that teacheth you any good lvyng. I wolde all soche that are so mynded shuld be well assured, that Christ nether dyed nor yet ryse agayne for any soche; as I trust there are none that erre so farre, yet it is reported that there are, but I hope not. Notwithstandyng, for asmoch as I am nowe come to errours, I shall, for the removynge of certen or I go any farther, saye thus moche unto you.

I preached unto you on Mydlent sondaye, at Paules Crosse, in which sermone were containned these sentences, that I spake there of Sara, whych I sayde was a frewoman, and sygnified the churche, which bare fre childerne with out any condyeyon, leavyng oute fayth baptye and repentance. Thorowe the which doctryne, yf any man hath conceived that I shuld utterly despyse these thynges, and saye that these thynges also are not necessary, I shall desyer them evene nowe, that as at the fyrst by so teachyng they erred, that they will nowe with me revoke the same errour: which in dede I knowledge to be erronyous, ye, and dampnable, to saye that it is without condycion, as that we are so frely R. [received] into the churche that we should not have fayth baptye and repentance.

Also I sayde, that no magistrate myght alter any doctryne that pertayned to our fayth. Where as in this I shuld seme to speke agaynst the power of the magistrates, that make lawes for the confyrmaeyon of honest and indyfferent thynges, I knowledge it in that poynt to be erronyous. And lyke as I renounce and detest the other sentence, so do I this in lyke maner, and utterly abhorre yt frome my heart. And in a sermone that I made at Bartyhmewtyde, of the which I am justly by the ordre of the lawe condempned, that is to saye, by wytnesses sworne, that I shuld there revyle the burgeooses of the Parlyament, callynge them butterflyes, ye, and knaves: which in dede myght geve occasion that the people shuld not esteime them nor their doynge, nor have regarde unto the magistrates that calleth soche to his Parlyament: which wordes I confesse to be very undyscretely spokene, ye, and naughtely spoken. And for that, that by this my foly no man shuld contynue in evyll, yf they have takene evyll by me, I most hartely desyer them that evene with me they wyll utterly detest them; and so do I; and let them not thynke no shame so to doo. For as for me, my name is not of no soche reputacyon, nether my learnyng so great, nor judgement so excellent, but that beyng in dede not learned, maye erre with the great.

A commendacyon of the Kynges highnes.

ACTA ET PROCESSUS CONTRA JOHANNEM FRYTH HERETI-CUM OBSTINATUM ET IMPENITENTEM.

(See p. 14.)

(From the Stokesley Register, second Series of folios, 71.)

[Die veneris vicesimo viz. die mensis Junii Anno dni. millesimo quingentesimo tricesimo tertio Reverendus Pater dnus. Johannes London Epus., in loco consistorii (assistentibus sibi reverendis patribus dominis Johanne Lincoln. et Stephano Winton respective epis.) judicialiter sedens ac in negotio inquisitionis hereticæ pravitatis contra quendam Johannem Fryth procedens, ministravit et objecit articulos sive interrogatoria sequent. contra eundem Johannem Fryth conjunctim et divisim in scriptis hereticam pravitatem concernentes, viz.: IN PRIMIS quod tu dixisti asseruisti affirmasti credidisti et pertinaciter defendisti quod in venerabili sacramento Eucharistiæ non continetur realiter corpus Christi, sed quod sit tantum figura sive memoria corporis Christi. Et ministramus omnia et singula contenta in articulo hujusmodi conjunctim et divisim. ITEM quod hanc tuam opinionem scripsisti et in libellis manu tua redegisti ac eosdem libellos aliis legendos et discendos tradidisti: et ministramus ut supra. AD quos quidem duos articulos sive duo interrogatoria preceden. dictus Johannes Fryth respondebat prout sequitur Fryth thynketh and judgeth that the naturall bodie of Christe is not in the Sacrament of the Aulter. But in oone place only at oons. Item he sayth that neyther parte is a necessary article of our faithe Whether the naturall bodie be in the Sacrament or not. Et Idem Johannes Frith subscripsit responsis suis manu sua his verbis Ego Frithus ita sentio, et quemadmodum sentio ita dixi scripsi asserui et affirmavi. ITEM quod tu dixisti sentiisti asseruisti affirmasti et defendisti quod nullum est purgatorium animabus defunctorum post hanc vitam: et ministramus ut supra. ITEM. quod tu hanc opinionem tuam de purgatorio negato in libello manu vestra scripsisti ac eundem libellum imprimi fecisti ac sic impressum publicasti seu publicari fecisti: et ministramus ut supra conjunctim et divisim. AD istos articulos dictus Fryth sic respondit—Fryth thinketh and judgeth that there is noo purgatory for the soule after that it is departed from the bodie. And as he thinketh herein so hath he sayed affirmed defended and written. Howbeit he thinketh nether parte to be an article of the faithe necessarily to be beleved undre the payne of dampnacion. Et dictus Fryth subscripsit manu sua responsis suis huius verbis, Ego Frithus ita sentio et quemadmodum sentio ita dixi asserui et affirmavi et in libellis meis publicavi. QUIBUS quidem responsis suis ad articulos predictos per ipsum Johannem Fryth ut præmittitur factis et per eum manu sua propria subscriptis et signatis, præfatus Johannes Fryth admonitus fuit et consultus diversis rationibus et argumentis sacræ scripturæ, ut redeat ad unitatem fidei et fidem suam in sacramento altaris recognoscat: dixit idem Johannes, quod recognovit fidem suam prout continebatur in confessione sua manu sua subscripta. Deinde interrogatus fatebatur quod natus fuit in Cantia et baptizatus fuit apud Westram Cant. dioc. et quod venit ultimo a partibus ultramarinis circiter festum sancti Jacobi ultimo præterit. et quod fuit in Anglia in quadragesima ad duos annos elapsos. Interrogatus dixit quod non recordatus se scripsisse aliquas literas alicui personæ in illa quadragesima aut circiter festum purificationis. Et deinde Reverendus pater London epus. admonuit eundem Johannem Fryth, benigne exhortando eundem ut redeat ad gremium sanctæ matris ecclesiæ et se submittat et abjuret. Et idem dixit sic in effectu: to be brought to beleve that the sacrament of thaulter is an article of our faithe I will not: sayeng fiat iudicium cum justicia. Consequenter dictus Reverendus pater London Epus. iterum atque iterum ac sæpius requisivit ipsum Johannem Fryth, quatenus renunciaret erroribus suis ac redeat ad unitatem catholicæ fidei et abjuret. Sicque consultus et admonitus fuit per præfatos Reverendos patres Winton et Lincoln. epus. ac alios probos et graves viros tam spirituales quam temporales ibidem præsentés : dictus tamen Johannes Fryth sic requisitus exhortatus admonitus et consultus non curavit redire ad gremium sanctæ matris ecclesiæ sed in heresibus suis pertinaciter (ut apparuit) persistebat. Unde præfatus Reverendus pater London. epus. cum dolore cordis (ut asseruit), habita matura deliberacione deque et cum consilio et consensu tam præfatorum Reverendorum patrum eporum. predictorum eidem Reverendo patri London. epo. in ea parte assistentium quam aliorum tam theologorum quam jurisperitorum ibidem præsentium, processit ad prolacionem sententiæ diffinitivæ contra dictum Johannem Frythe : Ac sententiam legit et tulit diffinitivam in scriptis contra eum, per quam inter cætera ipsum Johannem Frythe hereticum fuisse et esse judicavit, ac ipsum sententialiter et diffinitive condemnavit, necnon potestati seculari ibidem præsentī viz : domino Stephano Pecock majori Civitatis London et Johanni Marten uni vicecomitum ejusdem civitatis reliquit, ac cetera fecit prout in eadem sententia continetur : Cujus tenor sequitur in hæc verba.

IN DEI NOMINE, AMEN. nos Johannes permissione divina London. epus. in causa hereticæ pravitatis contra te Johannem Fryth nostræ jurisdictionis coram nobis in judicio publice diffamatum ex officio nostro mero auctoritate nostra ordinaria cum pio favore rite et legitime procedentes, auditis visis et intellectis cognitisque et rimatis ac matura deliberacione discussis dicte causæ sive negotii meritis servatisque per nos de jure in hac parte servandis, pro tribunali sedentes, Christi nomine primitus invocato ac ipsum solum. Deum præ oculis habentes, Quia per acta inactitata deducta allegata proposita et exhibita in eodem negotio ac per tuam confessionem coram nobis in hac parte judicialiter factam et emissam [comperimus] te quosdam errores hereses et dampnatas opiniones contra determinacionem sanctæ matris ecclesiæ ac ejusdem sanctæ matris ecclesiæ nostræ dogmata et maxime contra venerabile sacramentum eucharistiæ dixisse asseruisse affirmasse tenuisse sentisse et pertinaciter defendisse : Et quamvis nos Christi vestigiis inherendo, qui non vult mortem peccatoris sed magis ut convertatur et vivat, sæpenumero conati fuimus te corrigere ac viis et modis licitis et canonicis admonicionibusque saluberrimis quibus potuimus aut scivimus ad fidem orthodoxam per universalem catholicam et apostolicam ecclesiam determinatam et observatam ac ad unitatem sanctæ matris nostræ ecclesiæ reducere, tamen invenimus te adeo duræ cervicis quod tuos errores hereses et dampnatas opiniones hujusmodi sponte et continuo detestari et ad fidem orthodoxam in unitatem sanctæ matris ecclesiæ debite revertere et redire nolueris, sed tanquam iniquitatis et tenebrarum filius in tantum induratis cor tuum ut non velis intelligere vocem tui pastoris tibi paterno compatientis affectu, nec velis piis et paternis monicionibus allici nec salubribus reduci exhortationibus : nos vero nolentes quod tu qui nequam es fias nequior et gregem dominicum infuturum tua hereticæ pravitatis labe (de qua plurimum timemus) mficias—Ideirco nos Johannes epus. antedictus te præfatum Johannem Fryth, demeritis atque culpis tuis per tuam dampnabilem pertinaciam aggravatis, de et super detestabili hereticæ pravitatis reatu confessum et ad gremium et unitatem sanctæ matris nostræ ecclesiæ penitentialiter redire nolentem, hereticum obstinatum impenitentem et incorrigibilem judicamus, ac finaliter et diffinitive condemnamus : Ac te fuisse et esse de jure excommunicatum denunciamus : Necnon pro excommunicato pronunciamus et declaramus : et a foro ecclesiæ te hereticum ejiciendum, secularisque potestatis arbitrio sive curiæ seculari relinquendum fore debere decernimus et pronunciamus. Ac te eidem seculari potestati hic præsentī et eorum arbitrio relinquimus ; Rogantes attente in visceribus Jhesu Christi, ut hujusmodi dignæ severitatis ultio et executio de te et contra te in hac parte fienda taliter moderetur, ut non sit rigor rigidus neque mansuetudo dissoluta. Sed ad salutem animæ tuæ et hereticorum extirpacionem metum et terrorem, et eorum conversionem ad catholicæ fidei unitatem per hanc nostram sententiam diffinitivam sive hoc nostrum finale decretum, quam sive quod ferimus et promulgamus in hiis scriptis.

PAPERS RELATING TO ROBERT WISDOME.

From the MSS. in Emmanuel College, Cambridge, 2. 2. 16, No. 25.

"A revocation of that shameful bill that Winchester devised and Wisdome read at Paul's Cross in London, on the Relic Sunday the xiiij day of July,<sup>1</sup> Anno Dom<sup>i</sup>. 1543; wherein the said Wisdome meekly confesseth his frailty and fearful weakness, whereby he for fear of death fell to this impiety, and sheweth himself earnestly repentant and sorry of that great slander and occasion of evil that he then committed against the congregation of God, and also desireth all faithful Christians to forgive him that offence, and to receive him again reconciled to the true Church of Christ."

The Document begins after this title-page, and occupies 43 closely and well written foolscap leaves, addressed "to the Christian reader," and furnished with side notes. It goes through the Bill of Recantation, as printed above from the London Register, and revokes each part seriatim. It contains much interesting matter, and seems to have been prepared for publication.

Bacon alludes to this composition in his "Jewel of Joy" (P.S. p. 423), as "farced with all kind of godly learning," and wishes his works were printed.

The following Extract, occupying nearly 3 pages of the Original, gives an outline of Wisdome's history.

"The first beginning of all my trouble was when I was in Oxford; where forasmuch as I preached Christ and spake against the ungodliness and false doctrine of the Papacy, they found the means to hunt me thence. After that I dwelt in Essex and preached to the Parish where I was Curate. Wherefore certain priests thereabout envying this and maliciously set against the truth that I preached, first they raised rumours and diffamed me: and after that assailed all the means possible to put me to silence, which they thought an easy thing to bring about, if they might cause me to preach in London diocese. To this entente they suborned the Vicar of Cursing<sup>2</sup> [margin—Cursing is a little town in Essex, a mile from Branktree,<sup>3</sup> and a mile from Stisted, where Wisdome was parish priest] a neighbour of mine, who came to me, and bearing a fair countenance and pretended friendship and neighbourhood, most instantly desired me to come to his parish and there to preach a Sermon, alleging that his parishioners had a great desire to hear me. Wherefore he nothing doubted but that it should be to the glory of God and their edifying, and a great occasion of love between him and his neighbours. And also he would right fairly recompense my pains, and be as ready another time to do anything that might lie in his power to do for me. These fair words somewhat moved me. Nevertheless, as God would, I went not; for the truth is so, that the same day I should have preached there, they had prepared the Bishop of London's Catchpole to attach me. With like wiles they assayed once or twice to have me preach at Esterford,<sup>4</sup> which is also within London diocese. And I had gone, had it not been that I was warned of their assawts. But when they saw this way would not serve, but that ever I was ware of their lime twigs, Doctor Roiston, one of Paul's and in times past a great teller of Rome and Hierusalem in his Sermons, and one Vicar Gale, vicar of Hausted, and an extreme enemy of the Gospel of Christ, which had been present at a Sermon that I preached on the Procession Wednesday,<sup>5</sup> Anno 1541, presented to the Bishop of London, that they had gathered against me iij or four Articles. Now was it so, that the Sunday before Magdalen day<sup>6</sup> following, I came to London and resorted unto Paul's Cross, to hear Dr. Wilson preach. But or ever the Sermon began, the Bishop of London's Sompner fetched me and carried me

(1) Relic Sunday in 1543 would fall on July 15 by Nicolas's Tables; it could not fall on July 14, unless Midsummer Day fell on a Monday, which occurred in 1538 and 1549; but in no intermediate year.

(5) Procession Week, sometimes called Gang Week, and Rogation Week, was the week in which Holy Thursday occurs. Procession Wednesday in 1541 fell on May 25th, by Nicolas's Tables.

into the Palace, where I was kept till afternoon, and then brought before the Bishop and examined. I used myself with such lowliness as I would have done to St. Paul, whose room I then (although sore deceived) esteemed the Bishop to keep, and therefore thought he would have done far otherwise than he did. Nevertheless, I alleged that he was not mine Ordinary, and therefore was I not bound to answer him. To be brief, he laboured very sore to get writing of mine own hand, that I had so preached, as Royston and Gale had accused me unto him, threatening me very sore that I should smart for it, and be made an ensample unto all other. But when he saw that he nothing prevailed that way, he turned him to flattery and fair promises, with great attestation by God, and as he was true priest, he intended nothing so much as the glory of God, and rather my wealth than hinderance, and that I should find him as gentle and as good unto me, as he would be to his own soul. Yet, when all this would not serve, neither would I either submit myself, or write anything at all to him, then began he to swear unto me by God and by his faith and by his baptism, that if I would confess myself faulty, he would dismiss me so free that I should never more hear of it, nor never more be troubled for it. Then I, thinking baptism a great oath, and believing that a bishop never would have been perjured, glad also to be out of their dangers, wrote him a bill which nothing pleased him. Wherefore he committed me to prison all that night. In the morning came to the bishop mine Uncle John Wisdom and one Edward Whitechurch, to entreat for me. The Bishop made the matter very heinous and shewed unto them that these Articles were presented unto him, and that if I would not submit myself, the process of the law and the dangers of the same should proceed against me. But if he will (said he) confess it to me, by God and by my faith and by my baptism I shall set him so clear, that he shall never more be troubled for it, neither shall it ever be laid to his charge. Mine uncle then and Whitechurch, also allured with his fair words and promises (for who is it that bishops cannot beguile with their flatteries) came unto me and counselled me to follow the bishop's mind, alleging that if I did not so, the Articles would come forth against me, and so should I by the Law be compelled to bear a faggot, which should be not only a defacing of all the doctrine that I had taught in times past, but also a stopping of my mouth for ever. Besides that (said they) you are of a weak complexion, and lack strength to abide the punishment of imprisonment, and know you that the bishop will commit you to prison: which if he do, you cannot live a seven-night. And in case ye would abide all the danger of prison, yet the end will be, ye shall either have a fagot and so run into perpetual infamy, or else be brent. I hearing this and afraid of these perils, agreed unto them especially touching the Bishop's oath, made first to me, and now again unto them; and so came before the bishop and confessed, and wrote whatsoever the bishop's scribe bade me, and then delivered it unto the bishop. This bill (for all his baptism) the Bishop of London laid up in store. And this bill is the very chief matters that now were brought in against me.

"Here hast thou, Christian reader, the very beginning and ground of all my trouble; wherein thou mayest see a little of their goodness. They care neither for perjury nor for other mischief, so they may deface the truth and put preachers to silence. Here also a man may see how long they can go with child with a mischief, and how studiously one hypocrite can help another in defacing the glory of God. No man can say that the Bishop of London did this: for he is beyond the seas, in the king's affairs.<sup>1</sup> The bishop of Winchester will also wash his hands as clean as Pilate did: for the matter was presented to him out of the bishop of London's register. But the truth is this, that their hypocrisy is all one; and neither of them both, but hath conspired all this mischief against me, and long gone with this mischief, that now they have accomplished, bringing it to this point, that either I must recant, or else stand at their grace, which is as good to the preachers of God's truth, as is the grace of the bochers of Estecheape to the poor lambs brought into their market. I fearing this, chose to read what they would command me. Then was the matter committed to the bishop of Winchester, which with how much

(1) In the 9th volume of State Papers published under authority of Her Majesty's Commission, are many letters of Bonner to the King, showing that he was from May 1542 to December 1543 Henry's ambassador at the Court of the Emperor Charles V., and that he was during that period constantly attending the Emperor's movements in Spain, Italy, Germany, and Belgium.

Christen charity he penned it, it may appear evidently to all men, that with judgement like to read it: for he hath not only recanted in it those things that they laid to my charge, but he hath put in a great many matters mo, partly to entangle me with other mens causes and quarels, partly to defame those that are alive and have preached the truth of God's word; and that he most desireth for ever to deface the glory and name of Christ's gospel and suppress it for ever. God knoweth right well how to accomplish his word and promise, though ten thousand such hypocrites had sworn the contrary, and ten hundred thousand such dunces as I am had utterly renied it. Yet the Lord knoweth how to make a man strong after this weakness, and to raise him again after his fall. Wherefore I wholly putting myself unto the mercy of God promised in his only-beloved Jesu Christ, do with all my heart repent that my slaunders, and as here followeth revoke it."

At the close of the whole Document we have this:—

"I Robert Wisdome penytent wrote this with mine own hand."

From the MSS. in Emmanuel College, Cambridge, MS. 2. 2. 16, No. 22.

"A Sermon of the knowe husius Bischope of Heidelberge generall

Superattendant over the whole

By Robert Wisdome, Minister of God's Worde, Anno 1559.

Matth. 13.

The Kingdom of Heaven is like to a

Sap. 15.

To knowe, thee, O Lorde, is perfect Rightwisness, Yea to knowe thy Rightwisness and power is the Rote of Immortality."

After the foregoing title-page, comes a dedication of the ensuing Sermon by Wisdome to his English Reader, stating the occasion of his publishing it. The following are extracts:—

"Since my coming again into England, I chanced to read in a Chronicle amongst other things, that now in Queen Mary's days one Patrick Patington was burnt at Uxbridge, but (saith the book) or ever he died, he revoked the Arryans opinion, wherewith he was infected. Which thing when I had read, it made me very sore to think that Sathan hath now spued forth that devilish poison among the people, and brought out of hell that damnable doctrine most instly by God's word long agoe overthrown and condemned. Yet this comforted me again, that the book said the man or he died revoked and repented him of that error, and so ended his life in the true confession of Jesus Christ the blessed Son of God. This man by all likelihood needed not to have been condemned to the fire, if the Pope's Knights, the Bishops, had been as diligent to have taught him, as they were desirous to have burned many more than they did, if God would so have permitted it. . . . . And in this man that was a little time fallen yet see we the Almighty hand and power of Christ shewed, and the word of Christ to be most true that he saith, No man can take my sheep out of my hand. Doubtless it was Christ's Almighty Power and godly hand that plucked this his lamb out of the jaws of that Lyon Sathan, who thought to have had a proye, and to have despited the Son of God. O ye burning bishops, what answer will ye give to the great Shepherd Jesus Christ for the murdering of his lambs which he committed to you to keep? You took away God's book from them out of their Churches and hands, you opened the door for all kinds of heretics to sow their pestilent doctrines, yea you yourselves sowed perillous doctrines against God's word. And now ye sit as judges and condemn men to death unto the fire for errors. Why did you not teach and preach to convert men from error? Why did ye not write, and with testimonies of God's word shew men the way of truth? God grant ye grace of repentance, for ye have shewed yourselves nothing as would have become the feeders of Christ's flock. I can say no more, nor wish ye no worse, but God amend ye, Amen. . . . After I had read this in the Chronicle, I thought it very needful and profitable to Christ's poor flock, that some good thing were set forth to the edifying and strengthening of faith in such as stand, and to the raising again of such as by any means have fallen. And while I thus mused, &c."

PAPER RELATIVE TO SIR PHILIP, CLERK, AND DR. BARNES.

(See page 420 of this Volume.)

From the Chapter House Papers, Rolls House, 1st Series, No. 434.

Articles agaynst Sir Phelip, late parisshe prieste of Saynt Mary Woolchurch, which promociion belongeth to Doctor Bookmaister.

In primis, the saide Phelippe saide that doctor Barnes was a false felowe and a noughty wretch, in that he made no comparyson in his sermon betwixt the water of the Temys and the water made holy by prests, and saide that he wolde not beleve Gods worde and his Gospell, yf he made no dyversite betwixt that water that runnyth in the Ryver and the water made holy by prests: &c.

Item, he saide that he was at this poynt with hym selfe agaynst all them that taketh parte in suche lyke matters to be at utter defyence whatsoever they were of state, condicion, or degre; and saide theire were better men that lost theire heds now in these dayes then he was: &c.

Item, he saide that he fermely beleveth that Seynt Peter, being with God, knoweth what a man requyreth of hym, and hereth hym in erth oute from heven; therefore they were false herytyks that wolde not beleve in such lyke Auctorities: &c.

Item, he saide that Doctor Barnes made ij abhominable sermons, on of Sunday last past at Saynt Mary Woolners, an other at Saynt Dunstons in the West on Saynt Peter is day last; and saide it was grete shame to suffer hym or such as he was to preche in any place: &c.

Item, he saide what soever he was that wolde assure prests matrimonye, they were grete heretyks, and upon that artycle and other such lyke artycles that were now in these dayes beleved he wolde gladly and wyllinglie dye: &c.

Item, these artycles were spoken the first day of July, at vij of the clocke at nyght, in presence of Robard Assheby, preste, John Busshe, John Smyth, William Smyth, cum aliis.
